NO GENERAL RULE POSSIBLE

Matter of Proper Amount of Bodily Exercise Must Be Left to Discretion of Individual.

"It is an axiom that mental excellence is to a very considerable extent dependent upon a man's physical condition," declared Secretary of State Robert Lansing. "It is equally true that rules of health, except the most general, depend in large measure upon the individual and upon his peculiar needs.

"If I were asked to lay down rules which might be applied generally," continued the American premier, "I would embody them in the phrase 'More fresh air and less food.' How much bodily exercise should be taken and its character depend upon the individual, his physical condition and, to an extent, on his tastes. Of course, exercise is, as a rule, beneficial, but it ought to be a pleasure to the one taking it if he would get the best results.

"It may sound like heresy, but I sometimes wonder whether exercise, when it is not a diversion, is really worth while. Certainly the mind is not rested if it rebels against certain forms of physical training which are being taken, and recreation for the mind of one engaged in intellectual pursuits is, in my opinion, one of the most essential purposes of exercise of the muscles.

"I believe, however, as I have said, that fresh air is one of the great restoratives, and the fact that exercise is generally taken in the open is one of its chief benefits."—From "Secretary Lansing's Story of His Health and Energy," by Richard M. Winans in Physical Culture.

Conservation Under Fire.

I know of nothing more strange than the usual conversations in which one indulges at the front in the heat of battle. Recently I was racing down a road to get out from under heavy shell fire, falling on my face every five or ten yards as a whistling scream announced a fresh arrival. A panting lieutenant caught step with me. "Do you know So-and-So?" he gasped. "Yes," I replied as a shell whirred down out of the sky and we both fell flat on our faces. "Where is he now?" he continued as the sound of the explosion died away and we rose, running together. "I think he's in Paris," I answered, and even as I spoke rolled flat with him in a muddy ditch as another shell screamed down and broke nearby. And thus we continued our way for several hundred yards, discussing our friend and his characteristics between dives into the mud.—William Slavens McNutt, in Collier's Weekly.

Worth It.

Billy and Bobby were cousins, and although very fond of each other, did not always agree.

One day Bobby's mother entered the room where the small boys were playing, and was immediately appealed to by her son.

"Mamma, mayn't Billie tell me my faults?" he asked.

"What do you want Billie to tell your faults for?" she asked in astonishment.

"So that I can tell Billie his," was the unexpected reply.

The Aerial Mail

By LYDIA M. D. O'NEIL

(Copyright.)

"By and by, Surly, they won't need you nor your Lulu any more. They'll have airships to carry the mail an' express, an' then it's 'Old Black Lulu' to the scrap-shop an' you to Highland Park, Surly Simmons. An' I'll be sittin' up in one o' them airships, all dressed up in goggles an' gloves an' things, steerin' the aerial mail an' lookin' tony. Aw, say, now, Surly! That bolt like to clip me on the head. Don't be so reckless, throwin' things around like that. As I was sayin'—"

"Shut up, you thick head, you! You couldn't steer a hand car. An' there won't be no aerial mail in my time, cub. Let 'em run all they like when I'm under the sod but not in my time."

But Surly was perceptibly disturbed by the idle banter to which he was being subjected to daily. "Old Black Lulu," officially known as Engine 1448, was his darling. He abhorred electric locomotives, automobiles, gasoline launches, airships—anything and everything that was not run by steam power.

"Old Black Lulu" was good enough for him, he said. "Old Black Lulu" and the "drag" of express and mail cars she carried were good enough for anybody.

Simmons did not know that the big trunkline was already contemplating the building of a few airships for the purpose of conveying mail and express, or his mind would have been more troubled. It was rumored that the Continental Airship company was in the process of formation, and a continental airship line would mean more speedy delivery of mail and express, cheaper rates, and, therefore, considerable pecuniary loss to the railroad company. This threatened competition must be met and defeated; so, while Simmons growled and swore, the railroad company planned and experimented.

By and by there came a young Englishman from the other side of the Atlantic, with a little money in his pocket and a grim determination to earn more—much more. By night he dreamed of cogs and wheels and screws and propellers and dynamos and ohms; by day he worked on these dreams and made them come true.

He didn't become famous; he wanted to marry. But he hadn't sufficient money, and no influential friends.

One day his dreams and his labor came to an end. That was the day that his small model of the Fenimore-Stokes airship was finished, tested, and found perfect.

Then Fate brought him into contact with Hendricks, the recently elected president of the Never-Mind-What Railroad company. Hendricks wanted an airship, and Fenimore-Stokes wanted money. Each supplied the other's demand. Fenimore-Stokes sold his patent outright, and went home to Merrie England and his sweetheart.

Hendricks went his way, rejoicing in the knowledge that he had secured the means to combat the Continental Airship company, which was still nonexistent.

The Never-Mind-What company built two large airships after the pattern of the Fenimore-Stokes model, and then hastened to build more, because, firstly, the Continental Airship line had become a reality; and, secondly, because of two daring mail and express robberies which occurred only four or five weeks apart and defied solution.

Five mail clerks and three express messengers had been found dead in their cars, with their skulls crushed. A sixth mail clerk died without regaining consciousness, and a fourth express messenger became so hopelessly insane that no clew could be obtained from his confused, incoherent speech.

All the most valuable express packages were missing, boxes broken open and safes dynamited. In the mail cars not one registered letter or parcel had been overlooked. In both instances, No. 3, drawn by "Old Black Lulu," with Surly Simmons at the throttle was the train selected by the marauders. It hurt Simmons more than any one knew, but that did not mend matters.

The N.-M.-W. company decided then to convey express and mail by means of the Fenimore-Stokes airships; so they broke a bottle of wine over the gray metal body of the first man-made bird and christened her the "Registered Mail." The second they named the "Chicago Express."

When he heard of it, Surly Simmons broke two bottles of wine over "Lulu's" black nose, saying to her: "If you ain't worth two o' them flying-machines, then you can't run two miles in four minutes."

"Lulu" assuredly could run two miles in four minutes; but she sighed, nevertheless, and her iron heart throbbed convulsively.

The "Registered Mail" made three trial trips between her terminals—New York and a town half-way between the Eastern and Western coasts—safely and speedily. On the fourth day she started west with her first cargo of express and registered mail at the rate of three hundred miles an hour.

Only recently had the airship been utilized for practical purposes, and heretofore two hundred miles an hour had been the maximum average speed attained. In the matter of speed, as well as safety and simplicity, the Fenimore-Stokes model had proven superior to all competitors. The aviator in charge of the "Registered Mail" boldly asserted that the ship was capable of twice the speed at which she was permitted to travel, but the N.-M.-W. company was content with three hundred miles an hour—content to run two daily airships—the "Mail" and the "Chicago Express."

Side by side stood "Old Black Lulu" and the "Registered Mail." Side by side stood President Hendricks and Engineman Simmons. The old engineer was no longer surly, but sad. He spoke in a voice half-choked with sobs:

"Your pa wouldn't 'a' done it, Mr. Hendricks. Your pa was a railroad man from 'way-back, an' he wouldn't 'a' done it. You can fire me for that if you like. It's said, an' I ain't a goin' to take it back."

His intense sadness and resentment were almost comic. Hendricks laughed a little and tried to "jolly" the old engineer, but Simmons was in no mood for jesting.

He turned away, oiled the 1448, wiped her carefully with a handful of clean waste and polished her as vigorously and unconcernedly as if the "Registered Mail" were no more than a summer shower.

But Hendricks heard him murmur once or twice: "They don't want us any more, 'Lulu.' They don't want us any more."

By and by Simmons walked over to the airship and examined her carefully. "No chance of a break-down, I s'pose?" he queried hopefully.

"No chance whatever," smilingly answered the aviator. Simmons looked about to see if there was anything with which he could tamper—a bolt he could loosen, or a screw he could remove, but there was nothing. Besides, he would have been detected.

"'Lectricity, too," he growled. "Gasoline was bad enough, but 'lectricity!"

He turned away, and climbed into the cab of 1448. He carried baggage and passenger coaches for the first time in many years, and a feeling of shame stole over him as he gazed at "Old Black Lulu" and the string of cars behind her.

It had all come so "suddenlike." Only a few days ago, it seemed, airships were only toys at which he had laughed. Yet one of these toys had supplanted his "Lulu"—and there she stood, flaunting her triumph in his face—the blue-gray hulk three times as large as the largest car he had ever hauled and carrying his precious freight—his express parcels—his registered mail!

"Old Black Lulu's" days of glory were over—and so were his! Alas, how bitter!

No. 3 counted off the miles as she always had. "Old Black Lulu" puffed and whistled, and clicked and pounded over the frogs, just as she always had—and, by and by, she started to sing a crazy little song of her own composing:

They don't—want me—any more—"
They don't—want me—any more—"

Simmons heard and understood—and answered:

"You're right, old girl. They don't want you any more. 'Lulu' to the scrap-shop, an' me to Highland Park."

In a short time they passed the ninetieth mile-post, and Simmons began to look for the "Registered Mail." Somewhere along the line she would cross the N.-M.-W. tracks, headed directly west. She had no signals to heed, as "Lulu" had, no curves to take or hills to climb; she had it so easy—all plain sailing for her.

She would cross the N.-M.-W. tracks at the bridge, and sail away out of sight before No. 3 could—

"The devil!" The captain, or motorman, or whatever he called himself, had told him there was no possible chance of a break-down, and yet—

The "Registered Mail" was wabbling—swaying—swinging! She was going to drop! Some one had blundered. Simmons was not the man to let a golden opportunity pass. Not he! Swiftly he calculated the distance to the point where the "Registered Mail" would fall, and swiftly he jerked the throttle open wide. Then he "hooked her up"—gave her "the short stroke," and she responded.

"'Lulu!' 'Lulu'!" he cried. "You go to it, old girl! Work hard now—hard, hard! 'Lulu,' old girl, do your blamedest! Go to it, 'Lulu'!"

Down—down—down it dropped, and "Old Black Lulu" plowed into its shiny body just as it struck the bridge. They plunged into the river together—the "Registered Mail" and her crew, and "Old Black Lulu," with part of her "drag." Simmons still sat on the leather-cushioned seat, his greasy, sullen face transfigured by a triumphant smile.

"Old Black Lulu" was never sent to the scrap-shop. She lies there, at the river-bottom, still "hooked-up," covered with mud and victory. And Surly Simmons never went to Highland Park, for he lived just long enough to say:

"They can run all the aerial mail they like when I'm under the sod but—not in—my time. No, 'Lulu'—old girl—not—in our time."

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have the honor of nomination and have been urgently requested by a very large number of ratepayers to be a candidate for the Utilities Commission.

Having served you six years as alderman and two years as Mayor, I acquired a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the duties of the Utilities Commission.

I was a member of the City Council during the negotiations, construction and prosecution of the work of the city electric power station, the city waterworks dam, and the auxiliary pumping station.

As Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee in the City Council, I came directly in contact with the waterworks system, including the mains, hydrants, pressure, etc., for fire protection, domestic and manufacturing purposes.

For two years I was Vice-President of the Ontario Hydro Radial Association, which gave me a thorough knowledge of the advantages of the Hydro Electric system for power, electric lighting, heating and radial railway purposes.

With the above experience and knowledge I respectfully solicit your vote and influence in support of my candidature, assuring you if elected that I will endeavor to assist in every way possible the other members of the Commission to carry out the work in the very best interests of the ratepayers of the City of Peterborough.

I am heartily in favor of such improvements as the proposed new Filtration Plant when the time is opportune, but am of the opinion that all such large expenditures, as far as practicable, in every department of the city, should be deferred until such time as some of the present debentures are fully paid up, except in so far as it is found necessary to go ahead with the work in order to keep our workmen and laborers steadily employed.

Respectfully yours,

Jos. J. Duffus

For ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I am a candidate for alderman, and if elected I will give the City's government the benefit of my practical knowledge in construction and building.

I assisted in the building of the Canadian Kodak building in Toronto, and have been sixteen years carrying on cement construction. I have been a resident of Peterborough for the last sixteen years and I believe I have a knowledge of the needs of the people from the workingman's standpoint.

I will see that for every dollar spent, one dollar value is given to the City and I will watch and protect the City's interests as I would my own, if elected.

I request the support of every ratepayer anxious to have an economical, yet progressive City Government.

Yours respectfully

To The Ratepayers of the City of Peterborough

I am offering myself as a candidate for Alderman and I believe that this City will be benefitted with my many years of experience as a member of the City Council and as City Solicitor. I had intended to devote my time to my business affairs but as there are few men of many years experience in municipal affairs in the City Council, I feel that I could be a help in the city's Government on account of the large undertakings and important matters which must be dealt with by the Council within the next two years.

To develop the city we must have new industries, and I have given much of my time in the past years while in the City Council, to this particular part of municipal affairs.

If elected, I will make every effort to improve this City as a great industrial centre.

The support of those who believe that I shall be able to give faithful service, is respectfully requested.

Yours faithfully,

FOR ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBORO

Having again been nominated and asked to run for the position of Alderman for 1920, I respectfully solicit the support of the ratepayers in the interests of good, economical municipal government. If elected, I will support only those measures that I consider in the best interests of the city.

Yours faithfully,

SISSON FOR UTILITIES COMMISSION

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is considered by many that Peterborough has reached that stage of development when a man of business engineering experience is required on the Utilities Commission, and, after a good deal of pressure, I have decided to allow my name to come before the electors. As is well known, we have now a water system, which, upon completion of the proposed Filtration Plant, will be one of the best in the Province, and a light and power system which, with some improvement, may be made a credit to the city. In order to effectively continue the development of these systems, it is very essential that one member of the Commission have the business and technical experience which only an engineer has acquired.

Peterborough is my home city, in the development and welfare of which I am keenly interested. For many years I have been connected with its largest manufacturing firm, and, if elected, will be glad to place my experience at the service of the city. I feel certain that I can give the present Commissioners valuable assistance, and will co-operate with them to the fullest possible extent.

The Water and Power Systems of the city are among its most valuable assets, and the expenditures on them call for the most careful consideration. While the detailed engineering is, of course, attended to by the operating staff of the Commission, my professional work has given me the opportunity of becoming thoroughly conversant with both the problems of engineering and the question of costs which the Commission must carefully solve, and I feel confident that I can assist in carrying out the necessary development to the systems so as to give the most efficient service with the lowest expenditure.

The Trades and Labor Council have seen fit to endorse my candidature, although not a member of their organization, and were big enough and broad-minded enough to leave me free to exercise my best judgment and independent action should I be elected to the Commission.

My desire is to serve the best interests of the city with the view of helping to make it not only one of the first manufacturing cities of the Dominion, but one of the most desirable cities in which to live.

Respectfully yours,

C. E. SISSON

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mrs. Kate Morris

TO THE ELECTORS

The Hon. Mr. Drury, Premier of Ontario, has stated that he considers the woman's point of view both desirable and necessary on every Board of Education.

Dr. Cody, while Minister of Education, many times expressed the same opinion.

Your Board of Education acknowledges the need and value of women in the schools when it employs six times as many women as men teachers (65 women and 11 men) and a woman nurse.

Having been a Public School teacher for some years, I am able to see the educational questions of the day from the double viewpoint of the home and the teacher.

It is in the hope of giving intelligent service that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS,
(Mrs. W. R. Morris.)

30

For Board of Education

After strong pressure from influential quarters, I have again consented to accept a position on the Board of Education, if it be the will of the electors to place me there. [illegible] best business [illegible] considered necessary to help complete the work which is already in hand. It is at the service of the citizens for another term. A good substantial vote behind me would look as though what I have tried to do has been appreciated.

Your vote is respectfully solicited.

COPPING for ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having accepted nomination for election to the City Council, I wish to present myself to the Electorate.

I do so in full confidence that, if favored, I can give to the city now ample time in which to be useful, and be careful, diligent and helpful in the work and in the interests of the ratepayers as a whole. I am sure that I can give the time, and not plead further on that I am so occupied that matters escape my attention.

I place myself in your hands as a man and a citizen, just one of yourselves, anxious to help my home town and willing to make the effort. I can bring to the work good intelligence, appreciation of needs, and the will and energy to do the very best possible. If elected, I will make it my business to work amicably and helpfully with the members of the Aldermanic Board in joint effort to handle your problems.

Enterprises that are in hand for the city will have closest attention. Those planned will receive careful scrutiny in the interest that the best may be evolved. What is asked for will be supported if reasonable and conducive of the greatest good to the greatest number. I promise to be unremitting in my endeavor to justify your choice, if elected, and bespeak for myself your support.

I feel that I am not assuming too much in asking that you give the new man a chance. He deserves an opportunity to show what he can do. And he will make good, having in view the welfare and progress of the city for its citizens. I will not hesitate to encourage enterprise, so long as it promises to build up our municipality, and will assist such sensibly and carefully. We should provide the opportunity for laboring men to be employed, and if I am in your Council I will stand for progress in all things that it is well to push forward.

Respectfully,

R. V. COPPING

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

To The Electors

In the interests of the people for the immediate advancement of the

CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

In the coming election I have been chosen a contestant for municipal honors.

My reason for standing for election for a seat in your worthy council is not of my own volition, but because I was chosen by the Trades and Labor Council to stand for election. I am endorsed by the Independent Labor Party also, whose policies are progressive, honest and humane.

Why should the electors place members of this class in the council? because they are Democratic, offering even-balanced justice to workers with either hand or brain.

I stand for these principles, and if elected will devote my time and influence and personal deliberations along aforesaid lines.

I have spent the past thirty years in Peterborough and have been a ratepayer for a great number of years.

So having closely studied existing conditions relative to manufacturing industry my highest ambition would be to see Peterborough booming with industrial activity, as manufacturing is the main artery of the community in general.

I trust the electors will not break faith in my candidature for a Greater Peterborough, in which we are all concerned.

I have offered you a free policy of insurance, because I will protect your interests as I do my own.

I therefore solicit your patronage, and sincerely wish young and old a cheerful and prosperous New Year.

Your Obedient Servant.

KILL OFF PREDATORY BEASTS

Ridding Ranges of Ravaging Rogues Results in Saving More Than $5,000,000 Worth of Stock.

It is estimated that the bureau of biological survey of the United States department of agriculture is saving annually over $5,000,000 worth of live stock for the ranchers of the Rocky mountain section as a result of its intensive campaign against predatory animals, which has been in progress during the past three years. During this period 60,458 coyotes, 8,085 bobcats, 1,829 wolves, 201 mountain lions, and 137 bears have been trapped or shot, and many other animals have been poisoned. The income from the sale of pelts of animals killed by government hunters to protect live stock during the last year will aggregate approximately $100,000. This work is of special importance, because the cattle and sheep which are already on the range producing meat, wool, and leather are afforded protection, and thus the actual sources of these essential commodities are being conserved for market. Furthermore, clearing the range of predatory animals is making conditions more favorable for stocking the grazing areas to full capacity and for improving the quality of the breeding stock. —United States Department of Agriculture.

Japanese Beetle in New Jersey.

A public hearing on the proposed quarantine of a portion of New Jersey on account of the Japanese beetle, a serious pest of certain vegetables and fruit, was held by the United States department of agriculture in Washington recently. As a result of infestation of the Japanese beetle in parts of Burlington county, N. J., the proposed quarantine is intended to prohibit the shipment from this territory of green sugar corn, ripe tomatoes and ripe peaches which might cause this pest to spread. A campaign of eradication authorized by congress is now in progress, and the proposed quarantine is deemed necessary to support the measures that are being taken for the suppression of this dangerous pest.

Proper Signals Vital to Safety.

Proper signals are not acts of courtesy, they are absolutely vital to safety.

The driver behind is not a mind reader, and every driver should try to attract the attention of other drivers by the following signals

By the outstretched hand-

(1) When pulling away from the curb

(2) When turning at an intersection

(3) When turning in street.

(4) When changing course.

When stopping, signal by extending arm in horizontal position

Sound horn when passing overtaking vehicles and when approaching intersections.

Man—The Brute!

The fond mother had dropped in to see how her newly-married daughter was getting on.

"You look worried, dear!" she said anxiously.

"Worried!" snapped the bride. "I don't wonder! Such a time as I do have with that husband of mine! I don't have a minute's peace when he's in the house. He is always calling me to help him to do something or other."

"What sort of things does he want?"

"Well, last night he actually asked me to go all the way upstairs just to thread a needle for him, so that he could sew a button on his coat!"

Life's Fullness

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

There had been no romance about the marriage of Wynne Peyton to Nellie Price, yet for the most part she was sweetly content. He was a man any woman might respect and esteem. There had been no love making and his choice of Nellie had come about through impulse. Peyton was engaged in business in a good way. He had in his employ a man who had been bookkeeper way back to the time his father had started the business. John Price died, leaving a motherless daughter. Peyton exerted himself to pay all due respect to the memory of this faithful old business servant. This had brought him in close contact with the sorrowing daughter. Peyton felt it a duty to make some provision for the lonely orphan. He asked her to become his wife. There was a spirit of patience and gentleness about the young girl that won his admiration. He had no time for love, he told himself, but he surely needed someone to make a home for himself and those dependent upon him. Nellie fitted into the situation completely, to his way of thinking. She fluttered, and her eyes wore a beseeching expression as Peyton told her of his wish to marry her. The man did not read in the same the earnest longing of an untrained heart for love, and tenderness, and appreciation. She was lonely, she was glad to be offered a home, but, more than that she craved for affection.

"I will give you everything that ought to make a woman happy," Peyton told her. "There is my mother, old and failing, and the two little orphan children of my sister. Would you feel it too burdensome to become mistress of my home and look after these helpless ones?"

"You honor me greatly," replied Nellie, "but am I worthy of, or equal to the occasion? You were a good friend to my father, Mr. Peyton; you have done everything possible for me to soften the blow of his death. Who would not feel bound to you and to your interests after that?"

"Then you are willing to cast your lot in with mine?" asked Peyton plainly.

"Yes, Mr. Peyton," and Nellie became the mistress of the old family home. It was trying at the first, for old Mrs. Peyton was loath to give up to old age and feebleness. The children, too, at first resented the guidance of a stranger. A month after they were married Peyton came home one evening with news that troubled Nellie greatly. His firm had a branch in Brazil; its manager had peculated and absconded and had left the business in a complicated condition. Someone must go and straighten out affairs, or the entire investment would be lost.

"I have decided that the Brazil end of our business needs me more than this end," he told her, "and I shall leave tomorrow night."

"I hope it will not be a long absence," said Nellie, and his heart warmed at the manifest sincerity of her words.

"I fear so," he replied—"at least a year. I shall leave you amply provided for and I want you to sustain no onerous duties. If the care of mother and the children becomes too strenuous, promise me that you will make some arrangements to lighten the burden."

"Your mother, the children," cried Nellie, her true eyes betokening the genuineness of her emotion. "Why, they have become half of life to me! I really think they are beginning to love me as I do them. And the other half is you," and he quivered as her hand rested upon his own and he realized the sterling worthiness of the woman he had wedded lovelessly.

At the end of a year Peyton was still at the remote coffee plantation, the affairs of which he was whipping back into shape. Every week there reached him a letter from Nellie. Its tone was wifely and affectionate but mainly detailing information that he as a business man would appreciate. Once a month he replied. Many a time, when half ill from climatic conditions and worn out with overwork, at the thought of home and comfort he was half minded to cast business and gain to the winds. He was buoyed up, however, by photographs Nellie sent him of his mother and the children, happy faced and healthy, and by a letter from his mother telling of the treasure of the household, Nellie, who seemed to possess a magic for making everybody contented.

At the end of two years he left the plantation like a man released from a prison. He would surprise the folks, and he reached home at dusk to find his mother alone. She greeted him with joy, almost immediately beginning to extol the angel in the house who had made an earthly Eden of the pretty home.

"And oh! we have a wonderful surprise for you" she began, and was interrupted by the appearance of Nellie and the two little ones.

"I have something to show you," she flustered, and she led him into a little room where a cherub face smiled up at him from its baby crib.

The strong man fairly reeled at the ravishing presentment of the moment. Husband and father, a new soul seemed suddenly born within him. He clasped his devoted wife in his arms, nigh tearful for joy.

"Good-by business," he said. "Now I have time for—love!"

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having been nominated and endorsed by the Trades and Labor Council of Peterborough as a candidate for the position of Alderman of the City of Peterborough I accept the same, believing labor to be the basis of national progress. That a better understanding will be arrived at by co-operation of all classes on the Council, which is so essential to the industrial progress of any city. I feel confident that my practical knowledge of construction work will be of great service to the city in the undertakings that will come before it during 1920.

If elected, all matters that may come before the Council shall receive my most serious attention for the benefit of the community in general.

Wishing you all an industrially prosperous New Year, with happy home conditions.

Yours, etc.

W. H. TEDFORD

Re-Elect GARSIDE

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

For the last thirtyeight years I have been a resident of Peterborough and I have been a member of the City Council during the past year. I have watched public affairs closely for a great many years and my last year's service was in the interests of the small ratepayer as well as the large ratepayer.

I supported all progressive measures for the city's benefit and to improve the city's progress. "Equal rights to all and favors to none" has been my motto. I have stood by loyally, everything in the interest of the City.

I invite your hearty support and ask for your vote to return me as Alderman to the City Council, and I promise you that I will give my time and attention and actively support a policy of a greater and a better Peterborough.

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

JAS. GARSIDE

TO THE ELECTORS OF North Monaghan

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I take this opportunity of soliciting your support for Councillor for the important township of North Monaghan, and if elected I will do my utmost to prove worthy of your confidence. Wishing you all a Happy New Year.

Yours faithfully

Not Wholly German Rivers.

Not only is the Rhine not the boundary river of Germany, but neither its mouth nor its source is in German territory, as Charles M. Pepper points out in the Washington Star in the course of a discussion of the Rhine as a factor in peace negotiations. This has long been a cause of mortification to Germany, and to it is partly due the rise of the Pan-German movement and the dream of a Mitteleuropa. The Rhine flows into the North sea at Rotterdam in Holland, just as the other great German river, the Scheldt, flows into the North sea through Belgium. Even the Danube pours into the Black sea, but this fact was not felt as a humiliation by the Pan-Germans because of the subservient relation of Austria to Germany. But for a long time it has been their custom to assert, sometimes in the most offensive language, that Germany must control the Rhine and the Scheldt to their mouths.

Indigestion.

He reported sick. "What's the matter?" asked the doctor. "Indigestion, I guess," said the Yankee. "That dispatch I ate when I thought the Germans were going to get me didn't seem to agree with me."

ALDERMAN A.A. McINTYRE FOR MAYOR

To The Electors of the City of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

The best claim that any candidate for office can urge on his own behalf is based on his experience and the nature of the public service he has rendered. I have been ten years in the City Council. In that time I have been elected nine times, both under the ward system and the general vote. I appreciate these past expressions of confidence in me, and I pledge myself that, if elected Mayor, I will still strive to retain the good will of the voters.

I was chairman of the Special Council Committee that selected the site for the public bathing beach, and I gave my personal supervision to the construction of the bath house. I was also chairman of the committee that erected the bandstand in King Edward Park, thus giving the South End residents the benefit of open-air band concerts.

Some time ago the health of the citizens was menaced by the sale of milk which the sanitary officers showed by actual tests was impure. I was the father of the measure which provided for a rigid system of inspection for all milk offered for sale. During my various terms of office I have always taken an active interest in measures intended to improve the health of the city.

For two years I have been chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, which during the year just closing has secured six new industries for Peterborough. These are as follows:

The Western Clock Company of La Salle, Ill., makers of clocks and watches. This firm have taken the Chicle building on George street and expect to have two hundred men at work before the end of next year.

The Albion Knitting Company leased, with an option to purchase, the old West Ward School. They are employing about fifteen hands, with good prospects of extending their operations.

The Bon Marche Manufacturing Company, that has leased premises on Simcoe street and will engage in the manufacture of white wear.

The Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company, that has taken over the old Cordage Co. plant and will start operations with from thirty to forty skilled workers.

The Canadian Aladdin Company will, if the bylaw carries next week, locate a branch in this city for the manufacture of ready-cut houses.

Alexander Stewart has put up two buildings on Gladstone avenue and will start a wool stock factory.

These are a few of the matters in which I have had a hand during my different terms in the Council. I will, if elected Mayor, do as I have done in the past and work for the interests of all classes of citizens.

I repeat what I said in a previous notice to the public. I am in favor of the housing scheme, although I voted against the bylaw recently adopted because I was convinced that the appointment of the commission should have been left to the Council of 1920.

Again soliciting your support, I am,

Yours for progress,

A. A. McINTYRE

CHRISTMAS AIR AT OMEMEE ECHOED WITH THE MUSIC OF WEDDING BELLS

One Golden and a Crystal Wedding Celebrated and a Number of Young Couples Joined in Matrimony, List of Holiday Entertainments.

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Dec. 29.—Christmas days were exceptionally busy in and about [illegible], the jingle of wedding bells with the echo of golden wedding bells followed up by merry Christmas bells made music in the air.

Married Fifty Years.

About ninety-five invited guests attended the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Switzer, on Monday. Sumptuous wedding dinner was served and many were the congratulations and good wishes extended to the venerable couple.

Celebrate Crystal Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Best celebrated their crystal wedding on Monday, by having a large party. Many young people from the village were in attendance and a jolly evening is reported. Mr. and Mrs. Best were ideal as host and hostess and the appreciation of their friends was evident in the many beautiful gifts of cut glass, etc., presented to them.

HALLIGAN—FAULKNER.

The Methodist church was the scene of the early morning weddings on Tuesday. The first one taking place at eight o'clock, when Miss Viola Faulkner became the bride of Mr. Halligan, of Bewdley, Rev. Mr. Stillman officiating. The bride wore a pretty brown suit with hat to match and black furs. The happy couple left on the nine o'clock train for points west and on their return will reside near Bewdley.

Ward—Nichols.

At nine o'clock on Tuesday morning a very quiet wedding was solemnized in the Methodist church, Rev. Mr. Stillman officiating, when "Nora," the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Nichols became the bride of Mr. J. Ward, of Norland. The bridal couple were unattended. The bride wore a handsome silk dress with hat to match and fur-trimmed coat. Many are the good wishes that follow the popular young bride to her new home in Norland.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Wilbert Ruth, of Roland, Man., is visiting friends in and around Omemee after an absence of many years.

CARUSO'S MEXICAN VISIT.

Tenor Tells How He Sang to Huge Crowd In Rain.

Enrico Caruso is writing his autobiography. It will not be published, he says, until after his death. Since he has been in Mexico, where he has been singing for the first time in his career, he has been "writing home," recounting his experiences and impressions. Doubtless some of this material will be incorporated in the autobiography. Mrs. Caruso has consented to the printing of some extracts from the letters which he has written in English. His quaint and picturesque use of our language is reproduced without editing.

"I went to the Plaza," Mr. Caruso writes. "There was a beautiful sun shining, but I felt my voice like midnight— dark and I was trembling. I dress quickly and was ready for performance at 3.30 exactly. We began, I went on. The public like me, but were no wild. Then the weather began to change and big clouds began to come up. In fact before the first act finished commenced the rain, and Carmen (Besonzoni) and I were all wet. We supposed the public goes away, but no one moves.

"The second act begin with heavier rain—and there was a big spectacle. Thousands of umbrellas open and cover all the area of the Plaza. We don't see any head or hear the orchestra. We hope always to stop, but the public was there. I sing my big romanza (the flower song) there in the hard rain and the public makes me big ovation. It was very funny to see that enormous black mass around the plaza, and with the exception of some blue and red spots all was umbrellas! It was worse by the third act. We could not stop unless the public started first. They stayed on and made big applause at end of act three.

"Some one told the public we would not finish. I was in my dressing room and heard a great noise and went out to find out what it was. They informed me what happened. Quickly I said to tell the public the performance would continue. Everyone went back to their places which they had left to break the stage. We finished in a heavy drizzle, and half of the people didn't hear for the noise of rain on the umbrellas. We were all soaked, but the public was happy because we did not leave them. Everybody appreciate my staying and continuing the performance, because generally it is the artist who first leaves the stage and the public. The receipts for the performance were $45,000."

Sam Sheppard's second-hand store in St. Thomas was entered by thieves and $200 worth of goods stolen.

CANADA MUST PREPARE TO MAKE A GOOD SHOWING AT OLYMPIC GAMES

Few Athletes in Dominion With Records That Promise Success at Big Event—Sprinters Should be Trained

(By Bobby Kerr, World Famous Sprinter.)

To try, and figure out Canada's chances as far as track and field events are concerned in the "Olympic games," to be held in Antwerp, Belgium, next August, is some little task.

Why?

Because for the last five years we have been thinking of other things besides "Olympic games," therefore there was no competition to speak of, and where there is no competition it is rather hard to tell what material is on hand. True, athletic games were held in Canada, England and France among the boys in khaki, and we have had a few meets in the last six months, but all of these are not sufficient to tell us definitely if we are in a position to compete against the rest of the world in such events.

However, we are going to try, which is the only way—therefore, if possible, see what we have on hand.

Let it be remembered that to win an "Olympic" event you first have to be the best or at least one of the best in your own country, and again your time or distance, as the case may be, must be close to the world's records.

Anent The Sprinting Lads.

First let us take the short distance events. A great many people may not agree with me, but I think the three fastest sprinters in Canada today are—Army Howard of Winnipeg, Frits Schaefer of Halifax, and Alex. Ponton of Toronto. Howard, although he is 35 years of age, a time, surely, when a sprinter should be past his best, competed in the interallied games in Paris last June, qualifying for both the 100 and 200 meter finals, and running inside the money in both events against Paddock, the fastest man the U. S. could find. True, Howard tried in 1912 in Stockholm and failed, but his recent performances stamp him as one of our best hopes. Schafer has not done a great deal since 1917 and 1918, but competed in England and France in many races during the above years, and had no trouble in defeating good fields on each occasion. The writer saw Schafer win a 100 yard handicap in 10 1-5 seconds. Ponton's performances of late easily stamp him as Ontario's best. He has never made as fast time as the other two mentioned, but is coming, while the others are going back. There might be some real finds develop from Cowan, Vancouver; McLaye, Calgary; Green, Chisholm, of Toronto, or our own Ollie Johnson.

Not Much Here, Either.

In the 440 yards some of our best men had to take a back seat from the Americans at the championships in Ottawa last September in 51 1-5 seconds, which is not near fast enough, but then Jack Tresidder, Hec Phillips and Blades were not competing. However, it is a question if they would "do" as was clearly shown from time to time overseas during the last few years where they were running. The 880 yards might bring out Jack Tresidder, Hec Phillips and some of the westerners, but they would have to go well inside 2 minutes to even defeat Hill, of England, let alone a half-dozen from the States.

In the 1 mile or, as on the "Olympic" program, 1500 meters, we would be confronted with at least two of the world's best, Joe Ray of the U. S and Hill, of England, both of whom can run close to the world's record time for the 1 mile, something which is very rarely accomplished in this distance. It would, therefore, be useless to mention any of our men, when I do not suppose we have a man in Canada that can do better than four minutes, 28 seconds. The 10,000 meter or 5 mile is where old England shines, and unless Sergt Massey, who is by far the outstanding man in this event in Canada today, decides to uphold the maple leaf, we would not have a chance. In the weight events the big policeman, John Cameron, from Vancouver, might have an outside chance. Halibruton, of Edmonton, looks like our best hope in the running broad jump. He is capable of going over 22 feet

Will Goulding Come to the Rescue

Unless we unearth some person who can clear over 6 feet in the high jump, which we have not at present, we would not have a look in. The walk and the marathon seem to me our best hopes. If George Goulding could only represent us again be, no doubt, would repeat his performance of 1912 in Stockholm. George may not be going as fast as he did then, but we would pin our hopes in him to be good enough to bring home the laurel wreath for this event. In case Goulding cannot compete we have in Jake Freeman one who is capable of giving the best in the old country a run for their money, for no doubt it is old England that will have to be beaten in this event. A walking race is one of their standard events, while the U. S rarely has this event on its program.

The reason, I think, Canada may have a chance in that marathon is not because I can name any likely winners, but because we have always been well represented in this event, and it is one race that one man may win today and another tomorrow. For example, who would ever have thought Woods would have been the first Canadian home in 1908— all honor to him— or Johnny Hayes would have won this coveted marathon the same year? This young fellow "Lawrence," from down east, who won the Martin 10-mile road race, looks like a promising boy. Dynes, of western Canada, who finished third on June 21 this year over the old 1908 marathon course, no doubt will be running better, and then we will have a number of long distance trials shortly that may show us that Harry Tresidder, Dellow, Phillips, Ellis or others may be worth reckoning with

What Must Be Done Now

No doubt these few rambling remarks appear to you discouraging, but as I stated at the first it is hard to think otherwise on account of lack of competition. We know we only have less than one-tenth of the population of our cousins to the south, and, therefore, have not the schools, colleges, or Y. W. C. A.'s or athletic organizations to promote meets as they have, but what we have we do not always make the best use of in the large centres to promote weekly handicaps during the summer months, and hold at least two athletic meets in the year. The smaller places should hold one meet a year; athletic organizations, other than Y. M. C. A.'s (and I am sorry to say we are sadly lacking in this respect) should be on the same scale at least as the Y. M. C. A. physical department. Therefore, is we would all who have been through the game and those who love good, clean, amateur track and field events, would do our part, there is no doubt that we would be in a far betted position than we are today. However, let us not talk about it, but up and doing!

WETZEL TO MANAGE LONDON BALL TEAM

ONTARIO CLUBS ARE ARRANGING FOR NEXT SEASON.

Owners of the London, Michigan-Ontario League, franchise announce the signing of H. ("Buzz") Wetzel, of Columbus, Ohio, as manager of next season's team.

Wetzel managed the pennant-winning Saginaw club during the 1919 season. That was Wetzel's fourth pennant in seven years as a baseball pilot in organized baseball, and his record shows that his club finished in second place during the three remaining years. He succeeded in disposing of nearly six thousand dollars' worth of players for the Saginaw club during the past season.

Wetzel will attend the meeting of the league to be held early next month for the purpose of making deals for players.

Retaining Estelle.

Offers have been received from Toronto and Baltimore for Pitcher Tom Estelle of the Brantford, M.-O., club, but no deal has been closed, the Brants thinking that it may be good policy to keep Estelle as the mainstay of the Red Sox for next year. King Brady is also in demand, but the club will not let him go. No action as to a new league to replace the Michigan-Ontario League, declared now to be absolutely dead, will be taken until after the New Year.

At a meeting in New York of insurance agents six women were present, who had sold from $100,000 to $300,000 of life insurance during the year.

GOOD HEAVYWEIGHTS SCARCE IN ENGLAND

BIGGER THEY ARE THE WORSE THEY ARE HAS BEEN THE RULE FOR 30 YEARS.

The ignominious defeat of Joe Beckett, the heavyweight champion of England, at the hands of Georges Carpentier, was a bitter blow to English sportsmen. They bad really thought Beckett to be the long-expected champion of their hopes.

Strange! England, the home of boxing, has not produced a good heavyweight in more than thirty years! It has been forty years since England has developed a heavyweight champion. Not since the day of Charlie Mitchell—and Mitchell was little more than a middleweight—has Britain been represented by a heavyweight worthy of the name. All of the heavyweight and middleweight champions, with one exception, have been Americans during the last forty years or practically since boxing was introduced into America.

Fitzsimmons is the lone exception. He was born in England, but was regarded as an Australian.

It is strange, indeed! The Old Isle has given the game an abundant supply of excellent little men, the smaller the better. Ring history shines with the deeds of such good little chaps as Jem Carney, Ben Jordan, Billy Plimmer, Jem Driscoll, Owen Moran, Joe Bowker, Digger Stanley, Fred Welsh, Ted Lewis, and Jimmy Wilde. But from the lightweights up, the bigger they are the worse they are, it seems.

Beckett's performance against the Frenchman is characteristic of their latterday heavyweights. Carpentier dropped Bombardier Wells in the first round, too. Debonair Georges has raised havoc with English champions. He not only knocked out Beckett and Wells (the latter he stopped twice), but he K.O.'d two of their middleweight champions as well—Jim Sullivan and Pat O'Keefe.

During the last ten years, five English middleweight champions have stacked up against Americans and each time the American put over the sleep producer. Papke knocked out Jim Sullivan in nine rounds, Willie Lewis dropped Pat O'Keefe in one round, and Dal Thomas in three; McGoorty stopped Jack Harrison with a single punch, and Mike Gibbons knocked out Sid Burns in five rounds.

Jack Scales, champion of England about eighteen years ago, was put to sleep in the first round by both Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Kid McCoy. Young Peter Jackson and Sam McVey also knocked him kicking.

Tommy Burns dropped in on his way to Australia to fight Jack Johnson and stopped Gunner Moir and Jem Roche. Sam Langford knocked out Tiger Smith and Ian Hague in four rounds each. And only recently Fred Fulton went over and cleaned up four or five of the big fellows with ease.

Bombardier Wells, who, by the way, is still the holder of the Lonsdale belt, and the real champion of England, is a pugilistic mystery. Wells has been knocked out eight times. However, in justice to the likeable big fellow it must be said that he is one of the best boxers ever in a ring, and if he possessed even a moderate amount of stamina he would now be hailed as one of Boxiana's heroes.

Driver of a motor car which knocked down a New York traffic policeman was sentenced to five days in jail.

New freight rates are expected to add $6,000,000 to $7,800,000 to income of New England railroads next year.

A MADE IN CANADA TRUCK

Marvellous Performance
of the
Ford One Ton Truck
For Quick Delivery, Heavy Dray Work and Farm Use

The demand for the FORD ONE TON TRUCK is phenomenal. The biggest corporations are buying it and the smallest users, as well, who must have Economy coupled with Efficiency and Service. Their judgment is based on Performance—on Money Value—on Real Achievement.

Every user of the FORD ONE TON TRUCK is an endorser, because of these facts. It has been tried—tested—proved—in all lines of work. For upwards of three years FORD ONE TON TRUCKS have been sold in Peterborough, during which time the MARVELLOUS "WORM DRIVE" REAR AXLE HAS NEVER REQUIRED A MOMENT'S ATTENTION.

A Ford Dealer from Western Canada, where he has sold hundreds of these Trucks, states that "Not a man in my employ has ever seen the inside of the rear axle."

What does that mean? Does it not prove, beyond doubt, that the FORD ONE TON TRUCK is 100 PER CENT. EFFICIENT!

It can be used everywhere—in every season of the year—spring, summer, autumn, winter—always reliable, always saving money—always cutting down hauling and delivery costs.

Every type of body, including special bodies to meet individual requirements, either for long hauls over country roads or service in the city.

WHILE IT WAS BUILT FOR ONE TON TRUCK WORK SIXTY PER CENT. OF THE TIME THESE TRUCKS ARE CARRYING UP TO 3,000 POUNDS—AND ANYONE WHO HAS WORK FOR A TRUCK WOULD BE WELL ADVISED TO CONSIDER THE FORD.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE STAGGERS BELIEF.

FORD ONE TON TRUCK achievements are most remarkable, and what will be done dims even past performances—it is a record of success that has surpassed all previous performances with this type of truck.

In many cases, where much hauling has to be done, two or more ONE TON TRUCKS are being put in the place of heavier, more expensive and less reliable Trucks.

THE POWER PLANT THAT HAS MADE THE FORD FAMOUS WILL BE IN THE FORD TRUCK YOU BUY.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NORTHEY — HOCKADAY

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in Lakefield at the parsonage on Wednesday, December 24, 1919, when Gilbert Lorne Northey, younger son of Mr. F. Northey, Burleigh, was united in marriage to Gertrude May Hockaday, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hockaday, Young's Point. The Rev. S. F. Dixon oficiated.

The bride looked charming in a gown of midnight blue silk, with hat to match and carried a bouquet of lily of the valley. She was attended by Miss Florence Matthews, who wore a midnight blue silk poplin dress. The bride's brother, Percy, supported the groom. Miss Edna, sister of the bride, wore white messaline silk and acted as ring-bearer.

After the ceremony, the wedding party returned to the home of the bride's parents, where the relatives of both parties partook of a dainty supper. The bride cut the cake with a German dagger trimmed with a white satin bow, which was brought home from France by her husband.

The bride received many beautiful and costly presents, among which was an Irish linen tablecloth, the gift of the bride's brother, which he brought home from Belfast, Ireland. The evening was spent in music and games.

Mr. and Mrs. Northey will reside at Mount Julian.

MOVING PICTURES FOR USE IN THE CHURCH

POPE PLANS FOR EXTENSIVE PROPOGANDA TO DEFEAT EXISTING EVILS.

Rome, Dec. 29.—The Pope, who has been interested in cinema propaganda for some time, has now given his official approval to a cinema enterprise of which Mgr. Grassi, the abbot of Marino, is the director. The committee is composed of princes of the church. The enterprise is called "St. Mark's Cinema Institute." Its object is to present films which will spread Catholic propaganda throughout the world by presenting films with a healthy story, fitted for young people, as well as stories of a purely religious character.

The Pope has been much worried by reports that reach him of the low moral level of most films. To counteract the influence of cinema shows where thieves and othter criminals are represented as heroes, he planned in "St. Mark's Cinema," which will shortly send its films all over the world.

Among the prelates who are directly interested in this new venture are members of the Pope's private households, and several heads of religious houses, including Father Rosa, of the Society of Jesus.

The Pope will inform all Catholic Bishops in America soon of the enterprise and ask for their active support in order to make the St. Mark's films a success in their dioceses.

SISSON ENDORSED FOR UTILITIES COM.

Editor Review: No civic body plays a larger part in the making of Peterborough into a desirable place to live than the Public Utilities Commission.

As the functions of the Commission are strictly of an engineering nature, it is self evident that to properly appreciate them at least one commissioner must have an intimate knowledge of the economic and technical principles underlying engineering.

Engineers are, by their education, training and experience, as well qualified as any professional class to discuss and deal with public questions and problems, and in the case of technical questions, are better qualified than are the other classes. No body of men are closer in touch with the issues of the present social unrest and the incident cost of labor and living. They have the confidence of both the employer and the employe. Colonel Leonard president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, said in Peterborough not long ago that he believed that the engineer is the logical connecting link between Labor and Capital, and should be the best arbitrator to harmonize differences between them.

It is as a Commissioner in the Public Utilities Commission that we need the voice and the authority of the citizen who is also an engineer.

Public opinion demands that the tribunals of justice should be administered by jurists, that questions of sanitation and hygiene should be decided by medical men. Let us be consistent and see that the Public Utilities Commission, considering the highly technical character of its problems, has on its board an engineer whose qualifications are indispensable to the successful administration of the Commission.

Mr. Chas. E. Sisson is an eminently qualified engineer. He is a member of the Engineering Institute of Canada, and an executive member of the Canadian branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. It is his everyday business to discuss and administer economic and technical matters equal in value to that dealt with by the Public Utilities Commission. He is in touch with the civic problems of Peterborough, and his candidature should appeal to all.

I bespeak the support of Mr. Sisson by all who desire a bigger and better Peterborough, a Peterborough whose sane methods of financing and carrying out of public projects will appeal to all who may be considering establishing themselves in Peterborough.

Yours, etc.,
RATEPAYING ENGINEER.

EDITOR'S MAIL

A MEETING ON TUESDAY NIGHT.

Editor Review: The voting on the two bylaws on January 1st is an important matter for the city.

A favorable vote on the bylaw to aid the Canadian Aladdin Company will bring to the city an important industry that is now doing a large and growing business in Canada. They will employ at the beginning thirty to forty men, and have made their arrangements so that they can enlarge, as they expect to employ many more. The company have their plans prepared for the building, and for a railway siding, so that they will lose no time in establishing the factory when the bylaw carries.

The Public Park Bylaw is to authorize the purchase of land on the east side of the river, south of Hunter street, for a park, and, if it is endorsed by the electors, will provide for a park and playground in the centre of the city, where it is needed.

A meeting will be held in the City Council chamber tomorrow night—December 30th—at 8 o'clock to prepare for getting out as full a vote as possible on these important bylaws.

I wish to urge a large attendance at this meeting of all who are willing to assist on election day, and hope that the electors will show their interest by being present.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE H. DUNCAN,
Mayor.

A PATRIOTIC CANDIDATE.

~~Editor Review: There are not many men who run for public office for purely patriotic reasons, but Mr. Copping semes to be one of them. I notice by his letter to the papers that having the time and the means he wishes to place them at the disposal of the city. It seems to me that this offer should be gladly accepted by our citizens, and that Mr. Copping should be given a large vote. For several years now he has been foremost in many movements for the city's interests, and his association with the Brinton Carpet Works has given him an opportunity to realize the city's needs. While there, too, he was known as a champion of the workingman.~~

TO THE ELECTORS.

~~Believing that every citizen who enjoys the advantages and privileges of our city should be interested in the development and administration of its utilities to the extent of being willing to assume some responsibility in connection with the same, and believing that I can render more effective service on the Utilities Commission than in any other capacity, I have agreed to allow my name to appear as a candidate for one of the vacancies on the Commission.~~

~~I solicit your favorable consideration of my candidature.~~

~~Yours respectfully,~~
~~C. E. SISSON.~~

MEMORIAL SHIELD WAS UNVIELED

GEORGE STREET CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL PAYS TRIBUTE TO FALLEN MEMBERS

An impressive service was that held at George Street Church Sunday school room yesterday afternoon, when a shield was unveiled, on which were placed in rows fourteen maple leaves each bearing the name of some member of the school who made the great sacrifice during the war.

Those from the the Sunday school who fell were: Fred Cressman, Arthur Ackerman, Ira Bradley, Percy Brown, Will Carruthers, Norman Darling, Eric Eagle, Herbert Dixon, James English, Robert Morrow, Roy Nelson, Carl Noftall, Sydney Smith, and Victor Thorndyke.

Dr. J. E. Middleton delivered a short address, referring to the heroic sacrifice of these boys and the great Christian principles for which they fought and died. During the course of this speech the shield was unveiled, and the school rose in a body to pay tribute to its fallen members.

After this the pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas, delivered his talk to the children on Candles, showing how all might be lights in the world by coming in touch with the one great Light of the World, Jesus.

LABOR'S APPEAL

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:—

Remembering its initial success of one year ago, when the entire slate of four aldermanic candidates was elected, and firm in the belief that the general public of Peterborough have every confidence in the fair-mindedness of Oraganized Labor and appreciate the beneficent reforms they have in view, the adoption of which would go far in enhancing the welfare of the masses, and still not work any injustice to the few, the Trades and Labor Council are again in the field, this year widening the scope of their activities to include branches of civic government other than the City Council. Being wide awake to the spirit of indifference demonstrated by the Electorate in previous years, due in great measure to the fact that only one class of citizens were placed in nomination, and that no opportunity was given the great bulk of the people to vote for representative citizens for the various public offices, the Trades and Labor Council is once more to the fore in an attempt to remedy this condition of affairs.

It will be noted that the Trades Council has not been selfish in its endorsation of the various aspirants for office, having gone outside of its organization and chosen several candidates who have no connection with the Trade Union Movement, believing they are eminently fitted to discharge the duties of the offices for which they were placed in nomination.

The idea of the Trades Council is to get every voter interested in the betterment of conditions under which we all have to live, and herewith submit a civic platform to which all the endorsed candidates have signified their willingness to adhere. This platform is the outcome of serious though and consideration of students of economic conditions for years, and its adoption is designed to bring about the greatest good to the greatest number. We would ask you at this time to carefully peruse two of the planks here set forth:

10—Annual publication of Assessment Rolls.

No citizen will have the temerity to deny that the salaries attaching to various civic offices should not be more generally equalized; neither would he deny that the publication of the assessment roll would bring about a more just assessment of taxes.

Apart from the platform as set forth, Labor's candidates, if honored with election, will to the best of their ability see that the city's business is handled in a manner that will not only prove of benefit to the masses, but they pledge themselves to represent all the people of the city, irrespective of class or creed.

The platform of the Trades and Labor Council is as follows:

MUNICIPAL ISSUES.

1—Municipal ownership of gas and electric light plants, telephones and all street railroads, all municipal franchises to be owned and operated by the municipality in the interests of the people.

SEVERAL CANDIDATES FOR MUNICIPAL OFFICE ENDORSED BY WAR VETERANS

Decline to Name Mayorality Contestant or Any Aspirant to Utilities Commission—Four for Alderman and For Board of Education Find Favor

At a meeting of the Great War Veterans Association last night a number of candidates for municipal office addressed them and explained the improvements which they support if elected.

At the conclusion of the addresses a motion was passed that the meeting recommend that the following candidates be endorsed by the Great War Veterans.

For mayor, they adopted mayor Duncan's suggestion "to let them fight it out" and refused to endorse either candidate.

For aldermen they chose G. N. Gordon, Frank Whitehouse, Russell V. Copping and Lorenzo Humber.

For Board of Education Mrs. Kate Morris, G. O. Cameron, J. W. Worth and comrade Claude Rogers.

They declined to endorse any candidate for the Utilities Commission leaving the choice to the individual members.

Trustee Worth is Heard.

The first speaker of the evening was Mr. J. W. Worth. He assured the people that, although he may have made some mistakes during his past two years' service, he had been a faithful attendant and had always attempted to support what was in the interest of education for the city.

He declared that he had not favored any particular class but had tried to be absolutely fair to everyone. He spoke of the movement he had launched for a ten per cent. increase to all teachers to help them during the hard war times.

In connection with the teachers' agitation for increased salaries he stated that he was in favor of giving the teachers an adequate salary to be able to present an appearance suitable to people of their station.

He favored the building of the new school to supply that part of the city that was badly in need of increased school accomodation.

Mr. Worth stated that it was he who insisted on the fair wage clause and the employment of city labor where possible for the new school.

A couple of big improvements that Mr. Worth declared himself in favor of was a better technical education for the young people of the city and also the necessity of the building of a gymnasium for the Collegiate Institute.

Mrs. Morris.

Mrs. Morris, in opening her address, said that she was not seeking work but felt that she was called to the work and therefore was willing to do it.

She thinks that there should be two or three women on the Board to co-operate with the men in administering the education of the children of the city. The fact that there are six lady teachers to one man shows that women are more adapted to that work than men and Mrs. Morris feels that the presence of a lady or perhaps two or three on the Board of Education would be a great benefit.

If elected Mrs. Morris promises to co-operate wholeheartedly with her male associates for the bettering of educational conditions throughout the city.

G. N. Gordon.

The first of the contestants for alderman was Mr. G. N. Gordon. In opening his speech he declared that from his experience on the Board of Education he felt that the influence of a woman is required.

Mr. Gordon explained that the reason he was running was on account of the death of men with municipal experience in the council.

"If my record satisfies you, I ask for your support and, if elected, I will serve to the best of my ability." "If, on the other hand, you do not elect me I will serve as a common citizen."

Mr. Gordon does claim that it was he who, as city solicitor, had urged that the Quaker Oats be forced to pay the taxes legally required. It was he who had won this case in the courts and had the decision sustained when appealed. He did this when some of the aldermen were attempting to pass a resolution that he should not appear at the court but he succeeded and saved considerable money for the city.

Ex-Mayor J. J. Duffus.

Then Ex-Mayor J. J. Duffus, who aspires to a position on the Utilities Commission spoke. He referred to the two strenuous years when he served the city as mayor and carried them through years of war with an increase of 1 mill on the dollar for taxes. And on both occasions at the conclusion of the year there was a balance in the city treasury, he stated.

Mr. Duffus favors the filtration plant and all other improvements for the interest of the people. He referred to the efficient work of the past Utilities Commission and stated that he was sorry the same men could not carry on the work in the future if elected. Mr. Duffus will stand by the principles that had influenced him through all his term of public office, will supply employment for the unemployed when necessary and favor greater improvements where needed, always keeping a careful eye upon the money in the treasury and the city's debt.

G. O. Cameron.

Mr. Cameron has been on the Board of Education for two years and declares boldly that he is not ashamed of his record.

He declared that as a member of the Board he felt solely a representative of Peterborough's future citizens, the boys and girls.

HAVE CHANCE TO SAVE FIVE WRECK VICTIMS

MEMBERS OF CREW OF DUTCH VESSEL ARE LASHED TO BRIDGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John's, Nfld. Dec. 30 — Hope for the rescue of five men of the Belgian steamer "Anton Van Driel," who have been lashed to the bridge of the wrecked vessel off Saint Shotts since yesterday, was renewed today when daybreak showed the storm passing and the seas calmer. It was believed that the steamer sent from here would reach the scene of the wreck early today and there was a chance that her boats might be able to take off the survivors of the crew of theirty. Other members of the crwe were lost yesterday in trying to reach shore in boats, after the steamer had struck on the rocks near the entrance of St Mary's Bay. The "Van Driel", loaded with coal for Holland, left Sydney, C. B., last Saturday.

NOMINATIONS MADE OUT IN TOWNSHIPS

In the township nominations, the officers of Douro, Harvey and Smith have been re-elected by acclamation. In Havelock, Mr. S. S. Havelock is running against the present reeve, and in Otonabee Mr. F. Eason has been elected reeve by acclamation, the following were nominated: For reeve—E. Holland and F. Collins; councillors—W. Harrington, T. Cavanagh, W. Killen, E. Sullivan and J. Crough.

—At Norwood—For reeve — P. W. Squire, Chas. O'Reilley, T. E. Findlay. For councillors—F. A. Webb, J. A. Patterson, J. R. McKelvie, W. H. Montgomery, G. E. Findlay, Walter Bitten, W. A. Richardson, R. The Banquet.

The social event of the Masonic year is the annual banquet. It brings together the members of the years past, those who from business cares, professional duties and general hurry of occupations, are not able to attend lodge with regularity. A sort of rounding up of the clans, a fraternal love feast, and there is a mental recount of those who are there and those who are taken in mind as "The Absent Brethren." For scattered all over the continent from Florida to Alaska, from Halifax to Vancouver, are to be found men who came into the local lodges and afterwards migrated. To enter the fraternal association of the Order in the places where their several lots have been beeu cast. All who may not be denied by pressing emergency make it a point, indeed a duty, to come to the gathering. The tables display a welcome, the brethren are cordial, all considerations are set aside, and everyone joins in the festival of the evening, commemorating the Masonic Festival of St. John the Evangelist, the patron saint of the order.

Further, the new rooms, or lodge, cannot now hold the number who wish to participate. So the formal installation is carried through, and afterwards those engaged migrate to the scene of festivity, where they are joined by those who have arrived before. The Empress Hotel was the assembling point last night, and the large dining room was in shape for the guests. Not only that, but the tales were set in various odd situations, in order to afford accommodation. The house met the demands well and good. The service excellent. The waiters atentive and alert. The list of good things to eat was ample, and several averred that the grilled sirloin steak was a "peach," which means that, trimmed with brown gravy, garnished with succulent peas and flanked with a creamy Mashed potato, the whole was done to the King's taste. The menu was a great success and worthy of Chris Graham's catering.

Wor. Bro. J. E. L. Goodwill filled the chair. As a preliminary to further speaking he told of the arrangements now to become a permanency, that the banquet in future would not be served at the lodge room but would be housed at the Empress, practically the same procedure as followed during the evening in which they were all participating.

The Toasts.

Loyally the toast of "The King" claimed first place, and, proposed by W. Bro. W. R. Morris, was welcomed, noted and prefaced by a brief reference to the Crowned Head of the Empire, followed by the National Anthem, the same being well sung, having as leaders of the chorus Brothers Crane, Park, Carlisle and Smith. Anything led by this quartette has to go with a swing. And just here it may be written that throughout the evening these same brothers of the Craft added to the enjoyment of the evening with a realy unlimited number of songs, duets and trios, all a real musical treat. When it comes ting up a musical program it is at once seen that the Masonic Order has corralled about all the real musical vocal talent in the men's line that the city has. They contribute without stint and in good voice and admirale and well sung selections.

"The Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario," is a sort of roundabout way of putting on paper the title of a sentiment and toasts that all Masons honor. It expresses allegiance to the craft, and was proposed by W. Bro. E. B. Fowler, who briefly sketched the history of Grand Lodge, its several functions, and how well and efficiently it discharged its duties. For there are ever in the local lodges the new member who knows not of these things until he is so advised. The Order, the speaker said, stood for the bond of friendship, and this attribute was found and represented in the personality of the officers of Grand Lodge. At once paternal and fraternal, this feature of friendship was the one inculcated, the thing we should as Masons strive for, and in so doing we should be true and accepted Masons.

Rgt. W. Bro. D. Walker, reponded to the toast, regretting that he could not do full justice to the theme. The GGrand Lodge called for no amount of eulogy or commendation for it stood on a firm foundation. Promoted from among the local lodges the Grand Officers rose from the ranks by virtue of application and devotion to the Order. No mason could advance except by merit. Peterborough had not, as yet, entertained the Grand Lodge and an effort should be made to have at least one gathering of the Lodge in Peterborough. With cordial greetings from Grand Lodge his address concluded.

The Chairman expressed regrets that M. W. Bro. Wardrobe, retiring Grand Master, who had arranged to be present and deliver an address, was unable to keep the engagement. Other claims had engaged attention, and a worthy substitute could not be found and communicated with in time to attend the meeting. In order not to leave a gap in the program the Chairman briefly recounted incidents of Masonic history delimiting the prevalence of the installation ceremony in lodges of the Craft centuries ago. He described the ritual, the routine observed, showing how closely the practice of the present day followed the traditions of the Craft as handed down to lodges of recent years. The analysis of the ritual explained how it came about that St. John the Evangelist became the patron saint of the Order. A short sketch of the life and work of the patron closed an interesting address.

The toast of "The Absent Brethren," was ably and feelingly proposed by Bro. Rev. F. E. Malott, of Trinity Church, city. On such occasions as the one we now shared in our thoughts invariably turned to those who were, though alive, not with us now. It was the fellowship of the Great Order of Masonry that made and formed its greatest charm. In all hours of privation, in extremity of personal or upblic life we value the friendships that we form in the lodge. And so we keep in mind those at home, who may be sick, those spread abroad over the continent, on this night thinking of the home lodge as we are now thinking of them. And possibly, who knows, our wireless message of remembrance may reach their hearts. Also we remember those who have crossed the bar, taken the Higher Degree, absent brethren who have passed from our vision. Some lay in the graves we may visit. Others may sleep amidst the poppies of Flanders' Fields, those who have made the Great Sacrifice. For all these he would bespeak a moment of silent remembrance.

"The Visitors," generally a toast that affords some opportunity for reminicenses on the part of those who participate. Proposed by N. Bro. W. R. Breyfogle, who said he would set aside the word visitor and substitute that of brethren. In coming to Peterborough he had experienced a warm welcome as a visitor and a brother, and he wished to express the value of the welcome as a brother Mason. He understood that brethren in the room, visiting the lodge, and who might respond, be given a hearty reception. This brought to his feet W. Bro. W. B. Bampford, now of Toronto, who calmly claimed that he was no visitor, not to be considered as such, for he was a life member of Peterborough Lodge, and hoped to be so as long as he was on this earth Peterborough he claimed as his home town. Peterborough Lodge as his parent and present lodge and to it he would ever turn with respect and affection. It was to him a sincere pleasure to greet his old friends and comrades in masonry. And it gave him pleasure to say, in and out of season, in loud and in gentle voice in his office and on the street that Peterborough was the finest city, its men the best men, his old friends the very kindest and in all the city from which he was absent but turned to as his very own.

Bro. Dr. Keyes, also of Toronto, stood up and interested the gathering by claiming that he was a member of Corinthial Lodge, in excellent standing, and quite one of themselves. In such he claimed allegiance to masonry in Peterborough. He recalled incidents of this connection with the Craft in this city when he was a resident, and during the time in which he was in personal and fraternal connection with Peterborough men. He added a brief sketch of his work and service in the Ontario capital and pathetically asked that he not be sygmatized as a visitor but as one of the Band of Brotherhood of the Craft in Peterborough so long as he survived and the Ancient Landmarks endured.

W. Bro. W. S. Campbell proposed the toast of the "Ruling Masters, the presiding officers elect in the local lodges and who will direct the work during the masonic year. To this toast W. Bro. S. T. Medd, of Corinthian Lodge, W. Bro. John Comstock, Peterborough Lodge and W. Bro. C. E. Smith, of Royal Arthur Lodge, made brief acknowledgement. All said that earnest endeavor would be the aim that the lodge work would be kept up, to be carried on in such way as to attract the monthly and special meetings the brethren, both those who were skilled and those who sought instruction. And that in all respects the Craft would share in the benefits of friendly association and comradeship. Each expressed his diffidence and trusted that more experienced brethren would assist and give of experienced service so often as required.

Before concluding the evening the Chairman called attention to the admirable share taken in the entertainment by the members who had contributed the musical numbers. These were Bros. D. Carlisle, Morris Park, J. Smith and Rgt. W. Bro John Crane. It was, the chairman said, a source of satisfaction to the lodge that within the membership were included brethren of musical gift [illegible] excellent as to supply the occasion with song and music of the highest order. And the thanks of the fraternity was handed to the singers and accompanied by cheers and approval.

FIRST WEEK OF NEW YEAR MAY SEE PEACE TREATY FINALLY SIGNED

That is the Hope Held Out Today by Members of Supreme Council—German Representative Has Secret Conference With Secretary—Terms of Scapa Flow Settlement is Still an Issue

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 30. — "Hopes have again been raided in the Supreme Council circles for an early exchange of the ratifications of the Versailles treaty. The end of the first week in January is given now as the probable date when the treaty wil be put into effect. This prospect springs from the conversation held between Kurt Von Lersner and Secretary Dutasta, of the Peace Conference. It was said today that the chances were that the Germans would decide to sign the protocol without waiting for a verification of thte figures, regarding the harbor tonnage. It is expleained that the Council will satisfy the Germans demand for a more specific declaration on the reduction of the tonnage asked for, through affixing to the protocol the text of M. Dutasta's verbal declaration to the German representatives on the subject.

Another Conference Today.

Kurt Von Lersner head of the German peace delegation called on th eSecretary of Peace Conference this afternoon. The greatest reserve is maintained relative to the subjects discussed and it is only known that Von Lersner did not bring the German reply to the last note from the Allies to the German Government.

It is generally understood, however, thot Germany is inclined to sign the protocol to the treaty, on condition that guarantees are given regarding posible reductions as to the quantity of harbor and dock material to be handed over in compensation for the warships sunk at Scapa Flow

MEETING TONIGHT AT THE COUNCIL CHAMBER

The mayor has called a meeting for eight o'clock tonight at the city council chambers to which the public are invited to discuss the two by-laws to be submitted to the people on New Year's day. It is felt by the mayor and his associates that both these by-laws should receive the support of the electors and with the intention of promoting this object tonight's meeting has been called.

The first by-law is one to aid the Aladdin Company to locate here and build their houses which are famous over the whole continent. The company has its plans prepared for a building and a railway siding so that operation can be commenced at an early date.

The Park by-law is to authorize the purchase of the land east of the river, including Riverside Park, for the purpose of establishing a playground and resting place in the very heart of the city where it is much needed. This, if sanctioned by the ratepayers, will provide Peterboro with one of the most beautiful parks in the Dominion of Canada.

Sorry To Part.

With the observance of the "Junior Warden's Toast," and the time-honored formula, including the chorus of Auld Lang Syne, and "Happy to Meet, happy to part, and happy to meet again," the gathering dispersed, and the observance of the Festival of St. John the Evangelis was over.

ALD. McINTYRE EXPLAINS PLATFORM AT MEETING OF LOCAL LABOR PARTY

Favors Extension of Street Car Lines, the Erection of a Post Office Building in Peterborough, and Home Work for Home Men—All Candidates on Ticket Gave Their Views.

Ald. McIntyre, at the campaign meeting of the Labor party held in Labor Hall last night, defined his platform for the Mayoralty in a brief but effective address, which was received by the large audience with every sign of approval.

The alderman is in favor of extending the street car system, his ideas in this regard being set forth in detail in his address to the electors printed in another column.

If elected Mayor, Ald. McIntyre will urge the Ottawa Government to proceed with the construction of the new Federal building, a work delayed on account of the war.

He is in favor of a Housing Commission for Peterborough.

He will use every available resource at the command of the city to reduce the high cost of living.

He believes that all city work should be done by city men.

He believes that sanitary homes, with sewer connections and other modern conveniences, should be provided for the workingmen of the city, and if he is elected Mayor he will work for every item of progress here stated.

T. McMurray acted as chairman, and addresses were made by every candidate on Labor's slate, including Mr. C. E. Sisson, the outsider who has been endorsed by the Trades Council for the Utilities Commission.

The aldermanic candidates, L. F. Humber, Fred T. Tuggey, J. Arthur Sharp and W. H. Tedford, were all heard in the order named, after the chairman had made an extended address. Every man of them declared that if sent to the Council he will work for the interests of the city as a whole, not for any particular class.

A. J. Bolwell and Alex. Morrison the candidates for the Board of Education, also made short addresses, Mr. Bolwell also putting in a good word for Mrs. Morris. He also learned that Ald. Taylor had stolen his best campaign thunder from the platform of the Labor party. Mr. Morrison in his remarks urged the necessity of technical education.

C. E. Sisson said he had decided to enter public life in order to help advance the interests of the city and that he had chosen the Utilities Commission, because, being an engineer, the work of that department was more in his line.

C. P. Lloyd, one of the best speakers in the Labor party, dealt with the case of G. N. Gordon, who posed as a friend of Labor and then worked for G. A. Gillespie against Labor's candidate at the last election, and is running now in opposition to the Labor ticket.

Thomas Tooms, M.L.A., made an address in which he set forth the qualifications required in any candidate put up by the Independent Labor party. These must be:

Men who cannot be bought.

Men who possess opinions and a will.

Men who would rather be right than a premier.

Men who will not lose their individuality in a crowd.

Men of courage who are not cowards in any part of their make-up.

Men whose ambitions are not confined to their own selfish desires.

Other speakers were Ald. Gainey and Secretary [illegible] of the Independent Labor party. At the meeting the greatest enthusiasm and harmony prevailed and there is little doubt that Labor will vote to the limit of its strength next Thursday.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1919.

R. V. COPPING FOR ALDERMAN.

A CERTAIN SECTION of the voters of Peterborough have long been mourning the fact that it has for years been a matter of difficulty to induce really substantial citizens to become candidates for places on the City Council. No such trouble has been experienced in securing candidates for the Board of Eductaion or for the Utilities Commission. The reason for this is not apparent, although it may be surmised.

Peterborough now has a chance to secure the services of a resident who in every respect appears to possess the qualifications so desirable in an alderman. Mr. R. V. Copping has been induced by those who know him best to stand as a candidate for the Council. This is a case in which the office seeks the man, and is Mr. Copping's first venture in public life. Mr. Copping has been a resident long enough to have proved himself a desirable citizen. His business associations have been such as to demonstrate his abilities in this line. He is public-spirited and has sufficient leisure to be able to devote all the time required to his public duties. Peterborough could not possibly stand still with such men at the helm. Mr. Copping is, besides, identified with vast outside business enterprises, and would be in an admirable position to induce some of these concerns to locate in Peterborough, one of the highest duties with which every city council is charged.

RIGHTS OF THE SMALLER CITIES.

IN HIS comprehensive argument in favor of the purchase of Riverside Park, Dr. E. E. Harvey, of the Board of Trade committee, calls attention to the fact that other parks in the city lie in the outskirts and are accessible to the masses only by street car. On Sundays, the very days such parks could be used by the residents who possess neither auto nor carriage, the street cars are not permitted to run, and as a result these parks are practically deserted, even during the hot weather season. In cities of less than fifty thousand population Sunday street car traffic is banded. When that figure is passed the residents are allowed by plebiscite to decide whether they shall keep down or raise the lid. Dr. Harvey sees a ray of hope in the present situation. When Peterborough counts its poniation by fifty thousand it can then take a vote on this issue.

Is Peterobrough to wait all those years in order to decide what is good for itself, submitting all this while not to legislative enactment but what is really a junta made up of church organizations with headquarters in Toronto? Why should there be this discrimination between the smaller and larger cities? Is it only when municipalities attain a certain growth that the people are qualified to settle spiritual and material problems for themselves? Why is an autoist permitted to go on Sunday where he listeth while the poor man can stay at home or wander around on foot. Sunday autos carry many people to church, but more who use them are simply on recreation bent. Sunday street cars, tho, would stop before many a church door and unload worshippers even though the parks would during the summer attract the bulk of the passengers.

We all believe that eventually Peterborough will have a population of fifty thousand and can then settle the street car question. But that is too long to wait. Too many people will in the natural order of things pass away before that objective is attained. The law can be amended so as to remove this silly restriction against the rising municipalities. In this age of progress junta rule should be given no countenance.

RETAIL KINDNESS.

(Detroit News.)

"WHAT AMERICA NEEDS in this day of strikes and unrest is more retail kindness." Irving Bacheller, the novelist, said in a recent speech, and the suggestion is worth considering. If business is unusually disturbed, it is but paying the price for the attainment of bigness. Everything in modern business is in wholesale proportions. Even the plans designed to show sympathetic interest of employer to employes take the form of general welfare precautions for the mass rather than of expression of personal interest in and sympathy with the individual. It is wholesale business. This is what the speaker meant in calling attention to the need of "retail kindness."

It is noteworthy as proving the truth of the thesis that employes of big business offer the most frequent examples of unrest. Even concerns that have appeared to take greatest interest in welfare work and have spent large sums in providing for the health, comfort and general well-being of their employes are not always able to free themselves from the menace of strikes and other manifestations of industrial dissatisfaction. There is the tendency always to regard the fine rest rooms, the expensive hospital equipment, the attendance of doctors and nurses and other particulars of modern "welfare" provisions as a mere attempt on the part of the board of directors to take better care of the human machinery that it may be worked more economically.

Retail kindness would undoubtedly cure this evil. Can big business find a way to bestow it? In the olden days, when employer and employe worked side by side in the business, the man who furnished the pay envelope took daily evidences of good or bad fortune of the man who received the pay envelope.

"You have a bad cold, John; better not come down to-morrow," the boss might say, and thereby engender a spirit that was good for all concerned, including the business. That was retail kindness, and it belonged to the days of retail methods and retail thought.

This big question now is, how can this spirit be given free course under the modern conditions? Undoubtedly there are many employers whose affairs have grown to vast proportions, and yet whose hearts incline them to just such evidencing of kindly interest in those who in their employ give their time, their strength and their energy to building the business. It is an intricate problem in the mechanics of big commercial and industrial enterprise to make the humane spirtl flow thick and warm through the resisting medium of efficient modern business routine. But the employer who succeeds in establishing the connection and making the people on his pay roll feel the heart throbs of his good intentions will have removed one great cause of worry.

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S BIG PROBLEM.

EVERY ONE who follows public questions in this city knows that the Board of Education are confronted by serious business problems. The growth of the school population calls for the erection of a new building, which is a heavy responsibility at any time and especially when the cost of material and labor are taken into account. The teachers have filed a request for a raise of salaries, to which they are entitled, if the best of them are to be retained in the city's service, for salaries of teachers all over the Province are being increased. The school tax rate is already high in Peterborough, as elsewhere, and the members of the School Board are in a quandary.

It has been suggested that there is only one hope of relief, and that can come only from the Legislature. Grants for educational purposes must be increased. The lawmakers at Toronto have decreed that up to a certain age the education of every child is a matter of obligation. They insist, too, that certain standards be maintained. That being the case, it is up to the Legislature to see to it that funds are furnished to make possible the attainment of the ideals which the State has set up. Conditions can be equalized as between the rural communities and the urban centres. The residents of each can pay the same proportion of the cost, and in no other way will it be possible to secure for the pupil in the country the same advantages as those enjoyed by children resident in the city.

(Brantford Expositor.)

There is really no good reason why the property qualification should not be abolished altogether, and the electors in both city and country left to decide, without any restrictions of a financial character, who are fit and proper persons to represent hem.

PATRONAGE REARS ITS HEAD AGAIN

(St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

Premier Drury has not been long in finding out that a reformer in office and a reformer in opposition are in very different case. Before the provincial election the farmers were a unit in their denunciation of patronage and of the old parties who habitually used it to strengthen their hold on the seats of the mighty. In those not distant days when the farmers had no expectation of occupying the same seats, it was a delightfully easy business to urge that government positions should not be handed out as a reward for party service, and that the principle of promotion was altogether admirable in the filling of vacancies. But no sooner does the Farmer-Labor cabinet disclose its intention to carry into effect what it pledged itself to accomplish, than the voice of rebellion is heard from the ranks of his supporters. That the government should, of its own volition, apply the rule of meritorious service, without consulting its supporters in the particular locality concerned and without waiting for their recommendation, is denounced with even more than the former reform fervor as a usurpation of power and as comparable only to the act of an autocrat.

Disguise it as they please, the protests of the objectors to the appointment of the assistant to the late registrar of Middlesex to the vacancy that came with his death is nothing more nor less than a demand for the restoration of the patronage system. Apparently, their stand is not entirely representative of the Middlesex farmers, since Mr. J. L. Lethbridge, the government member for West Middlesex, emphatically stated on Friday that the rumors of opposition to the appointment were without foundation. On the other hand, it is undoubted that Mr. Harold Currie, of Adelaide township, also a United Farmer, strongly complains that the Attorney General's act was high-handed and opposed to the principles for which the farmers stand, in that Mr. Raney made his decision without consulting the pople of that particular riding. According to report, Mr. Currie is being backed by Mr. J. J. Morrison, generally credited with being the power behind the government. Clearly, the United Farmers of Middlesex are divided on the question and, apparently, a strong effort will be made to compel the cabinet to reconsider its action in the case of the registrarship.

Premier Drury and his cabinet are thus squarely faced, at the outset of their administrative career, with a test severe enough to try out the strength of their backbone. Even if aceptanbe of one horn or other of this special dilemna is evaded for the time being and the present Middlesex opposition placated, a decision one way or other is bound to come earlier or later. If the cabinet yields to the clamor and cancels Miss Martin's appointment, it will be nothing less than an open confession that the United Farmers as a political party, are no better, even if no worse, than the regular parties they so bitterly abused. The same judgment, too, will have to be pronounced should another vacancy occur and the principles of promotion is disregarded. Primier Drury has his choice whether to stand by his pre-election pledges or succumb to the cry that he must submit to party dictation in the matter of appointments. If he prefers that method of holding his supporters together and strengthening his hold on constituencies, in what will his administration of patronage be superior to that of preceding cabinets?

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review.—Saturday's local press contained a letter signed "Union." In fairness to Labor as a whole, we would like to make a few comments. The matter of Mr. Mason not being nominated is most regrettable, as his endorsation, like all those made by the fountain head of Organized Labor here, was unanimous, and fifty accredited delegates were present. But this is a question for the Trades Council to deal with. As to endorsing a lawyer, does "Union" think himself big enough to tell the Trades Council how it should do business? If he is, and is a union man, he would most likely have enough confidence placed in him by his fellow craftmen to be in the local Labor Parliament. That word at the bottom of a letter means nothing at all and carries no weight. Having had experience in other elections, such letters, no matter who may write or inspire them, are paid for at so much an inch when they advertise a candidate. The fact of "Union" saying Mr. Gordon is a friend of Labor, does not make him so. Sometimes, Labor and Capital run along fairly well as a team. When a corporation lawyer holds the reins on such a team and the parting of the ways is reached—Labor, have a care. No lawyer, who looks after the interests of corporations, can be truly called Labor's friend.

We are inclined to think Mr. Gordon acts as counsel for corporations, which he has a right to do, being a branch of his profession. Labor does not look among such men for its supporters. "Union" need not prate about the Trades Council's mistakes. He makes the one of his life when he fancies the workingmen of this city will fall for his talk. The Trades Council represents close to 100 per cent of Organized Labor here, and any man in any union had the priviledge to submit the name of "Union's" pet. It was not mentioned. Mr. Gordon is an amiable man, but surely cannot look for support from true union men. They will support their own slate, endorsed by their own representatives, thus helping themselves up another notch.

Yours truly,
LABOR CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

A CORRECTION

Editor Review.—Will you please correct a mistake which appears at the head of my letter re-the Riverside Park Bylaw, in yesterday's issue. I am not chairman of the City Plan Commission. Mr. Ryerson Ritchie is chairman of that Commission. I am merely a member of it. I am, however chairman of the City Plan Committee of the Board of Trade, which fact, I believe, accounts for the mistake.

Yours truly,

LAKEFIELD VETERAN IN THE LUMBER INDUSTRY

J. F. LILLICRAP SPEAKS OF EARLY DAYS IN THE LOGGING WOODS.

(Canada Lumberman.)

"I have managed the lumber businee from almost every angle and always find something to learn," stated J. F. Lillicrap, of the Karwatha Lumber Co., Lakefield, Ont. He is one of the most widely known members of the industry in Ontario, having been identified with it for over forty years. Mr. Lillicrap got his first acquaintance with wood products when a clerk in a lumber camp in the township of Harvey, Peterborough County. He kept the books and also the time of the men, measured all the logs and square timber, and for discharging these manifold duties received $12 per month. The wages that prevailed that winter for lumberjacks wee $9 to $14 a month a foreman received $25 and cooks $20. The board consisted of pork, beans, bread and tea without any sugar, and few, if any, potatoes. How different is the menu today!

Until 1882 Mr. Lillicrap measured logs in the winter and then was placed in charge of a large sawmill at Bradford, Ont., where he spent the summer for some years, and during the cold months estimated timber on the limits, located camps, etc. He returned to Lakefield about 1887, where he was employed by the Lakefield Lumber Co. looking after their sawing and shipping. Then, for three years he operated a planing mill in that village and, in company with Mr. Lillicrap next commenced to sell lumber on a commission basis and also to purchase for an American firm. In 1912 he came to Toronto to sell for the Laurentian Lumber Co., of Montreal, but returned to Lakefield in 1917. A year ago, in association with his old partner, E. R. Tate, and E. Elmsley, of Toronto, he formed the Kawatha Lumber Company, Limited, of which he is purchasing agent and salesman. They have had a successful season and expject to largely extend their business next year.

Mr. Lillicrap has made many warm friends during his long connection with the industry and has witnessed many changes in its development during his forty-three years' association with its activities.

Mainly About People

The United Farmers of Ontario had reason to be proud of the victory they achieved in the recent federal bye-election in the Northern Riding of the County of Ontario. It was a display of strength in keeping with that shown at the provincial general elections. By a substantial majority the farmers elected their candidate over the candidate of the Union Government.

The successful candidate, Mr. R. H. Halbert, President of the United Farmers of Ontario, is a retired farmer living in the town of Uxbridge. He has been a prominent member of the farmers' organization since its inception, and has held several important offices. He, therefore, has had considerable practice in public speaking.

The vacancy in the riding was caused by the death of Col. Sam. Sharpe, who had held the seat since the general elections of 1908. At the elections of 1917 he was the candidate of the Union Government and had a majority of 1,550. The Unionist candidate for the recent bye-election was Mr. W. J. Cowan; but he died suddenly and the election was delayed a few days, Mr. N. D. McKinnon, a miller of Cannington, coming forward as the Government candidate.

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH,

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBORO

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

If I am elected mayor, one of my first duties will be to endeavor to secure an extension of the street car system. I will see the Hydro-Electric Commission and urge them to continue the line from Patterson street to Byersville, on the boundary, connecting with the line already in operation. I shall do my best to have this line continued down to Crawford's Grove, where with very little expense a beautiful summer resort could be established where the working men of the city, with their wives and families could enjoy themselves after the labors of the day.

I will also advocate the building of a car line south on Park street, from Braund's corner to the De-Laval. This line to be extended south from year to year as the growth of the city requires it.

I am also in favor of a line to East City as soon as possible after the completion of the new overhead bridge.

There is also another part of the city, which in my opinion should have a street car service, namely the northwest portion, and if I am elected I shall do my utmost to have a line constructed to serve the people who live in that section of the city.

I am not in favor of the city buying the Street Railway and the Gas Plant at the present time, not, at any rate, until we have completed the two great undertakings, which we are at present engaged in, namely the Hunter street bridge and the outfall sewer. Then we must make sure that it will be a paying investment and help to relieve the burden of the taxpayer instead of adding to it.

Moving the Movers

By J. L. JAMES

(Copyright)

I was sitting in the stuffy little depot of a prairie town. A "norther" was prowling around outside, and whistling mournfully about the eaves. A lone drummer, two or three farmers, and myself, were waiting for the local going west, a swaying combination of one rickety passenger coach, any number of freight cars, and a sputtering little hog-back engine.

The train made daily trips, but on its return each afternoon, or midnight, became No. 3 instead of No. 1—its west-bound cognomen.

The road boasted of another train, subject, also, to daily change of numbers—No. 2 and No. 4—a real passenger train, due late in the afternoon, and likely to arrive at any time thereafter.

On this particular morning, No. 1, known by the boys as "The Great Unlimited," was also late. No one was surprised. The drummer, who had worked the whole town since breakfast, and had then defeated all the local checker champions, was trying to kill time by dozing in a corner, or slapping at some stray fly.

I had kept awake watching his antics for a while, then discovered a dirt-dauber's nest on a horseshoe over a door, and for an hour or so divided time between wondering how that individual discovered that a horseshoe brought good luck, and listening to the progress of a domino game in the office, between the agent and the only drayman in town.

Suddenly the outer door opened with a crash. A man, a woman, and several children entered, showing by all signs in sight or hearing that they were emigrants, or, as locally termed, "movers."

The woman was carrying, in one hand, an old umbrella, a frying-pan, and a bird cage with a half-grown rabbit in it. In the other hand she had a hatbox. Under one arm was a square, boxlike old clock, and from her wrist hung a bag that bulged with a conglomeration of articles.

Behind the woman came a girl of, perhaps, eight years, carrying another clock of different shape, and an anxious-looking gray cat that seemed to have its attention divided between fear of falling and the desire to eat the rabbit.

The man carried nothing but a big fat, bawling baby of two years, wrapped up in a red and green blanket. Other children followed, some carrying various articles, some crying, others eating peanuts.

The children all came into the depot readily enough, but seemed to have no further idea what was expected of them, and stood gazing at the lurid posters, maps and excursion notices, or stumbled over seats and suitcases.

"Now, set down!" commanded the mother, "and don't stand around gapin' like a lot o' eegiots!"

The youthful "movers" broke ranks, some to clamber into seats, others to go on a tour of inspection of everything within range. The mother pushed one clock under a seat, found a lamp bracket for the bird cage, and sat down with the baby and the other clock in her lap, having deposited the bag on the seat beside her.

Then the clock under the seat began to strike lustily. As it finished the thirty-seventh stroke, the alarm in the clock in her lap went off with such a bang that the baby took fright, and fell off its mother's lap onto the floor with fresh yells of terror.

I stole a look over the top of my magazine, behind which I had been trying to screen myself, and vainly tried to catch the drummer's eye, but he was gazing out of the window pinching himself to keep from disturbing the peace.

The baby, in falling, landed somewhere near the middle of the catch-all bag, and the mother made a plunge for it as if the child were on fire. Then the clock in her lap began striking some unknown hour.

"Now, Elviry," she shrieked, "there you've went and done it! I bet you broke yo' paw's mushtash-cup."

The guardian of the household effects had just rearranged the baby, the bag, and the clock, when her wandering gaze missed her first-born, a shock-headed boy who had not remained in the waiting room long after the arrival of the family.

The baby was at once deposited upon the floor, where it bellowed wrathfully. The panic-stricken woman sped for the door, jerked it open and set up a shrill:

"Bus-s-ter! You B-u-s-t-e-r! Bus-ter-r-r-r!" winding up with an ear-splitting whoop.

The wind made straight in at the door for the papers on the agent's neglected desk. The freight bills flew over the office and disturbed the checker game long enough for the agent to interfere with the remark: "Here, I'll bust you!"

Then, as he leaned out of the ticket window far enough to see that the offender was a woman, his chivalry got the better of him, and he toned down a bit, saying: "Madam, if you don't shut that door, I won't have a paper in the house, and they will be suing me for scaring all the horses out of town or chokin' up the Brazos river."

The woman yelled on obliviously for some time, then, muttering, "I bet he gets left by that train," closed the door, and started up the platform in search of her wandering boy, Buster.

Things were getting so interesting that the drummer passed me the wink and slunk out of the other door. I followed.

"You go one way," said he, "and I'll go the other."

We wanted to see the old hen when she lit, and we did. Out at the farther end of the platform, we turned opposite corners just as she sailed down on her runaway.

He had a cotton hoe by the handle, and to its neck, a cord two yards long, he had tied a flop-eared, half-breed dog. He was sitting on the platform holding the hoe handle and dog in fishing style, as if he had a bite.

"Buster!" yelled the approaching assailant. "Wha' chu mean runnin' off an' the train about to start?"

"Why, maw," drawled the boy, "the train ain't come yet, and paw made me leave old Tige out here, while we went to the depot, an' he's cold."

"Well, I guess you'll warm him up holdin' him here by the handle! I'll kill that fool dog!" she stormed, but aimed a blow at the boy's head. He dodged readily and still clung to the hoe handle, while the whining dog huddled against the platform with his tail safely between his legs.

Just then the hog-back squealed in the distance, and the warlike mother set off to gather her belongings preparatory to boarding the train.

She took down the bird cage, got an arm about one clock, seized the umbrella and bag again, gave vociferous commands to the children to "git them things and git on that train," and marshaled them in a long line by the track while No. 1 came clattering in.

Most of the passengers were in no hurry to get aboard, as No. 1 usually stopped an hour or two—long enough for a drummer to "work" the town and catch the same train for the next.

But today, those aboard had been there so long they were anxious to get off, and soon the family phalanx was broken up by the crowd. After the drummer and I had secured seats, we looked out and saw the woman, with the clock and caged rabbit, racing up and down the platform, calling at every jump: "Jerri-mi-aah hh!"

As this was a new name, we soon figured that the husband had escaped while she had been looking for the missing Buster. The drayman emerged, and out of pure good will began to call Jeremiah also. Several boys took up the cry, till the town rang with the chorus of shouts for that namesake of the weeping prophet.

Finally, the woman collected her children, clocks, rabbit, etc., in a knot near the train, and gave out in stentorian tones that she would "stay right there till the cows or Jerry came home."

"I'm betting on the cows in that race," remarked the drummer, and then he settled for an hour's doze before the train started.

After a while we were all awakened by a jerk of the train and the renewed cries of the moving woman, who seemed to think the cows were about to win.

Jeremiah had not yet appeared, and the engine had finished its switching work and backed up to get the train for another start.

Several of the children added to the hubbub with their frantic yells for father, and just as the bell began ringing for the departure of No. 1 the missing hero came around the corner of the depot scowling furiously at the uproarious family.

"Can't a feller git away long enough to have a smoke in peace?" he growled, referring to the two-for-a-nickel cigar protruding from his overgrown beard. He went into the depot again for the tickets, but the snorting little hog-back began grunting off down the track, leaving the moving woman the picture of wrath and despair as she clung to her clocks and rabbit, groaning:

"I knowed it! I knowed it! I knowed he'd git left!"

A new disturbance at the rear of the train now attracted our attention. On investigation, we found Buster, the dog and the hoe, mixed up in a row with the brakeman. The boy and the dog had slipped onto the rear of the train, while others of the family were calling Jerry.

"I tell you, bub," declared the brakeman, "you can't bring that pup on this car!"

"Well, he's on here, ain't he?" retorted Buster.

"Well, take him to the baggage car and express him through! He can't stay on this car! Where's your ticket?"

"Paw's got it, I reckon."

"Where is he? Hunt him up quick!"

The boy tried to leave the dog in the corner by the stove while he went to show the brakeman the holder of the ticket, but the trick failed. The dog followed, and, when assaulted by the brakeman, started howling down the aisle with the hoe catching in the seats and hitting the passengers.

Boy and brakeman tried to stop the fugitive. They caught him at the door just as a passenger who had been out on the platform started to enter and had dodged back in time to let the dog out. The hoe caught in the door.

Just then the train lurched into a stop at the water tank. Dog, boy, brakeman, and passenger finally untangled themselves, and Buster, still holding to the hoe handle, remarked, "I guess my paw ain't on here."

"Well, I guess not," snorted the brakeman, rubbing his shins, "and, bub, next time you try to take a ride, bring your dad along, instead of that pup, and get a ticket, too."

"Huh," replied Buster, as he alighted with his dog and took up his march back to town, "I beat my paw this time. Must think I never moved before!"

Importance of "Now."

"Now" is ever ticking from the clock of time. "Now" is the watchword of the wise. "Now" is on the banner of the prudent. Let us keep this little word always in our mind; and whenever anything presents itself to us in the shape of work, whether mental or physical, let us do it with all our might, remembering that now is the only time for us.—Selected.

Watch the Sun's Halos.

The sun's halos are good weather signs. Many weather proverbs based upon the observation of halos are founded upon sound scientific principles. Studies of the relation of halos to rainfall show that during the summer months 56 to 60 per cent of all halos are followed by rain within 36 hours. During the winter months 70 to 75 per cent are so followed.

True Poetry.

True poetry, like true eloquence, is the voice of nature appealing to the heart with its utmost sublimity and power . . . Instead of teaching merely, it persuades, elevates, inspires. It excites a feeling where the other leaves an opinion or a maxim. It proposes examples of ideal excellence, and raises virtue into heroism.—Hugh Swinton Legare.

Coal's Uncertain History.

The story of coal is a very uncertain one. No one seems to know when it first began to be used for fuel. All through the centuries it pops in and out of English literature as something taken for granted, and when it was finally found well in the van of the great industrial expansion of a century or more ago it occasioned no special comment.

Quaint Baptismal Custom.

A pretty custom is followed at baptisms in Helgoland. While a psalm is being sung, a procession of little boys and girls troop in, passing in front of the altar. Each child carries a pannikin of water, the contents of which are poured into the baptismal font.

TRIBUTE TO FRENCH WOMAN

American Traveler Tells of Her Good Qualities and the Great Debt the Nation Owes Her.

The French woman is brought up to neglect none of the arts that attract men. Even in munition plants the woman worker knows where the mirror hangs, often has her powder puff at hand, and gives unconsciously the deft touch to the hair, writes Lyman Powell in the Designer. If it has sometimes seemed to us that the French wife overlooks too easily the unconsciousness of a husband, it is because we have failed to understand that French women are expected to keep themselves so attractive to the mate after marriage as well as before that he will not want to wander over fields.

If it be asked what woman is sufficient all through life for the double duty of being a good wife and a good mother, I name you France, and add that French women are in this regard the marvel of their sex and the strongest bulwarks of monogamy.

And all talk about the lower birth rate in France is beside the mark. The child is held so precious in the French mind that he usually remains a dream child till the right conditions are in sight for his upbringing. If allowance be made for that fringe of the unproductive found in every land, it is doubtful whether the birth rate among the high-minded and responsible is lower over there than over here.

The French woman cannot be summed up in a phrase. Contrary to the general opinion, she is simple, practical, sensible, tenacious, deliberate, cautious, farsighted and affectionate. She is sensitive but not sentimental. She is talkative but not superficial. She is ebullient but enduring. She is a compound of heart and head, which explains Joffre, Petain, Foch and the Poilu, who have fought these four years past our battle as well as their own and have been the surprise of every friend as well as the exasperation of the foe.

If Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton, Rugby, Harrow, certainly the Marne, Verdun, the Somme were won in the French house where the French woman lives and manages, smiles and plans, suffers and "carries on."

Fish Trapped in Tomato Can.

Early in November Allen Wiffin of Blairsville, N. Y., filled a tomato can nearly full of worms and went to the lake to fish for pike. He anchored his rowboat near Lone Bar and proceeded to fish.

Late in the afternoon Wiffin placed his catch in a bag, picked up the can, which was half-full of angleworms, and threw it into the water. He says that when the can struck the water a large fish jumped out, hit the can with its tail, and the can filled with water and sank.

A few days later Wiffin again went to the lake to fish. He anchored his boat 50 rods from shore and had fished for nearly an hour when he discovered a tin can floating on the water. The peculiar motion of the can attracted his attention, he says, and he rowed the boat to it, and with a landing net scooped the can into the boat. Great was his surprise, he says, when he raised the can from the water to see a large fish with its head in the can.

Lafayette Home Shelters Orphans.

The old home of General Lafayette, at Chavaniac, a town in the department of Haute-Loire, is being used as an American home for French war orphans. The Lafayette fund conducts the shelter.

A hundred children from the devastated regions are at Chavaniac. A modern schoolhouse and a hospital have been built near the old chateau.

The orphans learn English. They are being brought up with the aim of sending them to America after the war for the completion of their professional or commercial education. They are learning American ways and ideas. In America, each child has a godfather who will take over its education later.

The best care that American science can give is afforded the children. The Lafayette fund is a wealthy organization and intends to greatly extend its work.

Accidents Notably Decreased.

Accidents in the iron and steel industry have decreased by more than two-thirds during the last ten years as the result of a movement to enforce safety regulations, according to a report by the bureau of labor statistics. In 1907, the report shows, 245 men were killed or injured out of every 1,000 employed, while in 1914 the accident rate was reduced to 81 per 1,000. A further reduction would have been recorded in 1917 but for the dislocation of industrial processes to meet war needs, the report says.

Hemp Raised by Convicts.

Penitentiary officials at Lansing conducted an interesting experiment on an island in the Missouri river by planting 50 acres of hemp. The Leavenworth Times reports a bumper crop was raised. Experts declare it may be used in making binder twine at the penitentiary plant. The hemp may be substituted for the sisal imported from Yucatan, in making twine. The result would be a big saving in cost to the wheat farmers.—Kansas City Star.

GOES 25 MILES FOR MORE TANLAC

FARMER SAYS IT RESTORED WIFE'S HEALTH AFTER HE HAD SPENT HUNDREDS IN VAIN

"Well sir, it is twenty-five miles from here to where I live, and I came all that distance just to get some Tanlac," said W. M. Nance, a well-known and prosperous farmer who lives at Irricana, Alberta, Canada, while in the Liggett-Findlay Drug Store in Calgary, the other day.

"You just ought to see the way this Tanlac has brought my wife out," continued Mr. Nance, "and here of late I have been feeling mighty bad myself, so I thought about the best thing I could do was to get started on Tanlac as quickly as possible. Now my wife's trouble was of five years standing, and during that time I spent hundreds of dollars trying to get something that would help her, but it was just that much money thrown away. She had a bad case of stomach trouble, and everything she ate would cause gas to form so that she could hardly get her breath. Then she was so nervous and restless that she couldn't sleep at night. She also suffered from headaches, and sometimes she would get so dizzy that she couldn't stand on her feet. She just kept getting worse all the time until she was just past going altogether.

"Well, I noticed that Tanlac was highly recommended for that kind of trouble, so I bought a bottle of it and she commenced taking it. In all my life I never saw anything to equal the way my wife improved after she commenced taking Tanlac. Why, she has gained at least fifteen pounds in weight, and is as well and hearty as she ever was in her life. She has a fine appetite, and eats just anything she wants and she never suffers a particle afterwards. She does all her housework now, and it doesn't seem to tire her a particle. Now, that is what Tanlac did for my wife, and when I commenced to go down hill a short time ago, Tanlac was the first thing I thought about, and after seeing what it did for my wife, I am sure that it will soon put me on my feet. Yes, sir, Tanlac is a real medicine and you may count on me to say a good word for it every chance I have."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

ADIES AND GENTLEMEN.

I have the honor of nomination and have been urgently requested y a very large number of ratepayers to be a candidate for the Utilities mmission.

Having served you six years as alderman and two years as Mayor, acquired a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the duties of the Utilis Commission.

I was a member of the City Council during the negotiations, construcon and prosecution of the work on the city electric power station, the ly waterworks dam, and the auxiliary pumping station.

As Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee in the City ouncil, I came directly in contact with the waterworks system, including e mains, hydrants, pressure, etc., for fire protection, domestic and manuturing purposes.

For two years I was Vice-President of the Ontario Hydro Radial Assotion, which gave me a thorough knowledge of the advantages of the ydro Electric system for power, electric lighting, heating and radial ilway purposes.

With the above experience and knowledge I respectfully solicit your te and influence in support of my candidature, assuring you if elected t I will endeavor to assist in every way possible the other members the Commission to carry out the work in the very best interests of e ratepayers of the City of Peterborough.

I am heartily in favor of such improvements as the proposed new iltration Plant when the time is opportune, but am of the opinion that l such large expenditures, as far as practicable, in every department of e city, should be deferred until such time as some of the present dentures are fully paid up, except in so far as it is found necessary to go ead with the work in order to keep our workmen and laborers steadily ployed.

Respectfully yours,

Jos. J. Duffus

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Dr. F. C. Neal

Raspectfully requests your Vote for Re-Election on the Board of Education in favor of a Progressive and Economic Policy for 1920.

For ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I am a candidate for alderman, and if elected I will give the City's government the benefit of my practical knowledge in construction and building.

I assisted in the building of the Canadian Kodak building in Toronto, and have been sixteen years carrying on cement construction. I have been a resident of Peterborough for the last sixteen years and I believe I have a knowledge of the needs of the people from the workingman's standpoint.

I will see that for every dollar spent, one dollar value is given to the City and I will watch and protect the City's interests as I would my own if elected.

I request the support of every ratepayer anxious to have an economical, yet progressive City Government.

Yours respectfully,

FRED T. TUGGEY

To The Ratepayers of the City of Peterborough

I am offering myself as a candidate for alderman, as I believe that this City will be benefitted with my many years of experience as a member of the City Council and as City Solicitor. I had intended to devote my time to my business affairs, but as there are few men of many years experience in municipal affairs in the City Council, I felt that I could be a help in the City's Government on account of the large undertakings and important projects which must be dealt with by the Council within the next two years.

To develop this City we must have new industries, and I have given much of my time in the past years while in the City Council, to this particular part of municipal affairs.

If elected, I will make every effort to improve this City as a great industrial centre.

The support of those who believe that I shall be able to give faithful service, is respectfully requested.

Yours faithfully,

G. N. GORDON

FOR ALDERMAN

VOTE FOR JONES

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBORO

Having again been nominated and asked to run for the position of Alderman for 1920, I respectfully solicit the support of the ratepayers in the interests of good, economical municipal government. If elected, I will support only those measures that I consider in the best interests of the city.

Yours faithfully,

R. N. JONES

FRANK WHITEHOUSE

RESPECTFULLY ASKS YOUR VOTE AND INFLUENCE FOR ALDERMAN

SISSON FOR UTILITIES COMMISSION

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is considered by many that Peterborough has reached that stage of development when a man of business engineering experience is required on the Utilities Commission, and, after a good deal of pressure, I have decided to allow my name to come before the electors. As is well known, we have now a water system, which, upon completion of the proposed Filtration Plant, will be one of the best in the Province and a light and power system which, with some improvement, may be made a credit to the city. In order to effectively continue the development of these systems, it is very essential that one member of the Commission have the business and technical experience which only an engineer has acquired.

Peterborough is my home city, in the development and welfare of which I am keenly interested. For many years I have been connected with its largest manufacturing firm, and, if elected, will be glad to place my experience at the service of the city. I feel certain that I can give the present Commissioners valuable assistance and will co-operate with them to the fullest possible extent.

The Water and Power Systems of the city are among its most valuable assets, and the expenditures on them call for the most careful consideration. While the detailed engineering is, of course, attended to by the operating staff of the Commission, my professional work has given me the opportunity of becoming thoroughly conversant with both the problems of engineering and the question of costs which the Commission must carefully solve, and I feel confident that I can assist in carrying out the necessary development to the system so as to give the most efficient service with the lowest expenditure.

The Trades and Labor Council have seen fit to endorse my cnadidature, although not a member of their organization, and were big enough and broad-minded enough to leave me free to exercise my best judgment and independent action should I be elected to the Commission.

My desire is to serve the best interests of the city with the view of helping to make it not only one of the first manufacturing cities of the Dominion, but one of the most desirable cities in which to live.

Respectfully yours,

C. E. SISSON

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mrs. Kate Morris

TO THE ELECTORS:

The Hon. Mr. Drury, Premier of Ontario, has stated that he considers the woman's point of view both desirable and necessary on every Board of Education.

Dr. Cody, while Minister of Education, many times expressed the same opinion.

Your Board of Education acknowledges the need and value of women in the schools when it employs six times as many women as men teachers (65 women and 11 men) and a woman nurse.

Having been a Public School teacher for some years I am able to see the educational questions of the day from the double viewpoint of the home and the teacher.

It is in the hope of giving intelligent service that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS,
(Mrs. W. R. Morris.)

31

For Board of Education

After strong pressure from influential quarters, I have again consented to accept a position on the Board of Education, if it be the will of the electors to place me there. If my best business ability is considered necessary to help complete the work which is already in hand it is at the service of the Citizens for another term. A good substantial vote behind me would look as though what I have tried to do has been appreciated.

Your vote is respectfully solicited.

COPPING for ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS:—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having accepted nomination for election to the City Council, I wish to present myself to the electorate.

I do so in full confidence that if favored I can give to the city now ample time in which to be useful, and be careful, diligent and helpful in the work and in the interests of the ratepayers as a whole. I am sure that I can give the time, and not plead further on that I am so occupied that matters escape my attention.

I place myself in your hands as a man and a citizen, just one of yourselves, anxious to help my home town and willing to make the effort. I can bring to the work good intelligence, appreciation of needs, and the will and energy to do the very best possible. If elected, I will make it my business to work amicably and helpfully with the members of the Aldermanic Board in joint effort to handle your problems.

Enterprises that are in hand for the city will have closest attention. Those planned will receive careful scrutiny in the interest that the best may be evolved. What is asked for will be supported if reasonable and conducive of the greatest good to the greatest number. I promise to be unremitting in my endeavor to justify your choice, if elected, and bespeak for myself your support.

I feel that I am not assuming too much in asking that you give the new man a chance. He deserves an opportunity to show what he can do. And he will make good, having in view the welfare and progress of the city for its citizens. I will not hesitate to encourage enterprise, so long as it promises to build up our municipality, and will assist such sensibly and carefully. We should provide the opportunity for laboring men to be employed, and if I am in your Council I will stand for progress in all things that it is well to push forward.

Respectfully,

R. V. COPPING

COUNCIL OF SMITH TOWNSHIP RE-ELECTED

REEVE, DEPUTY REEVE AND COUNCILORS GAIN THIRD TERM BY ACCLAMATION

The entire council of Smith Township was elected for a third term of office by acclamation to-day. They are; Reeve, Geo. B. Nichols; deputy-reeve, J. A. Middleton; councillors, Wm. Brown, W. J. Grant and W. W. Douglas.

Each member addressed the meeting, thanking the electors for re-electing them by acclamation for another term and thus showing their confidence in the work accomplished in the past.

County Clerk Elliott spoke at considerable length on the county roads system urging the farmers to get behind the farmer administration and gain the advantages they should for road improvement.

Ex-reeve Fred McKee delivered a few well-chosen words congratulating the council on the confidence they had received from the electors as shown by the latter re-electing them by acclamation.

SEVERAL CANDIDATES FOR

Mr. Cameron stated that the two main things he had worked for were an increase of teachers' salaries and the building of the new school.

"This city has one of the best teaching staffs in the Dominion of Canada," declared Mr. Cameron. Peterborough should not keep the teachers' salaries down until they are forced to issue an ultimatum. The salaries of the teachers should be raised to add to the continuity of service that brings efficiency. "It behooves us to have efficient and contented teachers who spend more time with our children than do the parents themselves," stated Mr. Cameron.

Technical education is a necessity and has to come and when the ratepayers are ready to launch out into that system the site of the old South Central school will be ready for them.

Ald. McIntyre.

Ald. McIntyre, aspirant for mayor, made a brief speech in which he claimed that his many years of faithful service warranted his election to the position of mayor.

He mentioned the fact that he was one of the delegation that had met the Convention of Veterans at Windsor and had invited them to Peterborough.

Ald. Edgar.

Ald. Edgar, in requesting the vote and influence of the War Veterans to elect him to the Utilities Commission, referred to his past record as a member of the city council.

He was the first to advocate the straight $10,000 grant to the War Veterans. He had succeeded in getting the C. P. R. foot bridge. In the matter of the Quaker Oats taxation he claimed as much or more credit than Mr. Gordon. It was he who fought the members of the council to get them to give Mr. Gordon a free hand.

Ald. Edgar recommends all the ratepayers to give their whole-hearted support to the Park By-law. He had agitated strongly for the adoption of the Government Housing Plan.

In referring to the Utilities Commission he stated that he had nothing to say against his opponents and the only promise he could make was that, if elected, he would do his best and would let the people know, through the press, more of what was being done.

Ald. Taylor.

Ald. Taylor, the last speaker, spoke briefly declaring that, if elected mayor, he would do what he could for the extension of the street railway, to make the city more attractive and to bring more manufacturers to the city. He referred them to his address in the press for the remainder of his platform.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE SAME MR GORDON

Editor Review.—Is this Mr. G. N. Gordon, the gentleman now running for alderman, the same man who has resigned from two or three elective or appointive positions, before the expiration of his term? If so, it would be poor policy to again place him in a position where he could repeat the trick. A confirmed habit is hard to break.

DELEGATE.

From No. 248 Trades Council.

RULES FOR VOTING

Editor Review:—Under the new system of voting for aldermen, the ballot is spoiled unless the voter votes for four candidates at least. He may vote for five but if he vote for more than five it spoils his ballot. For the Board of Education he may vote for one or any number up to five, but i the votes for more than five he spoils his balot. For the Utilities Commission he can vote for one candidate only otherwise the ballot is spoiled.

No doubt you have all these facts before you, but I thought it would not be taken amiss if I suggested that this should be disclosed to the public for a couple of days before the election as we have suffered from spoiled ballots in the past, and there is quite a large number of new ratepayers this year.

LABOR'S APPEAL

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH :—

Remembering its initial success of one year ago, when the entire slate of four aldermanic candidates was elected, and firm in the belief that the general public of Peterborough have every confidence in the fair-mindedness of Oragnized Labor and appreciate the beneficent reforms they have in view, the adoption of which would go far in enhancing the welfare of the masses, and still not work any injustice to the few, the Trades and Labor Council are again in the field, this year widening the scope of their activities to include branches of civic government other than the City Council. Being wide awake to the spirit of indifference demonstrated by the Electorate in previous years, due in great measure to the fact that only one class of citizens were placed in nomination, and that no opportunity was given the great bulk of the people to vote for representative citizens for the various public offices, the Trades and Labor Council is once more to the fore in an attempt to remedy this condition of affairs.

It will be noted that the Trades Council has not been selfish in its endorsation of the various aspirants for office, having gone outside of its organization and chosen several candidates who have no connection with the Trade Union Movement, believing they are eminently fitted to discharge the duties of the offices for which they were placed in nomination.

The idea of the Trades Council is to get every voter interested in the betterment of conditions under which we all have to live, and herewith submit a civic platform to which all the endorsed candidates have signified their willingness to adhere. This platform is the outcome of serious though and consideration of students of economic conditions for years, and its adoption is designed to bring about the greatest good to the greatest number. We would ask you at this time to carefully peruse two of the planks here set forth:

10—Annual publication of Assessment Rolls.

No citizen will have the temerity to deny that the salaries attaching to various civic offices should not be more generally aquelized; neither would he deny that the publication of the assessment roll would bring about a more just assessment of taxes.

Apart from the platform as set forth, Labor's candidates, if honored with election, will to the best of their ability see that the city's business is handled in a manner that will not only prove of benefit to the masses, but they pledge themselves to represent all the people of the city, irrespective of class or creed.

The platform of the Trades and Labor Council is as follows:

MUNICIPAL ISSUES.

1—Municipal ownership of gas and electric light plants, telephones and all street railroads, all municipal franchises to be owned and operated by the municipality in the interests of the people.

2—Eight-hour services for all municipal employes.

3—All municipal work to be performed directly by the municipality without the intervention of contractors.

4—Payment of wages weekly, equal pay for women for equal work performed with men.

5—Revision and simplification of the municipal code.

7—The use of halls in all municipal buildings to be granted free of charge to the citizens for the discussion of public questions.

8—Abolition of property qualifications for municipal candidates.

9—Municipal loans to be supplied to workingmen for building purposes at lowest rates of interest.

10—Annual publication of Assessment Rolls.

11—Universal suffrage and abolition of the ward system.

We herewith present for your earnest consideration and support the following candidates for the various civic offices named:

FOR THE MAYORALTY:

A. A. McINTYRE

FOR THE ALDERMANIC BOARD:

L. F. HUMBER. J. ARTHUR SHARP
F. T. TUGGEY. WM. H. TEDFORD

FOR UTILITIES COMMISSION:

CHARLES EVERETT SISSON

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION:

Mrs. KATE E. MORRIS.
A. J. BOLWELL. ALEX. MORRISON

Wishing you all the compliments of the season, and trusting you will again see your way to repose confidence in the candidates endorsed by the Trades Council,

Yours sincerely,

LABOR CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

GIVES A FAIR DEAL TO ALL WORKMEN

MR. GORDON AND LABOR.

As a wokingman I fell it is in the interest of the public to support among the candidates for aldermen, G. N Gordon. His work in the City for public benefit should be well recognised. I have knowu him for some years, and I know that his interest is in the man who has to work, and that he has always protected the interests of the City against every influence, and has been most outspoken and persevering in his efforts to help conditions in this City. A man like him is needed in this Council because men of experience in Municipal affairs are hard to get to give their services to the public. I have watched his work as a public man and he always takes a definite stand, and there is no wabbling in anything he does.

He is just as good a labor man as any man that is running, and has done a good deal for labor in this City.

I think that of the labor men who are running Mr. Gordon should have the support of every person who wants to see this City grow, and to have a good business like government, and he is one who will attend to business no matter who it effects as long as it is in the interest of the City, and for the benefit of the rate payers.

More than that he is a man who will not tie himself with promises or allow anybody or organization to control his actions in the Council. Men of an active, energetic and open minded type, are not easy to get and when we have found one who is willing to help he should be appreciated and supported, and he is getting a tremendous lot of support from the men who have the interests of the City at heart.

I have worked since I was a young lad, have always been a workingman and am in sympathy with wirkingfmen and their cause. I am a supporter of the man who gives a fair deal to the workingman which is all he wants and all he asks for and I ask the support of those who believe in this policy for G. N. Gordon.

Yours truly,

JOHN CREIGHTON

ANNUAL AT HOME AT COLLEGIATE

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY DANCE IN THEIR OWN ASSEMBLY HALL

The students and ex-students of the local Collegiate Institute took advantage of the privilege granted them by the Board of Education and made their At Home, held in their own assembly hall, last night, the best in the history of the school. Never before have the young people enjoyed their annual dance as they appeared to last night.

The hall had been artistically decorated by the pupils in Christmas colors. The music, provided by the Davis Orchestra, of Toronto, was a treat for the dancers. The music was excellence itself and every number was encored two or three times.

Refreshments were served at twelve o'clock and after the last waltz the gathering broke up and all went home feeling they had been at a school At Home that could hardly be improved upon.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mr. and Mrs. Ingall, Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Jameson, Mrs. E. F. Mason, Jean Eastwood, Claire Mason, Kathleen Cuffe, Elizabeth MacDonald, Grace Primeau, Dorothy Thompson-Currie, Muriel Harvey, Helen Thompson, Marian Harvey, Marjorie Ingal, Leiah Brownscombe, Grace Conway, Olive Conway, Edith Price, Hazel Davidson, Hazel Easton, Mabel Gardner, Marnie Cottingham, Dora Calvert, Martha Kirn, May Reid, Mae Connor, Muriel Bishop, Isabel Bain, Jean Elliott, Pearl Kemp, Annie Dryden, May Perry, Elizabeth Mowat, Mary Gardner, Laura Soder, Lenore Lyle, Jessie Mathews, Mamie Hayes, Aida Shelton, Marian Shelton, Margret Turner, Daisy Danielson, Doris Clegg.

GATHER YE ROSES!

Happiness Never a Thing One Lightly Casts Away.

Too Beautiful, Even Though Evanescent, to Be Passed By When One May Hold It, If Only for the Moment.

We were coming home from a dinner party together, my friend and I. It was late at night and rather rainy, and as we sat together in the damp, almost empty trolley car, my friend spoke very suddenly and seriously, writes Margaret E. Sangster in the Christian Herald.

"Just now," she said, "I've a chance to be very happy. But I'm almost afraid to take it!"

The rain beat in a futile manner against the car windows. I listened to it for a moment before I spoke.

"Why?" I questioned at last—"why are you afraid to take your chance—to be happy?"

"Because," answered my friend, and her eyes looked far away—past the car and the rain, even—"because I'm afraid that it won't last!"

When it is autumn and the leaves are crimson and gold-colored and very beautiful, we know, even as we admire them, that they will be brown and withered some day. But that does not keep us from loving their glorious colors.

It's like that, too, with flowers, and springtime, and the blue sky of summer. We know that the flowers will fade away and that springtime will go and that there will be winter storm clouds where there were once sparkles of sun.

And so this is the answer to my friend and to other friends of mine:

Never be afraid to grasp at happiness because it may not last. For happiness is as beautiful as the flowers of spring and the sky of summer and the vivid leaves of autumn. And even though it might not last, happiness is too beautiful to pass by with never a glance.

And then, as the philosopher said, and as we know, don't be sure, as you take your chance at happiness, that it will not stay. Look around your circle of friends, look at your business associates, look at the casual crowds and note the average of happy faces is rather high. You'll see more smiles, I think, than frowns; more merry faces than sad ones!

Don't be afraid to take a chance at happiness because you fear that it is too beautiful to last. Take your chance, instead, arguing that happiness is too beautiful not to last!

Dead Man Upright at Machine Gun.

Stories of the scenes of the battlefields are told in a letter received by Mrs. H. E. Wilson of Middle avenue, Wilmerding, Pa., from her son, Private Gordon Wilson of the One Hundred and Ninth Ambulance corps.

Walking over the battlefield in search of wounded men, he wrote, he found himself staring into the muzzle of a German machine gun, with a German soldier at the breech. Dropping into a shell hole, Private Wilson remained there for half an hour, not daring to move. Finally, as darkness approached, he decided to crawl away. He lost his way, he says, and did not know where he was until he was again looking at the German machine gun and the lone soldier behind it. This time he was in a position to see better and recognized at once that the soldier was dead. A bullet, fired by an American rifleman had penetrated his forehead, probably just at the time he was preparing to pour a volley into the advancing columns.

Petroleum's Discovery.

In 1859, on the 28th of August, petroleum was discovered at Watson's Flats, Pa., near the head of the Allegheny river. Edwin Drake bored the first oil well, and before the end of the year Drake, under the firm name of Drake & Bowditch, bored through the rock at Titusville to a depth of 70 feet and struck an oil well that yielded 1,000 gallons a day. This discovery started the enormous oil industry in northwestern Pennsylvania.

Re-Elect GARSIDE

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

For the last thirtyeight years I have been a resident of Peterborough and I have been a member of the City Council during the past year. I have watched public affairs closely for a great many years and my last year's service was in the interests of the small ratepayer as well as the large ratepayer.

I supported all progressive measures for the City's benefit and to improve the city's progress. "Equal rights to all and favors to none" has been my motto. I have stood by loyally everything in the interest of the City.

I invite your hearty suport and ask for your vote to return me as Alderman to the City Council, and I promise you that I will give my time and attention and actively support a policy of a greater and a better Peterborough.

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

OPENING GAME OF SEASON AT BROCK STREET RINK TONIGHT

Belleville Will be Here and Locals are Confident of Reversing the Defeat of Friday at the Bay of Quinte Town.

A hard, fast sheet of ice will face the players at the Brock Street rink tonight, when the Intermediates from Belleville face the locals for the return exhibition game.

The Petes had only one reason to offer for their recent defeat in Belleville and that was the soft, rough ice. They will not have that excuse tonight, nor will they need it on the showing they made at their final practice last night. Everyone was out and eager to get into the fray.

Belleville proved themselves to be a team worth watching in last Friday's game and a real hot, exciting, game is assured for tonight's opener. A large crowd of fans who are watching the progress of the local boys with interest will be on hand to see them work in earnest.

WORSE THAN WAR'S HORRORS

Among Active Aids of Recruiting Sergeant May Surely Be Classed the Nagging Woman.

He was khaki-clad, with the "U. S. R." on his collar, and as he clambered aboard the interurban car he swung in his free hand a small traveling bag that appeared to be empty. Preceding him was the other member of the family, all fussed up in her tailored regalia, bound for a town a few miles distant, while the husband's destination was Detroit. Once inside, he tossed the traveling bag on a vacant rack at the forward end of the car and seated himself facing his better-half. Then the car lurched around a curve and the bag, slipping from the rack, deposited itself on the woman's hat and bounced off to the floor.

"My heavens!" was her startled exclamation, then when she discovered the trouble: "That was a very careless thing to do."

The man gathered up the bag, with profuse apologies and placed it back of his feet, where it could do no further harm.

"You don't know how that hurt," came the complaint, although the crown of the hat was not even dented.

"Supposing it had been filled with a lot of your truck," she went on.

No response from her vis-a-vis.

"You should never put anything like that up there," was the next bit of shrapnel, in tones loud enough to be heard the length of the car.

"It must have been the metal strip on the bag that struck me.

"It was a very careless thing for you to do.

"You might have known that it would fall off there.

"I'll probably have a headache all the day that will spoil my trip.

"When anything like that comes down on you it unnerves you, I can tell you."

Her vis-a-vis only smiled amiably, and getting no satisfaction from that quarter she turned to her seatmate, who was trying to hide his annoyed expression behind a weekly war digest.

"Did that bag hurt you when it fell?" she inquired, although it had missed him by at least a foot.

"Not at all," was the reply, without looking up. "It never touched me."

"It was an awfully careless thing to do," she rattled on, "and—"

"Good night," ejaculated a man across the aisle, who had tried in vain to read the news from the front in his morning paper. And as he stalked toward the solitude of the back platform he was heard to mutter: "No wonder some men enlist so they can get away from home."

Not Right Kind of Laughter.

One is tempted sometimes to laugh at another's mishap or disappointment, but the laughter that leaves a sting in someone's heart is not the sort of laughter that helps anyone.

PRIZES AWARDED AT WATER ST. ALLEYS FOR HIGH SCORES

J. Maynard Wins Large Goose For Bowling 783 in Three Games.

Mr. J. Maynard won a big goose for the weekly prize at the Water St. Alleys rolling the score of 787 in three games. His high single game was 335. Ballard rolled 733, J. Arrowsmith rolled 710. On Christmas day J. Green won a prize for the first to hit over the two hundred mark in ten pins. A. Ross also won the prize on Christmas day in five pins, the first to roll over the 600 mark in five pins, in three games.

A CORRECTION BY FRED T. TUGGEY

Peterborough, Dec. 29th.

Editor Review:— In my election card I stated yesterday that I assisted in the building of the Canadian Kodak Building in Toronto and have been sixteen years carrying on cement construction.

The last part of the paragraph should have read "sixteen years in brick and cement construction," and I merely make the change in order that I will be correct.

Yours truly.

The above came to late to make corection in Mr. Tuggey's card today.

Change the Gears!

Charles' uncle was a tall man, and one day when he had Charles out for a walk he forgot the length of a child's step, and poor Charles was almost running to keep up. They came to a rise in the grade of the walk and Charles stopped and said: "O, uncle, please change into low; I just can't make it on high."

Inflamed Eyes.

Nothing brings surer relief to inflamed eyes than a wash with boracic acid water. And one thing that its user must remember is to have the preparation free from any foreign particles, however minute, or they will cause irritation. The boracic acid should be thoroughly dissolved in water that has been boiled and cooled.

To the Electors of North Monaghan

TO THE ELECTORS,

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: —Having been asked by many residents of Claraday, Crawford's Grove and Byersville districts, I have allowed myself to be nominated for councillor for 1920. The representation of these districts in previous councils has been such that little progress was made. I would ask for your vote and influence so that I, if elected, may serve and ensure greater progress. It will not be possible to make a personal canvass to all.

Yours truly,

Offended the Herring.

In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries Helgoland was a center of the North sea herring fisheries. Then the herring veered back to Scotland's coast and the Islanders handed down a tale of the impiety by which they forfeited the boon. Yearly they would form in procession to march about the island to invoke the coming of the fish. One spring, when they had gone but half the route, the herring were sighted. They abandoned the rite and made for the boats. The herring never came again.—National Geographic Magazine.

SWEETING—McNUTT.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday morning, Dec. 24, at 11 o'clock, when Miss Eva McNutt, of Hamilton, was united in marriage to Mr. V. R. Sweeting, of Lakefield. Rev. Ashton, Baptist Minister of Lakefield officiated.

The young couple were unattended. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother, 76 Victoria Avenue, Peterboro. Only a few of the immediate relatives were present

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to Lakefield where they intend residing until they leave for their farm in Cavan.

For some time before their marriage Miss McNutt was in the employ of the Stanley Mills Company, Hamilton, and Mr. Sweeting went overseas with the 93rd Battalion in 1916 and continued to serve his country until the end of the war.

HARRINGTON—TROTTER

Calgary, Dec. 26.— A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday evening, December 24 at eight o'clock, at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Harrington, in Calgary, when Miss Edna Trotter, of Youngstown, Alta, formerly of Peterborough, Ontario, became the bride of Mr. Jesse Harrington, also of Youngstown, Alta. The Rev. W. A. Smith performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride looked very charming in pale blue Georgette, trimmed with satin and white Swandown, with shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of carnations and ferns. Miss Mary Trotter, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. James Harrington, supported the groom. The bridesmaid was very prettily dressed in blue tafetta with georgette. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid, a broach, set with pearls, and to the groomsman a tie pin Immediately after the ceremony a beautiful wedding dinner was served by Mrs. Harrington. Mr. and Mrs. Harrington will spend a few weeks in Calgary before returning to their home near Yonngstown, where their many friends wish them years of happiness

OBITUARY

MRS. MARY HURLEY.

A Rochester, N. Y., newspaper thus chronicles the death of Mrs. Mary Hurley, a former well-known resident of this city:

In the death of Mrs. Mary Hurley, on Saturday, December 6, 1919, Rochester loses one of its oldest residents. Born in Peterborough, Canada, in 1826, she was married at the age of 16 and crossed Lake Ontario in the steamer Mapleleaf, which in those days came up the Genesee to Hanford's Landing, now forgotten, at a point directly opposite the present Kodak Works. One of her wedding presents, a Durham cow, came along too, and was grazed on land now known as "Maplewood" Park. It is of interest at this day to relate that the milk from this cow, over and above that not used by the family was sold to neighbors for 4 cents a quart.

Mrs. Hurley remembered the building of the "suspension bridge" and its subsequent fall during an April snow storm, the structure being about 1,000 feet north of the present Driving Park Avenue bridge. All that part of Rochester was then known as McCrackensville, and its chief industry was the mills, at Lower Falls. Mrs. Hurley saw the erection of the present Cathedral and was a worshipper there for half a century. She organized the Air Society of that parish and was its president for 25 years.

Mrs. Hurley was widely known for her charitable nature, and her charity not only began at home but extended as far as she could reach. It was one of her chief concerns to minister to the unfortunate at the holiday season. She frequently remarked that she could not enjoy her own bountifully supplied plate unless she had done something to give the needy ones equal cause for thankfulness. This work was always performed in an unobtrusive way that left even her intimate friends ignorant of the true extent of her ministrations. She rememberd when Abraham Lincoln came to Rochester and saw him at the old railroad station near State St. She was a very industrious woman and realized Roosevelt's ideal inasmuch as she came of a family of twelve and had thirteen children of her own. Of these only five, however, reached maturity, the eldest being the late Thomas Jefferson Hurley. George L., Walter Scott, Mary C. Tracy and Franklyn Hurley were the others. There were six granddaughters, Mary Adele, Evelyn, Lois Tracy, Mrs. Dunn and Mrs Frederick and Mrs Joseph Tilney of New York, and two great-grandsons, Joseph and Frederick Tilney, 2nd. Mrs Hurley was a cousin of the late Lorr Russell, Chief Justice of England. The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock from the Cathedral.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK FOR MISS ELLA KEMP

At the close of the evening service at Mark Street Church on Sunday last, the choir presented Miss Etta Kemp, who has been organist, and choirleader for the past two years, with a leathter-bound hymn and tune book, and the following address:

Dear Miss Kemp:—

We, the members of Mark Street Choir, realize your stay among us is at an end, and wish to show our appreciation of your work among us as organist and choirleader.

As you leave our ranks we will pray that the God of Love will ever be with you, showering the choicest blessings upon you temporal as well as spiritual.

We could not let you depart without some tangible proof of our goodwill toward you and as a parting memento, we would ask you to accept this gift and wishing you a very happy New Year, we subscribe ourselves

MARK STREET CHOIR

The presentation was made by Mrs J. Rome, while the address was read by Mr. J. Speer.

Miss Kemp thanked the choir for their kindness and said she would never forget the pleasant times spent with them.

RICHARD DINEEN

The death ocurred this morning of Richard Dineen, of 484 Charlotte street, after a short illness, Mr. Dineen was 72 years old.

He leaves to mourn his loss two daughters, Mrs. H. M. McDonald, of 484 Charlotte street and Miss Mary Dineen of the city, also one son, Mr. T. Dineen, of Toronto.

Mr. Dineen's wife predeceased him by one month and two days, having died on November 28th, of this year. Her sister died on November 26th.

The funeral will take place from the residence of Mrs. H. M. McDonald, 484 Charlotte street, at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, January 1st, to St. Peter's church. Interment will take place in St. Peter's Cemetery.

A New York woman received for a Christmas present a Russian sable coat, costing $85,000, made of 93 skins.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S GUILD HAD PLEASANT PARTY

SPENT EARLY EVENING ON SKATES AND LATER HELD BANQUET.

Last evening the Y. P. G. of Knox Church assembled at the church at 7:30 and proceeded to the lake to enjoy an evening's skate. The ice was in good shape and every skater made use of it. About 10 o'clock the skaters came off the ice, and wasted no time in returning to the church ready to partake of the very appropriate lunch, which was daintily served by a committee composed of the following—Mr. Sherman Preston, convener, Mrs. A. McKenzie Miss T. Pearson, Miss L. Sproule, Miss V. Bickham, and Mr. T. Smith.

During lunch an excellent program of music was furnished by a miniature victrola (something of a curiosity,) brought back from France by S. Preston.

After the hungry skaters had participated heartily in the lunch, presentations of various descriptions were presented to the following, each of whom responded in a short address: Miss Irene Thirabeck, Messrs A. McKenzie, Bobby McLeish, Jim Turnbull, Ted Jackson, Lance Petty, Dave Morden, and John Bradbury, who is the new president for 1920.

This concluded an evening's entertainment which will not soon be forgotten by the members of the Y.P.G.

DR. E. E. HARVEY FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

To The Electors of the City of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I have had twenty years experience as a member of a similar Board of Education, before coming to Peterborough. For three years I was Chairman of the Board. I merely mention this fact to show that I am familiar with the problems of the Board, and if elected, would be bringing to it a wide experience in their solutions.

Yours truly,

E. E. HARVEY

The Daily Review

8 PAGES

40th YEAR No. 153 Peterborough's Oldest Newspaper. PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO. WEDNESDAY. DECEMBER 31, 1919. Price Two Cents per Copy.

THE REVIEW WISHES ALL A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

PETERBOROUGH HAS AN OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE A $4,000,000 INDUSTRY

Automobile Company in Whicn R. V. Copping is Interested is Looking for a Canadian Locati.n--Meeting in New York Next Month to Discuss Claim of This City—Send Mr. Copping to That Conference as an Alderman.

The greatest industrial opportunity of all lies at Peterborough's door. This city has a chance to secure on the usual easy terms an American manufacturing concern that is capitalised at $4.000,000, and this would easily place it in the first rank of local industries. In that industry Mr. R. V. Copping of this city is a heavy stockholder. Mr. Copping is a candidate for alderman, and these two facts entitle him to the careful consideration of the voters, especially so when taken in conñetcion with each other.

The industry in question is an automobile manufactory at present located at Rockhill, North Carolina. Mr. Copping, who has corresponded with and personally interviewed the members of the firm with regard to the removal of the plant to this city, has received the following letter with reference to the proposition:

New York, N. Y., Dec. 29, 1919.

Mr. R. V. Copping,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—In reference to our recent conversation at Chicago re the locating of an automobile plant at your city.

My partners join me in thanking you for your very complete data on the proposition. The writer feels quite confident we will be able to locate in your city, more especially that you are to be actively interested in the concern.

I have arranged for a meeting the week of the 10th of January at New York, and I trust you will be able to attend, when we will get under way with as little delay as possible.

At that time we will in all probability be able to give you the plan we are desirous of working out with your city, such as the land we will require, the location on the railroad, etc.

Will you please bring a good map of the city with you, marking the location of the land available?

Wishing you the compliments of the season.

Yours very truly.
W. H. PARKER.

What better reason than the above could be urged for electing Mr. Copping to the City Council? His position as alderman would give him additional prestige when he attends the meeting in New York next month. He would be in a double sense the representative of Peterborough, and the business men whom he will meet at that conference will have the assurance that Mr. Copping enjoys the confidence of the residents of his home city.

There is no more desirable line of manufacturing in the world today than the building of automobiles. The highest grade of labor is employed and this means fancy wages for the workers. There is money in the business as shown by the fact that automobile stock it at a premium. Such a concern as the one Peterborough now has a chance to secure would mean the employment of several hundred well paid workingmen, in effect the establishment of an important industrial community in Peterborough.

The company in question has a chance to secure the Marmon Automobile Company at present of Indianapolis and which is looking for a Canadian location. If the plant in which Mr. Copping is interested can be brought here, the other will be secured as a matter of course.

A vote tomorrow for Mr. Copping really means a vote to help bring $4,000,009 industry to Peterborough.

CANADIAN CEMENT COMPANY WILL RESUME WORK IN LAKEFIELD SOON

Short Delay Due to Scarcity of Necessary Foreign Labor Operations on a Pre-War Scale to be Started.

The Canada Cement Co., which has an extensive plant at Lakefield, is planning to resume operations at an early date. When they will commence they will employ over a hundred men, which will be a decided advantage to the village. The only delay at the present time is due to the scarcity of foreign labor, which is essential for some parts of the work.

Before 1914 this company was working on a very extensive scale, but at the outbreak of the war the demand for their goods was lessened and they were forced to suspend operations. Since the signing of the armistice three branches of this concern in other places have resumed work on a pre-war scale, and it is hoped that the Lakefield works may be opened without any further delay.

Over a year ago extensive alterations were made on the Lakefield factory to make steel from the waste of munition plants. This project was never carried out, as the signing of the armistice took place before work could be commenced.

LOCAL POLICE ASK FOR A SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE ON THEIR PRESENT SALARIES

At the meeting of the Police Commission held yesterday afternoon, a petition was read, signed by all the members of the Police Force asking for a substantial raise in salary. The matter was left over for the consideration of next year's commission.

The police presented to support their claims, a table of salaries that showed, under the present scale, they were the poorest paid force, of a list of cities, including Hamilton, London Windsor, Brantford, St Thomas, Stratford and Fort William.

The third class constable of Peterborough receives a remuneration of $900 a year, while those of Stratford the next lowest paid of the list presented, receive $1080. A third class constable at Brantford receives $1460 per year, which is considerably more than the $900 received by the local policeman for like service.

The patrol sergeants here receive $1175.00, while in Windsor the next lowest, they receive $1750.

The detectives and detective resgeants in the other places mentioned receive considerably more pay than the local officers, according to the plan arranged by the police in submitting their claims for increased pay.

The chief of police here receives $100 a year more than the chief at Stratford, but less than the salary of any others mentioned.

These figures, with others, were drawn up in the form of a table by the police and presented to the Commission. Magistrate Dumble did not favor the increase and Mayor Duncan stated he would rather it be considered by next year's commission.

DARING FEATS OF SEAMANSHIP

HOW SAILORS CLINGING TO THE WRECK WERE RESCUED BY RELIEF CREW.

FACED DEATH FOR 36 HOURS

THREE SURVIVORS ARE IN SERIOUS CONDITION BUT ALL MAY RECOVER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. Johns, Nfld., Dec. 31.—The hope that the heroic work of the sailors of the steamer Ingraham who saved three survivors of the wrecked Belgian steamer, Anton Van Driel, yesterday, had not been in vain, was held out here today. The men rescued were severely frost-bitten and their chances for recovery is still doubtful.

The men who had clung to the wreck more than thirty-six hours, and had seentheir twenty-six shipmates drowned in great seas which at times completely submerged the vessel, were brought here last night in a serious condition. The rescue was accomplished by one of the most daring feats of seamanship remembered here. While the fisher folks from the Bay settlements watched from the cliffs overhead the lifeboat crew of the Ingraham worked their craft in heavy seas between the rocks to the lee of the wreck, discovering three men virtually helpless in the wheelhouse.

DUNSFORD RECIEVES REMISSION OF FINE

CITY FINALLY PAYS BACK MONEY AS ORDERED BY ATTORNEY- GENERAL.

Gerald Dunford has received the $175 which the city was ordered to pay back to him out of the $200 fine imposed for drinking two glasses of liquor in the cellar of a store of this city. Some time ago the attorney-general ordered $175 of the fine to be returned but the city held off from paying the money in the hope that it would not be absolutely necessary to do so.

Dunford solicited the services of Peck, Kerr and McElderry and the city has been forced to relinquish the $175 as ordered by the attorney-general.

BULLETS WERE FOUND NI CITY GARBAGE

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton is in possesion of four 32 cartridge bullets, which he states he removed from garbage at the incinerator. He also states that these are not the first explosive bullets that have found their way there but at times the explosions are so rapid that one would think it was a regiment of soldiers at rifle practice.

This habit is, to say the least, very annoying to those looking after the incinerator and at times becomes very dangerous. The bullets explode and fly in all directions. If the citizens do not immediately desist from this foolish habit an accident that may prove serious is sure to result.

HOW TO VOTE TOMORROW

At the election tomorrow you can vote for five members of the Board of Education. That is the limit and if you vote for six your ballot is spoiled. You may vote for one, two, three, four or five as you desire, but not more than the latter number.

You can vote for only one candidate for the Utilities Commission.

You must vote for at least four candidates for Council, and for five at the most. If you vote for less than four or more than five, your ballot will be spoiled.

Every property owner in the city can vote on the Park By-law in every ward where he owns property. Every person whose name is in the list can vote on the Aladdin By-law, but once only.

PRESIDENT TOM MOORE DELEGATE TO PARIS

WILL REPRESENT CANADIAN WORKERS AT MEETING OF INTERNATIONAL LABOR.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 31.— Tom Moore, President of the Trades and Labor Congress, has been chosen to represent Canadian Workers at the meeting of the Governing body of the International Labor Office in Paris, on June 26. The Dominion Government is also entitled to send a delegate, but the choice has not yet been made. Mr. Moore will act as substitute for P. M. Draper.

NEW YEAR'S GIFT TO CANADIAN PAPERS

FREEDOM OF PRESS HAS BEEN RESTORED BY ORDER-IN-COUNCIL.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 31.—In a message to the Canadian newspaper editors, Col. E. J. Chambers, chief press censor, makes the formal announcement that in accordance with a recent order-in-council, the order relating to the Press Censorship, passed under authority of the War Measures Act, becomes inoperative and ineffective from midnight tonight.

ANOTHER HITCH IN CONFERENCE

PEACE TREATY MAY NOT BE SIGNED JANUARY 6TH REPORT SAYS.

DELAY IS GERMAN PLEBISCITES

FATE OF CONSTANTINOPLE HAS NOT YET BEEN DECIDED UPON.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 31.— Although the Supreme Council today fixed January 6, as the date for the signing of the protocol and exchanging ratifications of the German peace treaty, complications are developing, which, it is though by some persons in Council circles, may again cause a postponement of the ceremony of putting the treaty into effect.

Reason For Delay.

It has developed that the German technical delegates arranging the details connected with the plebiscites to be held, do not appear to have full power to act. The signing of the protocol on January 6th., therefore, may depend upon whether the Germans can secure powers immediately, in order to complete arrangements which, it is thought in Council circles, ought to proceed the exchange of ratifications.

The Fate of Constantinople.

The internationalization of Constantinople and the Straits of the Dardanelles, has been decided upon along the lines laid down by Premier Lloyd George in a recent speech, according to the Matin. It seems certain, the newspaper says, that the seat of the Turkish Government will be transferred to Asia Minor and be located either at Brusa or Konieh. The details of the form of international control, to be established over Constantinople, are not yet known.

UNION GOVERNMENT WINS IN AUSTRALIA

LATEST RETURNS GIVE PREMIER HUGHES A SAFE WORKING MAJORITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Melbourne, Dec. 31.—Returns received to date from the Australian elections, indicate that Premier W. M. Hughes has been returned with a strong majority. Mr. Hughes' party which was a Coalition, formed with the slogan "win the war" is known as the Nationalist party. Latest returns show that the Nationalists have secured thirty-eight seats as against 27 won by the Labor Party. Ten farmers were elected and they are expected to support Premier Hughes.

EGYPTIANS INSIST NOW ON HOME RULE

NATIONALIST PARTY SEND IN DECISIVE REPLY TO BRITISH COMMISSIONER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cairo, Dec. 31.—The determination to struggle for the complete independence of Egypt is affirmed by members of the Nationalist party in reply to a statement issued by Viscount Milner, who declared the Commission which he heads wishes to reconcile the aspirations of the Egyptians with the interests of Great Britain and expressed a desire for the Egyptians to freely express their opinions. The newspapers characterise the invitation as "useless."

NO THIRD TERM FOR WILSON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 31.— The Washington correspondent of the Evening Sun states that President Wilson will formally announce at the Jackson Day dinner on January 8th, that he will not be a candidate for a third term as President.

ALADDIN AND PARK BY-LAWS ENDORSED UMANIMOUSLY BY CITIZENS MEETING

Not A Dissenting Voice Against Either Measure—Aladdin Co. Composed of Men of Strictest Business Integrity—Firm Already Enjoys Large and Ever Growing Patronage, Park Proposition Good Business.

A representative gathering of citizens met in the council chamber last night and organized to work in the interests of the Alladin Co. and the Park By-laws on election day tomorrow.

The outstanding features of the meeting were supreme confidence that property owners know a good thing when they see it in such a promising industry as the Aladdin Co. and that not one dissenting voice in opposition to the Park by-law was heard.

Mayor Duncan presided, and strongly recommended the Aladdin Co. as a first-class industry which employs men only. At present, he said, there are no more girls here than needed by existing factories; and industries employing mainly male help, assuring an influx of families from which also could be drawn female employes for other concerns, would be unusually valuable acquisitions to Peterborough. His worship here emphasized the fact that every ratepayer has a vote on the Aladdin by-law, while property owners only have the privilege of voting for or against the Park measure.

Mayor Duncan also strongly endorsed the Park by-law, and pointed out that the city needs ownership of the eastern waterfront, that in the west having been deeded to the C. P. R., Quaker Oats, Peterborough Canoe Company and other concerns. He here took occasion to correct a rumor that the Quaker Oats intended running a spur line up their old raceway on the river's east side, and read correspondence in which Mr. Robert Stuart, of this company, had agreed to surrender this raceway to the city.

Mr. Stuart's whole heart, his Worship continued, is centred in the Quaker Oats plant here, and he is extremely interested in any movement for Peterborough's development and beautifying. All he asks in return for the raceway in question, is council's support in an effort to secure for the Quaker Oats Co. from the G. T. R. connection with the old Cobourg-Chemong right-of-way.

The mayor said that while the price asked for the Lundy, Bettes and Ellis properties may seem a little high, still it would be better business to purchase them at the option given than to pay some $10,000 or $15,000 in land damages by reason of the bridge, and have nothing to show for the money spent. He considered $11-000 for the Riverside Park a reasonable figure. In conclusion his Worship remarked that next year's council need not spend one dollar on this property covered by the Park by-law, but, necessary improvements could be made a little now and a little then as convenient, and in the meantime the two houses and two factories just east of the bridge, and the three houses acquired by the city on Burnham street might be rented, the revenue therefrom paying at least interest on the city's investment. He recommended the passing of this by-law.

Must Have Recreation.

Ald. Edgar, who was principally instrumental in bringing this Park by-law before the people, pointed out that the territory it affects is the only piece of waterfront now left Peterborough city. He did not think it would be good business to turn down this measure and pay out $10,000 or $15,000 in land damages and have nothing for it in return. One of the buildings in question he thought could be used as a caretaker's dwelling and the house nearest the river would offer dressing accomodation for bathers. We have now, Ald. Edgar went on to say, the best ball grounds between here and Montreal, and it is in the city's interests to foster athletic sports of all kinds as recreation for working men and their families is always an inducement for location by industries. Only quite recently one of the first questions asked by the head of a N. Y. factory considering locating here was "what recreation have you to offer my work people?"

Good Grounds Important.

Dr. McPherson enlarged on the importance to the city of having good athletic grounds centrally situated and he strongly endorsed the Park by-law as providing for such. He contended that both the Oval and the Exhibition grounds are too far away from centre city, and asserted that 25 per cent. more people will patronize the Riverside Park than either of the other two grounds. Then he declared, the value of the park cost of the bridge will double in five years, consequently it should be bought now. From a health standpoint the doctor emphasized the need of conserving the waterfront for citizens' use and of retaining as many open spaces as possible.

Damages Uncertain.

Mr. G. N. Gordon pointed out that in his legal experience he had always found real property damages very uncertain because of special property adaptibility. In any event arbitration would be long and tedious, and the damages awarded by reason of the new bridge might well amount to the whole value of the properties in question. Then it must not be forgotten that all damages adjudged would be charged against the bridge.

Would Make No Mistake.

Mr. J. J. Hartley was a strong advocate for the Park by-law, which if carried, would provide public recreation grounds for the present and rising generation. He did not know of any place more central or suitable for this purpose than the Riverside Park site, and he declared that ratepayers would make no mistake in carrying the plan, especially when they know that a failure to do so will mean land damages for nothing in return.

City Beautifying.

In Dr. Harvey was found a wholehearted supporter of the Park by-law as a move in the direction of city development and city beautifying. Let us not he said, hand down to succeeding generations follies like those of our forefathers in giving away the western waterfront, but conserve for all time the advantages of our eastern waterfront for public recreation and the making of a city beautiful.

Attractive Features.

Mr. C. E. Sisson was in accord with all previous speakers as to the Park by-law. The new bridge, he added, with its longest single span in Canada, will with the Lift Lock, prove an attractive feature to visitors, and the effect of the magnificent bridge will be either added to or detracted from by the condition of the property just south-east of the structure.

Cost in Taxes.

Ald. Edgar here declared that the cost of acquiring the proposed new public park would mean but eleven cents for every $25 paid in taxes the next 40 years.

An Ideal Spot.

Ald. Garside lined up with the rest in support of the Park by-law. By use of gravel along the waterfront he thought an ideal bathing spot could be created—not deep enough to permit of drowning accidents. Then he suggested using old tins form the incinerator, rolled flat for filling in and making land connection with the city's islands; picturesque lagoons could be left, boat house accomodation allowed for, and he could visualize at this point, without doubt the grandest spot in Peterborough.

Business Affected.

Mr. James Ellis, owner of the Peterborough Mattress Factory, which premises are affected in the proposed park deal, here explained that by the by-law he would be driven away from a central location, and he wanted to know how far 38,000, the price he is asking for his property, would go in building another factory. He considered the city would be getting a snap in acquiring his building for

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 31 1919

ELECT MRS. MORRIS.

PETERBOROUGH'S present chance to show the world that it is a city abreast of the times instead of one stuck in the mire of tradition or wandering about in the darkness of old fogeyism, is to elect Mrs. Morris a member of the Board of Education. They are recognizing the fitness of women for public office in England in the United States, in the West, and in the larger cities of Ontario. Then why should Peterorough lag behind?

THE GREATEST OPPORTUNITY OF ALL.

TALK OF OPPORTUNITY knocking at the door! Opportunity is at the portals of Peterborough, actually trying to kick down the entrance. Is the municipality to escape from the call by way of the back window or is it to open the door to the importunate visitor?

Peterorough has a chance to secure an automobile plant, the company being capitalized at $4,000,000. Mr. R. V. Copping of this city is one of the largest stockholders in this concern, and the same Mr. Copping is now a candidate for alderman. If he is elected tomorrow, no better method could be adopted by the citizens to strengthen his hands in the task of inducing his fellow members of the gigantic corporation referred to to locate their plant in this city.

Aside altogether from this consideration, Mr. Copping is a desirable candidate for a place on the City Council. He is a representative citizen whose reputation is above suspicion and whose business relations with Labor have always been amicable. His ambition is to build up the city, and his chances to do so will be increased if he is elected alderman tomorrow. That official position will increase his prestige in landing the industry in which he has a financial interest.

Mr. Copping is certainly entitled to generous support the support of the business men who are anxious to see th city grow, and of the workingmen whose interests depend upon the amount of labor furnished the wage-earner.

HOW TO VOTE TOMORROW.

TELL A MAN seriously and in confidential vein that a path which he proposes to follow is at a certain stage strewn with gold dollar pieces, and it is no very difficult matter to persuade him that it would be the part of wisdom for him to pick them up. Din that fact into his ears at every opportunity, and the chances are that you will arouse either his suspicion or his resentment and that he will begin to think that after all he had better choose some other road. The people will stand a certain amount of preaching, but beyond a given point they will not bear any form of trial patiently. One or two sermons on the history of the life of Job may have a beneficial effect. Twenty will simply demonstrate that the majority are lacking in the grace and outstanding virtue of the long-suffering patriarch.

If the people as a whole do not know how to vote, at least they all are satisfied in their own minds how they wish to do so. All the newspaper counsel in the world will not swerve the majority from their purpose or affect even a sufficient number to influence the general result. All such palaver is so much space and effort wasted. Very little of it furnished the public with even interesting reading. The voters may be enlightened to a degree, but now as never before they decline to be either led or over-persuaded. And it may be just as well that the people are doing their own thinking instead of taking their opinions ready made from the columns of a newspaper that with sublime assurance imagines itself the chosen of heaven to regulate the affairs of the earth. The ex-kaiser labored under some such delusion, and see what came of it and what happened to himself?

These days it is sufficient for a newspaper to give a list of the candiates with such information as to the standing and personality of each, as any reader may naturally desire. Then let it go at that and leave the voters to follow their own devices, something they are sure to do in any event. If there are bylaws to be submitted, don't weary the electors to death in an effort to impress upon them their duties. If the earth is strewn with the golden dollar pieces of opportunity, then every sane citizen can be relied upon to accumulate his share.

The people at the election tomorrow will vote as their inclinations—and perhaps their consciences—direct them. To a great extent it may be they will be influenced by personal consideratons. They will support certain candidates because they know them, and it must be [illegible] that with such a list of nominees for the various offices it will be a difficult matter to err seriously in the selection. No matter who may be defeated or who elected, the future is tolerably safe.

There can be no doubt as to the success of the Aladdin bylaw. The public know a good thing when they see it. No urging in this matter is required. The park bylaw, however, is a different proposition, involving as it does direct outlay. But it is a proposition that appeals to the business instinct that every man possesses in a manner. If the city's money is required to secure the park, then the expenditure is to be made for the direct benefit of the people who will be called upon to pay the bill. No one in his senses will undertake to say which candidates will be electd tomorrow. Any one, however, can safely forecast the fate of both bylaws to be passed upon.

THE EVENT OF THE YEAR.

THE YEAR 1919 witnessed the greatest political revolution that Ontario has ever seen. Of course, there are local wiseacres who assume to tell just how it happened, but we prefer to leave the final explanation of this remarkable event to the historian. The occurrrence is too recent, the issues involved too big, to be dealt with by those whose interests have been affected. There can be no sane judgment where prejudice exists and the latter sentiment is always associated with politics, even though the spirit of the public has shown what some regard as improvement. But after all, this so-called political independence is very often born of the prejudice just referred to.

It will remain a mystery until some one whose mind is free from party bias and whose judgment has not been warped by the shock of surprise, tells a curious world what brought about the upheaval. Where is the Province at, anyway? How did it all come about? How happens it that the great issue upon which the late Ontario Government staked its existence was overwhelmingly endorsed while the Government itself was destroyed? Had the issue referred to been rejected, the answer to the rest of it would have been easy. But nothing of th kind. The whole thing appears illogical and there is nothing plainly demonstrated except, perhaps, the fact that the people are ungrateful and slow in the matter of of paying their political debts.

The Ontario Legislature is now composed of four groups, or rather of three, if the coalition of the two parties is taken seriously, a coalition formed as a last makeshift in order that the organization of a government might be possible. Ontario stands in the limelight today. The eyes of the world are centred upon this Province watching the experiment. Can such a government avoid the snares and arrows of outrageous fortune and survive the machinations of the other factions that would work its ruin? If Premier Drury can steer his bark safely over the bumpy sea and shun the Dewart reefs, he will have given an exhibition of skilled political pilotage that will excite the envy and arouse the admiration of those who aspire to party leadership.

The result of the experiment in Ontario will affect more than the destinies of the old political parties in this Province. The future of the Dominion depends in a great measure upon it. The Federal Parliament has a chance to watch the workings of the machine at Toronto, and the other provinces of the Dominion are not threatened with immediate election. They can watch and wait. If the Drury Government can make good the future of both old parties the country over looks dark. If it fails, the prospects for the others are brighter. But whatever happens, there will be an end is all good time to this multiplicity of parties. The present situation is illogical. There are but two important sides to every question, and there will be only two parties when the people recover and come again into their senses. By whatever names these parties may be known does not really matter. Their principles and ambitions will be really the same, chastened, perhaps, but basically unchanged?

Coming down to local events, Peterborough has shown progress during the past year. The construction of the greatest bridge of its kind in Canada is well under way. One of the finest school buildings in Ontario has been arranged for. The spirit of political revolution that swept the province possessed the people here, and the close of 1919 witnesses one of the most interesting and uncertain civic campaigns in the history of the city. Great things have been accomplished by Peterborough in the past. Greater still are planned for the future. The people appear to be gradually awakening to the fact that opportunity is wooing them on every side. The Board of Trade and the Trades Council, representative organizations in their several fields, have taken long steps in advance. To the unthinking these organizations may appear at odds, but in reality both are working for the common good of mankind.

The year is gone, and still no formal treaty of peace. The ways of the diplomats are exasperatingly tedious. An entire twelve months has already been spent in a vain effort to give permanent effect to what the civilized forces of the world sweated blood for four years to accomplish.

Reasons For Voting For Park By-Law

The people of Peterborough can have ONE OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL PARKS IN ALL CANADA on the east shore of the Otonabee, from the new bridge to the Canadian Pacific bridge, and they CAN HAVE IT BY THEIR VOTES on New Year's Day at an actual COST OF ABOUT $17,000. This opportunity will probably never come again.

The land includes thirteen acres. In addition the City owns the group of islands at the south which may be linked with and form a part of the whole park. By gradual filling in and shaping to a plan, these little islands are capable of forming a rarely beautiful group with a network of canals for boating. Shallow and safe wading places can be placed here for the little ones to sail their toy boats and marine scouts.

The planning of the park will be done PRACTICALLY WITHOUT COST TO THE CITY. The walks and drives may be laid at leisure and at small cost. The plan will show where and what trees are to be planted and it is hoped this will be the happy task of our girls and boys on special days set aside for the purpose.

The by-law authorises a debenture issue of $33,000, at 5 1-2 p.c., interest, to mature in 1960 AT A COST to the City of $2,162,08 YEARLY. This small sum will pay the interest on the debentures and also create a sinking Fund investment that will liquidate the entire obligation at maturity. The amount is LESS THAN ONE HALF OF ONE PER CENT. of the present taxes collected. The citizen who pays twenty-five dollars a year taxes will pay about eleven cents toward the new park.

The building of the new bridge obliges the City to pay so-called damages to the property which may amount to $16,000. The purchase of the land will prevent such A WASTE OF PUBLIC MONEY and at the same time gain a valuable asset. It is fair to figure that the park property will in reality be acquired for $17,000 should the full $33,000 be needed. THE CITY WILL STAND TO LOSE $16,000 UNLESS THE PEOPLE VOTE TO BUY. The individual, if similarly placed, would surely buy to prevent so great a loss of money.

The by-law does not oblige the City to buy the land. It authorizes the expenditure up to the amount named in the by-lawe, but if further negotiations or other steps by the Council should succeed in procuring it at a smaller expenditure, the by-law will allow that.

This is the FIRST TIME the people of Peterborough EVER VOTED UPON THE PURCHASE OF A REAL PARK. They have, however, often voted upon and favored the use of riverside lands for industrial plants with the purpose of promoting the growth of business and population. They have voted valuable concessions to industrial corporations but have never yet voted a park for themselves. The great value of a park as a business-getter for the whole City is unquestioned.

REVIEW OF THE LUMBER INDUSTRY FOR 1919

(Canada Lumberman.)

The past year has been a rather remarkable one in the lumber industry of Canada and affords another illustration of the words of Scotland's famous bard that "the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft aglee." Many were the predictions made at the commencement of 1919, regarding prospects, prices and production, and out of the myriad of prophecies, possibly not one has come true; in fact the average sawmill man and wholesale lumber dealer, as he sits back during the comparatively quiet days of December in his favorite office chair, amid the haze of a quiet "pipe" reflects upon how matters have eventuated in comparison with the way he "doped them out" during the initial stages of 1919, shows that our ability to read the future by present conditions and past experiences is anything but reassuring.

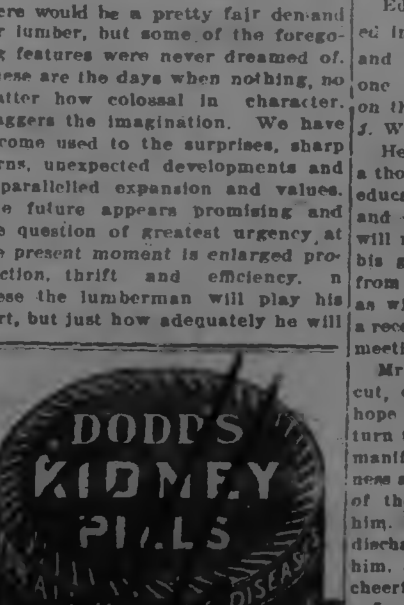
It is not the intention to review conditions as they exist in the lumber trade—for these are well-known to every exponent of the industry—but when drifting toward the close of another twelve months, it may be interesting to ask some of the profound prognosticators if, in their expression of views on what would take place during 1919, they thought that shingles would go to their present high price; that lath would be almost as rare as radium and command relatively as high a figure; that mill stocks would be lower than ever known in the history of the trade; that British Columbia forest products would find a brisk requisition over the line; that the market would largely be an auction one; that hardwoods would jump from 50 per cent. to 100 per cent. in quotations; that hemlock and white pine would be used in abundance; that big decline in sterling exchange; that building operations would call for such large quantities of material, and that housing accomodation would be at a premium in every city and town.

Of course it was expected that there would be a pretty fair demand for lumber, but some of the foregoing features were never dreamed of. These are the days when nothing, no matter how colossal in character, staggers the imagination. We have become used to the surprises, sharp turns, unexpected developments and unparallelled expansion and values. The future appears promising and the question of greatest urgency at the present moment is enlarged production, thrift and efficiency. In these the lumberman will play his part, but just how adequately he will be able to meet the requirements of forest products during the next year, it is impossible to foretell.

Many Canadian firms set out this fall with the idea of doubling the quantity of their logging output, but so far, owing to the shortage of help and other drawbacks, have only been able to accomplish a little more than was in evidence at this particular period in 1918. With favorable winter weather and more men in the bush greater stocks of timber will be taken out, and there is no doubt that the demands will be considerably heavier than the production.

There is no sign in the offing that prices will descend. On the contrary it is believed that they will continue to strengthen until the house building and other structural campaigns are further on the way to completion and depleted lumber stocks replenished. Instead of the higher value deterring persons from building, it seems to stimulate activity in many centres, and the rush for materials of all kinds continues. The observation of shrewd followers of the situation bears out the conviction that there is always more building going on in a rising market and when prices are highest than there is when a decline in value takes place. As long as the present healthy and active state of affairs prevails, there can be little doubt that 1920 will be a good one for the manufacturer, the wholesaler and the retailer.

Generally speaking the year just closing has been the most satisfactory one, in spite of the high prices, that the trade has enjoyed since the outbreak of the war, and the coming twelve months bid fair, even in the face of the chaos and clamor, which prevails in certain industrial quarters, to be equally as productive and gratifying in results.



EDITOR'S MAIL

A WORD FOR J. W. WORTH

Editor Review:— As one interested in the progress of our Fair City and its educational development, no one is more worthy of recognition on the Board of Education than Mr. J. W. Worth.

He has enjoyed the advantages of a thoroughly well-grounded technical education, and will voice his opinion and put his words into action and will not stand for any imputation of his good name, or his good work from other members of the Board, as will be seen and remembered by a recent upheaval at one of the Board meetings.

Mr. J. W. Worth is a smart, clean cut, energetic business man, and I hope the ratepayers will vote his return to the Board. I am sure he will manifest more than ordinary business ability and prove himself worthy of the trust anyone may repose in him. Mr J. W. Worth has faithfully discharged his duties devolved on him, and I feel confident he will cheerfully respond to any emergency.

I say you cannot pay enough for good education, if the aim is good citizenship, doesn't it follow that to teach it you must have a backbone of moral courage and good citizenship to draw upon.

Mr. J. W. Worth is the man we want on the Board of Education. Give him your vote, influence and support and again improve the standards of higher technical education.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space,

Another,
NORTHENDER.

Editor Review:—I would like to say a word in favor of Mr. A. A. McIntyre, who is a candidate for the position of mayor. I have known Mr. McIntyre for over twenty-five years, and have had a good deal of business dealings with him and have always found him perfectly honest in all business transactions. He has been a member of the City Council for the past ten years and no member of the Council has been more attentive to the business of the city than he has been. I know for a fact that he has given a great deal of valuable time in the interest of the city. During that time he has been chairman of most all important committees and has always worked for the best interest of the city. He may not have pleased all. That would be impossible, but he always stood for what he believed to be the best interest of the masses. He is well versed in civic matters and I think is quite capable of filling the mayor's chair, if elected, which I feel sure he will be. I feel confident that he will do justice to all classes.

Vote for the man who has served you faithfully and well for the past ten years and who is willing to give his whole time if necessary to the office of mayor and you will have no regrets. Wishing all the citizens of Peterborough a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Yours very truly,
J. J. HARTLEY.

A WORTHY CANDIDATE

Editor Review:— It must be a source of gratification to the people of Peterborough that an electrical engineer of the standing and experience of Mr. C. E. Sisson is offering himself as a candidate on the Utilities Commission.

After graduating, with honors, from the School of Practical Science, he accepted a position with the Canadian General Electrical Co., and has proven his worth by being promoted to one of the most responsible positions in that firm.

His intimate knowledge of the cost and quality of materials used by both the Waterworks and Light and Power Systems, would make a valuable asset on the Commission. Not only in materials, but in the field of labor his training fits him well to know when value is being received for the service rendered.

Mr. Sisson has won the respect and esteem of all who know of his efforts in those things which pertain to the social and moral uplift of our city.

Surely with this combination of character, ability and education the citizens of this fair city will see to it that he gets such a vote as will encourage others of his calibre to offer themselves for municipal service.

Yours, etc.
ANOTHER PROFESSION

MR. GORDON RETORTS.

Editor Review:— In last night's Review is a letter in which a man signs himself as "DELEGATE" of Local Union, and enquires if I am the man who resigned from certain positions in the city. I can appreciate that this man, ashamed to sign his name, would write a letter of this kind.

Does he complain because I resigned my position as City Solicitor, as I had intimated to the Council I would do a year before, for the purpose of allowing a returned soldier, who was a lawyer, to be appointed by the Council. The Council did, in fact, accept my suggestion and of the names under consideration appointed as City Solicitor a young layer who was wounded and gassed at the front, and this is apparently what this so-called delegate objects to.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

WIT AND WISDOM

Made to Measure.

Mrs. Newrich—Don't you think, William, now that we are getting into society, that we should have a coat of arms?

Newrich—Certainly, my dear, I'll see my tailor about it to-morrow.

A Pretty Good Cinch.

As a rule, when a man manages to sell himself at his own valuation there is a pretty good cinch that there is a swindled purchaser in the community.

Wearing Them Himself.

Charity Collector—"Have you any particular use for your old clothes?"

Surly Citizen—"Sure' I'm wearing them."

The Trouble Maker.

"Do you have much trouble when you are saying your lessons in school Tommie?"

"Yes, sir."

"What seems to trouble you most?"

"The teacher, sir!"

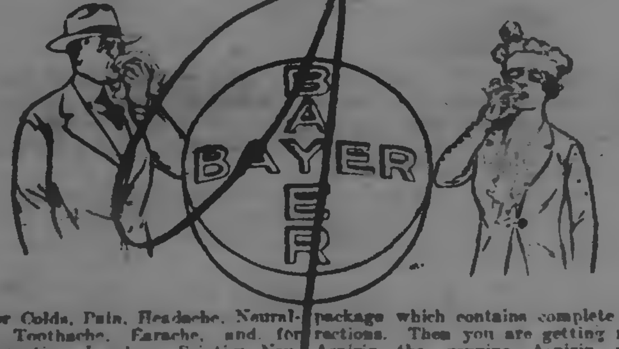
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



For Colds, Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, and for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuritis, take Aspirin marked with the name "Bayer" or you are not taking Aspirin at all.

Accept only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in an unbroken "Bayer" package which contains complete directions. Then you are getting real Aspirin—the genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years. Now made in Canada.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

Citizens Would Like to Know

The working voters (composing 85 per cent of Peterborough's population,) would be pleased to know from whom this "Citizen's" committee got its authority to name a slate that does not contain the name of one representative of Labor, that should be elected.

There has been no open meeting or convention of citizens that anyone has heard of, to name the ticket put forth, so it is safe to assume that it was named by a coterie of SELF-APPOINTED and very SELF-INTERESTED "Citizens" The junta as the Editor of the Review observes. The absence of one name of a Labor representative on the slate only demonstrates the utter selfishness of this particular clique of citizens, and who shun Labor as the devil does holy water. "For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain," this particular bunch stands without a rival. Will somebody please tell the 85 per cent who this "Citizens'" committee might be.

The Scapegrace

By EMMELINE L. FORSTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

They were orderly homespun people in and around Pebbleford, all but Larry—Larry Mathee. So wild and irrational were some of the freaks of this unique character that parents with well behaved sons wondered if after all a good deal was not due to Larry in the way of example of warning. He could upset the little settlement over night and appear so docile and penitent the next day that the sufferers through his mischief were ready to forgive and nearly everybody loved him.

It was when Larry went to the cross roads among a rough crowd that the bottled up vim and hilarity with which he overflowed was freely distributed upon returning to his native heath. He lived with an uncompanionable crotchety old grandfather, who allowed him to drift unrestrained for the present and neither thought of nor cared for his future.

Larry's freaks were more of the heedless school boy order than in any way vicious or criminal.

"You'll go just once too often down among that roystering set at the crossroads," was the prophecy of the town marshal.

"Every man there is my particular friend and would lay down his life for me," asserted Larry staunchly.

"If you'd only keep respectable for a whole year at a time, instead of once in a while," sighed Dolly Prentice, the storekeeper's daughter.

"Yes, all right, what then, Dolly?" eagerly questioned Larry. "Say some word of promise and let me try the new tack," but Dolly shook her pretty head dolorously.

So Larry went his way and Dolly mourned, and one Saturday afternoon Larry, with his month's hard earned wages in his pocket, started jauntily in the direction of the crossroads. It was early Monday morning when Dolly Prentice gasped and trembled as the first customer of the day entered the store. "Oh, have you heard about Larry Mathee?" she questioned. "He's in, at last!"

"In—where?" asked Dolly, a quick catch in her voice.

"In jail. The marshal locked him up at midnight. It's robbery, they say—burglary and all that."

"Never!" cried Dolly indignantly. "Larry wouldn't touch a cent not his own!"

"He has, this time," persisted the customer. "A cent! Oh, my, not that, but thousands! Larry broke into the Waltham place last night and took everything in sight. They found the plunder on him and when he got his head clear this morning all he told the marshal was: 'Bring on the trial quick, and get through with it.'"

That was a bustling day for the town. Its jail comprised the office of the marshal with a barred room behind. A group gazed upon Larry, who was smiling, undaunted. The sages came with "I told you so," explanations. Ultra conscientious persons passed the gruesome prison with a shudder. But the children, the petted favorites of this audacious monster of crime—there were tears in the eyes of their hero and champion of the past as pitying faces gazed past the bars, and handed through them this one an apple, that a doughnut, and one tiny urchin a toothsome lunch put up by the mother who owed the child's life to the bravery of Larry in a runaway accident. And just at dusk Dolly tearfully appeared and broke down utterly.

"Don't cry, Dolly," said Larry; "I'm through."

"Yes, I see you are," sobbed Dolly; "all through, indeed!"

"I mean with idleness and the crossroads. I've had my warning. Soon as I'm out I'll prove it to you."

"As soon as you're out—oh, Larry! will you ever be out again?"

"In a jiffy!" declared Larry brightly. "Miss Waltham saw the robber and is coming tomorrow to identify me. Watch her! I wanted a day's time to fix things right for—for a friend."

"He's not the man I saw through the screen from my garden," announced the rich old spinster.

"But your money and jewels were found in his possession," observed the marshal.

"If you'll speak with me alone, Miss," said Larry, "I'll explain how that was."

She was the sole auditor of the story—how it was Ross Burdell who had committed the theft—Ross Burdell, who had become half demented by the loss of his wife and three children all within the space of a year. Unhinged by his great sorrow, eager to get away amid new scenes, had been driven to crime. Larry Mathee, but a friend indeed, had come upon him just after the theft. He had shown him the frightful error he was committing. He had half of his salary left which he gave Burdell to take him to a distant point, promising to return the plunder.

"And he'll make a man of himself, trust me!" declared loyal Larry. "And that's my bent now, too."

The word of Miss Waltham was sufficient to sustain the innocent Larry. A year later when, a stranger to the crossroads forever, he married Dolly Prentice, people wondered at the splendid wedding present that came from the rich old spinster.

Information has reached Vienna from New York that the U. S. will grant Austria a loan of $70,000,000 in monthly instalments of $9,600,000.

MIDNIGHT DYSPEPSIA

Late Suppers and the Snack Before Going to Bed Are All Right And Safe If You Follow With A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

The stomach often feels empty just before bed time. A little bite usually induces sleep. To avoid indigestion, restlessness and the "dark brown" taste in the morning, take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating. It supplies just the right elements to aid in digesting food, rests the stomach, provides properties to relieve the tendency to gasiness and sour risings, morning biliousness and consequent absence of appetite for breakfast. To make a practice of always using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating is one of those precautionary measures that repay immensely. This is an age of prevention and these tablets are designed to promote liberty of eating and the good-fellowship that goes with a good meal. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all drug stores throughout the United States and Canada.

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

DIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have the honor of nomination and have been urgently requested a very large number of ratepayers to be a candidate for the Utilities mmission.

Having served you six years as alderman and two years as Mayor. acquired a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the duties of the Utili- s Commission.

I was a member of the City Council during the negotiations, construc- n and prosecution of the work of the city electric power station, the y waterworks dam, and the auxiliary pumping station.

As Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee in the City uncil, I came directly in contact with the waterworks system, including e mains, hydrants, pressure, etc., for fire protection, domestic and manu- uring purposes.

For two years I was Vice-President of the Ontario Hydro Radial Asso- ation, which gave me a thorough knowledge of the advantages of the ydro Electric system for power, electric lighting, heating and radial ilway purposes.

With the above experience and knowledge I respectfully solicit your te and influence in support of my candidature, assuring you if elected at I will endeavor to assist in every way possible the other members the Commission to carry out the work in the very best interests of e ratepayers of the City of Peterborough.

I am heartily in favor of such improvements as the proposed new iltration Plant when the time is opportune, but am of the opinion that l such large expenditures, as far as practicable, in every department of e city, should be deferred until such time as some of the present de- entures are fully paid up, except in so far as it is found necessary to go head with the work in order to keep our workmen and laborers steadily mployed.

Respectfully yours,

For ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I am a candidate for alderman, and, if elected I will give the City's government the benefit of my practical knowledge in construction and building.

I [illegible] the construction of the Canadian [illegible] buildings in Toronto, and [illegible] built the first cement block houses in Peterborough, and during [illegible] years I have been engaged in other construction work. I am a bricklayer by trade and I believe [illegible] a knowledge of the needs of the people from a workingman's standpoint. I will see that for every dollar spent one dollar value is given (with no dollar days thrown in for bargain seekers) and I will watch and protect the city's interests as I would my own, if elected. I am in favor of the housing scheme for Peterborough and for any other legislation that will make this city a progressive one.

I request the support of every ratepayer anxious to have an economical yet progressive City Government.

Yours respectfully.

Coffee exporters of Costa Rica estimate that country's coffee crop for next year at 3,000,000 pounds, compared with 2,600,000 this year.

To The Ratepayers of the City of Peterborough

I am offering myself as a candidate for alderman, and believe that this City will be benefitted with my many years of experience as a member of the City Council and as City Solicitor. I had intended to devote my time to my business affairs but as there are few men of many years experience in municipal affairs in the City Council, I felt that I could be a help in the City's government on account of the large undertakings and important projects which must be dealt with by the Council within the next two years.

To develop this City we must have new industries, and I have given much of my time in the past years while in the City Council, to this particular part of municipal affairs.

If elected, I will make every effort to improve this City as a great industrial centre.

The support of those who believe that I shall be able to give faithful service, is respectfully requested.

Yours faithfully,

To the Public Utilities Commision

1. An Engineer for an engineer's job.

2. A technical training saves time and money in dealing with technical problems.

3. Better elect a man who HAS 19 years training than spend six years in attempting to train a man at the City's expense.

4. Follow the lead of other cities and elect at least one engineer to the Utilities Commission.

5. A bank needs the advice of a qualified banker on its board. Does not Peterborough need a qualified engineer on its engineering board?

Mrs. Kate Morris

TO THE ELECTORS:

The Hon. Mr. Drury, Premier of Ontario, has stated that he considers the woman's point of view both desirable and necessary on every Board of Education.

Your Board of Education acknowledges the need and value of women in the schools when it employs six times as many women as men teachers (65 women and 11 men) and a woman nurse.

Having been a Public School teacher for some years, I am able to see the educational questions of the day from the double viewpoint of the home and the teacher.

It is in the hope of giving intelligent service that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS,

(Mrs. W. R. Morris.)

For Board of Education

After strong pressure from influential quarters I have again consented to accept a position on the Board of Education, if it be the will of the electors to place me there. If my best business ability is considered necessary to help complete the work which is already in hand it is at the service of the Citizens for another term. A good substantial vote behind me would look as though what I have tried to do has been appreciated.

Your vote is respectfully solicited.

ALD. A. A. McINTYRE FOR MAYOR

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

The whole tendency of the times in public as in private affairs, is to reward faithful and extended service by promotion when the opportunity to do so arises.

I am the oldest member of the City Council in point of service. I have been elected nine times, serving altogether ten years, both under the ward system and by general vote. That fact is the reason for my conviction that the people have been satisfied with my public service. My record has been passed upon nine times and that record is before you today. Upon it I base my appeal.

Applying the principles of private business to public affairs, I believe that the Mayor of the city should be chosen from the members of the City Council, and that, other things being equal, seniority of service should be the deciding factor. The man who has served ten years and has been elected nine times should, in my opinion, be given the preference over the candidate whose term of service is shorter and who lacks the endorsation of nine elections as alderman.

I appeal for your support because I feel that I'am justified in view of my past record in asking you to believe in my pledges now. I will faithfully carry out these pledges if I am elected Mayor of your city. I have given time to my duties as alderman. I will devote to the Mayoralty all the time and effort that the onerous nature of the responsibilities of that office demand.

My interests are identified with those of the city. It is my ambition to see Peterborough grow. This can be accomplished only by developing industrial life. We must have more manufactories. We have the inducements here, including the location and the power. All that is needed is to bring the advantages of Peterborough as a centre of industry to the attention of outside firms. For the past two years I have been engaged in his work with gratifying success. If I am elected Mayor I will follow up this line with every resource at my command.

I believe that there can be no substantial progress made in a city where class friction exists. Labor and employers, their interests being identical, must work together in harmony. There is no reason on earth why this ideal condition cannot be attained. All that is required is mutual understanding. There is nothing in the platform of Labor that is a menace to any class. The employer cannot prosper unless he is in accord with the workingman.

More manufactories for the city will mean an increase in the working population, better times for everyone, the retail merchants included. The latter's prosperity depends upon that of their chief customers, the wage-earners. The population cannot increase until suitable residences are provided. Realizing this, I am in favor of the housing scheme, which has already been arranged for.

I ask you to place confidence in the promises which I here make, basing my request on my record. You are making no experiment by electing me Mayor. What I have always done in my public capacity I will continue to do if honored by the highest gift the city can bestow.

Let me wish you all a Happy New Year.

Yours for Prosperity and Progress.

FAMOUS ORCHESTRA RENDER CONCERT

LARGE CROWDS ENJOY MUSIC PROVIDED BY MUSGRAVE'S ORCHESTRA.

The spacious and comfortable lounging room of the Cressman Co. was full to capacity during the two full hours that the Musgrave Orchestra presented their program yesterday afternoon.

At 3:30 o'clock the orchestra, led by Mr. George Musgrave, one of Canada's most noted musicians, consisting of five instruments, commenced to play. From that until 5:30 the orchestra continued its program of orchestral selections interspersed with vocal and instrumental solos. To say the large crowd of people were delighted with the music is putting it mildly, because it is seldom that Peterborough music lovers have an opportunity to hear such high-class music under any circumstances, let alone in the large easy chairs and richly upholstered chesterfields of the Cressman Co's lounging room.

During the concert afternoon tea was served in the tea room adjoining the room where the orchestra was playing, and where the music could be heard to good advantage.

This was a new experience for Peterborough and one that was greatly appreciated. It is still another way in which the Cressman Co. are striving and succeeding in making their store one of the most up-to-date and efficient in the country. The Cressman Co. may feel assured that their efforts are being appreciated by the public, who are taking advantage of the newly organized departments as well as the older excellent ones.

38,000, and declared that, taking in consideration the fact that another central location for his factory is impossible, he should be further re-imbursed.

Men of Integrity.

Ald. Turner said there seemed no question but that the Aladdin by-law will carry, still, too much should not be taken for granted, and citizens must work in the interests of this measure. The Aladdin firm is a substantial one, composed of men of business integrity, and its acquisition by Peterborough would prove a valuable asset. Ald. Turner also recommended the purchase of park land as a straight business proposition which should appeal to all. In the event of the by-law carrying council is not bound to buy at option prices; but should they consider the valuations too high the city can as an alternative resort to arbitration. Ald. Turner considered this park proposition the beginning of a big development and beautifying scheme, which may eventually take in all the eastern waterfront, on beyond the C. P. R. bridge, including the Dickson property, affording a magnificent public drive way from the bridge down the river, along the lake to and along Roger Street.

Bespeaks Co-Operation.

In leaving office mayor Duncan spoke for co-operation of citizens with the city council. Line up behind the mayor and aldermen in the community's interests, he urged. Let there be no knocking or running to the press with criticisms, but rather a pulling altogether for the common weal. His Worship commended City Clerk Armstrong as one of the best Industrial Commissioners in Canada to whom is due in no small measure the acquisition of several good industries this city has secured during his regime. In conclusion the mayor contended that with general co-operation to build up Peterborough, nineteen-twenty is going to be a big year of boom for this city.

Workers in the interest of the two by-laws were here called for and the response was all that could be desired.

THE WEATHER

As this is the last day of 1919, a glance backward over the past year may bring to remembrance a few things of interest in the weather line. The coldest day was Jan. 12th., with 12 degrees below zero. As will be remembered, last winter was exceptionaly mild, and the thermometer did not go below zero again from Jan. 12th, to March 6th. But one more day (March 7) had a temperature below zero, until Spring came. The warmest day was June 3rd, with 97 degrees. June of 1919 was unusually warm. In 25 years previous to Juneof 1919 the temperature had been up to 90 or over on but seven occasions in that month. In other words, in 25 years there had only been seven really hot days. June of 1919 alone supplied nine such days.

The rainfall for the year was 28 inches and 94-100. The average here is around 36 inches. This shows quite a deficiency. The wettest month was May; the most dry, December.

These weather notes have been appearing over my initials, more or less regularly for over twenty-two years. I wish those who read them (and I have been told by hundreds that they are read with interest and appreciation) a Happy and Prosperous New Year.—W. P.

WORK FOR, VOTE FOR, ALADDIN BY-LAW

the Electorate of Peterborough:
The city administration, through Worship the Mayor, has invited co-operation of the Board of Trade in urging the passage of the bylaw to enable the city to secure the Canadian plant of the Aladdin Company.

The enquiry into the standing and nature of this company shows it to rank high among the progressive industrial institutions of the United States. Its head office is in Bay City, Mich. The business in which it is engaged has made remarkable progress of late years because of the reduction it effects in wastage to the home builder.

The company will be a large user of those raw and manufactured materials that go into house construction, and its product will go everywhere throughout the Dominion. It designs houses, and supplies, ready-cut, everything ready to be placed and fitted in actual construction.

The company itself undoubtedly made a critical survey of many cities in the Dominion, and its preference for Peterborough is proof of the superior attractiveness of Peterborough for this industry. Its location here will emphasize Peterborough's importance as a centre of distinctive industry and will give widespread publicity to the economic superiority of Peterborough, to its exceptional rail and water transportation facilities, and to its growing prestige as a manufacturing city. The company is a liberal advertiser and will be one of many valuable agencies to further the city's prosperity and growth.

No debt will be created by the bylaw; no debenture issue is authorized. The City Council proposes to locate the plant on land on the Monaghan road that is owned by the city and which adjoins the plant of Henry Hope & Sons, and at the rear, the Grand Trunk railway tracks. The company is to be given a fixed assessment of $5000 for one decade, which does not include school and local improvement taxes. The wisdom of having land upon which industries may be located is thus demonstrated.

Not one cent in the form of a bonus will be given the company nor added to the city's debt or taxes. On the other hand the company will pay probably $500 a year in taxes; our only concession is the site, now owned by the city, and the fixed valuation for the period of one decade.

Every consideration that should influence the voter seems to weigh in favor of a popular and generous support of the bylaw. We are called upon merely to confirm a good business transaction made by our City Council at no cost but much advantage to the city. The Canadian Aladdin Company should receive a cordial greeting on New Year's Day by our votes. [illegible]

The company has plans to expend not less than $70,000 for its first building, 100 x 200 feet in size, and to install its machinery so as to begin operations next September with some forty men. The city will reserve some adjoining land which the company is to purchase outright for $10,000 as soon as plant and yard expansion becomes obligatory.

Respectfully submitted on behalf of the Peterborough Board of Trade.

FINED FOR PASSING STANDING STREET CAR

LOCAL CITIZEN FEELS TRAFFIC LAWS SHOULD BE VIGOROUSLY ENFORCED.

A local citizen was fined $13.75 at police court Tuesday morning on a charge of passing a standing street car with an automobile.

Another citizen, not a policeman, was responsible for the charge being feult it was time auto drivers were forced to obey the laws more conscientiously than they are doing. He swore he saw the accused drive west on Charlotte street and at the corner of Aylmer street pass through a crowd of people who were waiting to get on the car.

The defendant admitted that he was out in his car that night, but could not remember whethetr he streets. He swore that he was a careful driver and always obeyed that law in particular. As to the occasion mentioned he could not remember it at all, but felt sure there was some mistake.

He would not directly contradict the evidence of the informant therefore the Magistrate felt called upon to impose a fine.

A Plot Marred.

"I hear that the grocer discharged you for swindling him," remarked Mackindle to a friend. "It's a lie!" said the latter. "He asked me to put a lump of lead under one of the scales and I did so, and then in a few days when he examined it he told me to leave. "Did you not fasten the lead on properly?" asked Mackindle. "Oh, certainly, I fastened it right enough," was the reply, "but it was under the wrong side of the scale that I put it, and it weighed against himself!"

The Goat Degree

By AUGUSTUS WITTFIELD

(Copyright)

I entered Carlock's apartments and found him swinging in a hammock. He gave me a quick glance and heaved a deep sigh.

"Why so melancholy?" I inquired.

"My dear Watchem," he answered, "I had hopes that your afternoon would be at my disposal, but, of course, since you are going to the ball game with Emmons, I cannot look for you to assist me in the mysterious case of O. B. C. Osofat."

"Who told you I am going to the ball game?" I asked.

"Why, Watchem," he answered, "the truth is self-evident. You are wearing your somber garments on a week day. You can have put them on only for the purpose of lending color to the yarn you told your chief that your grandmother is to be buried this afternoon.

"As she has died at least a dozen times to my knowledge, I can deduce but one thing, and that is that the interment will be at the usual place."

"Carlock," I commented, "you are right. But what gets me is that you know I am going with Emmons."

"Easiest thing out," replied Carlock. "Emmons came in and tried to borrow a dollar from me. Said he was going to the ball game. Ergo, he must be going with you or he wouldn't have to borrow the money."

"Carlock," I said in amazement, "you're a wonder. But tell me, why are you swinging in a hammock?"

"Because I enjoy the suspense," he replied. "Suspense stimulates the mental faculties, and, besides, a hammock affords free sway to the imagination."

"Have you discovered any clew to the mysterious disappearance of the case of Fat-Reducio which was consigned to O. B. C. Osofat, and which was lost while in transit on the Pole-to-Pole railway?" I asked.

"Before answering your query," replied Carlock, "I wish to refresh your memory on the subject. You remember it was while I was engaged on the famous case of the Gold Coupler that O. B. C. Osofat came to me with the astounding information that a case of Fat-Reducio had disappeared in transit on the Pole-to-Pole railway.

"Mr. Osofat had ordered the preparation with the idea of reducing his excessive weight, and, in anticipation of the results which had been guaranteed by the manufacturers, he had donated most of his clothing to the home for obese octogenarians, and had ordered a liberal supply of new ones to fit a man weighing a hundred pounds less, or one hundred and seventy-six pounds.

"The preparation had been consigned to him by the manufacturers at Phantasmania, and was receipted for in good order by the Pole-to-Pole at Patrickgonia. Somewhere between that point and this city it disappeared completely. The resources of the road have been exhausted, and as a last resort my marvelous powers have been enlisted in an effort to solve the mystery.

"Mr. Osofat is one of the largest stockholders of the road, and, consequently, the directors are especially anxious to please him, as they realize that heavy stockholders are not to be made light of."

Carlock paused, and, opening his medicine chest, he handed me a pepsin tablet.

"What is this for?" I asked.

"Take it," he replied. "It will help you to digest the evidence."

I did as he directed, and he continued.

"When I took hold of the case there was absolutely nothing to work on. After infinite pains I discovered that the baggage car of the train that received the case at Patrickgonia was in charge of Pud Judson, one of the heavyweight baggage smashers of the road. I looked up his antecedents and found that he had lots of first-class records, which he used on his phonograph. He was credited with being as straight as a string, but considerably thicker.

"I also discovered that, after reaching New York on that trip, Pud had disappeared and was missing for four weeks. When he finally reported for duty he had grown considerably thinner. The cause of his falling off in weight has never been explained."

"As the case now stands," I remarked, "what do you make of it?"

"By logical deduction, I arrive at the conclusion that Pud Judson is responsible for the disappearance of the case of Fat-Reducio, and I propose to fasten the crime on him."

Precisely at three-thirty, the indicator on the wall announced that Pud Judson had entered the building, and was even then on his way to Carlock's apartments. In a minute or so the elevator stopped, and then there was a knock at the door. Carlock opened it, admitting a short, emaciated man in a railroad man's uniform.

"You sent for me?" he asked, addressing the great detective.

"I summoned you," said Carlock. "Be good enough to note the distinction. A professional man never sends for any one."

Carlock surveyed Judson critically, having taken a post-graduate course in surveying at a correspondence school. Suddenly he made the startling accusation:

"Judson, you are short!"

Judson cowered.

"Only a matter of fifty shares or so," he asserted.

"I do not refer to your petty market speculations," said Carlock severely. "I refer to your weight. You have lost about a hundred pounds. Had you lost this weight in a legitimate manner it would not have been necessary for me to summon you, but since you have usurped the loss which should have been another's, it is my duty to secure from you a statement of the facts."

"I do not know what you mean," asserted Judson.

"You know that on your last run there was a case of Fat-Reducio consigned to O. B. C. Osofat of this city. You also know that when you reached here the case had disappeared."

"But why accuse me of knowing what became of it? If the case was lost, I do not see how I am to blame for it," protested Judson.

"Judson," said Carlock, "a crime has been committed, and it is necessary that the criminal be found. You were in that car alone with the case of Fat-Reducio. You are known to have often expressed dissatisfaction with your excessive weight.

"In the solitude of your car, you succumbed to the temptation, and when no eye was on you, you ate up that case. Come, man, you may as well admit it. I know what I am talking about."

"I did not eat it," said Judson. "I was not in the car alone. There was a goat on board. It was consigned to a cattle show in Kentucky. I tell you I know nothing about it."

"Watchem," said Carlock, turning to me, "this is the toughest case I've ever tackled. I've got to get an admission out of him at any cost. The directors have ordered me to make a report as quickly as possible."

He turned, and, opening his safe, he took a handful of gold pieces from his cash-box. Placing the gold on the table, he addressed Judson:

"Did you ever see this before?"

"No," replied Judson.

"It is yours," insinuated Carlock.

"No, no," moaned Judson. "I wish it was."

"It is yours," repeated Carlock. "Come, now, like a good fellow, admit that you ate the Fat-Reducio."

"I do not understand," wailed Judson. "But if you say the money is mine, perhaps I am mistaken. Perhaps I did eat the Fat-Reducio."

"The money is yours," Carlock assured him. "Come, now, admit that you ate the case of Fat-Reducio."

"Mine—all mine!" exclaimed Judson joyfully. "Yes, I think I did eat it."

He picked up the gold-pieces and let them flow from one hand to the other. Then he put them into his pocket.

"You did it," persisted Carlock. "You know you did it."

"Yes; I did it," said Judson wearily.

"Whew!" exclaimed Carlock. "That was a tough job. Twenty minutes, by the clock. Did you phonograph it, Watchem?"

"Yes," I replied; "it is all on record."

Carlock dismissed Judson, and proceeded to transcribe a full report of the confession. He was a lightning operator on the typewriter, and I watched the sparks flying from the machine as he wrote.

"Are you not afraid of setting fire to the paper?" I asked.

"No danger," he replied. "I use asbestos safety-paper."

As he finished his labors, the postman entered and handed him a large, legal-looking letter.

Carlock passed it to me and asked me to read it to him.

I broke the seal and opened it. Clearing my throat, I read:

HOOF, HORN & HIDE,
Goat Breeders.
Venezuela, S. A.

Mr. Carlock Bjones, New York, U. S. A.

Dear Mr. Bjones—We are addressing you as the head of the detective staff of the Pole-to-Pole railway, and beg to report to you that some time since we shipped one of our prize fat goats over your road to the Kentucky Agricultural Fair. The goat was a beautiful specimen, weighing 220 pounds.

Shortly after its delivery to the Agricultural show people it commenced to lose weight, and in the short space of one week it lost the amazing sum of 100 pounds. It is needless to note that the goat was unfit for show purposes, and we were compelled to withdraw it.

We determined to investigate the cause of this loss in weight, and our Mr. Arsenic Loo Ping was assigned to the job. With the greatest ease he located the man who had charge of the baggage car in which the goat had made the trip to Kentucky.

He found him in New York suffering from a mysterious malady, and, disguising himself as a trained nurse, he gained admission into the sickroom. He was rewarded by learning from the delirious ravings of Pud Judson that a case of Fat Reducio in the car had been entirely consumed by our prize fat goat.

We propose to enter suit against the Pole-to-Pole railway for damages sustained by us through your carelessness in transporting our goat.

Mr. Arsenic Loo Ping sends you his greetings, and assures you that you will have to get up early to beat him.

Very sincerely,
Hoof, Horn & Hide.

"Carlock," I commented, "it looks to me as though Pud Judson has the best of you. There seem to be two goats in this case."

"No," replied Carlock bitterly. "There is only one. I'm it."

Whales That Walked.

Whales used to walk. That is the statement of Prof. d'Arcy Thompson, authority on fishes of the sea, in a lecture on that subject at the Royal institution, London. He said the whale originally had four feet or fins, but that the two hind ones had simply dwindled away. In bygone ages ancestors of the present family of whales walked about much as seals do.

HAVING TEA WITH QUEEN MARY.

Canadian's Rare Adventure During Railway Strike.

Through one of these strange accidents of fate, says G. E. W. Crowe, I have had the honor of receiving a cup of tea poured and served by her Majesty. But, like most things in life, the real happening is not in the least what we expected.

It was in Hyde Park when their Majesties inspected the arrangements for food supply during the railway strike. A string of cars drove up and who should it be but the King and Queen. As the visit was quite informal and unexpected there were no guards, escorts, or the usual formalities we expect when royalty is around. No waiting crowds but only a few of the people whose business happened to call for their presence. After a short, informal chat with a few of the officials, their Majesties made a most complete inspection of the various store tents and offices which had been hastily erected on the open space opposite Knightsbridge Barracks to house the necessary administrative organization. And, of course, these tents included a Y.M.C.A. tent where food, sleeping accommodation and the usual cheery atmosphere, so looked forward to by men who had served on various battlefronts, could be obtained. The Y.M.C.A. certainly rose to the occasion and all over Hyde Park were dotted big marquees, and little field kitchens (returned from France), where food, drinks, cigarettes, etc., could be obtained.

The Queen with her quick eye for details which concerned the comfort of the men, noted these arrangements and asked to be allowed to serve in this main Y.M.C.A. tent. While the King stood behind and watched, the Queen for fifteen minutes served tea from a tin urn to all who were fortunate enough to get to the bar. Senior officers, laborers, lorry drivers, all came forward for the privilege of having tea with the Queen. No special cups, no special table, nothing prearranged, she just took the place of one of the volunteer workers.

There she was, only 24 hours after she had completed a motor journey without a stop, from the north of Scotland to London, a journey of greater distance than from Toronto to Chicago, a feat which would have put many a woman into bed for a week, made as it was over roads congested with motor lorries and under an excitement as to what extent the strike would extend, looking the picture of health and dress perfection. Could it be wondered that even the flippant laborer we find in every crowd, who, when their Majesties entered the tent shouted "Hello, George," etc., had to admire in silence.

Yes, I had a cup of this royal tea, but although served by the Queen, it was just the usual tea—milk, not cream, added while it was yet in the urn—and conforming to the Food Controller's edict against sugar, and even tea so royally served is not palatable to me without something sweetening. I solemnly felt in my vest pocket for the ever present sugar. Then came the difficulty of stirring, and still hard pressed against the counter by the crowd behind, I enlisted the aid of my lead pencil as a spoon, quietly paid my penny and departed.

I think we were all the same. Not knowing just how to thank such a wonderful waitress, we took refuge in silence. But, forever when tea is served, I will always remember the mug poured and served by Queen Mary, sweetened by sugar from a pocket store, and stirred by a lead pencil.

With such a democratic mother is it any wonder that the Prince of Wales knows just what to do at any given moment, under any conditions and with such a charming manner. —Toronto Weekly Star.

Tractors Are Ordered.

It has been officially announced by the Provincial Department of Agriculture, Quebec, that Hon. J. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture, has signed a contract with the Cleveland Tractor Co. of Canada, with shops at Windsor, Ont., for an unlimited number of tractors. The Quebec Government will act as the distributor for this company, and will sell the tractors at cost to any farmer or farmers' club throughout the province wishing to have a tractor. This decision has been arrived at because the Government considers by so doing it will save the middleman's profit to the farmer wishing to get a tractor and will further promote the use of tractors on farms so as to keep the young men at agricultural occupations by making their work more attractive and less tedious; also by allowing the use of tractors at low purchase cost. The Government is considering the idea of providing gasoline and oil either free or at a low cost to farmers operating tractors.

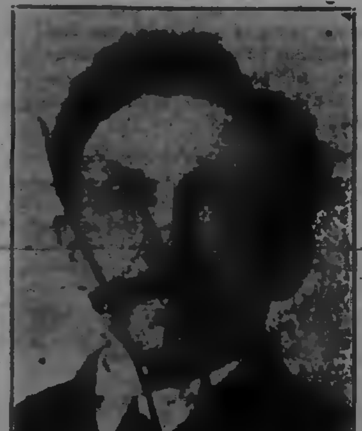
Re-Elect GARSIDE



TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

For the last thirtyeight years I have been a resident of Peterborough and I have been a member of the City Council during the past year. I have watched public affairs closely for a great many years and my last year's service was in the interests of the small ratepayer as well as the large ratepayer.

I supported all progressive measures for the City's benefit and to improve the city's progress. "Equal rights to all and favors to none" has been my motto. I have stood by loyally, everything in the interest of the City.

I invite your hearty support and ask for your vote to return me as Alderman to the City Council, and I promise you that I will give my time and attention and actively support a policy of a greater and a better Peterborough.

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

JAS. GARSIDE

FRANK HEFFERNAN GETS NEW POSITION

FORMER PETERBOROUGH BOY CENTRAL FIGURE OF TORONTO SPORTING CIRCLES.

Frank Heffernan has been engaged to coach the Parkdale Canoe Club O. H. A. teams, and he has been putting the candidates through some of the fastest workouts of the season. Heffernan knows the game from A to Z, and with fairly good material to work with, he should be able to turn out a formidable team

The West End Juniors open the local O. H. A. season on Thursday night, when they meet the fast-travelling Aura Lee sextet. Nothing much is known about the strength of the P. P. C. aggregation, but they will have to be good to take a fall out of the Avenue road squad. On Friday, Parkdale Seniors get their baptism of fire in Kitchener, but the chance of winning from the former Allan Cup holders is considered too difficult for them. However, the West Enders can be depended upon to give Parkes and Company an argument worth while, even if they do not turn in a victory In case they [illegible] dope, like St. Pat's did last season, they will be strong contenders for the group championship.

"WILD" BERT KENNEDY MEETS CHAMP. LENINSLY

GOOD BOUT PROMISED FOR TORONTO FANS ON NEW YEAR'S DAY.

With the arrival of Bert Kenny, boxing fans who are interested in the United Veterans' League show at the Arena on New Year's afternoon have something to talk about. The boxer who held "Jack" Dempsey to a draw in ten rounds two years ago when the champion was inaugurating his campaign which ultimately carried him to the top of the heap, will finish up in Toronto. Kenny is matched to meet Fulton at Newark early next month, and it is on the cards that he will make Levinsky extend himself to the limit in the holiday ten-round feature here. Levinsk is due here to-morrow. He is the acknowledged lightweight champion of the world.

The Hebrew fistic fans of New York York fairly idolize the battler, and he can get unlimited backing for an eight-round bout with Dempsey from his compatriots any time the champion gives the word.

In addition to the heavyweight contest, there will be a ten-round affair between the ever-willing "Scotty" Lisner and "Irish" Kennedy. Kennedy has won his last three battles. In the preliminaries Eddie Gallagher, "Hank" Wood's new wonder, will box six rounds with "Curly" Wilshire, the crack local 128-pounder, and "Cowboy" Leaman, of Alberta, and "Kid" Jenkins, also of the Ambitious City, will go four rounds in the curtain-raiser. The first bout will be called at 2.30.

COCHRAN FAILS TO DENELOP CHAMPION

EFFORTS TO BRING CUT GOOD BRITISH HEAVY END IN FAILURE.

New York, Dec. 31.—Charles B. Cochran, the premier British boxing promoter, who is not in this country seeking to gain the consent of Jack Dempsey to meet Georges Carpentier in London next June, has had a rather discouraging experience in the course of his efforts to develop a world champion in his native country.

The war at an end, Cochran decided upon a series of elimination bouts to determine which of a small group of candidates was the best man fitted to represent England in a contest for the world's title. His original plan called for a bout between Bombardier Wells and Frank Goddard, the winner to meet Carpentier. However, Wells chose to meet Joe Beckett, with the result that he was knocked out and eliminated.

Beckett, whom Cochran had not considered very seriously at the outset, was successful also in vanquishing Goddard, but just when Cochran thought he had stumbled upon a possible world's champion Beckett ran into a flurry of punches launched by Carpentier, and convinced Cochran that his efforts had come to naught.

Engrossed at present with his plans to stage a Carpentier-Dempsey fight, Cochran has abandoned temporarily the task of bringing forth a British champion. He will again bend to that task, however, when the question of the respective abilities of Carpentier and Dempsey have been settled.

Washtub Punishment.

A cigarette carelessly thrown away by a guard caused discomfort to a squad of engineers at Camp Shelby, Miss., says a letter received by Mr. and Mrs. E. Borton, Indianapolis, from their son, George K. Borton of the engineers.

Borton and six comrades awoke about midnight to find their tent in flames. They were driven into the chilly night air in sleeping apparel. Soldiers from nearby tents hurried to the rescue with blankets and Private Borton ran a hundred yards for water. The fire department arrived in time to soak the cots. The following morning the guard of the squad was ordered to wash seven pairs of trousers as a punishment for dropping the cigarette near the tent.

Earth a Blue Star.

Observations of the dark part of the moon were made by Professor Lowell at the observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., says the New York World. The dark part of the moon is lighted only by the faint light reflected by the earth, and the color of this light would be the color with which the earth shines to the other heavenly bodies. This color proved to be blue, which was to be expected, as the atmosphere, as we see it, is blue, and it is the earth's atmosphere which chiefly would be visible to other planets. Thus the earth is a blue star.

Oil Fields in Peace River.

An interesting account of the natural resources of the Peace River country and the efforts already being made to develop the same, especially as regards the oil fields, which prominent geologists have investigated and found indicative of the greatest oil supply existing in any one country, has been given by Mr. W. C. Goffatt, who called particular attention to the enormous extent of the territory included in the Peace River district as indicated by the fact that the boat journey between two points on the Peace River that this is 265 miles in length, and a small part distance represents only [illegible] river. Another indication of the country's area given was the fact that thirty-five million acres are open to the plough, and only need attention by the farmer to produce grain, vegetables and small fruits sufficient to support whatever population may occur in the future as a result of the work entailed in developing the other great natural resources. OLIVE THOMAS AS A "BABY VAMP"

Olive Thomas, the charming and vivacious Selznick star, will be seen in the first of her series of Selznick Pictures, "Upstairs and Down," as a delightful little "baby vamp." No man misses her flirtatious eye and each falls a victim to her entrancing smiles. To her, man is life and flirtations food. It makes no difference who the man is, as long as he is willing to fall a victim to her charms. She loves them all—fat, lean, tall and short.

She is a harmless little body, but a mischevious one. She is happiest when she is busy getting in or out of some scrape. She's a game little person, for no matter how big the risk, she'll take it if there's any fun in it.

For the "baby vamp," life is one merry, mad merry-go-round. She looks through rose-colored glasses and the sun is always shining. When trouble comes she merrily throws it over her shoulder with a shrug and a smile. Nothing can feaze her.

Olive Thomas with her gaity, vivacity and "pep" is particularly adapted for such a role. She gives the character life and feeling. The delightful story of the irresistible "baby vamp" can be seen on Jan. 5, 6, 7, at the Empire theatre. "Upstairs and Down" is distributed by Select Pictures Corporation.

MR. AND MRS. GABRIEL SWITZER CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Connections and Friends Gather Together in Honor of Esteemed Emily Couple.

On the 22nd of December, Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel wSitzer, celebrated their 50th anniversary of their marriage at their home, "The Maples" East Emily.

It was a beautiful day for the occasion and their brothers and sisters or representatives of the family, together with their sons and daughtres and grandchildren, and Rev. H. B. Hisrington, pastor of the Bethel church, and his wife, were there to do honor to a couple of Emily's most esteemed citizens.

Mr. Roy, photographer, of Peterborough, was present with his camera and secured some photographs of the guests and the worthy couple themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. Switzer have always taken the lead in everything pertaining to the welfare of the church and state, and the community in which they reside, and are staunch supporters of the Methodist Church.

Mr. Switzer held the office of superintendent of the Bethel Sunday School for 26 years.

300 GUESTS AT COMING-OUT BALL

MISS ROSAMOND HUYCKE HONORED AT MOST BRILLIANT SOCIAL FUNCTION

The elite of Peterborough, and from near and distant points in the province, to the number of over three hundred, were present at the coming-out ball for Miss Rosamond, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Huycke, given in the Conservatory of Music Hall New Year's eve. The spacious hall was prettily decorated with many colored streamers and banners, while the music supplied by Moher and Fitzgerald's orchestra of this city, offered irresistible arrtraction to lovers of the Terpsichorean art.

The occasion was one of the most brilliant social functions ever given in Peterborough, and offered the fullest measure of unalloyed pleasure for one and all. In keeping with the spirit of New Year's [illegible] of 1919 were bade farewell to a [illegible] a sailing in the air of tiny sailing colored ballons, a general exploding of bonbon crackers, together with a fascinating shower of confetti, which added novelty and merriment to an occasion which will live long in the memory of al guests present.

During the evening a nexceedingly delicate supper was served from Hooper's and no detail was lacking to assure the comfort, convenience and enjoyment of the guests.

GEORGE C. BUCK IS DEAD PIONEER OF PETERBORO' CO.

One of the old pioneers of Peterborough county died yesterday, in Toronto, in the person of Mr. George C. Buck. Born in Lindsay in the year 1832, he went to Toronto a half a century ago, and engaged in business as a dry goods merchant. The funeral will be held on Saturday, January 3, from the residence of his son, Dr. G. S. Buck, 1,266 College Street Toronto. He is survived by four sons and three daughters: Dr. G. S. Buck, of Toronto; Dr. Thos. Buck, Rochester; Gerald Buck, Philadelphia; James Buck, New York; Mrs. J. F. White; Dr. Kathleen Buck, Rochester; Josephine Buck, Buffalo.

MAYOR CHURCH RE-ELECTED

Wins For Sixth Term By A Plurality Of Nearly 5,000.

Toronto, Jan. 2.—After one of the most bitter contests in the history of the city, Mayor T. L. Church secured a sixth term of office by a vote of 25,080, as compared with 20,775 cast for his chief opponent, Controller McBride, giving him a plurality of 4,905. The most extraordinary feature of the contest is that the Mayor polled only 340 votes less than he polled in 1919, when defeated ex-Controller O'Neill by a plurality of 8,790. The Labor candidate, Mr. Ballantyne, only polled 6,612 votes, considerably less than had been anticipated. The total vote cast for the three men was 52,106, or 3,906 more than were cast last year, with the result that for the first time the Mayor's total is actually a minority of the total poll.

The man in jail doesn't have to dodge automobiles.

PRESENTED WITH EASY CHAIR AND ADDRESS

Mr. John McDonald, who has been for over 35 years, nightshed foreman for the C. P. R Company, has been superanuated as a reward for his long and faithful service, and presented with a handsome easy chair by his fellow employees. On Wednesday evening, Mr. McDonald was summoned to the freight office, where the presentation took place. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. W. S. Doods, agent, Mr. J. W. Byers, of the car service, made the presentation with the following address.

"In your life and mine there has been a good many milestones, some of which are frought with pleasant memories and some otherwise. You have reached a milestone today and the C. P. R. Company, for which you have worked so long and faithfully, considering that you have done your duty, are about to reward you with a retiring alowance.

This event brings to my memory other pleasant associations of the past, not only with myself and you, but with other employers who have come to this employment of the company since you and I were working together. Your fellow-employees do not wish to let this event pass without some recognition of the worth and esteem in which you have been held.

On behalf of the employers here present, and those who are unable to be present, I present you with this easy chair and wish you many years of life to enjoy a well-earned rest. In conclusion I extend the best wishes of the C. P. R. staff to you and Mrs. McDonald, for a happy new year.

Congratulations were extended by Mr. T. MacArthur, chief clerk, and Mr. J. Geeran, shed foreman.

Mr. McDonald who was completely taken by surprise and visibly over come with emotion, replied in a brief address, expressing his pleasure on the occasion and touching on the congenial relationship which had always existed among the employers of the C. P. R. went on to say that he would ever retain pleasant memories of his associations with that Company.

63 FEWER DEATHS DURING THE YEAR

NUMBER OF BIRTHS SLIGHTLY INCREASED WHILE MARRIAGES WERE NUMEROUS.

The vital statistics for the year show a decided decrease in the number of deaths over last year with an increase of two in the list of births.

	Births	Deaths	M'riages
1919	455	292	204
1918	457	356	190

The building permits for the year numbered 193 for a total of $196,368, while in 1918, 159 permits totalled $241,251.

For the Month.

	Births	Mariages	Deaths
December	44	22	25

There were seven building permits issued for the month with a total of $2,342.

A $150 stock of perfumery may look like thirty cents.

Somehow the memory of our habits seems to be bad.

Closest Mayoralty Contest in the History of the City—Unofficial Count Leaves it a Tie but When Officially Counted One More Was Found for Taylor—Entire Citizen's Committee Slate for Aldermen—Mrs. Kate Morris first Woman for Board of Education.

After what proved to be the closest municipal contest ever staged in this city, Ald. W. H. Taylor was declared elected mayor at noon today, after the official count. The vote stood McIntyre, 1480; Taylor, 1481.

The standing for the candidates for the council, to which the five highest were elected was as follows:

Gordon	2198
Copping	2037
Phelan	1621
Whitehouse	1598
Jones	1417
Sharp	985
Humber	887
Tuggey	732
Tedford	714
Garside	590

The election for Utilities Commission resulted in the election of E. Sisson to occupy the position vacated by Mr. T. F. Mathews.

Sisson	1169
Duffus	781
Bradburn	595
Edgar	224

For Board of Education four of the former members were re-elected with Mrs. Morris, and J. M. Greene was the highest defeated candidate and will, in all probability, be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. V. Eastwood. The vote was as follows:

Dr. Neal	1404
Worth	1260
Mrs Morris	1160
Cameron	1068
Patterson	795
Greene	760
Dr. Harvey	678
Morrison	585
Rogers	548
Bolwell	419

The Aladdin Company by-law resulted with 2602 for and 266 against it; majority 2336. 1252 votes were recorded for the Park by-law to 521 against it; majority 731.

Great Excitement.

Although the vote yesterday was not as large as might be desired, excitement ran high as the returns came in from the 22 polling sub-divisions. At first Taylor commenced to pile up a substantial majority, leading at one time by 25. Then, with one poll to hear from, he was leading by 35. This poll gave McIntyre a majority of 33, leaving Taylor still two in the lead. Then some corrections were phoned in, making it a tie vote after which Taylor lead by two, three two and one, the unoficial vote standing over night a tie. At noon today the city clerk, in company with the two candidates made the official count, which gave Taylor a majority of 1, which stands permanently.

No Laborers.

A fact that has been much commented upon last night and this morning was the fact that no regular labor candidate was elected to office. C. E. Sisson and Mrs. Morris were endorsed by labor, but are not claimed by [illegible] labor candidates.

The Vote.

AUTO DRIVER WAS FINED

H. Rosevear Drove Past a Standing Street Car.

In this morning's Police Court session Magistrate Dumble fined H. Rosevear $10.00 and costs, the total amounting to $13.85. Rosevear was summoned under the Motor Vehicle Act.

It appears that while driving an automobile on George street Rosevear passed a street car which had stopped to discharge and take on passengers thereby endangering the lives of passengers. With a few pointed remarks on the carelessness and reckless driving of some auto owners, the magistrate imposed a fine of $10.00 and costs.

RUSSELL V. COPPING
elected to the 192[illegible]

ANNUAL FUNCTION OF KING'S DAUGHTERS

One of the most splendidly successful and largely attended social events of the season took place last evening in the New Year's carnival at the Conservatory of Music Hall, given under the auspices of the King's Daughters. The entertainment given by this organization, which were suspended during the war and taken up again last year, have always been deservedly well patronised and generally successful, and none more so than the function [illegible].

Exquisitely decorated with holly and mistletoe in a manner which breathed the very essence of Christmas cheer, the hall presented a charming spectacle when the guests, over 230 in number, assembled, and commenced to trip the light fantastic with right good cheer on the splendidly waxed floor.

Moher and Fitzgerald as musicians of the evening excelled themselves on this occasion as regards excellence of interpretation, and variety of numbers, providing an excellent accompaniment to the poetry of motion. Serpentine paper, in varying colors, was thrown among the dancers [illegible] and presenting a scene of great festive. During the evening light refreshments were served.

CHRISTMAS TREE AT PROTESTANT HOME

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE KING PROVIDED MUSICAL PROGRAM THIS YEAR.

Mr. and Mrs. George King, choirmaster and soloist of Trinity Church, furnished music for the Christmas festival held at the Peterborough Protestant Home on the afternoon of Dec. 24th, assisted by Mrs. Greenslade.

Addresses were given by Rev. F. W. Malott and Mr. J. A. Aylmer, recitation by Marguerite Mason, song by Helen and Walter Collins.

Board of Directors wish to extend thanks to the following for donations to the Christmas treat given the inmates of the Home:—Miss C. Nixon, 1 dozen pair women's hose Cranahae Chapter I.O.D.E., 25 pair men's socks; Mr. D. H. Kerneghan, Christmas tree; Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, candy and oranges; Mrs. P. Barry, apples, candy and oranges; Campbell's Flour Mills Co., turkey, fruit, candy; Mr. J. M. Greene, 2 records for Edison; G. J. Jopling & Son, turkey; Dr. Greer, roast of beef; W. M. Hamilton, goose; W. H. Stock, bag of flour, Christmas cake, raisin loaves; Mr. Robert Fair, candy; Mr. George King, candy; Mr. M. A. Fitzgerald, crate oranges; Mrs. Stinson, 2 jars fruit; Mrs. R. Hall, mince pies; Mrs. Edgar Worth, 3 dozen oranges; Donations of money were received from Mrs. Hatrill, Mrs. Rodger, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Harvey, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. Waddell. Mr. Roy Powell kindly wired the Christmas tree and loaned a beautiful assortment of colored bulbs for the celebration.

HUNTERS COMPLAIN

A complaint has been made by some of the hunters and trappers that owing to the fact that so much poison has been set for fur-bearing animals, it is unsafe to let their dogs loose. They advance the claim that they have paid their license fees and that this setting of poisoned bait is depriving some of them of their livelihood. The use of poison who lost yesterday's mayoralty contest by one vote.

Closest Mayoralty Contest in the History of the City—Unofficial Count Leaves it a Tie but When Officially Counted One More Was Found for Taylor—Entire Citizen's Committee Slate for Aldermen—Mrs. Kate Morris first Woman for Board of Education.

After what proved to be the closest municipal contest ever staged in this city, Ald. W. H. Taylor was declared elected mayor at noon today, after the official count. The vote stood McIntyre, 1480; Taylor, 1481.

The standing for the candidates for the council, to which the five highest were elected was as follows:

Gordon	2198
Copping	2027
Phelan	1621
Whitehouse	1599
Jones	1417
Sharp	985
Humber	887
Tuggey	732
Tedford	714
Garside	590

The election for Utilities Commission resulted in the election of E. Sisson to occupy the position vacated by Mr. T. F. Mathews.

Sisson	1169
Duffus	781
Bradburn	596
Edgar	224

For Board of Education four of the former members were re-elected with Mrs. Morris, and J. M. Greene was the highest defeated candidate and will, in all probability, be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. V. Eastwood. The vote was as follows:

Dr. Neal	1404
Worth	1256
Mrs. Morris	1160
Cameron	1066
Patterson	786
Greene	760
Dr. Harvey	678
Morrison	585
Rogers	548
Bolwell	419

The Aladdin Company by-law resulted with 2602 for and 256 against it; majority 2346. 1362 votes were recorded for the Park by-law to 521 against it; majority 841.

Good Excitement.

Although the vote yesterday was not as large as might be desired, excitement ran high as the returns came in from the 22 polling-sub-divisions. At first Taylor commenced to pile up a substantial majority, leading at one time by 55. Then, with one poll to hear from, he was leading by 35. This poll gave McIntyre a majority of 33, leaving Taylor still two in the lead. Then some corrections were phoned in, making it a tie vote after which Taylor lead by two, three two and one, the unofficial vote standing over night a tie. At noon today the city clerk, in company with the two candidates made the official count, which gave Taylor a majority of 1, which stands permanently.

No Laborers.

A fact that has been much commented upon last night and this morning was the fact that no regular labor candidate was elected to office. E. E. Sisson and Mrs. Morris were endorsed by [illegible] of by [illegible]

300 GUESTS AT COMING-OUT BALL

The elite of Peterborough, and from near and distant points in the province, to the number of over three hundred, were present at the coming-out ball for Miss Rosamond, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Huycke, given in the Conservatory of Music Hall New Year's eve. The spacious hall was prettily decorated with many colored streamers and banners, while the music supplied by Moher and Fitzgerald's orchestra of this city, offered irresistible arrtraction to lovers of the Terpsichorean art.

The occasion was one of the most brilliant social functions ever given in Peterborough, and offered the fullest measure of unalloyed pleasure for one and all. In keeping with the spirit of New Year [illegible] of 1919 were [illegible] a sailing in the [illegible] tiny sailing colored balloons, a general exploding of bonbon crackers, together with a fascinating shower of confetti, which added novelty and merriment to an occasion which will live long in the memory of al guests present.

During the evening a nonexceedingly delicate supper was served from Hooper's and no detail was lacking to assure the comfort, convenience and enjoyment of the guests.

GEORGE C. BUCK IS DEAD PIONEER OF PETERBORO' CO.

One of the old pioneers of Peterborough county died yesterday, in Toronto, in the person of Mr. George C. Buck. Born in Lindsay in the year 1832, he went to Toronto a half a century ago, and engaged in business as a dry goods merchant. The funeral will be held on Saturday, January 3, from the residence of his son, Dr. G. S. Buck, 1266 College Street Toronto. He is survived by four sons and three daughters: Dr. G. S. Buck, of Toronto; Dr. Thos. Buck, Rochester; Gerald Buck, Philadelphia; James Buck, New York; Mrs. J. F. White; Dr. Kathleen Buck, Rochester; Josephine Buck, Buffalo.

MAYOR CHURCH RE-ELECTED

Wins For Sixth Term By A Plurality Of Nearly 5,000.

Toronto, Jan. 2.—After one of the most bitter contests in the history of the city, Mayor T. L. Church secured a sixth term of office by a vote of 25,660, as compared with 20,775 cast for his chief opponent, Controller McBride, giving him a plurality of 4,985. The most extraordinary feature of the contest is that the Mayor polled only 340 votes less than he polled in 1919, when defeated ex-Controller O'Neill by a plurality of 9,700. The Labor candidate, Mr. Ballantyne, only polled 6,612 votes, considerably less than had been anticipated. The total vote cast for the three men was 53,[illegible], or 3,304 more than were cast last year, with the result that for the first time the Mayor's total is actually a minority of the total poll.

The man in jail doesn't have to dodge automobiles.

PRESENTED WITH EASY CHAIR AND ADDRESS

Mr. John McDonald, who has been for over 36 years, nightshed foreman for the C. P. R Company, has been superanuated as a reward for his long and faithful service, and presented with a handsome easy chair by his fellow employees. On Wednesday evening, Mr. McDonald was summoned to the freight office, where the presentation took place. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. W. S. Doods, agent, Mr. J. W. Byers, of the car service, made the presentation with the following address.

In your life and mine there has been a good many milestones, some of which are frought with pleasant memories and some otherwise. You have reached a milestone today and the C. P. R Company, for which you have worked so long and faithfully, considering that you have done your duty, are about to reward you with a retiring alowance.

This event brings to my memory other pleasant associations of the past, not only with myself and you, but with other employers who have come to this employment of the company since you and I were working together. Your fellow-employees do not wish to let this event pass without some recognition of the worth and esteem in which you have been held.

On behalf of the employers here present, and those who are unable to be present, I present you with this easy chair and wish you many years of life to enjoy a well-earned rest. In conclusion I extend the best wishes of the C. P. R. staff to you and Mrs. McDonald, for a happy new year.

Congratulations were extended by Mr. T. MacArthur, chief clerk, and Mr. J. Geeran, shed foreman.

Mr. McDonald who was completely taken by surprise and visibly over come with emotion, replied in a brief address, expressing his pleasure on the occasion and touching on the congenial relationship which had always existed among the employers of the C. P. R. went on to say that he would ever retain pleasant memories of his associations with that Company.

AUTO DRIVER WAS FINED

H. Rosevear Drove Past a Standing Street Car.

In this morning's Police Court session Magistrate Dumble fined H. Rosevear $10.00 and costs, the total amounting to $13.85. Rosevear was summoned under the Motor Vehicle Act.

It appears that while driving an automobile on George street Rosevear passed a street car which had stopped to discharge and take on passengers, thereby endangering the lives of passengers. With a few pointed remarks on the carelessness and reckless driving of some auto owners, the magistrate imposed a fine of $10.00 and costs.

THE ALDERMANIC ELECTION.

IN ANY ELECTION in which there are two parties in the field victory depends not so much upon the numerical strength of each as upon the number who turn out to the polls and the extent to which the members of both parties hold together. The Labor men in the city, that is organized Labor, is in the minority, even though the working population may form a large percentage of the whole. The returns show that there was less than half the vote of the city polled yesterday. The same returns show that the support given the Labor candidates was not uniform as it appears to have been a year ago when four candidates were elected. Under all these circumstances there could be only one result—the Labor men failed to achieve a single triumph except in the election of two outsiders who went into the contest with the support of organized Labor pledged. It is possible, too, that the Labor men were over confident, rendered so by their success of a year ago and more recently in the Legislature election, and that they worked with less vigor, too many of them taking success for granted.

Labor, too, was up against the most active opposition it has yet encountered and was unprepared to meet the strategic move of that opposition to split the vote of the workingmen. That this was accomplished in a measure is shown by the election figures. But if Labor is in the minority in a straight contest, beyond all question it is the party that holds the balance of power in this city. Perhaps there was a well defined feeling in the community that the workingmen were intent on getting more than their proportionate share on the civic representation and this alienated sympathetic support which they would otherwise have received.

It was generally believed that the contest for the mayoralty would be close, but no one ever imagined that the race would result in a dead heat, a circumstance that is without precedent in the mayoralty history of Peterborough. Perhaps the official count today may break the deadlock and thus spare City Clerk Amstrong from the responsibility of giving the casting vote, a duty which no official cares to be placed under the necessity of performing.

Anyway the election is over. There is not a fair minded man in the city who is not ready to admit that valuable additions have been made to the City Council and in this contention, no reflection whatever is cast upon the defeated candidates. The men elected will work for the benefit of the city as a whole. No class has anything to fear, or it may be, specially to hope for. Three of the successful candidates, Messrs. Gordon Phelan and Jones, have had former experience on the Council. Aldermen-elect Copping and Whitehouse are young and successful business men. Some one has said that the happiest nation is the one that has no history. Sometimes the most fortunate and successful candidate is the man who has no public record. At all events three such—the two new aldermen and C. E. Sisson for the Utilities Commission—came through the contest yesterday with flying colors, the latter defeating three seasoned municipal veterans who have rendered the city faithful and intelligent service, both as aldermen and as mayors. The personnel of the new Council is well balanced and no citizen need have any misgivings. The city will see as capable our administration in 1920 as it has ever experienced. The new Council is well equipped to deal with the important questions that are certain to come before it.

THE NEW BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THERE IS LIKELY to be only one new member of the Board of Education this year, Mrs. Morris, who made such an excellent run in the election of yesterday, coming out as she did, third in the race. The wonder is not that a woman has been elected to such a position in Peterborough, but that such an event has been so long postponed in a modern city. One year ago, Mrs. Morris just failed of election, going into the contest without experience or an adequate organization. The hundreds who supported her at the polls yesterday, have faith in her ability to ably discharge the public duties which she has assumed. An element that has long been lacking the influence of a woman has now been introduced into the educational system of the city and that system will be placed on a higher standard than ever, high as it has been in the past. Mrs. Morris will always hold the honorable distinction of being the first woman elected to public office in Peterborough.

Dr. Neal has for the third time been elected and for the third time heads the polls. Trustees Worth, Cameron and Patterson are returned, a flattering endorsation of their services for the past two years, and a public approval of the work which they have undertaken toward the erection of a new school building in the city. There may be a particular demand for economy in the administration of the city affairs, but the majority of ratepayers are opposed to anything like parsimony in the school system. The education of the young must not be neglected. Peterborough stands second to none in the Dominion so far as educational affairs are concerned and this reputation runs no risks under the present personel of the Board. The members have shown they are in favor of increased salaries for the teachers, and in the light of yesterday's election results, this policy has been stamped with public approval.

There is a vacancy on the Board due to the resignation of Mr. Vincent Eastwood, who was appointed when Mr. G. N. Gordon voluntarily retired from the Board. It was contrary to the statute to fill such a vacancy in the election yesterday, but the new Board should have no difficulty in making their appointment. If long established precedence is followed, the choice will fall upon Mr. J. M. Greene, the former member who was defeated yesterday. It is true, that this precedent was ignored when Mr. Gordon resigned. Mrs. Morris was not appointed at that time as so many felt that she should be. It was held by the then sitting members, with the single exception of Trustee Worth that the precedent did not hold good in the case of a woman, who had never sat as a member. Mrs. Morris has now reached the Board by the regular method of election and is likely to insist now, as she did when her own interests were involved, that the usual custom be adopted in filling the present vacancy. In this way she can heap coals of fire upon the men who opposed her when she had a chance to serve a administrative associate.

THE NEW EMBARGO ON LIQUOR IMPORTS.

ON THE SIXTEENTH of this month the United States passes under a drastic Federal prohibition law and after that date none of the liquor in that country that may be left in stock can be moved even from one part to another within the national borders. The American distillers and beermen had arranged to store large quantities of their products in Canada, shipping it here under bond as soon as the Canadian embargo on imports ceased of effect, and before their own country went dry. The liquor was to be stored here and disposed of as occasion arose.

These plans, however, have been frustrated by a timely order-in-Council which forbids the importation of liquors into Canada from any outside country for a period of thirty days. Although the order is general it is the United States that is most directly affected. At this expiration of thirty days the order will no longer be necessary, but the object which it has in view will be attained by the operation of the American prohibition law.

The order-in-Council is likely to meet with general approval. There would be something grimly inconsistent in conditions that would permit a dry province like Ontario from being made a gigantic storehouse for millions of gallons of American liquor that had been declared contraband in that country.

A CRIMINAL FOLLY.

(The Farmers' Sun.)

EXPENDITURE upon the British navy prior to the war was a little over two hundred and fifty million dollars per annum. The estimates presented the other day rise to more than seven hundred and eighty-five millions. The Germany navy is at the bottom of the sea. Russia is prostrate. France and Spain, both at one time Britain's "traditional enemies," are powerless for aggression. Italy is bankrupt. Why, then, this enormous increase in British naval expenditure? Against what nation is it aimed? And why should Canada, burdened with two billions of war debt, be asked to add further to the foolish and criminal outlay?

U. S. CANNOT STORE LIQUOR IN CANADA

To prevent United States manufacturers using Canada as a storage house for liquor stocks which they wish afterwards to re-export without contributing to Canadian revenue, new orders in Council were passed to forbid for thirty days the importation in bond of liquor from the United States or any other country.

This is to prevent warehousing in bond of liquor between January 1, when Canadian import restrictions and lifted, and January 17, the date after which shipment of liquor in the United States becomes illegal. Any liquor rushed into Canada in January for re-export must pay Canadian customs dues. After that date the privilege of importing in bond will be granted again, with certain restrictions to those who wish to secure stocks from Great Britain, France and other liquor-producing countries. Even now liquors passing from outside the Dominion from one point in the United States through Canada to another point in the United States can do so in bond, but the bonding warehouse privilege is prohibited. Canadians can, however, import American liquors for private use in bottles by paying the duty immediately on its arrival at the Canadian port of entry. If imported in bulk no consignment can be less than one hundred gallons, wine measure.

RUMORS DISPOSED OF

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 31.—The rumor that large quantities of liquor were held in the border counties of Quebec along the Ottawa River, for shipment into Ontario, was disposed of when a careful investigation showed all the railway yards without shipments of whiskey. Ottawa County and Hull are in the prohibition areas and the official vendors are the only ones who can obtain liquor in those districts.

CANADA'S TRADE FOR YEAR BREAKS RECORD

OVER TWO BILLION DOLLARS IS THE SHOWING MADE FOR 1919.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 31.—Trade figures for the Dominion for the year closing today will show the total trade of approximately two billion three hundred and fifty million dollars. The figure it is expected will not differ materially from last year because for the first eight months of the fiscal year ending with November our trade was less than this year's in the same period last year by only about sixteen million dollars.

Big Christmas Receipts.

Total customs revenue for Dominion for this year amounted to more than one hundred and sixty-nine million dollars, or an increase of over fourteen million over last year, an increase is also shown for the first nine months of the fiscal year while the month of December alone shows an increase of $3,903,131.

To the Ratepayers of Otonabee

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the request of a large number of ratepayers, I have consented to accept nomination as Councillor for the current year.

Although a new man in the field of contestants, I am confident that, if elected, I can do good work for our township in the way of advocating and supporting only such measures as will assure economy with efficiency in all municipal business. My hope in election is to prove worthy of your confidence by safeguarding and advancing the interests of the township as a whole.

With best wishes to all for the happiest and most prosperous New Year, ever.

Yours faithfully,

The Borrowing Neighbor

By MARVIN DRAKE WHARTON

"Our new neighbors been over today?" asked Jerome Barton of his wife.

"Yes, twice," replied his rather reserved and uncommunicative helpmeet, and her lips met close and she declined to further discuss the subject.

Martha Barton was not so reticent, however, with her widowed sister who lived with them. When Mrs. Dysart propounded the same query, adding: "And what did they come over for this time?" Mrs. Barton replied:

"Why, it was the daughter who came—she had run out of mustard."

"Borrowing again, as usual? Tell you, Martha, to my way of thinking those Thorpes are becoming a nuisance."

"Don't be uncharitable, Anna," chided Mrs. Barton gently. "I like the girl—she is so pretty and modest. I fancy her mother is a confirmed invalid. The father seems to be away in the city most of the time. I understand he has a law suit there, and he can't be earning anything, for they live very poorly."

"They must be!" observed Mrs. Dysart in her snappy, censorious way. "To my certain knowledge they have been over here on a borrowing expedition every day since they moved here a week ago."

"Perhaps," admitted Mr. Barton quietly, "I imagine they have few supplies and little money. I told the girl Crystal that I would get over to call on her mother soon as my week's baking was done."

"And cart over half of it, I suppose—your usual way!"

"Perhaps," again replied Mrs. Barton. She knew how to do things gracefully and she did not make her neighbors feel under obligations when she went over to the Thorpe home two days later, and told how inconvenient it always was when a person moved, how difficult to become familiar with a new routine. She carried with her a freshly baked loaf and some cookies and doughnuts wrapped up in a towel. Then as she saw how pale and ill Mrs. Thorpe looked, she abruptly recalled that everything that her daughter had borrowed had been articles for that mother's comfort.

Mrs. Thorpe sent her little son to Mrs. Barton before the week was out, asking her to come and see her. The daughter was absent and the mother had seized the occasion to see Mrs. Barton alone. With tears in her eyes she asked her to loan her two dollars until her husband returned, Saturday night. It meant a depletion of hoarded pin money of light volume, but with entire cheerfulness the kind-hearted Mrs. Barton contributed the amount asked for.

"We are in a very unfortunate condition," Mrs. Thorpe confessed, "but it can't last long. My husband for two years has been prosecuting a law suit he must certainly win, and a decision of the judge is expected any day now.

Mrs. Barton noticed Mr. Thorpe, a serious faced, dignified appearing old man, about the place over Sunday, and the next day the two dollars was returned with thanks. That week Adrian Barton, the son, came home from the city on his vacation. He had been working there for nearly a year and was not entirely satisfied with his success. His great ambition was to start in business for himself in a small way in automobile supplies and repairs, a line in which he was proficient, but his father could not spare the capital required, even for a limited experiment.

Naturally Adrian Barton met Crystal Thorpe, and quite as naturally they became mutually attracted. It was a royal week for the city tired young man, roving in the woods, fishing, boating, and he and "the neighbor's girl," as Mr. Barton designated Crystal, shared in these enjoyments. Mrs. Thorpe had again drawn upon her new friend for a few dollars, had been accomodated, and Mrs. Barton, learning the full details of the suit at law, became greatly interested. In fact, one day when Mrs. Thorpe told of a small amount of final fees needed in the suit her husband must pay, Mrs. Barton advanced the same.

Adrian met Mr. Thorpe when he returned to the city and called upon him. Adrian was free and open to confess to the father of Crystal that he had fallen in love with his daughter. These two became close friends and one day both returned unexpectedly home.

It was to bring glad news. The suit at law had been decided in the favor of Mr. Thorpe, a large amount being awarded him. His first move was to summon Mrs. Barton to his home.

"You have been a true friend," he said. "We have been troublesome borrowers, but now I am in the position of the lender. Dear madam, and true woman that you are, your son will tell you that he and I start in business next week as partners, with ample capital to insure success in our undertaking."

"And I hope that you will feel as happy as ourselves," added Mrs. Thorpe, "in knowing that your son and our daughter are engaged."

"Why! they've wound up by borrowing your son!" observed Mrs. Dysart, upon hearing the news, but when Adrian and Crystal settled down a year later directly between the two homes, Mrs. Barton felt that her bread cast upon the waters had returned to her many fold.

CANDIDATES MUST "DOLL UP"

Will Have to Look Their Prettiest If They Expect to Find Favor With Woman Voters.

It is not necessary to go away from home to find either the latest or best, regardless of what is wanted. Consider eyebrow arching, for instance. A local beauty salon announces to the public that it does eyebrow arching, and explains that this operation "gives the eyes a deep, soulful expression with everlasting charm." Eyebrow arching advice for woman electors is more or less superfluous. It is to the men, and more especially to the men who aspire to public office, that this beauty hint is directed.

Throughout the country women are getting the ballot on equal terms with men. Women cannot vote in Indiana, but they are going to have that privilege before long. So many women have been enfranchised that they now hold the balance of power in this nation. So the woman vote will be more and more a real political problem to the candidate.

Some electors care little for the personal appearance of candidates, but most of them prefer a man of character, one who at least is presentable. Candidates in the future will have to bear this in mind. It will be well, in order to match rival candidates, for each to have a good tailor and an advisory committee on the proper shade of cravats. Immaculate linen will have to be in every candidate's platform. The high arched eyebrow will be even more essential to candidates than to the average woman. Doubtless those who have political aspirations will begin early, because eyebrow training takes time.—Indianapolis News.

SAID ICE CREAM "BURNED"

Think of It, French Kiddies Had to Be Coaxed to Partake of Strange Delicacy!

Striking proof of the well-known fact that extreme heat and extreme cold have the same physical properties was recently furnished by "Jugger" Crane, the scientist-philosopher of Company B, —th engineers, when he fed some American ice cream to a group of French children, says the Spiker.

The inhabitants of the French farmhouses near the camp had never seen any ice cream until "Jugger" took them over a mess kit full of the great American delicacy.

The children gathered around expectantly. The first one took a spoonful and at once began to weep and declare that the strange food was hot.

The others who had watched rather horror stricken the fate of the first became convinced that it was some sort of white fire and would have nothing to do with the cream.

The mother had to eat virtually all the cream in order to induce them to believe it was cold rather than hot and that when not taken too fast, was good to eat. Eventually, the children ate the last of the dish.

But they partook of it gingerly, evidently greatly mystified that anything which first seemed hot, then cold, could be good to eat.

Learns of the War.

A woman was discovered in this city yesterday who has lived all through the great war and did not know that it was going on. She is an aged woman of German birth. Her age kept her son from telling her about the horrors of the invasion of Belgium and of the sinking of the Lusitania. He didn't wish her to worry and fret. But the day of the peace demonstration made it impossible to keep silent. The old lady heard the whistles blowing and the crowds cheering and she demanded to know what it was all about. When they told her she raised her hands in a gesture of imprecation and said: "Oh, if only I could get these two hands on the kaiser!" The interesting part of her story is that her husband was a German soldier. The gray uniform was so detested by him that he made his wife, before his death, promise that she would come to America so that none of their sons ever would be compelled to wear the livery of the kaiser.—New York Sun.

Victim of Popular Song.

Lawrence Kellie tells of an amusing experience he had over the song, "Douglas Gordon." He was introduced one evening to a gentleman whose name he did not catch. "I have no desire to meet you, Mr. Kellie," said the stranger. Kellie naturally looked a little astonished, but said nothing. "In fact," the other went on, "I hate the very sound of your name. For months past my mother has been worried by the receipt of telegrams and letters of condolence on my behalf, and the thing is beginning to get monotonous." "I'm sorry," said Kellie, "but what's that got to do with me?" "Well, I'll tell you," said the other. "My name's Douglas Gordon, and everybody imagines that your confounded song refers to me." And with that he turned on his heel and went.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

Total fees collected by t[illegible] way Department of [illegible] motor veh[illegible]ar this year is $3,383,81[illegible].

WHEN YOU SEE A TESTIMONIAL

from a person you do not know, pay no attention to it. When you see a testimonial from people in your own locality and whom you do know, if you have any doubt, go and ask them. This should convince you

We cannot impress too strongly upon the people of Canada that there are no Cure-a-Cold Tablets just like Dr. Norvall's. There are no Tablets just as good as Dr. Norvall's. Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets are in a class by themselves

In order to convince you of this we have interviewed the druggists of the City of Peterborough, and as they are all selling patent medicines and preparations of known value, they are in a position to judge the merits of Dr. Novall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets.

DR. NORVALL'S CURE-A-COLD TABLETS

are recommended to relieve Colds, Attacks of Lagrippe, and Constipation.

THE FOLLOWING PETERBOROUGH DRUGGISTS TESTIFY:

The Nugent Drug Co. states;—"We recommend Dr. Norvall's preparations because we are firmly convinced they are the best on the Canadian market"

Mr. William Madill, Druggist, says;—"We have a steady and increasing sale for Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, and we are pleased to state that our customers are pleased with the results.

James Lynch, Druggist,:—"We recommend Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets because we get better results from them than any others we keep in stock."

The Warne Drug Co. :—"We have a large sale of Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, and we have no hesitation in recommending them to our customers."

Mr. E. Payne, Druggist, says:—"Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets are one of the best preparations we keep in stock, and our customers speak highly of them."

Mr. Vincent Sullivan, Druggist, says:—"We sell a large number of Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, and a customer who once tries them will have no other kind in future

Mr. W. J. Kent, Druggist, states :—We recommend Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, because we consider it our duty to recommend what will give the best results.

Mr. C. M. Moncur, Druggist, says:—"In colds and lagrippe I think they have no equal.

Tanner Drug Co., Lakefield, says:—they have sold Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets for some time and know their customers are well satisfied with the results.

A Double Wedding

By RALPH HAMILTON.

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

It was not the fault of Milly, for there was a sharp curve at the street corner and she could not very well discern that a noiseless automobile was rounding the circle. All her attention was bestowed upon herself, and with a reason. She had just arrived on the train from her village home to visit a cousin in the city. She was on the way to her now. There had been a heavy rain earlier in the day and the roadway was wet and slippery and its pot holes were full of muddy water and slime.

In her neat-fitting new dress, dazzling white shoes and stockings and her dainty hat, Milly was about as fair a sight to view as one would meet in a day's journey. She suggested just what she was—a lovely country flower in budding bloom. Her sparkling eyes and joyous face told that every motion she made responded to a happy heart. A proud one, too, for this was the first real full outfit, all new, that Milly had ever possessed. It represented her berry money of a whole season.

A little frown of dismay hovered above the charmingly-dimpled cheeks as Milly paused at the curb and surveyed the forbidding roadway. Then her eyes picked out a possible carefully selected tip-toe route which might land her across without soiling her spotless attire.

"Toot-toot!"

With a quiver and a shiver, Milly drew back, but too late. Gracefully the warning automobile rounded the curve. Milly was out of all danger in a [illegible], and the front wheel of the machine landed in a deep rut.

"Splash!"

In consternation Milly glanced down, first rubbing from her face the grimy water that had splattered up. Her slippers were dotted with specks and splotches of mud. One stocking had been deluged. The front of her dress was streaked and spangled. It was like a reeking brush full of black paint thrown at a fair canvas and blotting out all its beauty in a flash. Milly tottered across the sidewalk, sank to a doorstep and the tears fell like rain.

Where now the joy of meeting and surprising her cousin, promenading along a real city street?

The chauffeur of the stylish automobile had come to a halt at a sharp word from a young man in the rear seat. Beside him was a lady older than himself, but resembling him and evidently his sister. The former opened the auto door and started toward the forlorn little victim of the mishap. At once the lady followed him.

"My dear child," spoke Helena Bland, placing a compassionate hand on the shoulder of Milly, "this is indeed dreadful! Such a pretty dress! But we will soon remedy the damage we have wrought. Help her to the auto, Dayton, get us home at once."

"Oh, it was not your fault, miss! You see, I am not used to the city," uttered Milly, brokenly and ingenuously. So dismal was her plight in her own estimation, however, that she was all absorbed in it and was in the automobile before she realized it, and Miss Bland was wiping the spots from her pretty face with her handkerchief, while her brother wondered that no such artless wild rose face had come into his life before.

Milly was charmed with the stately but warm-hearted Helena Bland, who took her to her room at her sumptuous home and called in the services of maid and laundress to make Milly almost presentable again.

"You will do very well dear, until morning," Miss Bland assured her. "Then I shall call for you and we will duplicate your damaged outfit from top to toe."

"Oh, indeed. No, no," answered Milly impetuously. "Why, I can whiten the slippers and unless you look close you can hardly notice the splotches on the dress. You have been too kind already," but Miss Bland not only took Milly to her cousin's home in the automobile, but called next morning and showed her a shopping experience that filled her unsophisticated little heart with delight.

Milly was seated in Miss Bland's boudoir when for the first time she observed a framed photograph.

"Why, Miss Bland!" she exclaimed. "I know who that is?"

Miss Bland uttered a gasp and turned pale. "A fancied resemblance, dear, I think," she murmured in an unsteady tone.

"Oh, no—no!" insisted Milly. "I have seen him often. He is the manager of the coal mine down our way. He does not go around much, but he plays the organ at the church. Oh, it is Alden Renfrew, surely!"

The lady held to a chair for support. She questioned Milly closely. There was awakened in her soul hope, for two years previous a favored suitor, Alden Renfrew, had lost his fortune in a day, had felt himself no match for the peerless woman he loved, and had gone away to lose himself in the great world outside.

Helena Bland loved him so dearly that within a month they were brought together again. Dayton Bland was so captivated with Milly that he asked her to join him in a double wedding.

Durable Male Beauty.

One reason why a man doesn't look into a mirror as often as a woman does is because he has more confidence in the durability of his beauty.—Galveston News.

Passive Resister, Perhaps.

A few months ago Jeffersonville received some new city cars which excited much admiration. They are fitted with all the newest devices, safety doors that will not open until the car stops and that will not let the car start again until they are closed, pay-as-you-enter arrangements and so forth. But pride had a fall a few nights ago when one of these nice new city cars tried to buck a small automobile of a make of widely known repute, and supposed to be as addicted to the way of peace as the man whose name they bear. The automobile was standing perfectly quiet—just like "tar baby"—and "not sayin' nuffin," when the car bucked it. When the fracas was over, the auto had a slight limp in its rear parts, but the city car was derailed by the impact. Honors were given the gasoline vehicle by the police.—Indianapolis News.

Coal Production In Canada.

Nova Scotia led in coal production, with 6,324,684 tons, or a little more than three-sevenths of the total output. Alberta was second with 4,723,139 tons.

Sense of Speed.

W. P. Beazell says in an article in a New York paper, telling some of his flying experiences: "Very little sense of speed comes to one in the air. There is, of course, the tremendous rush of air past one's face, but a whirling propeller will give that before one has left the ground. There are no landmarks in the air, and it is by landmarks that we measure the speed of trains and automobiles, for instance. The earth is so far below that it seems to be passing at about the rapidity of a horse car. After a time the landlubber begins to realize that what he was regarding as suburban plots are really farms, that the fish ponds are town reservoirs, that the brooks are rivers, and that by holding out his hand he can blot from view a county. When that happens he begins to get a proper perspective of himself."

OUR COAL SHORTAGE

IMPORTANCE OF POSSIBILITIES OF PULVERIZED COAL.

Mr. White Predicts That at Future Date, a Combination of Adverse Conditions Will Precipitate a Serious Coal Famine in Canada—Important Measures Advocated.

In view of the importance of the possibilities of pulverized fuel, regarding which the Canadian Commission of Conservation issued a pamphlet, the Canadian News Office recently sought the views of James White, one of the best informed men on matters affecting Canada. Mr. White is permanent head of the Commission of Conservation whilst he is also chairman of the Advisory Council on Wild Life Protection. Before assuming his present duties Mr. White was chief geographer of the Department of the Interior.

In the course of his statement Mr. White said: "The fuel problem in Ontario and the well-settled portion of Quebec is one of the most important questions that Canada is facing at the present time. The Commission of Conservation, through its experts, has given attention to this important subject. In the autumn of 1910, nine months after the organization of the commission, our consulting engineer, Mr. A. V. White, predicted that, at some future date, a combination of adverse conditions would precipitate a coal shortage in central Canada. In 1910, this prediction was regarded as unjustifiably pessimistic, but "heatless Mondays" and similar measures in the winter of 1917-18 demonstrated the narrow margin upon which we were operating. At that time we were at war and our citizens accepted such things as part of the winning of the war, but now that peace has been restored, they will not accept them in the same spirit.

"The question, therefore, is," says Mr. White, "What can we do to abate or avoid the inconveniences and hardships of a coal shortage, which may involve anything from economy of fuel to conditions inimical to human life? We are advocating several measures to combat or avoid the detrimental results of such shortage. The two more important measures advocated are: (1) Greater utilization of our water powers, and (2) the more efficient use of coal, whether domestic or imported. We have strongly advocated the utilization of the water powers of the St. Lawrence to generate electric energy, this energy to be used to replace the coal used for the generation of power for manufactories of Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec. This hydro-electric energy will replace coal that we are now purchasing from the United States, and will assist in reducing the balance of trade that is, at present, running so heavily against us.

"Coal may be more efficiently utilized in a number of ways. It may be used as pulverized fuel or converted into carbo-coal or retort coke or into carbonized briquettes, the last-named process being applicable to lignite.

Pulverized coal permits the utilization of small coal, anthracite culm, and bituminous screenings and inferior grades of coal can be mixed with better grades. Notable economies have been obtained where it has replaced other fuel, and better distribution of heat has been obtained. As it is ground to extreme fineness and dried, and is blown into the furnace, it burns like a gas, the flame resembling an oil or gas flame. Mr. W. G. Wilcox has summed it by saying that utilizing it in this way, "we have changed entirely the characteristics of coal as commonly known, and pulverized coal affords a combustion that is hundreds of times faster than when burning lump coal.

"As each particle of pulverized fuel is surrounded by air, it undergoes almost instantaneous combustion. As the fuel approximates to a gas, an excess of 20 per cent. of air is possible as compared with 50 to 200 per cent. in the case of furnaces burning solid coal; the temperature of combustion is, therefore, higher. The entire combustible content of the coal can be burned, thereby effecting economies not obtainable even with high grade coals burned under favorable conditions.

"The numerous valuable by-products derivable from coal can only be reclaimed by means of distillation and all conservationists hope that, ultimately, no coal will be consumed in the raw state, but they also recognise that this goal is not, at present, obtainable. We may look forward to the day when all important industrial establishments requiring power or heat will be supplied with electric energy or coal gas from superpower stations, whether the electric energy be generated from water power or from coal provinces such as Alberta or British Columbia, which contain great resources of this valuable mineral.

"Pulverized fuel will play a very important part as a transition stage between the present methods of utilizing coal and the desideratum to which we look forward. It is not improbable that it will provide an economical method of using the by-product, coke, produced in the superpower plants to which I have referred."

In conclusion Mr. White stated that "at the present time, the nickel and copper smelters at Copper Cliff Ontario, the British Columbia Sugar Refinery at Vancouver, and all the Canada Cement Company's plants with the exception of the Calgary plant, which uses natural gas, are using pulverized coal. It is estimated that 12,000,000 tons of coal per annum is being pulverized in Canada and the United States, which demonstrates the economic importance of this method of utilizing coal."

COULDN'T WORK FOR 8 MONTHS

SPENT FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS SEEKING HEALTH—TANLAC RESTORES HIM.

"I consider my first bottle of Tanlac has been worth all of one hundred dollars to me," declared Dan McLean, of 335 Esplenade Street, Sydney, Nova Scotia, while in Turnbull's Drug store for more of the medicine recently. Mr. McLean has been following the carpenter's trade for the past farty years. He has lived in Sydney for twenty years and is well known.

"On the 15th of last September," he continued, "I was taken down with the 'flu' and was never able to get anything to put me on my feet until I found Tanlac. I was left so weak that I could not hit a lick of work for more than eight months and this meant a loss of from $120 to $180 a month to me, for that is what I was making before getting down. I also paid out $400 for treatment and medicine trying to get my health back, so you can see what that spell of 'flu' cost me. I could not walk from town to my room without stopping several times on the way to rest and after the trip I would puff like a steam engine.

"Seeing by the papers that Tanlac was helping so many others who were in a run-down condition, and thinking it might help me to get on my feet, I bought a bottle. Well, it may sound exaggerated but it's the turth, after taking my fourth dose of Tanlac I could tell it was what I needed and was going to do the work, and I have been gaining ground ever since. Why, I never ate more than fifty cents worth of food a week before I got Tanlac, but now I want to eat all the time and no matter what kind of food is set before me, I enjoy it. I have just finished my first bottle of Tanlac and I am feeling well enough already to go back to work. Tanlac beats anything I have ever seen or heard about it; it is no more like other medicines I have used than day is like night. Before taking it my nerves were so shattered that I could never get a good night's sleep, but now I sleep like a log. I also had the worst kind of headaches, but they have been broken up entirely. Tanlac is simply making a new man of me and I honestly believe it's the best medicine in the world and anyone who gives it a trial will be convinced.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Comma Once "Killed" a Bishop.

A Kent (England) urban council, it is believed, has about reached the limit of "war economy" by forbidding the use of punctuation marks in all official documents, with the result that reports of its proceedings are published without even a comma. But the absence of punctuation may prove perilous. Hill 70, on the western front, was "taken" by a missing comma. Worse still, a bishop, for want of a comma, was temporarily killed. The present bishop of Bath and Wells, when he held the see of Adelaide, found what he thought was a dead sea serpent near Coffin bay, at a time when an influenza epidemic raged in that district. He was pardonably proud of the "discovery," which was wired to England in a portmanteau telegram which ran: "Influenza prevalent numerous deaths Bishop Adelaide found dead sea serpent 60 feet Coffin bay." A news agency thought the last six words a separate message, and announced the death of the bishop.

After Thirty-Four Years.

A Bath man has just received dividend checks from some shares of a silver mine which he bought 34 years ago and had forgotten all about. A friend who remembered the purchase told him of a notice in some paper that the mine was about to pay its first dividend and he began to cut coupons.—Grit.

"Life-Plant."

There is a creeping moss found in Jamaica called the "life-plant." It is believed to be indestructible by any means except immersion in boiling water or the application of a red-hot iron. It may be cut up and divided in any manner, and the smallest shreds will throw out roots, grow and bud.

Developing Pulp Industry.

An important movement for the further development of the pulp and paper industry in Canada will be started in the Province of Quebec shortly. The manufacture of pulp and paper is now one of the greatest industries of Canada, the daily output of paper in this country being 3,200 tons. With the erection of the new plant a new town will spring into existence. The site is about three or four miles east of Chicoutimi and the town will be called Saguenay.

Right vs. Might.

"Why did you turn out for that truck? According to the traffic rules you had the right of way."

"Yes," answered Mr. Chuggins, patiently. "But the truck had the right of weight."

Increase in Crime.

A considerable increase in crime throughout the Dominion is shown by the blue book dealing with criminal statistics for the year 1918, just issued from the office of the Dominion Statician. According to the returns there were during the year 21,747 charges and 17,370 convictions for indictable offences in the several provinces, as compared with 19,559 charges and 15,559 convictions the year before, being an increase of 2,293, or nearly 12 per cent. for charges, and an increase of 1,811, or slightly over 11½ per cent. for convictions during the year. The percentage of acquittals ran from ½ per cent. in Prince Edward Island to over 27 per cent. in Nova Scotia.

MAYOR-ELECT'S THANKS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I take this means of expressing sincerest thanks for my election yesterday as Mayor of Peterborough City.

I also ask all who in any way contributed to my election, either by their support or influence, to accept my warmest appreciation of their efforts on my behalf.

To al citizens alike, I offer the assurance that my whole aim as this City's Chief Magistrate, will be to conserve and advance the best interests of this community by a policy of equal consideration for each and every class.

That the New Year may be one of happiness and prosperity for everybody, is my earnest wish.

Yours very faithfully,

W. H. TAYLOR.

To The Electors:

Permit me to thank the electorate for the very generous support they accorded me in yesterday's election. While it appears that I have been defeated by a minimum majority of one vote a recount might change the issue. I have not decided whether I will take this course. Should I accept the issue as it now stands, I will retrie from public life, believing that I have endeavored to serve the city to the best of my ability. I have had thet co-operation of a host of friends whom I desire to thank for their help and support.

A. A. McINTYRE.

"Fish Meal" for Cattle.

On the shores of the North sea there has recently been started a factory for the manufacture of what has proven to be a very satisfactory food for live stock from the refuse of a fish-packing plant. A "fish meal" is turned out which contains 55 per cent of albumen and 12 per cent of fat. It is eaten by swine and some cattle accept it readily. Besides making use of a refuse, it releases much grain otherwise demanded for food by these animals.

Ten Years a Long Time.

"Why is Wombat hustling so strenuously? I thought he retired with enough to live on."

"It looked like enough to live on—ten years ago."—Judge.

MR. DUFFUS' CARD OF THANKS

To The Electors Of The City Of Peterborough.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I desire to express my sincere appreciation to all those who supported my candidature yesterday for Utilities Commission, especially to the ladies who were inconvenienced so much on account of the cold weather. I also thank those who so kindly volunteered their assistance. It was a clean gentlemanly contest and I have no regrets except for those who assisted in vain.

I offer my most hearty congratulations to the newly elected City Officials and hope that all citizens will lend their assistance, in every way possible to further the interests of the City in all its departments.

Assuring you of my very best wishes and hearty co-operation, I am

Very Sincerely yours

JOS. J. DUFFUS

The truth is all right, but so many people are ashamed to tell it.

How many people do you know—who would cause their neighbors to shed tears if they moved away?

Even a deaf man seldom overlooks an invitation to take something.

THANKS FROM REEVE McINTOSH

To The Electors Of North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Please accept my heartiest appreciation of your influence and votes which secured my re-election as Reeve of this township.

My thanks are also due especially to those ladies and gentlemen who loyally rallied in support of my candidature, and by their earnest work contributed largely to my election.

With you always in the best interests of all, believe me to remain

Yours faithfully

J. B. McINTOSH.

Thanks To The Electors

I wish to thank most heartily the electors of the city of Peterborough for returning me to the City Council as an alderman by such a handsome vote.

I appreciate this more than I [illegible] say, and I will endeavor to [illegible] appreciation by giving the best service that I am capable of to the city during my term of office.

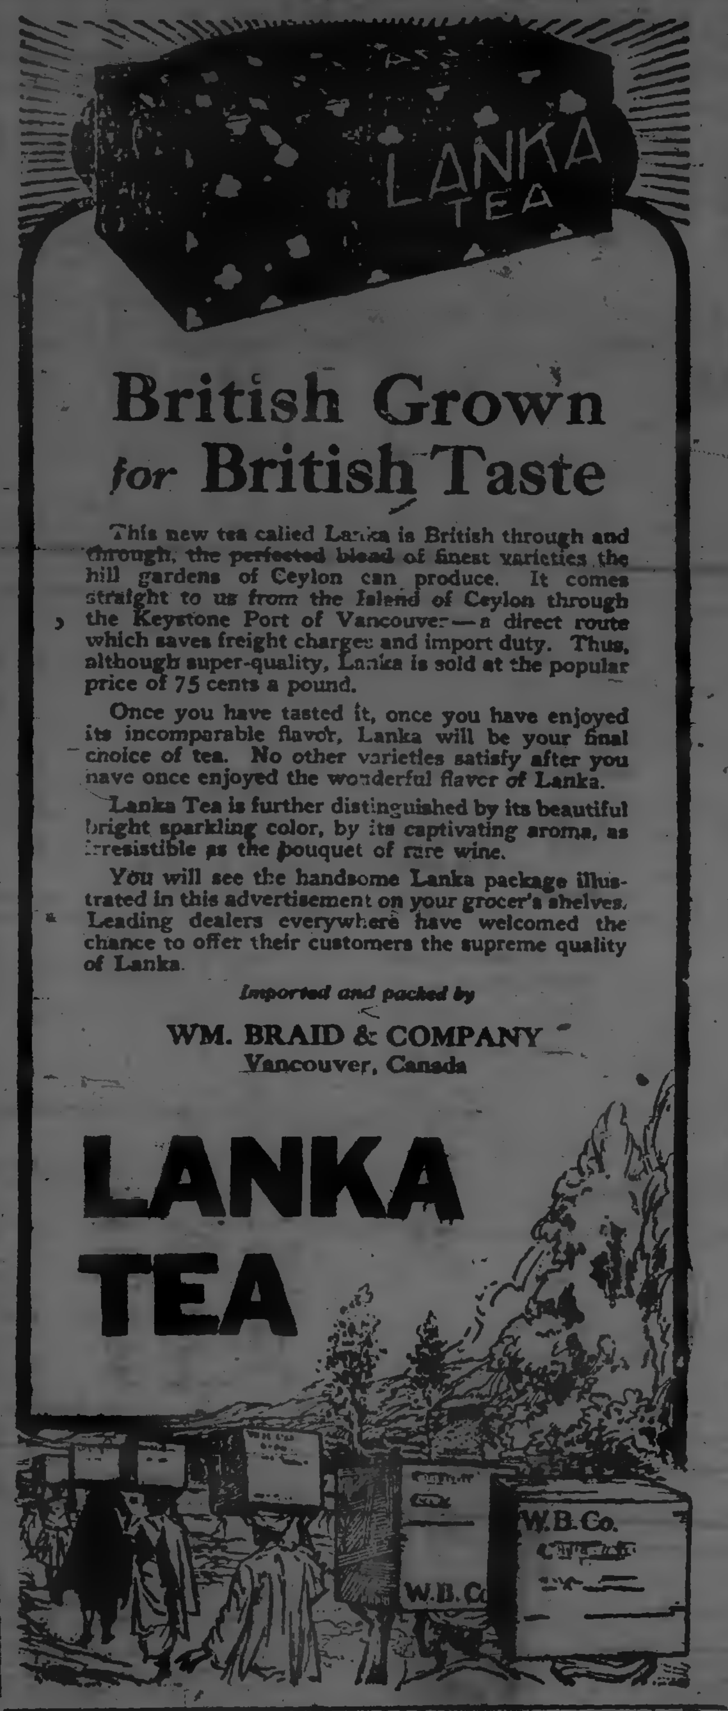
"You win, mother," chortled the small son of the family. "You win You said he'd make a pig of himself."



British Grown for British Taste

This new tea called Lanka is British through and through, the perfected blend of finest varieties the hill gardens of Ceylon can produce. It comes straight to us from the Island of Ceylon through the Keystone Port of Vancouver—a direct route which saves freight charges and import duty. Thus, although super-quality, Lanka is sold at the popular price of 75 cents a pound.

Once you have tasted it, once you have enjoyed its incomparable flavor, Lanka will be your final choice of tea. No other varieties satisfy after you have once enjoyed the wonderful flaver of Lanka.

Lanka Tea is further distinguished by its beautiful bright sparkling color, by its captivating aroma, as irresistible as the bouquet of rare wine.

You will see the handsome Lanka package illustrated in this advertisement on your grocer's shelves. Leading dealers everywhere have welcomed the chance to offer their customers the supreme quality of Lanka.

LANKA TEA

"Miss Clara Barton, Heaven."

In many different ways come messages and tokens of appreciation from the soldiers to these Red Cross workers of the canteen service, showing their gratitude for what is being done for them in every place and in every possible way.

When members of the canteen service meet a troop train many of the boys have letters and postcards to be mailed. One day not long ago a member of the service, in looking over the mail, saw one post card unstamped. Something unusual looking about the address attracted her attention, and on looking closely this is what she read, "Miss Clara Barton, Heaven," and on the card was written "You certainly founded a wonderful institution," and signed, "A Soldier."

That was a tribute fine and deep, and from the heart of one who surely had been helped by the Red Cross and wanted to give some sign of appreciation. No costly wreath could bear a more fragrant and exquisite message than that one card.—Southern Woman's Magazine.

Bow Legs Saved Him.

Not every man is boastful or proud of possessing bowed legs, but when said crescent-shaped nether limbs have saved him from possible serious injury or death from an attack of a vicious butting ram, he is apt to take a different view of the matter during his after life.

A resident of Brazier, N. Y., started across the Miller farm to go to the cider mill on the Tannery road. When nearly in the center of a large pasture an old ram started for him. The man ran, but soon realized that he could not make the nearest fence. As the next best maneuver he made for a large bowlder a few rods away.

Just as he reached the rock the ram overtook him and with lowered head butted through the fugitive's legs. He hit the bowlder and crushed his skull.

Old European Families.

The oldest family of Great Britain is said to be the Mar family, in Scotland, which can trace its pedigree to the year 1093. Then, too, there are the Campbells of Argyll, whose origin dates back to 1190. The Grosvenor family, that of the duke of Westminster, refers its origin to the same year that the Conqueror "came over"—1066. The Austrian house of Hapsburg goes back farther than that, its date being 952, while the Bourbons of France proudly mention 864, as the date of their origin.

Needed Help.

Rather pretty young woman and small son on Clifton car. Gentleman sits opposite; stranger to lady and boy, but a lover of children. Cultivates acquaintance of youngster by means of smiles and winks. Boy receptive, but has not yet acquired the art of winking with one eye—can only squint with both eyes at once. Thinks nice stranger deserves better recognition; peremptorily and loudly calls on his mother for assistance. Thus "Mamma, wink at that man, I can't —Cleveland Plaindealer.

Thunder and Lightning.

Thunder is caused by electric discharge of lightning. This discharge, in forcing its way through the atmosphere, heats the air and vapor lying in its path to a high temperature, causing a violent expansion along the whole length of the flash. The result is a deep compression wave, or what is the same, a noise. Lightning is the flash of the electric explosion.

Moths in Closets.

Get a wide-mouthed bottle, three ounce will do, and fill it with oil of mirbane. Leave the cork out of the bottle and place it in the trunk or closet in such position that it will not tip over. The fumes are very poisonous to insects. For a very large closet use a larger bottle and larger amount of oil. Renew the oil when needed. Sprinkle heavy blankets, quilts, etc., with the oil of mirbane before packing away.

Proofs of Bigness.

To disagree with the other fellow and still remain friendly; to see the other fellow's viewpoint and still cling to your own opinion with a smile that is sincere; to travel the first 50 miles in company with a crowd quietly and not tell all you know; to smile at the breakfast table and then go to work, not willingly but anxiously, proves that you are a bigger man than the ordinary fellow we find on the pay roll.—Exchange.

KITTEN THEIR COMFORT KIT

Small Creature Murderous Huns Must Have Overlooked Brought Tender Thoughts to Soldiers.

At Beuvardes, between Chateau-Thierry and Soissons, I met about five inches of gray kitten that could tell much if it could speak.

This kitten was the "liaison" between the Germans who fled and the Americans who dispossessed them. It was the only creature the Americans saw alive when they marched singing into the town after the Germans poisoned the wells, fired their ammunition dumps, and sullenly departed.

The kitten, when I first saw it, was playing about in the sun at the threshold of a ruined hut. The body of a dead German sprawled at my feet, half buried in splinters of timber. Chloride of lime lay like drifted snow on his chest, and in the clotted whiteness was his briar-wood pipe, which I twice picked up and twice put down ere deciding not to take it. The bottom of the door of the house showed a jagged rent, as though a rifle-butt had dashed it in, and it was besmeared with blood.

Inside the door was a mass of tousled straw where Boches had stabled. The house was dismantled. The clothing of women lay torn and scattered.

The kitten crawled between the top of my gas mask (hung in the "alerte" position beneath my chin), and the brim of my "steel Stetson" and purred like a watchman's rattle. Its eyes grew bland and yellow as lemon candy behind a shop window.

While I made small talk to the kitten, our artillery planted to right and left was roaring skyward at an angle of 30 degrees. The concussion of the battery threatened to lift the miserable house from its underpinnings. The window frames jumped half an inch at every detonation. The glass had long ago given way to burlap or to nothing.

And still the kitten purred and patted a bit of paper dangling from a string, careless as a bobolink. "Every time I look at the little creature," confessed a stretcher bearer from the teeming dressing station round the corner, "it makes a lump come in my throat."

"Don't you want to take it home with you?" suggested a lieutenant.

But I hadn't the heart to deprive those men of the solace of its presence.

It was their comfort kit.—Stars and Stripes.

Value of Quick Decision.

As a rule the man who has trained himself to quick decisions and prompt actions follows close to the right. He does not need to debate questions as does the man who has become a master of deliberation. His mental faculties seem to work automatically and they are generally right. I'm not sure but that they are more often right than they are with the man who is constantly weighing pros and cons and becoming confused with the issues. He saves time because he acts quickly and he saves everybody the uncertainty of indecision.

Chinese Wheelbarrows.

Probably more freight and more passengers are transported in China by the wheelbarrow than by any other land method. The wheelbarrow there used differs from that used by us, in the fact that the wheel is set in the center, and thus supports practically the entire load, while the handles are supported in part by a strap or rope over the shoulders of the man who operates it. As a result, the wheelbarrow coolie in China will transport nearly a half-ton on his vehicle.

Haphazard

By JESSIE E. SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"All vacations cut to a week."

Thus the head stenographer of Merle & Co., a city mercantile house of extensive business prestige and narrow views as to the rights of their employees.

"Shameful," came an indignant chorus.

"And no pay for the week spent away."

A rising storm of protest was speedily repressed as the manager of the establishment came into the room. There was one exception to the general group—Arline Drury. The others sat with an angry luster of eye. Her hands strayed from her typewriter, nerveless, an expression of infinite disappointment crossed her features.

Arline had lost her mother a year previous and had been cast utterly on her own resources. She was not an expert typist and had not acquired even the fundamentals of stenography. Her position, a poor-paying one, had been thrust upon her almost grudgingly, and became a work of such drudgery that she was too tired evenings to attempt to perfect herself in taking dictation.

To the usual vacation with a fortnight's extra pay Arline had looked forward with glad anticipation. She had mapped out a stay at some cheap, but respectable sumer resort. It seemed to her that alone by herself, mind and body at ease, she could think over present and future in a clear, coherent way.

The double anouncement had upset all her plans. The circumscribed term of leisure seemed scarcely worth caring for. The withdrawal of salary during the period meant deprivation. She had saved less than $20. When she got home that night Arline counted over her little fund and viewed the prospect dolorously. She had selected a resort, the five hours' ride to which would be quite a novel enjoyment. She retraversed the advertisements of places nearer the city. Ferndale—the fare thither was low—if she went on a vacation at all that must be the limit of fare expenditure.

It was just before noon on Monday that Arline arrived at Ferndale. She found only a lonely station with a general store opposite. She was informed that the real town was two miles distant on the lake, comprising a fashionable hotel and the homes of rich people. There were no modest houses where one could expect moderate board and lodging, and the hotel was a $4 a day house.

[illegible] at noon on a bench outside the little depot, gloomed and almost homesick, contemplating the necessity of returning to the city. She noticed only casually that an automobile had driven up containing a chauffeur and a matronly looking woman. The latter alighted as she caught sight of Arline and came straight up to her.

"You are Miss Eva White?" she said half interrogatively. "We have been here daily since Monday expecting you but feared you had found some other appointment. Mrs. Elston needs the care of a nurse greatly and she will indeed welcome you. John, will you take the lady's suitcase?" and almost before she was aware of it Arline found herself in the auto with the good-natured housekeeper of one of the show places on the lake, telling her enough to know that a well-paid position was open to this Miss Eva White who had not appeared.

"And why not?" whispered Arline to herself. "If she does not come, what wrong is done by my having a free vacation and one useful and helpful as well," and both hopeful and tempted Arline Drury lent herself to a deception that was favored by the non-appearance of the real nurse that day—and never.

For the first time in many years Arline drifted contentedly into a new experience that was delightful. The invalid Mrs. Elston treated her as if she were some real friend instead of a dependent. The second day her son Harold, a tall, handsome young fellow about two years the senior of Arline appeared on a hasty jaunt from the city. He stared strangely when Arline was introduced under her fictitious name. He followed her inquisitively with his glance, but when he noted that his mother regarded fondly, almost lovingly, he suppressed some powerful impulse that sought expression.

Two weeks went by, a month. All thoughts of returning to the city were abandoned by Arline. Harold came to visit his mother twice a week, and he could not help but feel attracted toward the bright, intelligent companion of his mother, to whom she was as attentive and thoughtful as an own daughter. Arline divined the dawning of a mutual love, each failed to conceal from the other, and one day, in the lovely garden of white shadows, when he confessed his affection, she bowed her head in humiliation.

"I am not Miss White—" she began; but he interrupted her gayly.

"Oh, I knew that the first day I met you!" he declared, "for I had received word from the nurse that she could not come. When I found you here, and my dear mother getting better each day under your care, I only longed to have you remain. And now—"

That "now" was the vital hour of their young lives, where soul spoke to soul and Arline told all the story of her life to her affianced husband.

Sling Gives Relief.

Great relief from pain in neuritis of the arm has been gained from the use of a sling described by Dr. R. T. Williamson in the British Medical Journal. The sling passes over the shoulder of the unaffected arm and under the elbow of the painful arm in such a way that it slightly raises it. This, by raising the shoulder and collar bone, takes off the pressure upon the nerve roots and prevents the weight of the arm from dragging on these nerves.

Peeled Chicken.

Three-year-old Ruth came from Chicago to visit her grandmother on a farm in Knox county. Everything about the farm was a novelty to Ruth, of which she never tired. Another pleasant thing about the visit was grandmother's constant questioning of "Now what shall we eat today?" One morning she asked the usual question as to the menu. Little Ruth studied a minute and then made answer: "Oh, grandma, won't you please catch a chicken and peel it for dinner?"—Indianapolis News.

What Clemenceau Said.

This is given me as the truth of what M. Clemenceau said when the draft of President Wilson's original note with the 14 points was handed to him. He said: "Quatorze points! Mais cela c'est un peu fort—le bon Dieu n'en avait que dix." ("Fourteen points! But that is a little too strong—the good God had only ten.")

Interested.

"Did you see how that conjuror took the rabbit from the hat?"

"Nope. I tried hard to catch on, too. It would help reduce the cost of living."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Real "Sky Pilot."

A preacher literally comes down out of the heavens to preach the Gospel to American aviators in England.

He is Rev. Reginald Crew, American Y. M. C. A. pastor-aviator, who flies from one aviation camp to another, holding religious services for the "boys." He has no long-distance record, but he has flown as far as thirty miles between camps for a prayer meeting.

Arriving at a camp, he frequently gives his Yank birdmen congregation, thousands of feet below, a preliminary exhibition in the "corkscrew," "loop-the-loop," "apple-turnover" and other fancy stunts. That insures their attention.

Then he volplanes to earth, climbs out of his chariot, removes his football headgear and starts "church." The boys call him the "sky pilot." He is a great favorite and they eagerly flock to services.—Exchange.

An Allied Uniform.

In a vaudeville theater at one of the French ports there was a comedian who had an act which he called "Le Nouvel Uniforme." He wore a French steel helmet topped with the cock feathers of the Italians. His coat and breeches were of khaki. About his waist was slung a Scotch sporran. He wore golf stockings. The top of one was the pattern of the French flag and the other of the American flag. And he sang a song about the beach at Waikiki—a Frenchman's interpretation of an American idea of Hawaiian harmony! Certainly nothing could have been more allied.—Roy S. Durstine, in Scribner's Magazine.

No Co-Operation.

"I always try to make the best of a bad situation," remarked Mr. Glithery.

"What do you do when your water pipes freeze and then burst?"

"Oh, I sing a little song just to show that I'm not worrying."

"That's highly commendable."

"But when the water begins to leak on the people who occupy the flat beneath mine to save my life I can't persuade them to join me in singing."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WHILE "GEORGE" LOOKED ON

Party of Tourists Helped Pretty American Woman to Kiss the Real Blarney Stone.

Three or four of us made up a little party to go to Blarney castle to improve our ability in the art of talking by kissing the Blarney stone, says Capt. Albert R. Wonham in "Spun Yarns of a Naval Officer." The saying that all roads lead to Rome applies somewhat to Blarney, too, but the Irish miles—I cannot think how they reconcile them with the miles recorded by the taxicab indicators!

However, we got there, and, bounding up the stone stairs, reached the top of the tower. Two persons were already there, an old man and one of the loveliest women I ever saw. We were rather pressed for time, and so proceeded to kiss the stone.

The Blarney stone faces the outside of the tower, about three feet down. If you wish really to kiss it you must be let down headfirst, do the trick, and be hauled up. All round the top of the tower is a hanging parapet projecting about a foot from the line of the tower wall, built to enable the defenders, when the castle was attacked, to pour boiling water or melted lead on top of the enemy operating on the front door.

Having let one another down, we finished under the wondering gaze of the lovely woman. "Excuse me, gentlemen," she said, "but what have you been doing?"

We told her.

With a disdainful look she turned to the old fellow and said, "There, George, I told you that," pointing to a black-looking stone inside, "was not the Blarney stone, and I have not kissed the Blarney stone! I have not come all the way from America to go away without doing it!" As she said that she looked appealingly at us, for George did not seem inclined to rise to the occasion.

The end of it was that we lashed her dress round her ankles, lowered her, and pulled her up triumphant.

"There, George, now I can go back to America and say that I have kissed the Blarney stone!" she cried.

I am bound to say that George, who proved to be her husband, did not look happy or pleased. His reputation for telling the truth had suffered, and I am pretty sure that he wished we never had come.

A MADE IN CANADA TRUCK

Marvellous Performance
of the
Ford One Ton Truck
For Quick Delivery, Heavy Dray Work and Farm Use

The demand for the FORD ONE TON TRUCK is phenomenal. The biggest corporations are buying it, and the smallest users, as well, who must have Economy coupled with Efficiency and Service. Their judgment is based on Performance—on Money Value—on Real Achievement.

Every user of the FORD ONE TON TRUCK is an endorser, because of these facts. It has been tried—tested—proved—in all lines of work. For upwards of three years FORD ONE TON TRUCKS have been sold in Peterborough, during which time the MARVELLOUS "WORM DRIVE" REAR AXLE HAS NEVER REQUIRED A MOMENT'S ATTENTION.

A Ford Dealer from Western Canada, where he has sold hundreds of these Trucks, states that "Not a man in my employ has ever seen the inside of the rear axle."

What does that mean? Does it not prove, beyond doubt, that the FORD ONE TON TRUCK is
00 PER CENT. EFFICIENT!

It can be used everywhere—in every season of the year—spring, summer, autumn, winter—always reliable, always saving money—always cutting down hauling and delivery costs.

Every type of body, including special bodies to meet individual requirements, either for long hauls over country roads or service in the city.

WHILE IT WAS BUILT FOR ONE TON TRUCK WORK, SIXTY PER CENT. OF THE TIME THESE TRUCKS ARE DRAWING UP TO 3,000 POUNDS—AND ANY ONE WHO HAS WORK FOR A TRUCK WOULD BE WELL ADVISED TO CONSIDER THE FORD.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE STAGGERS BELIEF.

FORD ONE TON TRUCK achievements are most remarkable, and what will be done dims even past performances—it is a record of success that has surpassed all previous performances with this type of truck.

In many cases, where much hauling has to be done, two or more ONE TON TRUCKS are being put in the place of heavier, more expensive and less reliable Trucks.

THE POWER PLANT THAT HAS MADE THE FORD FAMOUS WILL BE IN THE FORD TRUCK YOU BUY.

ADDRESS AND PURSE FOR REV. JOHN GALT

The annual Sunday School Tea and Concert of Gilmour Memorial Church was held on the evening of Dec. 30, and proved a great success. One of the interesting items of the program was the reading of the appended address to Rev. John Galt by Mr. C. E. Moore and a presentation of a purse by Mr. T. H. Graham.

Rev. John Galt.

Dear Pastor and Friend;

At this our annual Sunday School entertainment we gather tonight with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow. We rejoice that your four years of ministry unto us has been for the general improvement of our church and Sunday School, and with the aim constantly in view of having the whole church in the Sunday School and the Sunday School in the Church. We sorrow that your pastorate with us is so near an end and that you have deemed it wise to accept a call to a distant field of labor.

Our relations as pastor and people have been of the happiest and most friendly and we also feel that we have been greatly helped and blessed in our spiritual life by your teaching. We have enjoyed prosperity in the church in all its branches, under your faithful leadership and were looking forward to a helpful time during the winter, when we would have you to supervintend our special efforts for the great Forward Movement. But we believe that you are making the change conscienciously, feeling that it will be to the glory of God.

As a token of our love and esteem we ask you to accept this purse accompanied by the very best wishes of Gilmour Memorial Church, both for you and your estimable wife and daughter.

Our prayers will follow you that you may be used of God to the greater prosperity of His cause and Kingdom in your new charge.

Jos. Mann, Clerk.
G. W. Mann, T. H. Graham, F. W. Scott, Deacons.

Smith, Dec. 30.1918;—Mr. Galt will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday, January 4, leaving the following week for Kenora, Ont.

MARRIED.

Featuring Irresistable Values in Every Department---Every Day in the Month

There's no denying the force of the sentiment that prevails with respect to the living expenses of to-day, and its the duty of every institution to do what it can to bring costs to as low a point as possible. With the object of assisting as far as we can in the good work, we are deliberately going through our stocks and bringing forward such goods as the public is in need of, and we are offering these goods at prices far below what we would have to pay to replace them.
Our January Sale values will be startling in view of heavy advances in production costs. Remember the trend is toward still higher prices, therefore give daily heed to what we will have to offer during the month. Visit the store as often as you can during the month, walk leisurely through every department. "NOTE THE YELLOW PRICE CARDS." You will find tempting bargains aplenty.

BEST PICTURE EVER SEEN YET

One of the best pictures the screen has ever seen—not a grewsome, sordid melodrama that will make you feel like a washed out dish rag after you have seen it—but a corking, breezy delightful comedy drama of the elite of Long Island, will be seen on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Empire Theatre, when Selznick Pictures presents Olive Thomas in the first of her series of productions under this management, "Upstairs and Down."

The upstairs and downstairs doings of a fashionable house party in Long Island furnish the main theme for this picture. Alice Chesterton, a merry little mischiefmaker, who delights getting in and out of scrapes, carries on a desperate flirtation with Terry O'Keefe, a gay son of Ireland, despite the fact that she is engaged to Tom Carey.

The result of a little plan concocted by the Ives, when they think that Alice has carried on her affair with Terry long enough, is that Terry no longer has eyes for the little "baby vamp" but begins to notice Alice's sister, Betty. After many complications and laughable situations, things take a turn for the better and you will leave the theatre laughing through your tears.

DEATH FOLLOWS IN WAKE OF THE NEW YEAR'S REVELS IN NEW YORK

Twelve Cases of Wood Alcohol Poisoning were Reported Yesterday—All the Victims Had Been Celebrating the Passing of the New Year.

New York, Jan. 3.— Twelve cases of wood alcohol poisoning were reported yesterday in New York and vicinity, folowing the New Year's Eve festivities. All the victims had been celebrating the passing of the old year. One man died and several are not expected to live.

Newark, N.J., suffered the worst blow. Six men were taken to hospitals there and two saloons were raided and a quantity of liquors seized.

There were four wood alcohol poison victims in Brooklyn and two in Jersey City.

Walter Griffith, of No. 452 Broad street, Newark, told the police when he was taken to the City Hospital that he had purchased liquor from Julius Pitsche's saloon, at No. 464 Broad street. The police arrested Pitscher, who said he had obtained his liquor from Julius Amsterdam, at No. 246 Orange street. At the latter place the police seized $3,000 worth of supplies in jugs and tin cans Amsterdam was arrested, charged with violating the Volstead prohibition law, and Pitscher was held as a witness.

Found Unconscious in Street.

An unidentified man was found unconscious in the street in Newark, and died shortly after he was taken to the City Hospital. Others in the City Hospital included Elmer Drake, thirty-tow years, of No. 123 Seventeenth Avenue, and George Banse, of No. 136 South Street. Still another unidentified man was carried there last night in serious condition from poisoning.

Albert Anscoidue and Joseph Siegal, of No. 41 Nesbitt street, became ill in the street after visiting a friend in Belleville near Newark. They were taken to St. Michael's Hospital and were found to be suffering from wood alcohol poisoning. They said they had obtained liquor from Samuel Kahn's saloon at William and Cortland streets, Belleville. The police seized a quantity of liquor in bottles in the saloon and sealed three barrels of wine in the cellar.

Anothir case of poisoning was reported yesterday to the Jersey City police by the City Hospital authorities. Clarence Jordan, nineteen years, of No. 386 Bergen avenue, was taken to the hospital early in the day, a victim of atute poisoning. He was found unconscious at Monticello and Jordan avenues by Policeman Wolf.

Celebrating New Year's Eve.

Michael Flaherty was taken to the City Hospital, Jersey City, for observation. He is thirty-four years old. lives at No. 36 Court House street and was found unconscious at St. Paul's and Oakland avenues. He had been celebrating New Year's Eve.

John O'Brien was taken from his home at No. 640 Hicks street, Brooklyn, to the Long Island College Hospital. His condition was serious and the police were unable to learn from him where he had obtained his supply.

James Gregory, nineteen years old of No. 551 Nostrand avenue, was found unconscious at Albany and Atlantic Avenues, near St. John's Hospital, to which place evidently he had been trying to find his way. Dr. McDonald diagnosed the case as wood alcohol poisoning.

Charles Smith, twenty years old who lives in Staten Island, was found unconscious at High and Washington streets, Brooklyn(and Dr. Adams, of the Long Island College Hospital, diagnosed the case as wood alcohol poisoning.

Officials Breathte Easier.

Federal officials who had feared careless drinking over the holiday might carry widespread disaster in New York breathed easier last night. While the menace has by no means passed, the officials believe the public has profited by the repeated warnings given and is guarding itself against the poison concoction sold as whiskey.

GERMANY VIOLATES TERMS OF ARMISTICE

HAS BEEN SELLING HORSES AND CATTLE TO NEUTRAL COUNTRIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 3.—Germany is exporting horses and cattle extensively to neutral countries in contravention of the terms of the peace treaty. It is reported in despatches from Brussels. On November 19th, the Allies their attention called to the offer made by Germany to Sweden of the sale of stallions and more recently, it was ascertained that the Germans had been selling considerable quantity of livestock to neutral countries. The matter is being investigated by the Reparations Committee.

U. F. O. CO-OPERATIVE STORE NEAR READY

TRADING CERTIFICATES WILL BE ISSUED TO PETERBORO CITIZENS SHORTLY

The Farmers' Co-operative Store. 176 Simcoe Street, will very shortly open the doors for business. A full line of groceries and flour and feed, will be carried, folowed by hardware later on.

The store has been remodeled and renovated some days now, but opening has been postponed by reason of delay in receipt of merchandise.

While the capital to make this concern possible has been subscribed by the farming community, trading certificates will be issued to Peterborough citizens eventually.

Mr. W. G. Coburn is the manager and he will be assisted by capable clerks. Mr. Coburn enjoys the reputation for efficiency, courtesy and strict attention to the calls of business.

Neil Love, a veteran business man, who resided in St. Thomas all his life, died age 77.

Wm. K. Sanderson was re-elected chairman of the St. Thomas Hydro-Electric Commission.

SKATERS MUST NOT USE FENCES FOR FIRES

MAY LOSE PLEASURE OF RINKS IF EVIL PRACTICE DOES NOT CEASE

Numerous complaints have been received of boys using branches of trees and portions of fences for fires by which to put on their skates at the city rink on the Goose Pond.

Chief Thompson stated this morning that if this destruction did not immediately cease he would be forced to recommend to the city that they close up the rink.

The residents of the neighborhood are greatly annoyed, and justly so, over the loss of their property and the skaters should take this warning to avoid losing the pleasure of the free rink.

RATIFY TREATY JANUARY 6TH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 3.— Exchange of the peace treaty with Germany on January 6th, is still possible, in the opinion of the Matin, which says the Germans will have time before that date to forward explanations demanded by the Peace Conference.

FRENCH SUFFER FROM FLOODS

SCORES OF VILLAGES ARE INUNDATED—PEOPLE VACATE THEIR HOMES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Ja. 3.— Scores of villages in lowlands throughout the country, are suffering from floods, and people living near streams have been forced to vacate parts of Meaux. Mezieres and Chalon-Sur-Marne are flooded, while many miles of river, bottom between Sedan and Charleville are under water. No loss of life is reported as yet, but property damage will probably be heavy.

THREE THOUSAND RADICALS ARE GATHERED IN BY U. S. AUTHORITIES

Nation-Wide Drive to Clean up the Bolshevists Was Finished This Morning—Prisoners Will be Deported—All Large American Cities Yield Their Quota of Red Element.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 3.— In a sweeping drive against radicalism, the Department of Justice agents were completing today, naton-wide raids against the Communist organizations in which several thousand radicals were taken into custody with a view to deportation. Early this morning, a number of arrests had risen to the highest figures of any similar raid in the history of the country. The Government hopes to fill another "Soviet Ark" and send it across the Atlantic where the radicals wil be permitted to rejoin "Kit and King" in Bolshevik Russia.

Officials estimated three thousand "undesirables" would be caught in the dragnet and with their deportation it was believed the backbone will be broken. Incomplete figures show that nearly 150 suspected revolutionaries were held in New York City, forty-four taken in San Francisco while about one thousand arrests were made in Detroit and Chicago, described as the strongholds of the Red movement. Four hundred wereapprehended in Philadelphia, while Milwaukee and Cleveland supplied about one hundred each. Many women included in the lists and men of wide variety of nationality.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN IN SEARCH OF HEALTH

PREMIER BORDEN HAS LEFT OTTAWA FOR PARTS UNKNOWN.

Ottawa, an. 3.J—With a measure of Cabinet readjustment brought about and arrangements made for carrying on, Sir Robert Borden left today for a prolonged period of rest and recuperation. His destination will be kept secret beyond the fact that he has gone south to a more tropical climate. He may cruise a bit with Admiral Jellicoe, who left yesterday for the States, and whose flagship is in the West Indies. It is desired that the Premier have a real rest far from distractions of politics and so,— if possible, his whereabouts will be kept secret.

Away Six Months.

How long he will be away in purely problematical. It will depend upon the condition of his health, but in any event it will be six months. Meanwhile Sir George Foster is Acting Premier, and a House leader—quite probably Mr. Doherty,—will be selected to assist him when Parliament convenes. The whole situation will come under review when Parliament meets at the end of February. The Unionist caucus then will be called upon to retify the tentative arrangements which have been made and, to a large extent, its decision will influence the question of party permanancy. [redacted]

Under the peculiar adversity of circumstances it is held by most of the Government that the plan which has been followed is about the best that was possible.

Dept. Direction.

The Militia and Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment will be merged, probably under Mr. Calder, with Sir James Lougheed remaining as Minister without portfolio and leader in the Senate. Mr. Meighen would take under his wing the Department of Immigration. An acting Minister, Hon. Dr. Reid, will administer the Public Works Department until some permanent arrangement is made, which may not be until Sir Robert Borden returns.

The session will be frought with the greatest interest. The Unionists must decide about their future. Many of them want to make the party a permanent factor in politics. Others openly express a desire to go back substantially to the old lines, so far as this is possible with the intervention of the new and formidable third party recruited from both of the old ones. If the party is to be consolidated, then a policy and a plan of organization will have to be adopted.

Election Chance.

If it is not to be perpetuated, two things may happen—a decision like unto the present to stand together for the rest of the parliamentary term or a break-up and a general election. Both of these latter alternatives are regarded as inviting peculiar complications. Members of the Government who assert that there is no intention of dissolution before 1922 believe that meanwhile the stability of the party will be accomplished and a policy decided upon. They believe the rank and file of the party, save some who may move to cross-benches, will follow their lead.

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK IN THE UNITED STAES

CONSERVATIVE INTERESTS SEE IMPROVEMENT IN COSDITIONS WITH BEGINNING OF YEAR

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 3.—In financial districts the passing of the old year and the advent of the new was attended by a pronounced improvement of sentiment, this feeling being shown by the most conservative interests. Among the experienced leaders of finance and general business, the new year was hailed with encouragement although it was broadly recognized that some of the uncertain elements of the past few months are likely to continue for an indefinite period. Long sustained money tension and speculative outlook are being subordinated to such important questions as the financing of foreign trade and the restoration of the formal domestic indatrial conditions. Almost the greatest problem which now confronts the banking world, aside from the speedy readjustment of foreign exchange, has to do with the attitude of of the average investor towards foreign securities. The past week witnessed a marked revival of interest in industrial shares with steels and related issues again in the lead. Their activity was predicted on the strong position of those industries and the enormous demand which already has congested operations at some of the larger mills. The railroads were only slightly benefited by the decision of the Government to return them to private operation some two months hence and many November statements of earnings by the leading systems merely accentuated the doubtful status of those properties.

LEGISLATURE CONNOT MEET BEFORE MARCH

SEATS FOR PREMIER AND TWO MINISTERS MUST FIRST BE FOUND

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 3;—The Ontario Legislature will not likely meet until late in March according to rumor. Premier E. C. Drury, Hon. Manning Doherty and Hon. W. E. Raney are yet without seats in prospect. J. J. Morrison, convenor of the committee of the party which is to secure seats for the ministers, stated that there is nothing decided on. Mr. Morrison goes to Winnipeg shortly to attend the Canadian Council of Agricultur and will not be back until the middle of the month. Until his return it is announce when or where the bye-probable that the committee will not elections may be. Writs have to be issued three weeks before the nomination so the elections cannot be held until the middle of February.

A convention of the farmers of Quebec province is to be held in Quebec city early next month.

GERMANY STILL HAS A MILLION ARMED TROOPS

MUST REDUCE FORCE TO ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND BEFORE END OF MONTH.

London, Jan. 3.—Germany's armed forces are estimated by the British War Office to total close to one million men. These are divided into the regular army of 400,000, the land forces of the regular navy 12,000, the armed constabulary 40,000 to 50,000, the temporary volunteers or regular army reserves 150,000 to 200,000 and civic guards 200,000 to 400,000. The figures with regard to the last named branches are rough estimates, the exact totals being unknown.

Under the terms of the peace treaty Germany is compelled to reduce her regular forces to 100,000 by March 31, and the number of gendarmes must not exceed those functioning as military police in 1913.

The reduction of the regular army, in compliance with the treaty obligations, is proceeding, although at a slower pace than originally was contemplated, owing to the delay in ratification of the peace treaty, the unsettled state of Germany and the desire of the German goverment not to increase the number of persons unemployed.

Quite apart from the British official statement, but bearing on the subject, is unofficial information brought to England from Germany by British army officers. The substance of their report is summed up as follows:

"There is no truth in the stories that Germany has a secret, mobile army. Not only are the German people war weary and anxious for peace, but there is a great shortage of war supplies, such as rubber, petrol, coal, horses, and, in addition, the rolling stock of the country is greatly depleted. Manufacture of arms and munitions is not going on in any large degree, although it is probable that to force the Germans to give up all the rifles stipulated in the peace treaty will be impossible since the concealment of arms is not difficult. There is no danger of warlike aggression from Germany in the immediate future. However, if the Germans are permitted to maintain volunteers and civic guards these bodies would constitute a potential danger, as they would provide basic material for a big new army."

It is stated in well informed circles in London that the Allies will insist that these military organizations be abolished. It is conceded, however, that the maintenance of a constabulary is necessary to protect property from hoodlums and organized bodies of thieves.

Army officers are said to believe that considerable ground exists for Germany's claim that she needs a regular army of more than 100,000, as this force would be very small for a country so great in extent. Many citizens of Germany as a patriotic duty are said to be joining the civic guards to protect themselves from depredations of criminals and from Spartacan outbreaks Numerous generals are among the guards, including the famous Field Marshal Von Kluck, who is serving as a private.

TORONTO THEATRICAL MANAGER IS MISSING

AMBROSE J. SMALL FORMER OWNER GRAND IN THIS CITY DISAPPEARS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto Jan 3.—Ambrose J. Small, well known theatrical manager of Toronto, owner of the Grand Opera House and controlling a line of theatres across Canada, is missing. Over four weeks ago he walked out of his office and has not been heard of since. Mr Small recently closed the sale of all his theatrical interests to a syndicate incorporated as the Trans-Canada Theatres Ltd.

CITY'S NEW MANUFACTURERS ARE NOW PREPARING FOR FLOURISHING TRADE

Western Clock Co. and Peterborough Paper Box Co. Putting Premises Into Shape of Readiness for Near Future.

Peterborough's new manufacturers are getting into shape in order to manufacture their goods on as large a scale as possible. The Western Clock Company, the Peterborough Paper Box Company and the Canadian Chicle Company, which, although not a new company, has occupied new premises, are referred to.

In about one week's time the Western Clock Company will be going at full strength in the building formerly occupied by the Chicle Company. This building, on which they are expending efforts to satisfactorily equip, will afford ample and efficient accomodation for this branch of one of America's most famous companies to manufacture their clocks on a large scale.

As was pointed out at the time these arrangements were first made it is not only adding an important industry to the city but also is an indication of the growth of one of the older manufacturing companies. The Canadian Chicle Company and Sweet Meats Company are becoming firmly established in the building of the Lundy Shovel and Tool Company that extends along Rink street. This affords more commodious quarters to accomodate the ever-increasing trade. Foreign as well as Canadian orders are being filled rapidly and the quality of Canadian chocolates is being greatly appreciated in the Old Country.

The Peterborough Paper Box Company, located at the rear of the Grand Central appartments, is getting ready for a large business. In about a month's time when everything will be getting strong employment for about 15 persons will be provided here.

In passing it would be well to mention that the Albion Knitting Company and Bon Marche Manufacturing Company both continue to receive large orders which they are doing their utmost to fulfill.

With the establishment in the city of the Aladdin Company and Nashua Paper Company and possibly one or more prospective concerns Peterborough will be well supplied with new and flourishing manufacturing concerns.

INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT CANNINGTON BY 18 TO 7 IN OPENING O.H.A. GAME

Petes Showed Good Form, and Better Condition Aided Their Success—Return Game Monday

The local Intermediates opened the O. H. A. season at Cannington last night with a decided victory over their opponents, who have been out of the game for some time.

The final count was 18 to 7 and never was the local squad in danger, playing sensational hockey all the way.

A noticeabe feature of the Cannington line-up is the presence of Hodgins of their forward line. Hodgins played for Peterborough last season and it appears from last night's game that he will fare with even poorer success this year than last.

The Cannington squad will face the local intermediates at the Brock St. Rink Monday night and they promise to put up a stronger game on the larger ice.

OVER TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND RELEASED PRISONERS MAY CROSS UNITED STATES

Japanese Government Will be Asked to Take Care of Transportation—Problems Involved Difficult of Solution.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Jan. 3.— Two hundred thousand Austrian, Hungarian and Czech prisoners of war at present in Siberia may be taken to their home countries by way of Japan and the United States, according to plans being studied at the Vatican, which has taken deep interest in the condition of these men.

Japanese Will Help.

The Japanese Government may be asked to transport prisoners from Vladivostock to Japan, where they would remain at the expense of Japan until the United States could send ships to transport them to America. From America these prisoners would be taken to Europe on ships of various nations. The problems involved in taking men out of Siberia are most difficult of solution, according to reports, and negotiations for theirtransportation there are being conructed through a Committee of the International Red Cross.

HAMILTON TEACHERS GET $750 MINIMUM

ALL RAISES OVER $1,000 FOR WOMEN DEALT WITH BY COMMITTEE

Hamilton, Jan. 3.—The internal management committee of the Board of Education met this evening and settled the question of salaries for women teachers. On motion of Trustees Linger and Lazier, it was decided that the minimum salary of women teachers holding first-class certificates should be $850, and those holding second-class, primary and kindergarten certificates should be $750. For teachers having three years successful experience in other parts of the province $50 will be added tothe minimum. All increases over $1,000 are to be dealt with by a special committee.

A RESOLUTION FOR THE NEW YEAR.

DON'T be a grouch or a pessimist during 1920 or for the length of days during which you may be spared. Don't knock the world, the country or the city. Just think for a moment that sixty thousand of the best young men in Canada thought so well of their nation that they backed it up with their lives, the greatest sacrifice that a man can make. If they believed that the world was worth dying for you should be satisfied to assume the easier duty of merely living in it.

ALD. McINTYRE'S DEFEAT.

ALD. McINTYRE has been defeated in his attempt to achieve the mayoralty by one point, that is unless the recount which has been already suggested is ordered and the result changed. Most certainly the alderman has missed the attainment of his condition by a narrow margin. But he retires to private life, temporarily at least with an honorable record as a public servant. During his ten years as an alderman he has been elected nine times and defeated twice, that is when his reverse of yesterday is counted. In all that time nothing of a grave nature was urged against any of his official acts, nothing discreditable could be found in his public career by those most bitterly opposed to him in the recent mayoralty campaign. Among all classes it was felt that he had faithfully discharged the duties of his stewardship.

Ald. McIntyre owes his defeat, beyond all question, to the fact that he openly aligned himself with the workingmen of the city. He was not a class candidate as he was justified in asserting in the face of his record. He in his own person represented the dual capacity of workingman and employer. He understands the labor problem from both sides and from every angle. He was open and above board in all his references to his attitude on that question. His candidature for the mayoralty was announced some time ago, in fact, has been taken for granted for the past year so that those opposed to him had ample time to prepare a line of attack.

If the Labor men of the city failed to elect a man on their ticket they can at least feel that they are an important factor in the community, important enough to be made the leading issue in the campaign just closed and to be courted by ever candidate for office. Mayor-elect Taylor coyly flirted with the workingman and behind his blush-concealing fan whispered promises of fidelity to the cause of the toiler in return for the latter's vote. The candidate for the mayoralty seemed to have forgotten that in all the issues raised by Labor in the Council last spring he voted against the measures introduced to reduce the hours of work and to raise the wages. But the Mayor-elect got away with his campaign propaganda to the extent of a majority of one. But even that narrow margin is sufficient to demonstrate that if the seeker for office is crafty there are workingmen who are short of memory and easy.

Still the workingmen of the city should possess themselves in hope. They still have three good representatives in the Council. The Mayor-elect and several of the new aldermen have been posing as the Codlin friends of the wage-earner. Their course in the Council will be watched with interest. Did they really mean what they said before election or were they only working for votes? The man in overalls was in the recent election as he always is, the ward and special care of every man who was looking for a place in the public service.

BY A MAJORITY OF ONE.

A MAJORITY OF ONE is certainly a narrow margin for any man to work as a Mayor of the city especially when it is further considered that less than fifty per cent. of the total vote was polled at the election on New Year's Day. Mayor-elect Taylor's mandate is not very emphatic. As much of course could be said of ex-Ald McIntyre had he won out by the same odds.

Ex-Ald. McIntyre hints in his card to the public yesterday that it is possible that he may ask for a recount. If there is any possible doubt over the result it is certainly to be hoped that some such course should be taken. A number of lawyers in the city are reported as having given it as their opinion that the two ballots that were found in the bylaw box after the mayoralty count had been completed, and which were required to elect Ald. Taylor, should not be received. One would naturally think that no one would be more anxious to have any doubt on this question cleared up for all time than the official who profited by the misplaced ballots. It is too bad if the election of a mayor in this city is to bear all the earmarks of a dental operation.

The close result shows that there is a necessity for a change in the law by which the returning officer is empowered to give the casting vote in the event of a tie. No official would care to have such a responsibility thrust upon him. No one man should be given authority to elect the mayor of Peterborough. Almost any method of settling such a point, even the drawing of straws or the flip of a coin would be preferable to the plan now authorized by law.

Ex-Ald. McIntyre is a game loser and consulting his own personal feelings would be satisfied to stand by the result as given out yesterday. But his supporters are urging upon him a different course, and to the 1,483 electors who voted for him, he certainly owes something.

ELEVATING THE STAGE.

INNUMERABLE ATTEMPTS have been made to elevate the stage and as a general thing these efforts have been accompanied by an increase in the price of tickets—a policy that might be excused on the ground that elevation of the soul was supplied in addition to entertainment. And in every case if the entertainment had been stronger the tale of elevation would have been longer. That is the opinion of the New York Herald.

The annals of the American theatre are dotted with these attempts and owlish philosophers delight in recalling them and in giving them undue credit for their efficacy. "The most important moment in the history of the development of our stage" has long since become a familiar slogan. There is one moment, however, which these owlish ones never take into consideration, one man who more than half a century ago gave a greater impetus to theatrical advancement than has any other manager or performer before or since. The most important moment in the history of our drama is that in which Tony Pastor offered prizes of half-tons of coal, half-barrels of sugar and silk dress patterns as inducements to housewives and other respectable women to visit his theatre. Prior to this a variety theatre had been little better than a dive, admission to which carried with it a ticket for refreshments, generally served by a short-skirted waitress. It was Mr. Pastor who raised it from its low estate, and to these and subsequent efforts on his part is largely due the high place that it attained in public esteem. The old fashioned variety stage may truthfully be termed the national theatre of America. It furnished the legitimate profession with many of its most accomplished artists, for even the best players had their beginnings in variety or minstrelsy. The training received by those who appeared on Mr. Pastor's stage was infinitely better than anything offered in a modern dramatic school. They were allowed a certain number of minutes for their act and the Pastor audience demanded entertainment during each and every one of those minutes, and if cheated made known its resentment in no uncertain voice.

Of course this fact would, if generally known, prove a death blow to the amiable theories of those who lecture so glibly on the American drama and whose ignorance on the subject can best be compared with that of the information bureau in the telephone service. But we have only to trace the history of the most distinguished players of the not too remote past to realize how much we owe to the variety stage of that fruitful period that antedated the introduction of "polite vaudeville."

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ANYWAY it was not the first draw in which some of the candidates have figured.

Minister in another city announces he will speak on "The Seven Wonders of Hell." This is a travelogue we hesitate to attend, not because we object to tropical countries but because we don't think a clergyman can have as much information on such a subject as we have ourselves.

TORONTO VOTERS ASK FOR MORE TAX REFORM

LEGISLATION IS REQUIRED TO GIVE EFFECT TO DEMAND OF PEOPLE.

Toronto, January 3.— By a majority of over 70,000 votes the property owners of Toronto, at Thursday's election endorsed a graded scale of exemptions from general taxes on owner-occupied dwellings assesed under $4,000, but the change will not apply to this year's taxes as the assessment for these was made last year. And it may not apply to 1921 taxes. In the first place the Assessment Department has gone ahead and ordered its assessment books without the necessary extra column or two which the new system would require. In the second place, the plebiscite as submitted yesterday is not the same as the Ontario statute permits, the latter applying the exemption to dwellings occupied by tenants as well as owners. The city therefore, has to go to Queen's Park for legislation carrying out the expressed will of the people.

"I am going right ahead rafting it. Further action of Council is not necessary now that the people have spoken," said City Solicitor Johnson. "But there is of course, no legal obligation on Council to carry out the desire of the people, and if it liked to open up the question again and withdraw the application for legislation it could do so. In any event, I do not suppose we can get our Act assented to until next May."

As the city assessors start out in March to take their assessment for 1921 taxes, it looks as though tax reform will not go into effect until 1922.

If you would outshine your neighbors, acquire a good reputation and then keep it polished.

Yes, Luke, dear, obstinacy is so firmly rooted in the average woman's system that it is a waste of time to attempt to eradicate it.

A Bank Account For Your Wife

More and more, are the wives of today running their homes on a business basis—systematically and efficiently.

Many wives have a monthly allowance for household expenses.

This, they deposit in a Savings Account in The Merchants Bank—settle bills by cheque—and thus have an accurate record of bills paid.

Such a business-like method also gives a woman the feeling of happy independence in having a bank account of her own.

Mainly About People

Sir William Osler, as a man of science associated with medical research, was famous first in Canada, the land of his birth, then in the United States and finally in England. But his professional activities at McGill, the University of Pennsylvania, Johns Hopkins and finally at Oxford are not responsible for his widespread fame. This was due to his gift for starting a discussion.

It was on February 23, 1905, just after the Professor had resigned his Baltimore chair and before he had removed to Oxford, that the papers contained an account of his famous address in which Dr. Osler, who was then fifty-six, contended that men of forty were useless in the field of research, while it might be well to chloroform college professors who had reached sixty.

Immediately those who had been discussing the trusts, politics and other ordinary subjects seized upon the new theory, took sides and went for each other hammer and tongs, while the man who had started the row climbed into his place of retreat, refusing from a distance to do more than make a few trifling and immaterial modifications in the original statement.

At that time it was not recalled by the public that in one of the least familiar of Anthony Trollope's novels, the scene of which was placed in Australasia, a mythical community was described as having evolved some such ingenious plan for clearing the decks. It did not work in the story because when the age limit was reached those who were most immediately concerned dodged the lethal chamber that they had been so enthusiastic about previously.

It may have been a coincidence—and again it may not have been—that Dr. Osler was made a baronet in 1911, when he was two years past the chloroforming year, as laid down by himself. Of course his explanation why he did not apply for a painless end may have been that the Regius Professorship was a condition, while the other was only a theory. At any rate he went on enjoying himself, but rather avoided such generalizations in his later years.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the request of a large number of ratepayers, I have consented to accept nomination as Councillor for the current year.

Although a new man in the field of contestants, I am confident that, if elected, I can do good work for our township in the way of advocating and supporting only such measures as will assure economy with efficiency in all municipal business. My hope in election is to prove worthy of your confidence by safeguarding and advancing the interests of the township as a whole.

With best wishes to all for the happiest and most prosperous New Year, ever.

Yours faithfully,

The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin,—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

HASTINGS

Special Correspondence.

Hastings, Jan. 3.— The annual entertainment of the Hastings Methodist Sunday School was held on Christmas night in the town hall. A large and appreciative audience was present and every number on the program was well rendered. The little tots, as usual, acquitted themselves creditably while the adult numbers were excellent. The home talent was ably asisted by Miss Alice Story, of Markham, reader, and Mr. William Atkinson, of Peterborough, who gave a solo and encore.

Another number which was much appreciated was a Christmas carol by Miss Lillian Tate, and octette "Perfect Night," while the pantomine, "Abide With Me," was certainly a credit to the performers and to those who did the training.

Miss Storey proved herself to be mistress of the situation and in each and every selection showed remarkable originality and will be gladly received by a Hastings audience at any future time. The proceeds are in aid of the Sunday School and netted a handsome sum,

There passed away at her home in Asphodel on Sunday morning, Mrs. Collins, relict of the late Mr. Hugh Collins. Deceased has been in failing health for some time and her demise was not unexepected. The late Mrs. Collins, whose maiden name was Priscilla Oakman, was a highly respected resident and a valued member of the Methodist church here. She leaves to mourn her loss one son, Robert, on the homestead, and two daughters, Mrs. John Mitchell of Oak Hills, and Mrs. George Douglas, of Peterborough, to whom universal sympathy is extended in the loss of an affectionate mother.

The funeral was held on Tuesday, place of interment, Norwood Cemetery.

Miss Gertie Hill of Toronto visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hill for Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. William Atkinson of Peterborough spent the holiday with her mother, Mrs. G. Carter.

Mr. Wilfred night spent Christmas vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Knight.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Staples of Lindsay, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Tate.

Rev. and Mrs. Walsh and family spent the holiday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cowdy, of Harrowsmith.

Dr. W. T. B. Edmison, of Toronto, has been renewing acquaintances here.

The local chapter of the I. O. D. E. held an assembly in the town hall on Friday evening with a large number present.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Tate spent Christmas with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. Bryant Scriver, of Toronto, spent a few days during the week with friends in Hastings.

Mr. Tom Hill, of Peterborough, has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Kelly spent Sunday in Warkworth.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Tyler visited their daughter, Mrs. Ray Best of Parry Sound, during the week.

Miss Mary Oakes, of Peterborough, is holidaying under the parental roof.

Mrs. J. Mitchell of Oak Hills, attended the funeral of her mother, Mrs. H. Collins on Tuesday.

Miss Grace Lynch, of Brighton, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lynch.

Miss Margaret Bailey is visiting friends in Warkworth.

Miss Kingston of New Liskeard, is with Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Plant.

Mr. W. Oakman, of Moorefield, attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. H. Collins on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Douglas of Peterborough, were called home to attend the death bed of the latter's mother, Mrs. H. Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hess and baby and Mrs. N. Beavis were in Colborne visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Beavis.

Musk-Ox Meat a Rare Delicacy

THE musk-ox is the bouquet of Canada's white space. From the vast tundras his fragrance spreads over the unmeasured snows of the frozen north, a terrible waste of powerful perfume. It needs no bloodhound to fellow the trail of the musk-ox. You can mush along boldly in the general direction of the bovine atomizer and catch up with him a few weeks later if you insist. Usually when this happens Musky is executed without a fair trial—he is in bad odor, as it were.

In the interests of science, and possibly thinking it wise to have a little meat for their stomach's sake, Stefansson and Storkerson once quartered a musk-ox they had properly punished and broiled a few steaks.

Said Stefansson to Storkerson: "I like it."

Said Storkerson to Stefansson: "I like it."

The amazing thing is that each thought the other was really in earnest, and so set to work to educate his palate to appreciate this strange delicacy. By self-hypnosis they succeeded and decided they must let the other 7,999,998 Canadians in on this good thing. When the explorers reached civilization they right heartily praised the musk-ox as the animal praised the musk-ox as the anithe beef barons and effectively solve the high cost of living problem.

Quite an elaborate scheme for the domesticating of the musk-ox has been mapped out, and we may look forward to the day when this pungent beef will be served in exclusive restaurants — the exclusiveness increasing in direct ratio to the quantity of musk-ox on the menu. Musk-ox is to be served with musk apple sauce, with musk-melon as the fruit to follow. Table decorations will be musk roses. If and when the diner is still game he may spend the balance of the evening at a movie watching the exploits of "the Three Musketeers."

Musk-ox meat may have a better vogue than whale meat. I tried whale meat once under the mistaken impression that a whale was a fish. Pat Burns was my dominie in this matter, but I have since consulted better authorities, and now know that a whale is a large mammalia of the Cetacea, yielding elastic, bone and oil. Which is exactly what it tasted like, for all that it looked like horse meat. I often wonder how the next customer liked the nine-tenths of the steak I left on the plate.

There will be no such error of judgment when musk-ox is my portion here below. I shall exercise my individual right of initiative and referendum. The initiative will be to make a quick getaway from the tempting viand; the referendum will be to select a vegetarian restaurant. There, in all probability, I shall find Stefansson and Storkerson eating macaroni and cheese, and chuckling over the success of their scheme for making the Arctic safe for men who do not wear gas masks.—P. W. Luce.

Canadian Industries in London.

There is a growing interest in the Canadian Industries Exhibition to be held in London, England, June 3rd to 17th next. The Royal Agricultural Hall has been secured, giving the Canadian Industries Exhibition the second largest Exhibition Building in London, and with a floor space of 60,000 square feet. It is located near the heart of the city and is particularly well adapted to exhibitions of this kind.

A strong Canadian organization is behind the exhibition. Exhibits of both raw materials and finished articles are asked for and particular stress is laid upon articles of Canadian manufacture which are particularly in great demand in Europe.

APPLES FOR ONTARIO

Some Varieties Recommended for Home Orchards.

Early Bearers and Annual Producers Desirable — Also Varieties Not Easily Liable to Disease—Hardiness Also a Good Quality—Keep Potato Rot From Spreading.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE home orchard should provide high-class dessert and cooking apples throughout the entire apple season, or from the middle of July until the following spring. It is quite easy to select varieties for any part of old Ontario which will do this satisfactorily. The varieties selected should come into bearing early, should produce annually, and should be as free as possible from diseases of all kinds, so that they may be handled with a minmum of expense and care. Throughout this article the varieties mentioned are listed in the order of their season of use, so that intending planters may be guided in making a selection to cover the season.

In order to simplify the selection of varieties for any given district a classification of the most desirable varieties is given herewith based on their relative hardiness, which is their ability to withstand cold winters successfully.

Hardiest:—Transparent, Duchess, Dudley, McIntosh, Hibernal, Crabs. These are hardy as far north as Parry Sound, and can be grown successfully even further north.

Third Hardiest:—Blenheim, Tolman, Spy.

Fourth Hardiest:— Gravenstein, Wagner, Stark, Greening, Ben Davis.

Fifth Hardiest:—These varieties are more or less tender and thrive best south of a line drawn from Hamilton to Brantford and Goderich—Cayuga, Ribston, Hubbardston, Grimes, Ontario.

Sixth Hardiest—These varieties are tender and thrive best in the Lake Erie counties, although they are not entirely atisfactory even there—Jonathan Winesap, Spitzenberg, Newtown.

King and Baldwin are omitted from the above classification for the reason that their inclusion would probably be misleading. It is true that these varieties were formerly listed in about the fourth grade for hardiness, but intending planters would do well to make careful note of the fact that they have winter killed badly of recent years, even in the most southerly counties of Ontario.

The varieties which come into bearing earliest (about five or six years) are Duchess, Wealthy, Milwaukee, Wagner and Ontario. Most of the other varieties listed should begin bearing at about seven or eight years, but Blenheim and Spy are notorious exceptions to this, and frequently do not produce fruit until they reach fifteen to eighteen years of age.

The varieties which are least subject to apple scab are Duchess, Ribston, Blenheim, Hibernal, Baldwin and Russet.—Prof. J. W. Crow, O. A. College, Guelph.

Keep Potato Rot From Spreading.

When harvesting potatoes, more especially in damp seasons, it is essential to pick them over and discard any specimens that are diseased, particularly those that show any indication of rot. If this is not done, the disease is liable to spread through the whole mass during storage. If wilt or dry rot (Fusarium) or black leg and wet rot (B. solanisaprus) or late blight (Phytophthora infestans) has been noticed in the growing crop, it may be taken for granted that a percentage of the tubers will be infected. These diseases may be found in all stages of development in the tubers produced by an affected plant. These are the diseases most liable to spread to a greater or less extent through a pile or bag of stored tubers if any of them are affected at the time they are stored away. Consequently, the greatest care should be taken when harvesting a crop that has shown diseases when growing in the field.

These diseases show themselves on the tubers, either as a dry moldy rot or a wet slimy rot, or as brown or blackish discolorations. On some tubers the diseased condition may be fairly well advanced and consequently easily noticed. On other tubers the disease may be of recent development and not easily seen.

Where practicable it is desirable to pick out all tubers in which the disease is readily seen and then to wash the remainder either in a tub of water or by turning a hose on to them. This washing not only removes any soil that may be sticking on, but it intensifies the discolorations produced by the disease, and so makes it a comparatively easy matter to pick out those tubers which are only slightly affected. After washing, the undesirable specimens should be removed and the remainder thrown out in a thin layer to dry before being stored away.—Prof. D. H. Jones, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

TORTURED BY TERRIBLE ECZEMA

Suffered Three Years Until She Tried "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

DAME PETER LAMARRE

Pointe St.-Pierre, P. Q.

"I think it my duty to tell you how much your medicine has done for me. I suffered for three years with terrible Eczema. I consulted several doctors and they did not do me any good.

Then, I used one box of 'Sootha-Salva' and two boxes of 'Fruit-a-tives' and my hands are now clear. The pain is gone and there has been no return. I think it is a marvellous cure because no other medicine did me any good and I tried all the remedies I ever heard of, without benefit until I used 'Sootha-Salva' and 'Fruit-a-tives.'

'Fruit-a-tives' cooled the blood and removed the cause of the disease, and 'Sootha-Salva' completed the cure."

A Circus Romance

By EVELYN LEE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"I have a puppus," said Hiram Pearce—"a puppus in going to the succus."

"What purpose?" challenged his equally homespun wife, although she had dropped the backwoods vernacular long ago. "A circus? And you a deacon of the church! Oh, Hiram! have you forgotten that all our woes and misery date from the day our little Leslie went to a circus?"

Thereupon Mary broke down utterly, her face fell into her hands and she sobbed and wept as though her heart would break. Hiram winced. Then he stole over to her side and placed a loving, gentle hand upon the silvered head.

"I haven't forgot, poor old dear!" he said tenderly. "It's because of Leslie that I'm goin'. There isn't an hour since my temper and cruelty drove him away from us that I haven't reproached myself. There hasn't been a month in all the weary, waiting five years that I haven't tried to find out what became of him."

Yes, Hiram Pearce remembered well the day when Leslie, a lad of fifteen, had run away from school and had gone to the interdicted tented show. It was the truancy and disobedience, more than the fact that he had visited the sawdust arena that stirred up his father, who had used the whipping strap as he never used it before and as he resolved later he would never use it again. That night Lester Pearce disappeared and his stubborn father had delivered the stolid dictum:

"Let him go—I sha'n't hunt for him, or stop him! As he makes his bed, so must he lie. When he is tired of husks he'll come back, like the prodigal, the wiser, and, I hope, the better for his little journey in the world."

But as the weeks went on, and then the months, and the years, there was an aching void in the heart of the grim old farmer, and the fast-wrinkling face and bent form of Mary told him of her secret sufferings.

"Mary," he said, "look up and keep calm. I have something to tell you. Only today through a correspondent I have received an intimation that Leslie has been with Morton's Big Show, and Morton's Big Show exhibits on the town common here tomorrow."

"Oh, Hiram! it can't be true!" quavered Mary, all a-tremble, and clinging to his arm, white and flurried. "Oh, yes, yes—I can hardly wait. You must go to the circus, indeed, and I must go with you!"

All the next morning Hiram Pearce hung around the various groups of workmen erecting the tents and getting ready for the arrival of the performing troupe due about noon. Half a dozen times Hiram inquired about "a young fellow named Peace," but those interrogated shook their heads negatively, and his spirits sank as the hours wore on. Then he was lost, confused amid the bustle and the crowds. Mary's face was twitching, her eyes anxiously roaming all over the great tent as they sat beneath the white, glaring canvas. If Leslie was with the show of course he must be an actor. She shuddered as the tumblers trapezists and bareback riders came into the ring and their daring feats showed the risks of their calling. But no Leslie appeared, and Mrs. Pearce drew down her veil to conceal her tears as they left the show. Hiram could not leave the scene. He went around among the wagons and small tents, and, coming across a man whose briskness indicated that he had something to do with the show, told him of his quest.

"Pearce?" repeated the latter; "we have no one with us of that name."

"He is my dear lost Leslie!" sobbed Mrs. Pearce.

"You couldn't mean one Leslie Warburton?" spoke the man quickly. "You see, circus folks use fancy names. About twenty, light hair, slightly curly, always joking and smiling?"

"Yes! Yes!" cried Mrs. Pearce. "That's our boy! Oh, Hiram! have we found him at last?"

"You come with me," spoke their informant, and he led the way to a huge wagon, so large that it had doors and windows like a house, and resembled one as to its interior. It was filled with cots and invalid chairs, and half a dozen men, women and children occupied these.

A pretty, dainty girlish woman was fanning a fevered child in this circus hospital. A young man, who limped as he walked about, smilingly conversed with this and that recumbent patient. Toward him Mary ran with the fervent words:

"Oh, Leslie! Leslie! don't you know me?"

When the circus left town that night it departed without Leslie Pearce and his wife, Eloise, daughter of the ringmaster. Once more the truant boy was back under the home roof, with a wonderful story to relate—of a crippling fall from a trapeze, of becoming the "doctor," who took charge of those injured like himself, and the sick children of performers. And he would have gone home unsolicited that same day had not father and mother come after him, for he had saved enough to pay off the mortgage on the old home, with a surplus left to add two wings to the house.

Lucky Months.

According to Dr. Marcello Boldimi one of Italy's greatest scientists, men born between January 1 and March 31 are stronger, taller and superior in intelligence to those whose birthdays fall in other months. This view is borne out by the researches of another Italian scientist, Decla Rovere.

CANADA'S CALL.

No more the blast of bugle nor rallying roll of drum
Sends forth a call to battle, a strong, insistent "Come!"
For the swords are turned to ploughshares, and the knives to pruning hooks,
And the sun of peace is shining in all the vales and nooks.

But Canada's call is sounding again from shore to shore
To her sons and to her daughters, as she oft has called before;
Not this time to martial music does she call her sons to tread,
Nor to stain a valiant sword with a foe's blood streaming red.

But she calls her sons and daughters, us who dwelt at home secure,
When the battle loud was raging and the Hun was at the door;
She calls on us to succor the boys who fought and bled,
Maimed and crippled, halt and broken—those who suffered in our stead.

Time is past for warlike service, but she calls each patriot now
For his gifts upon her altar, gifts of gold, with solemn vow
To defend his native country with his brain and brawn and gold,
For the sake of those who suffered war's grim terrors manifold.

Do you not hear her calling, a strong, insistent "Come"?
Does your heart not beat in answer, like the roll of martial drum?
Your King and Country need you still, as in days of war now past,
To complete a glory victory — one that shall forever last.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Drive as If Other Was an Idiot.

The Halifax Automobile Association recently sent out a bulletin that contains some very good advice, under the caption, "Safety First and Always." It follows:

"Drive as if the other driver was a born idiot.

"Drive as if all children and most pedestrians were bent on suicide beneath your wheels.

"Drive as if every hill had a chasm at the bottom.

"Drive as if every curve was a highwayman, a Bengal tiger and a stone wall.

"Examine your car before you start, not after you stop, and you won't have accidents."

Not Too Healthy.

"It is healthier to be cremated," says an English physician. Maybe so, but for our part we know we should never be the same man again.

Disappearing Type.

"Do you believe a gun could be made to shoot around a corner?"

"No, but the sight of a creditor often has that effect upon a man."

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

ORIGINAL ADS HELP ROSENTHAL FIGHT H. C. L.

Rosenthal carries 3500 suits and overcoats at a time. He says he undersells the other fellow $5 to $15 on a garment, telling the public of the Wyoming valley about it every day in big advertisements in which "Uncle Louie" talks like a "Dutch Uncle" to the public.

He drives home the fact that he has eliminated high first floor rents, expensive managers, porters, immense electric light bills, official decorators, auto-delivery service, credits, big show windows and a few other overhead costs which burden the average retailer in men's clothing. Instead customers enter by climbing stairs on which are painted signs telling them of the dollars each step saves them. The whole second and third floors are given over to the Rosenthal establishment, where a large staff of clerks take care of trade.

Not long ago the store on the first floor had an opening. The crowds were photographed, cuts were made and run, showing the people anxious to get to the Rosenthal entrance. Another telling advertisement was written when the Rosenthals got a pair of trousers from a customer with a note, on which the wearer of the garments illustrated with freehand drawings the way the clothes were and the way he wanted them. Rosenthal had a cut made, played it up for an advertising feature and found it caught the eyes of almost all the newspaper readers of the Wyoming valley.

Yet with it all, Rosenthal, Sr., says the chief thing is to be able to deliver the goods. When asked to what agency he ascribed his success he declared that he gave publicity—unique, if possible, but publicity all the time and everywhere in his vicinity—first place.

The advertising that the Rosenthals use justifies itself in results. The sales for October, 1919, were 350 per cent. more than for October, 1918, and the firm does business and makes money on a narrower margin than do most establishments, because of its quick turnover and low overhead. Rosenthal, Sr., states the elimination of the high cost of doing business, which he features in his publicity, enables him to cut down on prices enough to save the consumer 25 per cent. He does not hesitate to tell this in all his space allotments, featuring it in a number of attractive ways.

Profiteering, economy, trusts, unique letters from customers and high living costs—all such topics are used for "copy," and they catch the eyes of newspaper readers for speedy cash returns.

PLAN STOPS CONFUSION OF "BARGAIN COUNTER"

Every retailer who likes an attractive counter and shelf display has sighed over the mess that develops in twenty to thirty minutes after the store opens when the old-fashioned method of piling goods on bargain tables is followed. Schwartz's shoe store in Read[illegible], solved it by putting a series of sample clearing cases, made of glass and installed in the main part of the store under a good light. They are intended for the showing of the odds and ends of stock which must be removed at reduced prices.

A sample of each lot is placed in the case, with a card on it telling the price and stating where in the store the full lot can be found. From a sample the customers can immediately make a selection and the stock can be shown in an instant.

This step, taken to do away with the mussy, disorderly and unsightly bargain counter, is intended not only to assist the customer but to aid in the constant clearing and cleaning up of stock.

"98 p. c. OF PEOPLE ARE HONEST, BUT—"

Ninety-eight per cent of the general run of people are honest at heart but when it gets down to cold-blooded facts you can only count upon 90 per cent of them meeting their obligations.

This is the conclusion reached by Joseph McAuliffe, credit manager for the J. M. Smyth Co., Chicago's largest installment furniture house, after keeping close tab for several years of the losses sustained by his firm, and ferreting out the reasons behind these losses. When the fact is taken into consideration that Mr. McAuliffe has direct supervision over 20,000 installment accounts year in and year out, his observations should prove of more than casual interest.

"When I say 98 per cent of the people are honest at heart but only 90 per cent pay their bills, I mean just that," Mr. McAuliffe asserts.

"The 8 per cent who are honest but do not meet their obligations fully intend doing so when they take them on but they have what we commonly call 'hard luck.' Perhaps some accident befalls the bread-winner of the family, maybe some member of the family takes sick and dies with the result that doctor and funeral bills eat almost a permanent hole into the wage-earner's income, or something else occurs to make the man who owes us 'get behind.' He dodges paying us, not because he is dishonest but because he owes more than he can cover with his income, and some one else is crowding him closer than we are. So he takes a 'breathing spell,' hoping to be able to catch up later with the payments he is missing with us. But before we know it the breathing spell has lengthened into a month, a year and if we don't watch our party will move away taking our goods in spite of the fact that he owes a considerable balance on them. But still he is honest at heart. If he ever got hold of a good bunch of money he would pay us. He always thinks he will do it 'next month' but never does.

FURNITURE STORE PAYS BRIDE'S RENT

Various inducements have been offered by furniture dealers the country over to encourage trade in their stores. Some have offered free Thanksgiving turkeys with every range bought around the time of this holiday. Others have "thrown in" a set of dishes with large purchases around Christmas time. Still others, but not recently, have given a ton of coal to use in the new range their customer purchased.

But one of the big furniture dealers in Providence, R. I., has a new one. Now with the rising cost of living, and with rents throughout the city mounting steadily, the C. H. Robinson store offers one month's rent free with every outfit sold to furnish the home of newly-weds.

This the firm announces is done in order to "give a helping hand to young couples when most needed at the setting up of their little homes." The offer holds good not only with cash purchases, but on installment purchases as well.

It has been found that numerous returned soldiers are being married nowadays and some of them come back from the battlefields of Europe with but little ready change. Thus the chance for a month's rent at the start of housekeeping.

Already several couples have taken advantage of the offer and the firm believes that this method of encouraging trade is going to prove a banner one.

In Old Japan.

Inscriptions on a workman's cap or back, stating the occupation and name of employer, are said to be customary in many part of Japan.

The Japanese are very much alike physically. Recent measurements taken of an infantry regiment showed no variation, except a couple of inches in height, or twenty pounds in weight.

The Japanese are expert gardeners. They give such individual attention to each blossom that wonderful results are obtained. Native gardeners have been known to help the buds of delicate and choice flowers to open by gently fanning them.

Seven pounds a year is said to be sufficient to enable a man to live in Japan—that is, pay for board and lodging—and many have been known to manage on three pounds a year.

A Japanese auction is a most solemn affair. The purchasers do not call out their bids or nod, but they write their names, together with the amounts they are willing to pay, on slips of paper. Then the slips, having been placed in a box, are looked through, and the articles awarded to the persons who had made the highest offer.

The Japanese festivals number five each year. They are easily remembered: 1st of first month, New Year; 3rd of third month, Feast of Dolls, for girls; 5th of fifth month, the Day for the God and Goddess of Love; 9th of ninth month, Feast of Chrysanthemums.

After taking 1000 ZUTOO TABLETS
Says they are Harmless

Mrs. (Dr.) Shurtleff, of Coaticook, says "Zutoo Tablets must have cured 500 of my headaches, for I have taken 1000 tablets. After trying every remedy within reach, I discarded them all four years ago for ZUTOO, which I have taken ever since.

MRS. M. PECK HAS GAINED 25 POUNDS

NINE YEARS TROUBLE ENDS AND SHE IS WELL AND HAPPY NOW.

"I have gained twenty-five pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac, and the troubles that have been making life miserable for me for nine years have been completely overcome," said Mrs. Minnie Peck, who lives at 9874 82nd Ave., Edmonton, the other day.

"When I commenced taking Tanlac," continued Mrs. Peck, "I was so weak and run down that I was hardly able to get about. Everything I ate disagreed with me, and I would suffer for two or three hours after each meal on account of gas forming and bloating me up. I would have severe cramping pains in the pit of my stomach. I was nervous; so much that the slamming of a door would upset me terribly, and a good night's sleep was out of the question for me. I would actually get out of bed every morning feeling more tired and worn out than I did the night before. This condition just kept getting worse all the time until I got to where I was compelled to stay in bed most of the time.

"Then I decided to give Tanlac a trial, and it's the honest truth, I commenced to feel better before I had finished my first bottle of this wonderful medicine, and my condition just kept getting better until I am now as well as I ever was in my life. I never have a sign of stomach trouble now, and I have a fine appetite and eat just anything I want. I have gotten back all my strength and can easily do all my housework. My nerves are in perfect condition, and I sleep like a child every night. It is simply wonderful the way I have gained in weight, and in fact, I just feel fine all the time. Yes, sir, Tanlac is a wonderful medicine and as long as I live I will never lose an opportunity to say a good word for it.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The Forests of Quebec.

The value of the forests of the Province of Quebec, not only in maintaining home industries but in building up a great export business and thus rendering the balance of trade more favorable for the Dominion of Canada as a whole, is becoming increasingly evident to statesmen and the public generally. The necessity for recuperative measures for the forests of the province is rapidly becoming obvious and is at present receiving the earnest consideration of the governmental agencies concerned. In addition to the investigations of the Commission of Conservation and the Dominion Forestry Branch, the Provincial Forest Service has the whole situation under very careful investigation. While the great bulk of the forests are on crown lands, and thus subject to such cutting regulations as may be prescribed by the governmental agencies concerned, the fact remains that only to a comparatively small extent do the existing cutting regulations provide to anything like an adequate degree for the perpetuation of the forest on cut-over lands. Studies made by the Commission of Conservation show, for example, that in the pulp-wood forests of Eastern Canada, especially in the Province of Quebec, the present methods of cutting are resulting in the steady deterioration of the forest, and are rapidly rendering great areas relatively unproductive.

The demands for export material are steadily increasing. Not only does the United States take about 40 per cent. of the pulp-wood produced in all Canada, but there is an export business of wood-pulp and paper to the United States, Great Britain, France, and other countries, aggregating over $26,000,000 in 1917, and probably around $35,000,000 in 1918. The exports of lumber add very handsomely to this total, and are becoming much greater through shipments to Great Britain and other European countries.

Alberta's Liquor Act.

That proportional representation will be in force before the next provincial election was the statement made by the Premier, the Hon. Charles Stewart, at a meeting held in Cochrane. The statement was made in reply to the demand of the farmers for proportional representation, which forms a plank in their platform. Another important problem touched on by the Premier was the liquor act enforcement. "We can't have complete enforcement of the liquor act," he said, "because people do not look upon infringements of the act as a criminal offence. I think we have better enforcement of the act than in any other province. I shall be glad when the original Alberta act comes back to its own, with federal amendments cancelled."

Reclaim 800,000 Acres of Lands.

A triangle, comprising 800,000 acres of land lying between the Saskatchewan river, the Carrot river and the Sepanok Channel, which, for an expenditure of about $1,500,000 could be reclaimed, will be brought to the attention of the Minister of the Interior, Hon. Edward Brown, the Provincial Treasurer of Manitoba, announces. This land is admirably suited for agricultural purposes and, according to Mr. Brown, if the Dominion Government will make no move in the matter, should the rights of the lands be vested in the province, there is every possibility of the expenditure for reclamation being entertained by the local Government.

Found Wanting

By SAIDEE ESTELLE BALCOM

She sat gazing into the fireplace with a faraway look in her deep, dark eyes, thinking, dreaming, going over bit by bit the episodes of the most eventful evening of her life. She had not yet laid aside her exquisite satin garb, nor the superb jewels that had made her the envy of every girl friend. All around her was elegance, the tokens of wealth and luxury, yet she was not happy.

That evening had seen her social debut, and it had been a grand success. Winnie Trevor had never looked so beautiful. She reckoned hollow adulation at its true worth, however, and now that the glare, the excitement, the superficial and unreal had faded, she was her own self once more.

It had been a transition from the modest home of a strict Puritanical aunt to the glitter and animation of the great city. She had become an heiress in a day to a fortune of over one hundred thousand dollars in liquid funds. Only one person in her old home outside of her aunt she regretted to any extent—Gilbert Rose.

An old girl friend who had married well and had become a social queen had undertaken to launch her among people who were "somebody." Mrs. Lucia Davenport had done more than that—she had picked out for Winnie an eligible parti—Paul Despard, occasionally litterateur and always a gentleman of leisure.

A strange double event had that day signalized. Two letters had come, one from Gilbert Rose back in the home village, breathing undying fidelity and asking if she still remembered him. The missive deserved a reply, for practically he placed his heart at her feet and asked that she accept it.

There was eloquence about the second letter—from Paul Despard. It comprised a riot of words and phrases that exploited his erudition as a trickster with tongue and pen. He had sent her a beautiful bouquet. It rested on her table now striking and brilliant, but with the hot-house taint. Beside it lay a small bunch of modest field violets, pressed almost dry now. It had come in the letter from Gilbert Rose, and somehow it brought a longing to the heart of Winnie for the purple fields, the beauties of dell and dale. When she retired an hour later, the little wisp of violets lay upon the pillow beside her and her old serenity of mind returned, as she closed her eyes and dreamed of the days that had known none of the merciless exactions of shallow society.

Almost was she minded the next morning to change all her plans and forego the social ambitions which Lucia Davenport had inculcated. Then that artful and manoeuvering matchmaker drew her into the vortex of a round of amusements. Strenuously the social queen advocated the cause of Paul Despard. The latter pressed his suit vigorously. There came another letter from Gilbert, for Winnie had laid aside his first, unsettled in her mind as to a definite decision.

It was by chance, it was by good fortune that Winnie happened across an old friend of her dead mother. She saw a good deal of this sincere, true-minded woman, enough to realize that the new world she had invaded had its pitfalls, its deceits, its disappointments. And then a resolution came into the mind of Winnie. She did not consult Lucia as to this. On urgent special invitation Paul Despard and Gilbert Rose found themselves face to face at the home of the young heiress, each wondering why the other was there, and both under the impression that they had been summoned to hear the decision of Miss Trevor as to their proposals. Winnie welcomed them in a room where sat a clerical-looking old man whom she introduced as the Reverend Joel Benton.

"I wished you to know," said Winnie to her two wondering guests, "that I have this day turned over to the charity circle of which Doctor Benton is the conservator my entire fortune, feeling that this would be in accord with views of my uncle who left me his estate. I have retained nothing for myself. I am going back home. If either or both of you gentlemen wish to come to bid me good-bye tomorrow, I shall be glad to receive you."

Paul Despard, reaching the street, bade his rival a crisp adieu and decided that the young heiress that was had gone out of his life. He glanced at his watch and calculated how soon he would reach the home of a former flame and renew his laggard allegiance.

Winnie Trevor awaited an expected call the next afternoon. She had read of the speedy engagement of Paul Despard to Miss Agnes Ward in the morning paper, and knew that he had failed in the test. Her color rose as Gilbert Rose was announced. His face was grave, but true and open as ever.

"You spoke of going home, Winnie," he said. "Let me take you back to Aunt Mercy. And it will mean so much for all your old friends! With you there, the birds will seem to sing to me as of old, the flowers be brighter and life once more radiant and hopeful."

"Do you mean all you say, Gilbert," she asked.

"Could I be untrue to you—even to myself?"

"Then in answer to your letter"—and words failed her but both her hands rested in his own, and Gilbert Rose knew that her brief social career would soon become a faded dream.

Superintendent Williams, of the C.P.R. states that a safety block system will be installed between Milton and Guelph Junction, costing about $30,000.

AN ANCIENT GUILD.

Cutlers' Feasts Have Taken Place Annually Since 1648.

When, recently, the Premier went to Sheffield as guest of the Cutlers' Company of that city, he was merely conforming to an old custom which decrees that a member of the Government in power shall attend the cutlers' annual feast, says London Tit-Bits.

Incidentally, it is an unwritten law of the company that the visiting Minister's speech should deal with trade matters, and not with politics; hence Mr. Lloyd George's pronouncement regarding the brighter industrial outlook.

Precisely how long Sheffield has been identified with the cutlery trade is not easy to say. Historians affirm that products of the Sheffield cutlers' art were forthcoming as long ago as the time of Chaucer—the fourteenth century.

At any rate there is no doubt that the trade is one of considerable antiquity, and by it Sheffield has grown from a straggling village to be one of the greatest cutlery producing centres of the world.

The history of the Company of Cutlers in Hallamshire—as that part of Yorkshire was at one time known—is rooted about as deeply in the past, although it would seem that the company was not placed on a firm footing until 1624, whence it has steadily risen to its existing place of importance among the guilds of the country.

The office of Master Cutler, of Sheffield, is one of the most coveted positions in the north. In order of precedence among the city dignitaries it ranks next to that of lord mayor, and the high repute in which the office is held has always attracted men of the highest standing in Sheffield business circles.

Among the Masters Cutler there have been not a few men of humble birth who have found fame and fortune in their native city. Such a one was Mark Firth, whose life-story is interwoven with the romance of a huge business.

Firth was the son of a working man, a smelter with the old firm of Sanderson. He left school, and went to work with the firm at a pound a week. On being refused a rise, he determined to start in business for himself. There were struggles and bitterly hard times ahead, but in the end perseverance triumphed, and Mark Firth died worth many thousands of pounds. In his lifetime he founded almshouses, gave his city a forty-acre park, and endowed the college which has since developed into Sheffield's famous university.

The Cutlers' feasts have taken place annually, almost without omission, since 1648. Cutlers' Hall, one of the three principal buildings in the city, is the scene of these celebrations, at which the Master Cutler presides, attended by the officers and fellows of the company, and many important guests.

The Master Cutler himself attains the chair of the company by a series of stages. In the first place, he is chosen by the company to be an assistant or ordinary member, then he becomes a Searcher (the title formerly bestowed on those whose business it was to search for goods that did not conform to the rules of the company); next a Junior Warden, then a Senior Warden, and in the following year Master Cutler, unless, by paying a substantial fine, he seeks to be relieved of the responsibilities of the office, the final obligations of which are extremely heavy. This year's Master Cutler is Lieut.-Col. H. K. Stephenson, D.S.O., M.P.

That Sheffield cutlery is pre-eminent in the world is due in no small measure to the efforts of this ancient guild in the interests of its members. In the early days of the trade a great deal of piracy in connection with trademarks, went on among the makers of Hallamshire whittles" and other articles of cutlery, and one of the company's first proceedings was to discover and stamp out some of those frauds.

Bread Problem In West Indies.

"The West Indian colonies, in common with the rest of the world, have their bread problem. How this is to be met is the subject of an official inquiry, and an interim report of British Guiana Flour Substitutes Committee indicates the lines upon which action can be most usefully taken. Analyses collated by the committee show that the products of tropical origin which most nearly approach wheat-flour in food value are rice, guinea-corn, and maize. These materials can be employed alone only in the preparation of cakes. Without wheat-flour they do not give satisfactory bread. Other products," says Nature, "of relatively higher starch content which are of local origin, e.g., cassava, sweet potatoes, tannias, and eddoes, can also be employed in this way, but they yield an article of lower food value and wider nutrient ratio. It is possible, however, by the addition of a proportion of meal, obtainable from locally-grown pulses, e.g., pigeon-peas, black-eye peas, lima, and bonavist beans, to bring the nutrient ratio of these more starchy products up to the desired standard. Action upon these lines is recommended, and a proposal is put forward for the establishment of a factory or factories for converting the locally-grown raw materials into non-perishable and marketable products."

The Origin of Cambric.

Cambrai, the French town which has been the centre of recent fighting, is interesting because of its manufactures. In 1530 a purse of gold was offered in behalf of Henry VIII of England to the workmen who would produce the finest linen for the king's shirts. The prize was won by the weavers of Cambrai and the material was called cambric, in honor of the town in which it was made. So fine was the linen that there were one hundred and twenty or more threads to the inch. Straightway it became the fashion for all fine underwear, collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs, and baby dresses to made kerchiefs, and baby dresses to be made of cambric.

Chief Peters, Chatham, has been notified that Paul Tetreault, wanted on a charge of assault against a young girl, has been arrested in Saginaw, Mich.

Agricultural Revival Needed in Great Britain To Strengthen Country

IN a recent speech Lloyd George said that agriculture was the greatest industry in the land, but that it had received little encouragement. Since 1871 the number of people engaged in Great Britain in the cultivation of the soil had been reduced by 600,000 or 700,000 men, and but for the war this process might have continued. During the war, however, it had been discovered that this neglect of agriculture had brought the country close to disaster. If Germany had pursued the same policy Germany would have collapsed within a year. But in spite of the blockade and with a much poorer soil than England's she was able to hold out for four years.

Great Britain, he said, cannot again take the chances she took before the war. She came too near disaster. During the war the agricultural community made a special effort, increasing the productive area by 1¾ million acres. Before the war the grain imported was three-fifths of the whole. During the war three-fifths were home-grown and two-fifths imported. There must not, he said, be a return to pre-war conditions. There must be a settled policy in regard to agriculture. He thus referred to some of the advantages of home production.

"You have a market here at your own doors. It is computed by men who understand this business that you can raise in this country on food commodities 150 'millions' worth which is now brought from abroad. If you can take away 150 millions of what we have to pay across the water the sovereign would look up. It is not a question merely of increasing exports. It is a question also of diminishing imports which are capable of being produced in this country without increasing the cost of living. I think you can do that."

All this sounds like protectionist argument, and some will be surprised that he does not follow it up by proposing protective duties on food. Against that, however, public opinion in Great Britain seems to be too strong. He proposes a guarantee of prices to the farmer, a guarantee to the tenant of security of tenure, and a guarantee from the farmer of maximum production. He refers also to scientific state aid and technical instruction. He would also take strong steps to lure the people back to the land.

"Men have been drawn to foreign lands by placards on the wall with attractive pictures of what is awaiting them when they cross the flood. We shall only keep the population on the land and bring others back there when England herself will be a better placard than any you can paste on her walls. Let us chase away the appalling dullness of the villages and bring back the old country life of England. Make the country more attractive, as it is much healthier for brain and soul and heart than the towns."

The success of this policy would mean that Great Britain would send fewer agricultural laborers abroad and import less grain from abroad. It would reduce the adverse balance of trade against Great Britain and make her to a larger extent a self-contained country. Of course large quantities of food would still have to be imported, for Great Britain is and must be a country primarily of urban industries, commerce, and shipping. But no doubt the drift away from the countryside has gone too far, and it is wise to check it.

Needed Speeding Up!

He had come up to London for a few days to see the sights, and chanced to stroll into a quiet little restaurant for a meal.

After waiting for some time, a languid lady brought a basin of sugar and placed it on his table. He waited again, and then she came along with a jug of milk.

The wait after that became longer than ever, and the country visitor grew restive.

"I say, miss!" he called at last.

"Yes," said the lady, as she patted her hair.

"I don't want to worry you," the man apologized, "but I'm only staying in London for another two days, and I'd like to get this meal finished in time to catch the train."

ROYAL EXPENSES.

King and Queen Run Household on Economical Lines.

In order to save heavy travelling expenses, the King arranged that during his stay in Scotland three only of his Privy Councillors should come north when a council was to be held. Everyone knows how the King cut down his private expenses during the war, how the royal household ate war bread, and adhered most strictly to rations, how every pound that could be saved was given to the war charities.

But King George and Queen Mary began their career of economy long before the war. Their housekeeping at Marlborough House was always a pattern in this direction. All bills had to be presented monthly by the royal tradesmen, and all were paid within a week of presentation. No discounts were asked for or accepted if offered, but, on the other hand, any attempt at profiteering met with short shrift. The offender was simply removed from the list.

The King—the prince, as he then was—himself went through all accounts for personal necessities, such as clothes, books, cigars, and all these private bills had to be initialed by him before payment.

When King Edward came to the throne he instituted economies which cut the civil list down by tens of thousands of pounds. Old servitors were pensioned off and useless posts abolished. King George went further still, and his private household is at present an example to all his subjects, in the matter of administration, which is careful without being in the least parsimonious.

It might be mentioned that waste of any kind is abhorrent to the King or Queen. The waste in Queen Victoria's time was frightful. A candle once lighted, a bottle of wine once opened, a game pie once cut—these became perquisites of the servants. Nothing of that sort occurs to-day.

Solomon's Gold.

The Queen of Sheba paid her famous visit to King Solomon about the year 950 B.C. She bestowed upon that monarch a huge dose of the crudest kind of flattery (which he doubtless found delightful), and also many gifts, chief among which was half a ton of gold.

It is unfortunate that, barring the brief mention in the Scriptures, history has nothing to say about her whatever. All that students of antiquity have been able to find out is that her kingdom, called Saba—Sheba being a corruption of spelling—occupied the southwest corner of Arabia.

That Asiatic peninsula, nearly as large as Continental Europe with Russia left out, was at the above-mentioned period a seat of high cultivation — on a par, it is believed, with Babylonia and Egypt. But, strange to say, almost nothing is known of its history. In Solomon's day it seems to have been divided into four kingdoms, the richest and strongest of which was Saba.

The Arabians in that epoch were great traders, their ships voyaging to ports of India, and beyond to China; or, following another route, down the east coast of Africa and through the Mozambique Channel possibly as far as the Cape of Good Hope. The seafaring adventures of Sinbad the Sailor express in fictional form the variety of their maritime experiences.

One has only to glance at a map to see that the great trade route to Egypt and Palestine must have led through the strait of Bab-el-Mandeb, the gate of the Red Sea, directly past the Queen of Sheba's front door, so to speak. No wonder that her country was rich, owning and operating as it undoubtedly did, large fleets of cargo vessels that carried much of the commerce of the world.

Presumably the main object of her visit to King Solomon was not, as she politely said, to listen to his wisdom, but to improve trade relations with that monarch's country. The gold she brought came from Rhodesia, in South Africa, from which source (as is now deemed satisfactorily proved) Solomon obtained the enormous quantities of that precious metal which the Bible describes him as possessing.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Origin of "Tying the Knot."

A priest at a wedding in old Babylonia used to take a thread from the garment of the bride and another from that of the groom. These he tied together into a knot, and presented it to the bride as a symbol of the binding nature of the union between her and her husband. Hence the expression "tying the knot."

An [illegible]

Formerly an inmate of the Princess Mary Village Homes Industrial School, Addlestone, Surrey, England a young girl named Vivian Perry has been boarded out to service in the north of England under the conditions that have been constantly denounced as a scandalous invasion of parental rights. The circumstances of the case are of peculiar urgency. The girl's mother, a widow, has recently contracted a second marriage with an Australian soldier, a prosperous farmer in civil life, able and willing to make a comfortable home for the mother and child. Upon this footing an application has been made to the Home Office for the girl's release. Not having seen her child for upwards of three years, the mother desired to chat things over with her, and after some discussion it was arranged that upon an undertaking from the parents to pay her fare from Westmoreland, the girl should come to the school at Addlestone for a short holiday. To her great disappointment, however, the mother was not permitted to see the girl alone; the interview took place in the presence of several of the school officials, one of whom held the girl's hand throughout the proceedings, the child being understood to state that she had no wish to escape from the loving care of her loyal custodians. This alleged decision on the part of the poor little captive has been since "confirmed" by a letter, which, though in her own handwriting, bears every mark of official inspiration, while two letters from the mother sent by registered post to the child's address in Westmorland have elicited no reply!

Becalmed a Plight of the Past.

A schooner bound from Sydney, Australia, to San Francisco, California, was becalmed in mid-ocean. While the ship was lying idly upon the bosom of the unruffled water, as if posing for the picture of the original "painted ship upon a painted ocean," the captain of the vessel became agitated by the thought that he would arrive at his destination too late to take advantage of certain prices on his cargo, as these rates had been named in the charter. Then his eye wandered to the ship's launch hanging idly at its davits, whereat the quiet scene became enlivened by the happy activity of an idea. The launch was put over the side and, at the end of a long tow line, after some effort, overcame the inertia of the ship, carrying it forward at a three-knot rate. Five times on its trans-Pacific journey the launch overcame the calm and won a quick voyage for its ship, with the result that the owners will install small powerful launches on their entire fleet of schooners for the purpose of meeting similar emergencies. In other words, it is believed that the happy idea that the skipper found operating in that mid-Pacific calm will make it unnecessary for the modest sailing ships of the world to sit idly on their keels waiting for the wind.

GYROSCOPE FOR SHIPS

PASSENGER SHIPS TO BE EQUIPPED WITH THIS INVENTION.

Largest Vessels to Cease Rolling and Passengers to Be at Rest—From the Point of View of Economy There Is Much to Be Said for New Device.

THE day is coming when ships on the ocean, even the biggest liners, will cease their rolling, and the passengers be at rest. No more will a few railroad carloads of lemons be carried aboard to cure the mal de mer, and no more will the busy steward ply his sick-room acre. The gyroscope is coming into its own as a stabiliser of ships, and the success of some experimental installations gives assurance that the modern passenger vessels will soon be equipped with this ingenious apparatus. Before the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers in New York a few days ago, E. A. Sperry outlined the results of gyroscope stabilization, and if his facts are correct, marine people will not be long in deriving the benefits he prophesies for it.

He declared that after 15 years of experiment along this line plans are now being adopted for extensive utilization of gyroscope control. The gyroscope is an instrument that acts on the principle that a quickly revolving disc, resting lightly on a central pivot, will maintain a steady axis with great stiffness. Mr. Sperry says that in all previous attempts to prevent rolling the equipment has operated passively, depending on a certain amount of roll for the stabilizing movements, and the amount by which the roll has been reduced has never been satisfactory, nor have the means themselves been practicable. The stablizing effect did not begin to make itself felt until the roll was quite pronounced, and then it was too late. What is wanted is not reduction of roll, but prevention, and the active gyroscope seems to have the goods. "For years engineers have observed the strange peregrinations of the gyroscope, but have failed to perceive the dormant powers of this simple apparatus, only awaiting the application of artificial 'precession' to render it abundantly serviceable for stabilizing even the largest ship." The larger the ship the easier it is to stablize her. The gyro outclasses all other mechanisms in that, while its weight and cost vary as the cube of its lineal dimensions, its stabilizing power varies no less than the fifth power.

The Thorneycrofts invented a great pendulum, and others have bethought themselves of a tank, for stablising purposes. But whereas in these cases a pound is only a pound in force applied, the gyroscope has vast powers far beyond its weight. Every pound is multiplied by the velocity of the particle, so that a comparatively few pounds are capable of doing the work of tons. With the active gyro, this power is exerted independently, and can be applied to prevent rolling, instead of merely countering it. Some naval architects have feared that the forces and stresses involved by heavy washing of waves against an apparently unyielding vessel would do great damage to her. The nature and magnitude of the stresses are said to be well known now, and have been under observation in actual installations. Knowledge of the subject being accurate, it can be said that the vessel which rides the waves on even keel, masts vertical, is subjected to only a fifth or sixth of the strains caused by unrestricted rolling. The gyroscope can be started or stopped, and the action of the vessel studied under the same set of conditions.

In action, it reduces strains and stresses to almost nothing, even in storms of the greatest magnitude. With it operating, the creaks and groans that issue from the sides of a heavily rolling ship disappear, and the passengers have a new sense of security and freedom from terror of storms. A stabilized ship invariably rises with the sea, rising and falling gracefully. Some naval authorities expected the seas would pound the ship as they would a dock, but the reverse is true. There is no splashing and pounding.

Moreover, from the point of view of economy there is much to be said for the new device. It not only lengthens the lives of ships, but it saves power. In a heavy sea, a steamer yaws back and forth, the helm constantly in use to steady her, and there is a large loss of propulsive power because of the use of the helm. It is estimated that there is a saving of one-twelfth in actual power. A stabilized ship needs little steering, because it virtually stays in its dead track, and can almost be termed self-steering. A wallowing ship travels far off its course, whereas the stabilized ship saves feet and yards at almost every other bound of the sea. For a 15,000-ton vessel at 18 knots, the loss from rolling might easily amount to 1,000 horse-power, and when coal is so scarce and high, this is an item every shipowner has to scan carefully.

Vanity Boxes of a Faraway Day.

Recently excavations in Italy have unearthed many toilet articles used by women of the Etruscan period, long before the Romans came into power. Among these are vanity boxes, very much like those of the present time. These were carried on a slender chain that fastened to the girdle of the Etrurian belles, and contained sweet-scented pomades and other "beautifiers" with which they were accustomed to dab their classical face from time to time.

One of the most interesting relics of this faraway day is a hand mirror, shaped exactly the same as those of our time. But instead of glass the Etrurian women were compelled to depend upon a surface of highly burnished copper for a glimpse of their loveliness.

Articles similar to those found in the Etruscan tombs have been discovered at various times in Egypt, Assyria and elsewhere, but this recent find is a notable one because of the excellent state of the articles and their variety.

Verda's Troubles

By MARION LEE

"Are you sure of what you say, Harold?"

"Absolutely. I found in our files today a newspaper clipping referring to the trial of Dale Vinton in Cleveland four years ago for bigamy. As we know, your employer was formerly located in that city. The name is not a common one, and, between you and I, sister, I do not approve of you being in the service of a man with such a record."

"You know best, brother," answered Verda Bruce, a dreary expression coming into her face. Then with an evident effort she controlled her emotion, went up to her own room, and, throwing herself on its bed, buried her face in the pillows and gave way to sobs and tears.

Harold Bruce was a reporter for a commercial agency and she could not doubt his words. For six months Verda had been employed in the brokerage office of Dale Vinton. She had never been treated so considerately by an employer. The work had been light and the pay good. Mr. Vinton had shown many little courteous attentions that had won her respect and esteem. More than that, as she wept her sorrows away Verda had to confess to herself that she had come to love him deeply, sincerely.

Verda arose with a wan face, but her lips were tightly set, and coupled with the expression of misery in her eyes was a certain resoluteness that led to immediate action.

"Harold is right," she murmured, brokenly. "I will write my resignation and mail it at once," then, ready to go out to the letter box, Verda suddenly recalled that there were some of her personal belongings in her desk. She had a key to the office. It was one hour after closing time. She decided to visit the office, get her belongings and leave the letter on Mr. Vinton's desk.

Verda reached the building where the office was located, and, the elevators having stopped running, toiled up to the fourth floor. As she neared the door of the office she paused, for a light showed through the ground glass door. She listened intently, but no sound broke upon the stillness within. She reasoned that some employee or the janitor had neglected to turn off the electric light, noiselessly fitted the key to the lock and opened the door a mere crack and gazed within.

With a shock, a thrill, Verda stood transfixed at the scene that confronted her startled vision. Seated, or rather crouched back in a chair was her employer. He was bound securely to the chair and there was a gag between his lips. Coming from the vault were two rough-looking men, carrying between them a little safe. They placed this on a table and returned into the vault evidently bent upon a further search for money or its equivalent.

Verda stepped within the room, closing the door gently behind her. The eyes of her inert and helpless employer were fixed upon her with astonishment mingled with an expression of appeal. Verda knew that she must act at once, and did. Swiftly she tiptoed to the vault, seized the heavy iron vault door and slammed it shut, with trembling fingers she shot the knob bolt. Then she hurried to the side of Mr. Vinton, released his hands from their bonds, and, overcome with excitement staggered towards the telephone. She just managed to retain strength to summon the police and dropped into a chair in a dead swoon.

"Where are they—those dreadful men," she stammered incoherently, as sensibility returned and she found her employer at her side pressing a wet towel to her head.

"You brave little woman!" he cried spontaneously. "They are gone—in the hands of the police, and you have the credit of capturing two noted criminals, besides saving my property, perhaps my life."

Verda struggled unsteadily to her feet. "I must go, Mr. Vinton," she said tremulously.

"Surely not until you have told me what this means," said Vinton in a gentle, persuasive tone.

As he spoke he extended the letter of resignation which Verda had dropped to the floor of the room amid her exciting episode of the hour. She flushed crimson.

"I—I am going to work in a new place," she faltered incoherently. Then, at a view of his frank, earnest face, she broke down utterly and sobbed out the entire story appertaining to the letter and her visit to the office.

Dale Vinton listened gravely. There was a serious look in his eyes as he went to his desk and removed thence a photograph. Apparently it was his own picture, but he explained:

"A cousin of my own name. I have not cared to air a family disgrace, but you have a right to know the truth. Your unfounded suspicion has distressed you, Verda, do you care so much for me as all that?"

"Oh, yes! yes! more than you can know!" she confessed impetuously, in compensation for the wrong she had done him. "Forgive me, Mr. Vinton, won't you?"

"Has it not all worked out for the best?" he questioned, the love-light in his eyes telling Verda that she need never doubt him again. "As to your resignation, I accept it, Verda—as my stenographer. I offer you a new position—as my wife."

All's Right With the World.

While yet there lives in the hearts of men a sentiment that can find expression only by the placing of a rag doll in the arms of a child it is going to be a pretty good old world, after all.

From MRS. MORRISS

TO THE ELECTORS:

It is gratifying to find that the principle for which I stood in the recent Election—the co-operation of men and women on the Board of Education—is splendidly upheld by the Electors. The Returns show that this principle was heartily endorsed in all sections of the Community.

I shall endeavour to faithfully carry out the responsibility entrusted to me.

Sincerely Yours

KATE MORRIS

Thanks from Sisson

I wish to express my very keen appreciation of your confidence manifested by electing me to your Public Utilities Commission. I take this means of thanking not only those who marked their ballots in my favor, but also those who worked so enthusiastically on behalf of my Candidature.

ICE TO COVER CANADA?

Dominion Frozen Once, But Yesterday of 40,000 Years Ago.

Prof. A. P. Coleman, F.R.S., of the University of Toronto Department of Geology, addressed the Royal Canadian Institute in the Physics Building of the University, on "Ice Ages and Their Causes." He told of some of the greater ice ages of the past, and expressed the opinion that we were now living in an inter-glacial period.

"The last ice probably disappeared forty thousand years ago," said Prof. Coleman, "and as I do not believe we are half through the inter-glacial period, it will be many thousands of years before Canada is again covered by ice."

Discussing the causes of these ice ages, he said: "Some geologists think the causes are purely astronomical, others think the elevations and depressions which take place from time to time on the earth's crust cause the formation and flow of these gigantic glacial ice fields, while another explanation is the change in the composition of the atmosphere from age to age.

"During the greater part of the world's history the climate was mild right to the Arctic regions. I think the probable cause of these worldwide changes in temperature is the fact that the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere changes greatly from age to age, we now have only about one-third as much carbon dioxide in the air as was contained in the atmosphere during the ancient ages when the climate was mild from Pole to Pole, and about twice as much as was contained during glacial ages. The carbon dioxide makes the air a non-conductor of heat and the atmosphere, accordingly acts as a blanket varying in warmth directly as the proportion of carbon dioxide varies. This is my theory of the cause of the changes in temperature in different ages."

Good Advice.

So we advise mere man to assume a detached and philosophical attitude toward women's styles. There is no use getting excited, no use trying to change them, no use appealing to a woman to abjure them. The best thing to do is to let the women have their own way. It is the only thing to do, because they'll have it anyway. So what's the use. Besides, it is nothing but vanity and imagination that makes men think they know better than women what is best for women.—Saskatoon Daily Star.

STRANGE RACE IN IRELAND.

Small Group Live Apart and Elect Their Own King.

There is a strange corner of Ireland to-day where a strange group of people live. It is called the Claddagh. A writer in Munsey's Magazine tells about the place and its people as follows:

The Claddagh is a straggling settlement across the river Corrib from the old seaport town of Galway. Its inhabitants are a dark-haired, dark-skinned people who are popularly believed to be of Spanish blood. This theory of their origin is supported by the historical fact that Galway long carried on an active trade with Spain; but ethnologists regard it as more probable that they are a remnant of the prehistoric Irish race of Firbolgs, who were driven to rocky seashores and mountain fastnesses by the invasion of the taller and lighter Milesians. Their settlement on the Corrib seems to have existed since the dawn of history, and traces of their primitive stone dwellings down at the water's edge are to be seen to this day.

The present Claddagh village is a huddle of thatched houses with a population of about fifteen hundred. The men live by fishing—mackerel, mostly—in their open boats, and the women carry the catch to the market in flat baskets, which they poise on their heads. The dress of the women is extremely picturesque, and is worn with graceful dignity — a bright petticoat woven at the loom and dyed with madder or indigo, a cloak worn like the Spanish mantilla, and a hood or kerchief draped around the head. They seldom intermarry with strangers, but of late the steam trawlers that sweep the wider Atlantic have called away their young men to adventure outside Galway Bay, and many never return.

For a long time they chose their own king, and even to-day the older men govern and the old customs are maintained. Gold ornaments of rare design are part of the inheritance of their dim Celtic past.

Send for a Bomb, Sir.

The excited voice of the mother of George B. Elliott of the firm of Breed, Elliott & Harrison, announced that an old house owned by Mr. Elliott was burning.

"Is it still burning?" inquired Mr. Elliott, with some anxiety in his voice. When informed in the affirmative, he replied, with much relief, "Well, there is nothing that I can do," and told his mother to notify him if the fire was in danger of going out.

Too Common Phenomenon.

A medical paper advances the theory that "man is slightly taller in the morning than he is in the evening." We have never tested this, but we have certainly noticed a tendency to become "short" toward the end of the month.—Books of To-day and To-morrow.

It is easier to find a fault than it is to lose it again.

One should learn to talk well—also when it is well to talk.

With the possible exception of vanity, a woman may outlive all her faults.

Many a man loves his enemy because it comes out of a pocket flask.

If you would know a man study his infirmities rather than his virtues.

BELFAST.

A City in Ireland That Has Always Prospered.

The man who approaches Belfast from the point of view of just another town will as surely be mistaken as the man who approaches Dublin from that standpoint. Dublin is Dublin, and Belfast is Belfast, and it is impossible to describe either in terms of history, or streets, or buildings, or by any of the ordinary accepted means. Thus Belfast, quite justly, prides itself on its City Hall, and claims, not without reason, that it is one of the most beautiful, if not the most beautiful, in the world. The real Belfast, however, is not to be seen in the great building which looks down the length of Royal avenue, but rather in a not very pretentious building in a not very pretentious street, a building known to every Orangeman the world over as the Ulster Hall.

In the Ulster Hall, on the occasion of a great Orange demonstration, decked with flags and "red hands of Ulster" and emblazoned with the Orange watchwords "Derry, Aughrim, and the Boyne," one sees the real Belfast, as one does, too, along the Shank Hill road any evening, especially any Sunday evening in July. The Irishman of Belfast takes himself very seriously. The Irishman of Dublin will, it is true, yield nothing to him in the matter of "dimonstration," but the Irishman of Dublin is always perilously near to laughing at himself when the curtain rings down, or even before it is rung down. "Sure, it's the tark—the grand tark there is to it, an' the life there be around, an' the boys up an' about an' behavin' outrageous." "Tark is it," retorts the man from Belfast. "Aye, tark and plenty, but it's the actin' and doin' that'll do anny wan thing. Sure, there wasn't much tark to it on Boyne Day."

And so at the hundreds of street corner meetings in July, working up to the "day of blessed memory," and stretching on beyond it, there is a terrible earnestness. There is earnestness in the man who beats the drum and heads the procession, and earnestness in the men, women and children who follow his lead. July drumming, indeed, is a religious ceremonial of that strange political flavor which is to be found perhaps only in Ulster. To relieve such stern exercises in a burst of laughter round the corner of some side street would be as impossible in Belfast as it would be inevitable in Dublin.

Then Belfast is nothing if not orderly. The Irishman of Belfast prides himself on his processions. He joys in concerted movement. Long before the days of the Ulster Volunteers he reveled in the "swing there is to ut." He rejoices in self-imposed discipline and, on the occasion of his demonstrations, "rules and regallations" are made to be obeyed. "There'll be no passin' across until the precission is over, an' that's the law av it." So says the Belfast policeman to the most urgent request. Says the Dublin "Metropolitan," with even more emphasis, "Not wan of yeh goes over till the last av them's turned the corner!" Then, maybe, after an impatient pause there will come the inevitable relaxation, "But, sure, I haven't got eyes in the back of me head and I'll be takin' a walk to the east."

Finally there is another way to see the real Belfast. It is in the early morning when the tram cars from all points of the compass are coming in from the outlying districts into the city, crowded with men for the shipyards and linen mills. Never, surely, in any city in the world was there such reading of papers, such politics, such theological disputation. But then, after all, this is what has made Belfast Belfast—its earnestness and concentration.

Red Cross in Peace Time.

Sir David Henderson is director-general of the League of Red Cross Societies, which has its headquarters at Geneva. Its work takes it into every country of the world. The general recently met the executive council of the Canadian Red Cross and explained the reason for retaining the Red Cross in peace time. The plan is to have a thoroughly efficient body organized so that it can be called upon for help in cases of an epidemic or a disaster.

Sir David acted as Director of Aeronautics in the War Office, 1913-1918. He holds a pilot's certificate. He was wounded while serving in the Soudan campaign and also in the South African War. He holds the French Legion of Honor, the Order of the Crown of Belgium, Grand Order of the Crown of Italy, Grand Cordon of the Sacred Treasure of Japan, and the Order of the White Eagle of Russia.

FLED WITH YOUTH

Gilded Caravans With Their Wonderful Contents, Which Entertained the People of English Villages, Recalled to Memory.

The fair always appeared at the same date and at the same place in the particular town each year, in obedience to some mysterious calendar that probably never got into print, but that, nevertheless, was perfectly well known to the show folk. No one knew exactly, or cared exactly, whence these showmen and show women came. They seemed to comprise a veritable peripatetic army, whose whole duty was to travel from one end of Great Britain to the other and entertain and instruct less fortunate people. Judging from the glaring posters on their wagons, but more particularly from the huge paintings which adorned their show fronts, they had traveled to the uttermost parts of the earth, in order to find the subjects for their "unique and refined entertainment," and had been rewarded by the patronage of most of the crowned heads of Europe and the presidents of the American republics. They rode for the most part in showy caravans, adorned with pictures and neat little white curtains drawn across little windows, and topped by smoking chimneys. Or they drove wagons piled with properties, or vans the front ends of which could be let down and transformed into an imposing show front, while the opposite end could be mysteriously elongated, and lo! there sprang into being, within the space of a few minutes, a long, tabular rifle gallery!

The news of the arrival of the first wagon, or the first gilded caravan, or of the setting up of the first tent pole, the sure sign and symbol of the coming of the annual fair, was always a source of intense interest and expectancy to the young generation in the town. Straggling detachments of boys and girls would soon be moving toward the fair ground to get first impressions of the pleasure to come.

And when the opening day of the fair had actually arrived, or, better still, when the day of days, which was market day, had come, and the grounds were packed with people, and one had already "done" the circus twice, watched the gorgeous street procession of "lords and ladies" and howdahed elephants, and had almost beggared oneself for the sake of seeing the "greatest wild-beast show in the world, with the only live gorilla in captivity," at feeding time, which of course was the most expensive time, there was nothing to do but to go through the fair once more. The last penny for that day had been spent, it was true, but one might have the good fortune to come across, in some corner or byway of the fair, the awesome person who "ate fire," or the wonderful man who lifted heavy weights like tops, or "swallowed swords."

Never, so it seemed, could there be so much for one to do or to enjoy, never could there be again, or anywhere else, so much delight as was crowded into those avenues of noise by day and noise and flaming naphtha lights by night, where a dozen brazen bands played simultaneously, a dozen organs screamed and trumpeted and a dozen big drums banged from the steps of the shows; where hundreds of rattles rattled, and stentorian voices bellowed to the crowds to patronize this and to look at that.

That the old-time fair was always sure to be much the same, year after year, did not much detract from its gorgeousness or fascination in the eyes of those youthful patrons who had been "saving up" for weeks to enjoy its prospective delights. Yet it is true that, as time went past, something of the charm of the fair went with it. The "kings" and "queens" seemed to be less royal, the gold more tinsel, the colors more garish, the noise more apparent, the music more cacophonous and the show people less interesting. Then it was that the interest lagged, disillusion crept in, and at last the fair ceased to attract. It had, indeed, become a very ordinary thing.

The Brainy Bee.

The following incident testifies to the remarkable sagacity and efficiency of bees. A hive was being "spied upon" by a wasp. When wasps ascertain a hive is worth attacking they often succeed in ousting the bees. Every time the wasp approached the small entrance hole a bee came out. An hour later the wasp was dead.

Didn't Seem Funny to Him.

Little Augusta had never seen a bald-headed man closely until one day a friend of the family came to dinner. When we were all seated at the table Augusta looked very intently at his bald head for several minutes, then whispered in mother's ear: "Mother, hasn't Mr. Reid funny, shiny, pink hair?"—Exchange.

American Independence.

Great Britain acknowledged the independence of the United States by a preliminary treaty of peace dated November 30, 1782, and by the final or definite treaty dated September 3, 1783. This treaty was ratified by the continental congress January 14, 1784.

HE CUT RED TAPE

Innocent Request the Prelude to Much Trouble.

After Mr. Temporary's Experience With the Formidable "System" He Preferred to Pay for Anything That He Might Require.

I wanted a wire paper clip. Miss Smith, also new to the ministry, said she would fetch some from the storekeeper. That's what started the matter. I pinned the loose papers together and went on with my work.

The storekeeper had evidently refused to part with any clips without an order. Miss Smith brought me a printed folder containing a request for "paper clips, wire," which she had typed in triplicate on paper headed "Ministry of Economy. For departmental use only." She said it was the right thing to do and I was to sign it, and then Mr. Jones, downstairs, would deal with it. It sounded quite innocent; I initialed it without misgiving.

Later in the week the folder came back. It contained several extra sheets of paper and had evidently traveled.

The first minute was from Mr. Jones: "In reference to Mr. Temporary's request for paper clips, wire, for departmental use, I fail to see what advantage these have over paper clips, brass, which are in use in my department."

Mr. Robinson said that the question opened a wide field, and he had requested the storekeeper to let him know how many paper clips, brass, he had in stock. "See attached sheets A and A1." These were a formal request to the storekeeper, and his reply, to say he had 37 one-gross boxes on hand and one box, partly opened, which he estimated to contain 60. If the exact number was required he would have the clips counted.

Mr. Short pointed out that his colleagues had not noticed that the matter was one which came within the province of the ministry of wire drawing. He had consequently put through a request for a price at which paper clips, wire, could be supplied. He attached a carbon copy of his letter, and a reply from the applied wire department, ministry of wire drawing, to say the matter was receiving attention and would be dealt with in due time.

The next minute was from a gentleman who had evidently set the vast machinery of the directorate of office supplies and sundries at work. Attached were papers from them to say they had paper clips, wire, as well as paper clips, brass, in stock. They wished to be certain that no change in design was necessary, and were sending, by motor, samples of the paper clips (wire) they had in stock, as perhaps one or other might prove suitable. Appended were other papers of which the first was from the chief of the departmental garage to say he had a motor at Huntingdon awaiting a consignment of paper. He had instructed the driver to return at once. On his arrival he would dispatch goods as requested. . . . .

At this point Miss Smith entered: "Will you make out an order for a typewriter eraser?"

"No," I answered firmly. "You will please give this dime to one of the messenger girls and ask her to go out and buy one!"—S. P., in London Mail.

Two War Heroes.

The two colored soldiers of the American army in France who became famous for their bravery and courage in preventing more than twenty Teutons west of Verdun from executing a well-developed plan to assail one of the most important points of resistance on the American front, have been decorated by the French. Their names are Henry Johnson and Needham Roberts. Both are privates and members of the old New York National Guard. It is said these men have been awarded the war cross by the French general of the division under whom the unit is serving, and that Johnson is scheduled to receive the much-coveted gold palm of the French army commander as well.—Southern Woman's Magazine.

"I Like Gravy."

At a recent dinner party that included the little folk in their high chairs, the guests fell to talking of that custom of the dark ages—making children wait until the second table.

"When I was a little shaver," said a prominent attorney, "my brother and I were holding forth in the kitchen. Twice the gravy bowl had been refilled. The third time it was returned to the dining room my brother stuck his head through the door and yelled: 'Don't eat up all the gravy. I like gravy.'"

Teachers Organize.

Ten thousand men and women Public School teachers of the Province of Ontario are to become organized shortly. They are to be formed into the Federation of Male and Women Teachers of Ontario respectively, but will co-operate whenever their mutual interests become affected. Headquarters for the time being have been established in Peterboro.

The Male Teachers' Club of Ottawa is the latest organization to join up with the new Federation of Men. A substantial donation has just been forwarded by the secretary to the executive, to be devoted to the organization fund. The women teachers are also going to join and will shortly undertake a financial grant.

Both the men's and women's organization in many Ontario towns are already part of the federations. Brant County, Brantford, Hamilton, Woodstock, Ottawa and other places are now represented, and it is anticipated locally that within a very short time fully ten thousand teachers will have been enrolled.

An Equal Division

By ROBERT CHANDLER MORRIS

"You're joking," almost gasped old Cy Danvers. "You mean to say you give me that elegant outfit?"

"Freely, gladly, and all for yourself," cheerily and sincerely responded Hector Upton. "Why not? I've got a living to earn now. I shall not probably be back among the home folks for a year. About all I know about woodcraft and fishing you have taught me. You're a second Isaac Walton with bait and hook—who more worthy?"

Old Cy stood in an ecstatic way, viewing the case in which rested the finest metal jointed rod he had ever cast his eyes upon. Besides this, there was a bewildering variety of hooks, lines and every accessory that could be devised.

"Let me pay for it," he suggested.

"Not on your life! Don't look a gift horse in the mouth, Cy!"

"All right," said the old man, "only, bear in mind—half of everything I catch with this outfit comes to you."

"Nonsense!"

"We'll see!"

Hector laughed lightly, leaving old Cy proud as a king over his opulent acquisition. Then Hector turned his thoughts and attention to a tender parting with his fiancee, Viola Blake. They were engaged, but wedded bliss seemed a long way off for them. Hector had been offered a business opening in the city that would require two years' diligent servitude before he could hope to qualify for much of a salary.

"You'll wait for me, Viola, won't you," pathetically propounded Hector.

"If it was twenty years, and loving you a little more every day that goes by," replied loyal Viola.

Old Cy kept word to Hector. There was famous fishing in both creek and lake near by. Cy had an old scow and his leisure hours were pretty nearly all spent on the water. The Upton family received a visit from the persistent fisherman every other day.

Then when Cy learned of the engagement of his favorite to pretty Viola Blake, he began an added distribution. He stopped regularly at the Blake home, hung around till he saw Viola, delivered a part of his catch, and, when Viola demurred at such profligate liberality, said simply:

"It's all in the family. Hector Upton is my partner in the outfit that landed those beauties, so it's all right, isn't it?"

Viola wrote to Hector about his odd partner and Hector felt that he had a staunch friend and champion back home. Cy sent him a local newspaper containing an item narrating a prize fish he had caught, the largest ever found in Moose lake. In the same paper was an account of the burglarizing of the town bank and an offer of ten thousand dollars for the return of a certain package of securities. The thieves might add the reward to their plunder, if they would only produce the securities.

It was a month after that when old Cy appeared at the Upton home in a great state of excitement. He looked greatly disappointed when he found that Mr. and Mrs. Upton were away for three days with some relatives at a distance. Cy fidgeted about, rubbed his frowsy head dubiously and then, apparently inspired by a new thought, hurried over to the Blake home. He found Viola trimming some bushes in the garden.

"I want you to do something for me, Viola," he blurted out. "It's about Hector."

"Yes, Cy," nodded Viola.

"I've got some news for him that won't keep," proceeded Cy in a high strain of excitement. "He's got to come here to find out what it is."

"Why, Cy, you quite startle me!" said Viola.

"You'll be more so when you know what I'm up to," chuckled Cy. "Now then, he'll come for you. He might not for me, you see. I want you to telegraph him that you want to see him at once."

"Oh, Cy," demurred Viola, "how dare I do that? It might lead to his losing his position."

"He won't want it any longer when he sees me," cried Cy in a confident, jubilant tone. "Don't distrust me, Viola. I know what I'm about, and Hector will just about bless you when he knows the great fortune I've got in store for him."

His persuasive eloquence prevailed and the telegram was dispatched. Old Cy did not sleep a wink that night. He was at the Blake place at daylight. He was shaking all over with suspense when Hector arrived.

"You sent for me, Viola," spoke Hector.

"No, I did," said Cy. "Hector, boy, you remember it was fifty-fifty in whatever I fished up with that splendid outfit you gave me."

"Why, so you insisted," replied Hector wonderingly.

"Well then, I was fishing in the river yesterday when my hook caught in something. I pulled in to find—this," and Cy drew from under his coat a heavy manila envelope.

"And what is that, Cy," inquired Hector.

"Documents, securities, damaged somewhat, but good as ever. They're the same that those burglars stole and probably threw into the river as they went over the bridge. The reward is ten thousand dollars, and you get half. I reckon that will fix it so you won't have to wait two years to find a Mrs. Upton. What do you say, Viola?"

"Boys" Get Good American Food.

If the American mother could come face to face with some of the women cooking meals for her soldier boy at the Y. M. C. A. hut over here it would gladden her heart, says a London (Eng.) correspondent.

They would prove to the American mother that her boy while here is getting real good old "Yankee Doodle" meals, cooked by real American mothers just like herself.

These women—most of them American volunteer workers—supply about 2,500 meals a day, besides hundreds of "teas" (yes, mothers, he's got the English tea habit now; you'll have to give him tea every afternoon when he gets back), luncheons and night meals.

The "chief cook" is Hon. Mrs. Arthur Coke, and her specialty is griddle cakes "fit for a king." One month recently she turned out 20,000 of them, six of which were eaten by no less a personage than King George himself.

The king and queen recently visited Eagle hut. They gave the king three of the cakes. He cleaned his plate and came back for a "refill."

And the Fly Escaped.

One of the queerest stories of automobile wrecks comes from Geneva. A man driving along the state road toward Waterloo had the windshield of his machine open. A dragonfly entered through the opening and hit him in the face. He tried to brush it off, moving the steering wheel unconsciously, ran into the ditch and through a fence and had a bad smashup. And the worst of it is, the sufferer can't sue the fly for damages.—Buffalo Express.

Measuring Rainfall.

The quantity of rain which falls is measured by rain-gauges or pluviometers, which are variously constructed. One of the best is that known as Symon's rain-gauge, consisting of a funnel-shaped receiving vessel to catch the rain, and a glass measure of much smaller diameter to measure it. To simplify calculation, the internal area of the measure is usually one-tenth that of the mouth of the funnel.

International Expositions.

The first international exposition in this country was held in New York in 1853. The centennial exhibition took place in Philadelphia in 1876, the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago in 1893, the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo in 1901, Louisiana Purchase exposition in St. Louis in 1904 and the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco in 1915. These were the most important exhibitions having an international character.

MAKING BRIQUETTES.

Plant to Manufacture About 30,000 Tons a Year.

After studying the coalfield conditions in the Middle West, chiefly in Southwestern Manitoba, Commissioner R. A. Ross, chairman of the Lignite Utilization Board of Canada, returned to Montreal.

The immediate result of the investigations is the decision of the board to erect a plant to manufacture briquettes from Manitoba coal at a rate of 100 tons a day, or about 30,000 tons a year. This is a purely experimental idea, according to Mr. Ross, and the intention is to test the commercial possibilities of the manufactured briquettes. If a success, larger plants would probably be started, and operated, either by the Government or by private commercial interests.

In the meantime, Mr. Ross is of the opinion that competition with the United States and the anthracite coal interests is useless in that part of the country—at least for the present, and more than probably in the future as well. The Manitoba coal is a very soft low grade mineral, and the manufacture of briquettes is the only way in which it could be utilized with satisfactory results. The briquettes would probably be sold easily enough in the Manitoba coal country, and possibly even in Winnipeg, but freight rates being high, where the American coal concerns could transport their anthracite to the lake ports, the Canadian interests would be at a certain disadvantage.

The provinces of British Columbia and Alberta have plenty of domestic coal as have the Maritime Provinces and most of Quebec, there is no hope, however, according to Mr. Ross, that there will be any great coal output in Central Canada at the present, or for that matter in the future.

A carbonizer, which has given excellent results, has been invented by Edgar Stansfield, the chemical engineer of the board, while the designs have been made by R. de L. French, engineer of the board. It is not the intention of the members of the board to make any further investigations as the present time.—Saturday Night.

Canada's Trade Returns.

Canadian trade returns are available for the first seven months of the present fiscal year, beginning April 1. Exports for the period were valued at $688,889,909, compared with $720,129,952 in the seven months ending October 31, 1918, and imports were $543,670,887, compared with $560,074,027. Rising prices may conceal a decrease in the quantities this year greater than the ratio of the decrease in values, but the showing is not unsatisfactory, considering that last year there were great exports of war material. The reassuring feature is the continued excess of exports over imports in a year when trade is almost on a peace basis again. The favorable balance—favorable in view of Canada's position as a debtor country—for the past seven months was $145,219,022. The favorable balance in the corresponding period in 1918 was $160,055,925, but the difference may be wholly accounted for by the cessation of the shipments of munitions. Measured by money trade for the seven months, April to October, this year was greater than that in any twelve months before the war.

It is imperative that production be maintained in Canada so as to keep up the level of the export trade. It is the only method by which we can meet the interest on our outside borrowings and bring down the adverse rate of exchange, which is a heavy tax on the raw materials we must buy in the United States. Greater production is the solution of most of our material problems, and it will aid in solving others.

How Frogs Protect Eggs

In the manner of disposing of their eggs many species of frog exhibit remarkable peculiarities. One of the most curious, a tree frog, native of Paraguay, makes its nest in a bush overhanging a pond. The lower ends of a number of leaves are drawn together and fixed in that position by a number of empty egg capsules. The eggs are also covered with a shield of empty capsules to protect them from the sun and air. When the eggs are hatched the plug at the bottom appears to fall out and the tadpoles tumble into the water.

Leather Exports from Canada.

During 1917 there were exported from Canada, leather and leather goods to the value of $7,408,731. A little more than half of these goods went to Great Britain.

Making Improvement Sure.

We can all do good work, for all that is required is to follow directions laid down by other people who have done good work before us. It may be that we can improve on what other people have done, and after a while it may be that we can strike out a line for ourselves. Most of us will find that if we do the best we can, even in the most plodding way, we shall find ourselves improving and rising, step by step, in our chosen task.—New York Evening Telegraph.

Another Kindly Act.

One of the kindest acts of the many His Royal Highness has performed in Canada, and his last official act and visit in Ottawa, was a call he paid on his way to the train on Capt. Leonard F. Askwith, M.C., at the residence of his father and mother. Capt. Askwith was seriously wounded in 1916 and a short time ago became ill again as a result of his service and was unable to attend the recent investiture at Rideau Hall to receive his Military Cross. Hearing of this, His Royal Highness telephoned Capt. Askwith's mother, and enquired as to her son's health and stated that he would call on his way to the train. The prince spent considerable time with the wounded man, afterwards having a chat with his mother, to whom he expressed his determination to revisit Canada as soon as such a visit could be arranged.

"This is my last act and visit in Canada," said the prince upon leaving.

Some Feat!

Mother was out for the evening, so father was putting the son and heir to bed. Moreover, he was beginning to realise why his wife was so tired in the evening.

"Now, Ronald!" he said sternly, when the blankets had been drawn over the little figure. "Remember that I will be very cross if you aren't a good boy when I have gone downstairs."

He left the room, reassured by the awed silence which followed his words. But he had hardly reached the foot of the stairs when a shrill voice called:

"Come and tuck me in, farver!"

Then he lost his temper.

"I won't!" he retorted. "Get out and tuck yourself in!"

Lord Lee of Fareham, who has succeeded Lord Ernle (better known as Mr. Prothero) as president of the British Board of Agriculture, spent most of his early life as a soldier.

Entering the army when twenty years old, he worked his way from the junior commissioned ranks to some of the best posts in the diplomatic service. He has in his time been professor of strategy and tactics at the Royal Military College, Canada; British military attache with the United States army in the Spanish-American War; military attache at Washington; colonel on the staff in the European War in 1914, after which he was appointed personal military secretary to the Secretary of State for War, at that time Mr. Lloyd George.

In 1917 and 1918 he served with success as Director-General of Food Production.

But perhaps his best claim to remembrance by "the man in the street" lies in the fact that in 1917, while Sir Arthur Lee, he presented to the nation his magnificent estate amid the Chiltern Hills. The property, which is known as Chequers, is one of the finest of its kind in England, and Lord Lee's object in bestowing it as a gift to the nation was to provide a suitable residence for the British Prime Ministers. In addition to the estate, the deed of gift includes the valuable and historic contents of the mansion.

Lord Lee is a "young" middle-aged man who, if he is not hampered too greatly by red tape traditions, will rapidly "make good" in his new and highly important position. He has always displayed a deep interest in agricultural matters, and is one of the most popular landlords in the Old Country.

He is chairman of the Inter-Departmental Committee on the Humane Slaughter of Animals.

Believes Success of Nation Depends on Payment of High Wages to Workmen

LORD LEVERHULME, speaking as the guest of the Authors' Club, London, said that it was only in the school of experience that the present phase of industrial unrest would achieve its own salvation. He hoped wages would not fall. He believed the success of the nation depended upon the payment of high wages. Great Britain's handicap in competition with the United States had been the low rate of wages.

The unrest at present, Lord Leverhulme declared, was perfectly natural. No nation in the world had kept its head cooler, and no workman in the world could have served his country in a time of war or returned after the war less demoralized than the British workman. There was, however, on the part of the workman a general feeling that he was a cog in the industrial machine and that he would like to be something more than a cog.

What could be better for the nation than an ambitious workman? asked Lord Leverhulme. Could there be anything more appalling if such a thing had existed after the war, than apathy, indifference, and acceptance of conditions on the policy of taking it lying down? If that were the state of the workman to-day, in his opinion there would be disaster for the British nation.

He was confident that the advent of the workman on a board of directors when he learned his vocation as a director, and not before, would be the means of achieving the greatest progress for their great industrial concerns that could be imagined. When the time came that the workers could share the responsibility with the directors and had learned the lessons that the directors had learned that by increased production and cheapened cost they could beat competition and increase the wages fund, British industries would be second to none. He did not believe the profits of industry would be less, and the reward for every one would be in greater happiness of life which, after all, must be their object and aim.

Busy India.

Testifying recently before a parliamentary committee, Sir Stanley Reed, editor of the Times of India, said that India used to be poor and congested and suffered from unemployment and famine. Now there was a shortage of labor in every industry, including even agriculture. There had been a phenomenal rise in the financial capacity of India, very large sums being raised without disturbing financial stability. There had been an enormous awakening of public spirit, demanding a higher standard of living and better social surroundings. Political activity had developed in an extraordinary degree, and the people were demanding to take their share in the government of their country.

COBBLER RIVALS EDISON.

Three Hundred Inventions to Credit of Louis Goddu, a Canadian.

The majority of inventors become famous through one great discovery or invention. We almost invariably link their names with one real benefit conferred upon their fellow men. Thus we associate Morse with the telegraph, Bell with the telephone, Marconi and wireless telegraphy, Stephenson with the steam engine, and Elias Howe with the humble but industry-revolutionizing sewing machine. These are the results by which we know them; but, in nearly all cases, men have not happened upon a single happy discovery and stopped there—far from it!

Thomas Edison stands out as a shining example of a man of many inventions. One would hesitate to say how many different things he has on record to his credit, or what a debt of gratitude the world owes him for several epoch-making inventions which he has produced, after years of painstaking labor, and placed on the market.

Until recently there lived in a New England city an industrious citizen, a Canadian by birth, who might almost rival Edison in the number of patents which he obtained in his long lifetime, though not in the fame which he gained from useful inventions. His name was Louis Goddu, and for many years his home was in Winchester, Mass. Back in the early sixties, at the time of the Civil War, he was employed as a cobbler in Boston, at a period when much of the work of making shoes was still done by hand, and was, consequently, a laborious process. Mr. Goddu did not work with his hands alone; as he pegged away at his bench, his thoughts were far from idle. Presently he was experimenting with machines for pegging shoes, for sewing them with wire, and for putting in the metal eyelets all much faster than it could possibly be done by hand.

Gradually the number of his inventions along this line grew, until the list of patents granted him was said to cover nearly every operation in the manufacture of shoes, and these same machines are quite generally used, in an improved form, to-day.

In all, some 300 inventions were the result of Mr. Goddu's work, most of them being designed to perfect the process of shoemaking. He was not, however, a man of only one idea, as is proved by the interesting results he achieved in other directions. He received patents on turrets, such as are used on battleships, and for improvements in street cars. His model for the Brooklyn Bridge, which was erected many years ago, was widely and favorably noticed.

Whenever you pick up a current number of some wire-bound magazine and note how easily and comfortably it lies open in your hand, you may like to recall that you are indebted to Mr. Goddu for the invention of the newer way of binding books and pamphlets by wire staples, so that the pages open flat, without breaking apart.

It is pleasant to know that the genius of this 300-invention man—who was thrown on his own resources as a lad of 14, to make his sturdy, self-reliant way in the world—was recognised not only in the United States, the country of his adoption, but in many other lands as well. Various medals and honors were conferred on him by royalty abroad, in addition to those which he received at home; and, in the shoe manufacturing business especially he will long be remembered as the "300-invention man."—Christian Science Monitor.

Oak Lasts for Centuries.

Men employed in driving a new gallery in a gold mine at Charlotte Plains, in Victoria, Australia, have made an astonishing discovery. At a depth of 300 feet below ground they have come upon pieces of timber perfectly preserved, which have every appearance of having been sawn and shaped by the hand of man.

This timber lies in the bed of an ancient river now being worked for gold, and the timber is oak. Now, oak has the peculiar property of lasting for centuries when buried in water or wet sand. Oak piles have been taken out from under old wooden bridges constructed by the Romans, and found as sound as when they were put there, nearly 2,000 years ago.

Oak, known as bog oak, is found buried in Irish peat bogs, and is perfectly black, intensely hard, and very valuable. At present there is an absolute famine in seasoned oak wood, but if we could suppress Bolshevism and open up Russia to trade, that famine would soon be ended. Just before the war it was discovered that the bed of the River Moksha, for a length of over 400 miles, is simply full of magnificent old oak trees bedded in sand.

The river is shallow and broad, and the oak can easily be raised. As a matter of fact, a company was being formed to work these wonderful deposits when war intervened.

Smaller deposits are found in England. There is a pool in the River Dart, known from time immemorial as Oak Pool, in the bottom of which are masses of fine old oak. The strange thing is that there are no oak trees near the spot at present. —Tit-Bits.

ONTARIO GROWING TOBACCO.

Last Year Ontario and Quebec Raised 14,232,000 Pounds.

When, some years ago, steps were taken to encourage the cultivation of tobacco in Canada, and especially in the southwestern part of Ontario, a good many "wise-acres" shook their heads. They did not doubt so much the possibility of growing the "weed" as they did the possibility of producing an article good enough for the average Canadian to smoke. The French-Canadian habitant might smoke it, but not so the Canadian with cultivated taste. The northern climate might be congenial to the cultivation of the coarser grades of tobacco, but that was about the limit of its possibilities.

That these "wise-acres" were away out in their prognostications is being demonstrated each succeeding year, for not only is the country producing more tobacco, but an increasing quality of the better grades. This is particularly true of the industry in the southwestern part of Ontario.

In 1918 the 5,891 acres devoted to the cultivation of tobacco in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario produced 5,943,000 pounds. Last year the acreage was increased to 13,402 acres, and the output to 14,232,000 pounds. Official figures for the current year have not been issued, but it is understood that the output is better than in 1918. Ontario is said to have done particularly well with the better grades, an instance of which is the sale a few days ago of 400,000 pounds of the Virginia bright description by twenty-six growers, which brought them an aggregate of $226,600, an average of $554.50 per acre, or 58 4-5c per pound.

While the cultivation of home-grown tobacco is expanding, consumption of the "weed" in the Dominion is not increasing at a sufficient rate to cause alarm to those who deprecate its use. In fact, taken as a whole, it can scarcely be said to be increasing at all. Take, for example, the quantity taken from bond for consumption. Back in 1913 the tobacco, snuff and cigarettes which passed through the bonded warehouses of the country were 25,287,232 pounds, and the cigars in number 294,772,933. Last year the figures were 26,774,298 and 254,445,945 respectively, an increase in the former of about 1½ million pounds, and a decrease in the latter of about forty millions in number.

In imports there was a decrease in all manufactured tobaccos. The cigarettes imported during the fiscal year ending March, 1919, were 21,085 pounds, against 22,398 for the fiscal 1917; cigars, 29,770 pounds against 52,321; cut tobacco, 499,451 pounds against 664,107; other manufactured tobacco, 68,123 pounds against 106,664.

Grazing Prospects In North.

A commission will sit in Ottawa during the month of December for the purpose of inquiring into the possibilities of the Arctic and sub-Arctic portions of Canada as a grazing country. The commission which consists of Dr. J. G. Rutherford, Dr. V. Stefansson, J. S. McLean and J. B. Harkin, Commissioner of Dominion Parks, will inquire into the feasibility of the regions being utilized for wool and meat-producing purposes. Having in view the reindeer industry in Lapland and Siberia, it is through that developments on similar lines would be expected in northern Canada, where it is reported that herds of caribou, to the extent of some 30,000,000 animals, exist. Dr. Stefansson has always expressed the view that the musk-ox could be readily domesticated in northern Canada.

The witnesses before the commission are to include all those having a practical knowledge of the Arctic regions such as explorers, mining prospectors, traders and members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Finnegan, a railroad worker, though not he of "On again, off again" fame, returned to Ireland recently on a visit. On being questioned by his relatives concerning the wonders of America, he described its size as follows: "Phwy, Amer-r-rica is so big that if ye war to dhrag England through the Shtates ye wouldn't lave a mar-rk in th' dirt, an' ye could lose Oireland inteirely in wan o' thim gr-reat inland oceans we hev, phwat we call lakes, an' if ye had Scotland to get rid of there are a thousand carners to hide her in, an' nobody could tell phwere ye'd put her, except, begorra, for the strong smell av whisky."—Boston Transcript.

The Windward Islands.

The Windward islands belong to Great Britain. They consist of the islands of St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Grenada, with the smaller islands of the Grenadine chain. The islands, really, form three distinct colonies, united under a governor-in-chief, who resides at St. George's, Grenada. The Windward islands derive their name from their position, as do also the Leeward islands to the east, being more exposed to the trade winds than the neighboring Leeward islands.

KEEP WATCH ON EXPRESSION

One's Face Pretty Generally Reveals the True Thoughts and Feelings of Its Possessor.

No doubt you would readily recognize your features if you met them in the street. You see them in the glass daily and many times a day, and probably you think you study them with peculiar care. But that is just the point. Whenever you see them, you are studying them. The expression is conscious, artificial—the expression of a person who is being watched and studied. You know what the photographer's "look pleasant" produces. You know how you feel and can imagine how you look when you are aware that someone is observing you.

Think of the expressions you watch on others' faces when they are completely unconscious, not giving a thought to how they look. Some faces are sweet, kindly, sympathetic, delightful. Some faces again, often the same faces, are sad, anxious, dreary; others still are harsh, bitter, angry or selfish. Remember that all those expressions are likely to come on your own face, too. When you look in the glass you do not find them there. Your mere curiosity erases them as a wet sponge erases figures on a slate. But they come just the same.

Remember how you love to watch the kindly look in others and how you shrink and turn away from the ugly and the hateful. Perhaps the memory and the consciousness will help you to control the unconscious expressions in yourself. Or, since expressions are not easily controllable and are in any case an unfailing index of the feelings that produce them, perhaps you will set more busily about the task of repressing and subduing feelings that make faces look as you wish that they should not.

The great secretary of war, Edwin M. Stanton, once refused to be introduced to a man because he did not like the man's face. "But," urged a friend "he is not responsible for his face." "Every man over forty years old is responsible for his face," answered the secretary.—Youth's Companion.

That Did It!

The only fault in the art of a certain actress was her habit of coming to the footlights and addressing her lines to the audience instead of to the other performers.

One evening a young man who had been feasting with some boon companions, not wisely but too well, came in during one of her big scenes.

He was about to seat himself in the front row of the stalls when the actress came forward, and, with marked emphasis, said to the audience, instead of to the villain who was trying to make love to her:

"I can never love you!"

The youth lurched to his feet, remarked in an audible voice, "Well, that's done it!" and marched to the exit.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL IN ALL AMERICA

IS OLIVE THOMAS WHO WILL BE SEEN AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE

Olive Thomas, who will be seen in the first of her series of Selznick Pictures, "Upstairs and Down," on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Empire Theatre, has been called the most beautiful girl in America—and justly so. With her gorgeous mass of wavy chesnut haid and shining eyes of deep sea blue, her superb form and lovely face, Miss Thomas most assuredly deserves the title bestowed on her.

When this dainty bit of feminity came to New York a few years ago, from her home in Pennsylvania, she made this blase town sit up and take notice. She created a sensation. She began her career the way many beautiful girls do—in the Follies. For three years she continued to attract nation-wide attention in the show which is reputed to contain the most beautiful girls in the country.

During this time, she was also a model for the great American painter, Harrison Fisher. It was he who labeled her "the most beautiful girl in America." She also posed for Raphael Kirchner and Haskell Coffin, who made several portraits of her which have graced magazine covers and the walls of notable homes.

Miss Thomas is the first Selznick star and will make a series of eight pictures a year for that company. Her first picture "Upstairs and Down," is a delightful comedy plus drama about a house party given by the elite of Long Island Society and the scrapes and troubles of the "baby vamp," Alice Chesterton, the role ably portrayed by Miss Thomas.

Caledonian Society Celebrates Hogmanay

Wednesday night was Hogmanay for the Scotch of Peterborough, as well as for those the civilized world over and the occasion, always an event among the people of that race, was fittingly and enthusiastically celebrated by a combined concert and dance held under the auspices of the Caledonian Club. The New Year's celebration of the Scotch shows national peculiarities. Hogmanay is a survival of the custom that has existed of Scottish children on the last night of the year, going from door to door seeking gifts which they ask for by singing the following:

"Hogmanay, Trollalay; gie's us your white bread and nane o' your grey."

The response of those serenaded usually takes the form of gifts of such comestibles as growing children prize. Philologists have never agreed on the origin of the word "hogmanay," some of them contending that it was introduced into Great Britain by the conquering Norman. Devout Scots, however, will believe that it is a term taken from the Gaelic which they are convinced is the basis of all human speech.

There were old-fashioned dances on the program Wednesday night and admirable music was furnished by the Nicholls' orchestra with Mr. A. Nicholls as leader. There were a few modern dances on the bill, but such old time numbers as the Circassian circle, the Highland schottishe and patternella, held first place and were indulged in with spirit by more than one veteran who had first danced them a generation ago.

At the hour of midnight the large audience joined hands and sang in hearty unison "All Lang Syne," and the New Year was welcomed in with a perfect riot of good fellowship. It was a happy gathering. The guests are not worried by such perplexing questions as national autonomy. The race that dominates an empire has little concern for mere provincial issues.

An excellent musical program of Scottish songs was rendered by local artists. Mr. Robert Henry sang "The Song My Mither Sang." Miss Florrie Nicholls made a decided hit in her rendition of "Caller Herrin'," and for an encore sang "Annie Laurie." Mrs. T. C. Dingwall showed herself an artist in Scottish music, her encore number, "Hail Caledonia," being especially appropriate. Will Thompson, the local Harry Lauder, gave two of his favorite selections from the list of songs of that distinguished vocalist, "Come Back Nannie," and "It's Nice to Get Up in the Morning," the audience joining in the chorus of each. Mr. Thompson also, on a recall, recited a parody on "Tom O'Shanter," filled with more gruesome witches and ghosts than the original story itself. John Smith the well-known choir singer, rendered "Jessie's Dream" in excellent voice. Dainty refreshments were served during the evening.

The happy gathering broke up about 2 a.m., waiting street cars being ready to carry the guests to their various destinations.

OBITUARY

THE LATE ARCHIBALD DEYELL

Robert Archibald Deyell, the subject of this sketch, was born at Maple Leaf Farm, Otonabee, seventy-nine years ago, and died at his home on Crystal Stream Farm, in the same township on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 27th, 1919.

This excellent character was converted to God in early manhood, united with the Bible Christian Church in the year 1862, confirmed to the Union later and joined the Methodist Church of Canada, of which he remained a faithful and worthy member and officer until a few days ago, when he passed on to the triumphant Church beyond.

In the year 1870, Robert Deyell was united in marriage to Miss Letitia Stewart, daughter of Richard Stewart of Otonabee, and this happy union was blessed by a family of twelve sons and daughters, seven of whom, with the sorrowing widow, survive him. The following members of this family mourn his demise: Mrs. James Chambers, of Peterborough, Mrs. William Hanbridge, Mrs. Bruce Wood and Mr. Ward Deyell, of Otonabee, Mrs. Fred Deyell, Mrs. Bert McWhinnie, and Mr. Roland Deyell of Frobisher, Saskatchewan. Two sisters and two brothers also survive, namely Mrs. Robert Hanbridge, of Otonabee, Mrs. Jas. Ruth and Mr. Samuel Deyell of Peterborough, and Mr. William Deyell of Lindsay.

Robert Deyell was one of the most widely known and highly respected citizens in the County of Peterborough. His voice, like a trumpet, ever sounded out clear and strong against all forms of evil. We do not know his politics, but we do know his principles. He was a giant for truth, temperance and righteousness. He was transparent, fearless, true and kind. To know him was to esteem and trust him.

His last illness was very brief, lasting only for a few days, but till the last his mental and spiritual faculties shone with full-orbed glory and he passed away in the triumphs of faith.

The funeral service was conducted at his late residence by his pastor, Rev. G. E. Ross, on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 30th., at one o'clock, the attendance being very large. The remains of this member of God's Noblemen rests in Little Lake Cemetery, awaiting the summons that shall call the sleeping dust of mortality back to reanimation and eternal life.

The mortal shall not rest by the river
tonight;
The immortal gaze from the portals of light;
And beckon your coming and linger
and wait,
To meet you and greet you by your pearly gate.

JOHN SMITH

The sudden death of Mr. John Smith was a very great surprise to the people of Downeyville. Up till about one year ago he used to work in that neighborhood, when he went to Ennismore. About a month ago he went to the lumber woods. Recently he was moved to the hospital in Sudbury, having hurt himself inwardly from lifting. He died in the hospital on Sunday. His funeral took place Tuesday morning in Sudbury.

He was a well known young man of this community, highly respected by everybody and his passing away will be generally regretted.

SERVICES AT ST. PAUL'S

The services at St. Paul's tomorrow will be appropriate to the beginning of the New Year. In the morning the minister will preach on "Forward Be Our Watchword," and in the evening on "A New Life by Believing." The week of prayer is to be observed by services in all the the churches of the city. St. Paul's has secured the Rev. J. W. Glassford, who supplied last summer with such great acceptance, to conduct two weeks of meetings. George Street Methodist Church will join with St. Paul's in these services. Mr. Glassford begins on Monday evening.

FIRE ON LONDON STREET

A fire occurred last night at 7.42 p.m. at the residence of Mr. W. J. Sherwood, 141 London street. An over-heated stove pipe was the cause. It appears that a heavy fire in the stove caused the pipes to become red hot, setting fire to the wall. Owing to the prompt arrival of the Fire Department no damage was done.

Judge C. W. Colter and wife celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary in St. Thomas.

SPECIAL SERVICES THIS WEEK IN A NUMBER OF CITY CHURCHES

Move is in Line With Suggestions of General Committee of Forward Movement—Several Distinguished Pastors From Out of Town Will be Here

A number of the congregation of the city have fallen in line wi a suggestion made by the General Committee in charge of the For rd Movement to begin the year 120 with a series of special meetin of a nature calculated to deepen he spiritual life, quicken faith an en- list in an effective way the loy es of Christian people to the Chr an cause. These meetings will m- mence tonight and the people re cordially invited to be present nd enter into this opportunity fo el- lowship and vision. A clearer is- sion of God, which we are not ke- ly to get without waiting upon m, will make for a clearer view ll the associations of life, and he us to achieve the better things ch are stirring in this season o he year. The following is a brie re- port of the services as held he different churches yesterday, a he program for the present week:

St. Andrew's Church.

The meetings in St. Andrew ill be held in the school room a he minister will be assisted by R A. H. McConnachie, M.A., who g an inspiring message last evenin a large congregation. Mr. on- nachie, in speaking of the m ge to be held this week said: re is a bit of the mystic in all us and that the human soul hu ed for seasons of quiet waiting on God, for a touch of the unsee d and a sound of the still, small e." Judging from last night's a ss, Mr. McConnachie's message be earnest, sympathetic and viril he meetings will begin sharp at ht o'clock. A meeting of the on will be held at the close. g and old are cordially invited be present.

Park Street [illegible] Church

The Rev. J. H. McC[illegible], wood, preached yesterday m g and evening in Park Street t Church. His subject in the n- ing was "Partakers with C " and in the evening, "The Impo e Made Possible." Both add s were in the interest of the Fo d Movement and were much enjoy all. Park Street will observe week of prayer by a series of prayer services. The young are holding themselves respo for the meeting tonight, and an est request is made for a full tendance at this evening's mee that it may be a fitting examp the remainder of the week. pastor and deacons urge that member of the church and cong tion will meet for prayer and p

Trinity Church.

At the opening meeting o week of prayer in Trinity Ch Colonel Duncan Walker, princip the Normal School, will give a dress tonight in the church at o'clock. Captain Maurice Park will sing. The whole congregation is expected to be present, but a special appeal is made to the young people of the congregation to come out.

Tuesday night—Cottage prayer meetings at the homes of Mr. J. H. Northey, 435 Stewart street, and Mr. R. F. Downey, 298 Boswell avenue.

Wednesday night — The second meeting in the church. Four five-minute addresses will be given by members of the board. A men's choir will lead the singing. The men of the congregation are urged to come out and help make this meeting a success.

Thursday night—Cottage meetings to be announced.

Friday night—The Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, of Toronto, will speak.

All these meetings are in the interests of the Forward Movement. Mr. Simpson is a very able speaker and it is hoped that he will be greeted by a large audience.

Knox Presbyterian Church.

The program for the week of prayer for Knox Church is as follows:

The meeting tonight will be in charge of the Young People's Guild. Tomorrow night the minister will take charge. Wednesday night the Sunday School superintendent and his staff of teachers and officers will have the meeting. Thursday night the ladies of the congregation are in charge, and Friday the men of the congregation will be responsible for the service.

St. Paul's and George St. Methodist.

These two congregations are uniting for the special services which are being held in connection with the week of prayer, and as part of the Inter-Church Forward Movement. The meetings are to be held in St. Paul's Church and will commence each evening sharp at eight o'clock. The Rev. R. J. M. Glassford will preach each night. Mr. Glassford supplied in St. Paul's Church last summer. He is a preacher of great power and his messages will mean a spiritual uplift to all who hear him. The members are requested to turn out to all these services. There will be good singing and the meetings will not be of undue length. A cordial invitation is extended to members of other churches who may not be observing the week of prayer in their own church to turn out to these services.

The suggestion has been made that the young people of the country belonging to the different churches might well get up sleighing parties and attend the meetings from night to night. There is good shed accommodation in all the churches for those who might attend.

REEVE BULLIED, the "Tommy Church" of Chandos, who has been elected reeve six times, this year by acclamation.

CHANDOS TOWNSHIP HAS A TOMMY CHURCH

REEVE BULLIED HAS BEEN RE-ELECTED FOR SIXTH TERM BY ACCLAMATION

The people of Chandos showed appreciation of the splendid work accomplished by Mr. Bullied and his council by electing them to office for this year by acclamation. Mr. Brooks when nominating the reeve stated that his record during the past five years was beyond criticism, and also further stated that the municipality never was in better condition and that he would recommend keeping the same council for 1920.

Mr. Wheeler was a ready seconder and the election was carried by acclamation.

Reeve Bullied expressed satisfaction at being returned to the reeveship for the sixth term, and stated that during the coming year he would continue to further the interests of Chandos in every possible way. As he was about to resume his seat all began to sing "For he's a jolly good fellow." The clerk then declared the council elected for 1920.

RAILROAD STRIKERS WIN CONCESSIONS

MEN GAIN SUBSTANTIAL ADVANTAGE IN WAGE SETTLEMENT WITH GOVT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 5.—Railroad workers seem to have won important concessions from the Government in their negotiations preliminary to a tentative settlement of the wage dispute. Details of the agreement show that men of the lowest grade will receive a minimum of forty shillings a week with other grades running up to seventy shillings, according to the Herald, the laborite organ. The decreases under sliding scale agreed upon cannot reduce wages below the minimum agreed upon which is one hundred per cent above the rates prevailing before the war. The Government's offer will be laid before a meeting of the railwaymen's delegates on Wednesday.

ACCUSED OF RUNNING A GAMBLING HOUSE ON HUNTER STREET EAST

Evidence is Heard but Case Adjourned Until Jan. 13 When Judgment Will be Given—Proprietor Claims He Knew Nothing of it.

At police court this morning a resident of Asburnham appeared, charged with keeping a disorderly house, where gambling was carried on. He pleaded not guilty, and was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon.

After the hearing of the evidence the case was adjourned until Tuesday, January 13, when the lawyers will argue the question of law arising from the case.

Mr. Gordon intimated that he would endeavor to prove that as this was predominately a game of skill the proprietor was not guilty of a criminal offence.

The ten players are also charged with being frequenters of a gambling resort, and their cases will be heard after judgment has been given in the first case.

Detective Cookman swore that he had been watching the place since the first of December, and had noticed freqently through a window at the rear that men in there played a game known as "live pool."

At this point a large score board was produced.

"Where did you get that, at the Peterborough Club?" asked Mr. Gordon.

Cookman swore that on different occasions he had seen men throw money on the table. They gave some of this to the proprietor, apparently for the use of the table, and the man who stayed in the game the longest received the rest of the money. He swore that on New Year's eve he saw a man with a brown sweater receive some bills and silver for winning the game.

On Saturday evening shortly after 9 o'clock the police raided the room and found there ten players, whose names they took and who are charged with being frequenters of a gambling place.

Mr. Gordon—Would you say it is purely a game of skill?

Witness—Yes.

The next witness was Constable Boyd, who swore that on Nov. 24th he entered this pool room. They were then playing live pool. He went out, and around to the window, and at the commencemnt of the next game the players all threw money on the table. One of the men picked it up and started to count it, when another said to him, "You big fool, put that money in your pocket; that d—n cop may come back in here again."

Mr. Hatton—"Who did he mean?"

P. C. Boyd—"I guess he meant me."

"What do you know of the reputation of this place?"

"I know it had the reputation of being a gaming house and a place where poker was played on Sundays."

Witness considered live pool a game of chance and skill.

Spencer Did Not Know.

Then one of the players, who declared that he was as good a shot as any that frequented the place, admitted that occasionally the boys made up a pot to play for.

"Did the proprietor know anything of this pot?"

"No, he knew nothing about it."

"You play considerable live pool?"

"Yes."

"Is it a game of skill or chance?"

"It is entirely skill that wins."

Then the proprietor himself went into the witness box and swore that he did not know they were playing for money in his room. He received his five cents a cue for every game in which more than three were engaged.

He swore that on two or three occasions he had warned the players not to bet on the games or throw money on the table.

"Which eye did you wink out of when you said it?" asked the magistrate.

"I did not wink at all, I meant it," replied the witness emphatically.

In regard to the reputation of the place, the proprietor swore that it not a gambling place. There had never been a game of poker there on Sunday since he had moved in. Any gambling that had gone on, if there had been any, had been done without his knowledge or consent.

"What is the idea of all this?" asked thet magistrate.

"Well, the officers were casting reflections upon the character of this place," answered Mr. Gordon. "Maybe they were just teasing him, you know. They must become very active now that their application for an increase of salary is being considered."

Another of the players admitted they had been playing for a pot, but swore that the proprietor knew nothing of the gambling.

TWO MORE ARRESTS OF FAKE WHISKEY AGENTS

MEN WHO CAUSED OVER ONE HUNDRED DEATHS HELD ON HEAVY BONDS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 5.—Two arrests, which the Federal officials believe will solve the mystery as to the source of the wood alcohol which caused one hundred deaths in this city, Newark and New England, were announced today by Harold B. Dobbs, revenue agent. They were Cosimo d'Ambrosia of Brooklyn, chauffeur who was taken into custody Saturday in a farmhouse in the Catskills at Kiskat, N.Y., where he is alleged to have been in hiding, and William Woller, Brooklyn, garage keeper and printer.

Charges against the men have not been made public, but Jos. F. Mulqueen, Assistant U. S. Attorney, announced that he would ask that they be required to furnish $50,000 bail each when arraigned.

ACTIVE PROPAGANDA BY MONARCHIAL PARTY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, Jan. 5.—From Budapest comes word that a monarchial party has begun an active propaganda in favor of an English prince for the Hungarian throne. The Duke of Connaught has been specially named. It is said that a majority of the ministers believe that only the a[illegible] of England will save Hungary from economic ruin.

LETTISH ARMY BREAKS BOLSHEVIKI FRONT

FIERCE ENGAGEMENT ENDS IN UTTER ROUTE OF THE RED FORCES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, Jan. 5. — Despatches from Riga today declare that the Lettish troops have broken the Bolsheviki front along the Dvina. Numerous prisoners have been taken, together with much booty, it is asserted.

Two divisions of Letts, supported by the Baltic Landwehr, attacked the Bolsheviki on a wide front, the despatches say. Very heavy fighting followed, resulting in the penetration of the Bolsheviki position on the first day. The attack was pressed, the Red lines pierced, and the Dvina crossed. The advance continued, the Bolsheviki retreating rapidly.

CITY OF MONTREAL IS STILL SHORT OF WATER

PUMPINGG UNIT BREAKS DOWN AND WATER DELIVERED IN BARRELS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 5.—Owing to the collapse this morning of the biggest pumping unit in Montreal's civic waterworks plant, where the employees are on strike for higher wages, the principal residential section will be without high pressure for part of today. The city has now completed a system of delivering water by barrels in the outlying parts which cannot be served owing to the inability to man all the pumps.

SUPREME COUNCIL REDUCES ITS TERMS FOR SCAPA FLOW LOSSES

Protocol However, Cannot be Signed Tomorrow as Formerly Announced—United States Ambassador Asks for Certain Modifications of Rules of Conference.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 5th. — The Supreme Council this morning finally decided on the wording of the note to the German delegaton confirming the verbal statement regarding the indemnity for the Scapa Flow sinkings made to Baron Kurt Von Lersner, by Secretary Dutasta, of the Peace Conference. It is understood that this note virtually reduces the demand for reparation from four hundred thousand tons to about two hundred and seventy-five thousand tons of dock and harbor materials. This note will be delivered at the same time that the protocol is signed.

Another Delay Unavoidable.

The signing of the protocol and the exchange of ratifications of the Peace Treaty, now depends, it is stated, upon the answer of the Berlin Government, to the German delegates here on the questions concerning arrangements for the Plebiscites provided for the treaty. It appears certain, therefore, that these important formalities cannot take place tomorrow, as had been originally intended. The question of the commercial relations between Turkey and the Central Powers after the exchange of the ratifications of the treaty of Versailles was discussed by the Council at the morning session and it was decided that the statutes created by the armistice should continue until peace was signed with Turkey. The armistice terms prohibit such relations.

U. S. Asks For Modification.

Hugh C. Wallace, the American Ambassador, was reported yesterday to have asked the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference to change the formula referring to the powers participating in Council from "Allied and Associated Powers," to "Allied Powers." This report was not strictly correct it was learned today. Ambasador Wallace, it is stated, has not asked for the abandonment of the terms "Allied and Associated powers," but merely requested that, when questions arose which involved the United States, this formula including the United States be not used in documents until he has time to get a decision from Washington on such questions.

T. TOOMS M.L.A. TO MEET ATTORNEY GEN.

LEAVES TOMORROW TO DISCUSS THE PROBLEM OF AN ELECTED POLICE COMMISSION

T. Tooms, M.L.A., leaves for Toronto tomorrow at the request of Attorney-General Raney, who asked Mr. Tooms to meet him in conference to discuss the resolution passed by the City Council favoring an elected police commission.

This resolution was brought up at a meeting of the Trades Council and favored by them. It was also introduced into Council by a Labor member, which proves that the Labor men of this city approve the suggestion. This should strengthen Mr. Tooms' hands when he meets the Attorney-General tomorrow to present his views.

Since this resolution was passed in the local Council it has been discussed by other municipalities. Hamilton and Sault Ste. Marie favored it with amendments, but no place has been reported that adopted the suggestion as it stood.

At any rate the resolution has attracted the attention of the Government, who will give it their consideration, commencing with Mr. Tooms' conference with Mr. Raney tomorrow.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, JANUARY 5, 1920.

COUNTING THE MAYORALTY VOTE.

PETERBOROUGH went to sleep Thursday night believing that Aldermen McIntyre and Taylor had run a dead heat for the Mayoralty and that it would require the casting vote of the returning officer to decide the result. That fact was telephoned into the newspaper offices and was recorded on the bulletin boards. The information, however, was misleading. No such tie existed, and Ald. Taylor had a majority of one after the votes were counted Thursday night just as he has today. The mistake was made, probably, by the transmission of the totals over the telephone lines.

When the results from the various polling places were summed up according to law by the returnig officer at noon Friday, the process did not constitute an official count, as was erroneously stated. None of the ballot boxes were opened, so that no missing ballots were found. All the official did was to compile the totals. The result of this work showed that Ald Taylor has a lead of one vote.

It is true that when the count was made at one polling subdivision two ballots for Ald. Taylor had been found in the bylaw boxes, but these two votes had been credited to him by the election officials before the final result was announced Thursday night and were sufficient to elect him. At every election at which there are more than one box it is nothing unusual to misplace ballots but it seems that no question has ever been raised as to the legality of crediting these votes to the candidate for whom they were cast. If any other course were adopted an unscrupulous deputy could weaken the case of any candidate and defeat the will of the people by purposely placing ballots in the wrong box and claiming that a mistake had been made.

The ballot boxes for the Mayoralty are still sealed just as they came from the polling subdivisions, and will not be opened, unless according to law, in the event of a recount being ordered. There was no missing ballot or ballots found to decide the result by breaking a tie which never really existed.

THE STATUS OF THE EX-MAYORS.

PETERBOROUGH has a long list of men who have served the municipality in the capacity of chief executive, but probably in all that list there can be found the name of none who had a higher sense of the responsibility of the office, or who worked with greater fidelity in the discharge of his duty, than did Mayor Duncan, whose term after two years' service has just expired, and who retires with the distinction of having been twice elected by acclamation. Mayor Duncan has held the office not only in the time of war, but also in the equally strenuous days when reconstruction became a burning problem, when there were grave matters before the Council, and there is not a man in the city familiar with the situation who will not concede that the retiring Mayor gave the highest service of which he was capable, that he worked for the best interests of the city as he saw them, and in all things discharged his duties conscientiously.

The Mayoralty of Peterborough is a goal which any man should be proud to attain, especially when he has worked himself up to the top, as Mayor Duncan did by the stepping stones of years of aldermanic service. But now that it is all over, what has Mayor Duncan, in common with the other gentlemen who have held the same office, to look for in the shape of future preferment, if he elects to give the city the further benefit of his municipal experience? The memory of the electorate is proverbially short, and the people as a whole are lacking in the virtue of appreciation. Otherwise so many ex-mayors with excellent records would not be permitted to spend the remainder of their careers in private life. Two such former officials were brought by their friends before the people as candidates for one of the most important departments of the civic government, a position in which, if anywhere, municipal experience should be held at a premium. Both retired from the mayoralty with the plaudits of the multitude. Both were defeated last Thursday. Surely the man who serves his city has little to hope for in the way of lasting gratitude, one reason why so many men refuse to enter the municipal arena.

Is it the general impression that a man having reached the pinnacle of civic honor, the mayoralty, should, like the ex-presidents of the United States, be willing to rest for the remainder of his days upon his laurels?

USING THE FRANCHISE.

WHEN THE DATE for the municipal election in Peterborough was changed from the first Monday in January to New Year's Day, it was hoped that opening the polls on a holiday would tend to secure a larger vote. This hope has been shattered, and after two trials the impression is becoming general that the change was a mistake, as it has not worked any improvement but rather the reverse. One year ago the vote was disappointingly small. Last Thursday less than fifty per cent. of the total vote was recorded. This, too, in the face of the fact that there were important issues involved, that the ascendancy of one class over another was really a civic problem, and that more active interest was taken in the campaign than ever before.

The small vote cannot be altogether charged to the apathy of the electors or to their objections to the candidates that were in the field. There was certainly ample room for making a wise choice, and in the majority of cases at last this appears to have been done. The holiday spirit must have something to do with it. Some people refuse to permit duty to interfere with the festivities of the day. People are visiting at home and abroad. Some of them are resting from the social revels that welcomed in the new year. The short day is soon over, and five o'clock strikes with half the votes in the city still unrecorded.

There is no emphatic expression of public opinion in an election where less than half of the people vote. It is not sufficient for a successful candidate to have a plurality or even a majority of the votes cast. No such candidate can be unmistakably assured that he has a mandate from the people, when half of them refuse to take a hand in settling the issues.

The law does not hesitate to compel a citizen to do his duty in other regards. Why not making voting compulsory? The possession of the franchise is the highest prize the State can confer upon the individual, the most precious gift that it can bestow. But why force gifts upon those who fail to appreciate or refuse to use them? Compulsory voting is no experiment. It has been successfully tried out in other places, where the man who fails without sufficient reason to exercise his franchise is deprived of the right to do so. There is already a well-defined agitation in Peterborough that a move be made in the Legislature to have the law so amended in this regard.

Parliamentary representation is one of the matters upon which depends the welfare of any community. As much can be said of representation in the Provincial Legislature. But most important of all, more closely as it is allied to the daily lives of the people, is the choice of officials for city council and other departments of the civic government. The conditions here referred to are not peculiar to Peterborough, but the same complaints are heard all over Ontario. It would be no real hardship to remove food from the man who refuses to eat. It would be even less so to disfranchise the man who for no apparent cause other than indifference or mere caprice, has developed a confirmed habit of refusing to do his highest duty as a citizen.

THE SAD PLIGHT OF AUSTRIA.

Vienna, once proud world capital, is a tomb of the living. Death stalks everywhere in the guise of famine. Those who have wealth are living in unseemly revelry, that they might close their eys to the sufferings about them. Horror piles upon horror, as hundreds of women and children are borne to the grave. Men go about as though in dreams, if not in utter madness, begging for a chance to work that they might obtain bread for their loved ones. Wealth tries to buy fuel, and there is no coal. The governors urge patience, and men's hearts crack under the mere suggestion of further endurance. Such conditions have not been seen, perhaps, since the fall of the Byzantine empire.

THAT IS THE striking word picture which an American newspaper prints of one of the scenes of ruin wrought by the late war, and upon that picture the paper bases a fervid appeal to the United States Government to come to the rescue of the unfortunate. It is estimated that it will require seven hundred million dollars to restore the industrial life of Austria and give the people a chance to live. This could be furnished by the United States, the paper says, and would be one of the best investments in which any nation could engage, even if not one single dollar of it was ever paid back.

It may be that the Austrians are now simply gathering the wages of sin, that they are reaping even as they have sown. But the people who are today the victims of famine, the children whose emaciated bodies are being carried daily by the hundreds to the cemeteries, are not the real sinners. They were the dupes and tools of those in authority, those who, no matter what they may have lost, no matter to what extent their idols of ambition may have been shattered, are still spared from famine and the disease which follows in the wake of want. They revel in luxury while those they misled slowly starve to death. The masses of Austria are paying now not for their owns sins, but for those of their former tyrants. If the power of the latter is broken, that benefits nothing the victims of a dethroned tyranny. There is no emancipation where so-called freedom means nothing but destitution and death. Austria's cry for food is heard in every civilized nation in the world, in Canada no less plainly than in the United States. The Christian people of this age have a new mission before them. The former foes of civilization, beaten and overthrown as they now are, must not be allowed to starve.

It is always the dupe among nations, as among individuals, who is the real sufferer when the inevitable reverse comes. Austria was forced into the war by her more powerful German ally, forced, too, to continue long after she had realized the hopelessness of the struggle and was willing to make peace. It was Austria that first laid down her arms and made the armistice possible. And now it is Austria that finds itself crushed, suffering and broken in a greater measure than the ringleaders in the war. The nation itself was the dupe of a superior force, and the people who are in the midst of famine and death today, death as grim as that which comes with war, were as so much clay in the hands of the potter.

FROM THE REVIEW of 1960—A citizen found insensible in an alley by the police was supposed to be suffering from sleeping sickness, but one of the oldest practitioners in the city diagnosed the case as intoxication, a disease that was prevalent some fifty years ago. Where the victim contracted it is not known.

WHAT AN AMERICAN CITY ATTAINED IN 1919

Detroit, the metropolis of Michigan, formerly had a City Council of 42 members, two representatives from each of the 21 wards in the city. The system was changed with the permission of the state legislature and the number of aldermen was reduced to nine.

While still too recent to be proven in its entirety, the new city government which came into being Jan. 14, 1919, has demonstrated its increased efficiency over the old.

The problems before the Mayor, in whom all responsibility is centered, and the Council of nine, which meets every day except Saturdays and Sundays, were those of the Reconstruction period.

The chief problem of the city government was, as often in the past, the transportation question. A purchase proposition, under which the city would have obtained the D. U. R. for $31,500,00, was defeated at the April election. The Council and the Mayor next had to deal with a demand for higher fares made by the D. U. R. to pay increased wages to its employes on strike. The city offered to allow the collection of a five-cent fare on all lines, including the so-called three-cent lines, and the abolishment of workingmen's tickets.

It balked at allowing penny transfers. The transfers were left to arbitration. At the close of the year the D. U. R. conceded that penny transfers would be unnecessary.

Another vexing problem was how to meet wage demands made by employes, and conceded to be necessary in part, if not wholly. A bonus system was instituted which gave temporary increases to all those receiving less than $1,700 a year. The problem is still unsettled.

100 Miles of Water Pipe.

The water board laid 100 miles of pipe during the year, 90 being built by its own workmen, a record. Sewer construction was also pushed and $5,000,000 against the 1920 budget has been contracted for. Plans were also made to ask the voters next election to approve a $20,000,000 bond issue for new sewers.

At the April election voters approved of two important bond issues which will admit of much needed public improvements. The first of these was $3,000,000 for a new Belle Isle bridge. At the close of the year everything was in readiness to begin actual construction of the approach to the bridge. The bridge itself requires an act of Congress before it can be built according to present plans, without a draw.

The other measure approved by the electorate was a bond issue of $10,000,000 for new parks and playgrounds. Both the commissioner of parks and boulevards and the recreation commission have sent in recommendations for new breathing spots which have been approved by the Council. Condemnation proceedings have been begun by the corporation counsel. The recreation commission developed plans for a score or more playfields and playgrounds.

Plan Public Golf Links.

One of the tracts voted condemned for parkage was 1,060 acres on the River Rouge, 300 acres larger than Belle Isle. Here the recreation commission plan to install municipal golf links. Near this tract the Council has also voted to condemn a municipal flying field a half mile wide and a mile long. On the east side a 150-acre park, well wooded, has been ordered condemned, while to the north the city has decided to double the size of Palmer Park. This program calls for the greatest park expansion the city has ever heard of.

The city also obtained a $2,000,000 site for its new art centre, opposite the new library, from the trustees of the old Museum of Art. Plans for a beautiful new Institute of Arts which will mark a distinct advance in the city's cultural development are being prepared by the arts commission.

The city government also had to deal with the housing problem. As a result of conferences called by the Mayor stimulus was given to the formation of a house building corporation with private capital. Homes for 14,000 families were built during 1919, the city building department reports. There are still quarters for 30,000 families needed, however.

Coffee Houses Licensed.

Strenuous efforts were made by city officials to stamp out illicit sales of liquor. The Council passed an ordinance licensing coffee houses, as well as soft drink parlors. The Mayor, clothed with this authority, held over 80 hearings on police requests for revocations of licenses of hotels, soft drink parlors and pool rooms, most of which were alleged to be selling liquor. Two score licenses were revoked.

The city planning commission made active strides in its two chief endeavors: the creation of an east and west traffic highway, and a new zoning ordinance to regulate the future growth of the city. A temporary zoning ordinance was adopted by the Council.

There were also official receptions to returning soldiers, chiefly the return of the war nurses in spring, the homecoming of the 32d, or Red Arrow, Division, and the return of the 339th Infantry from Russia. Later in the year the survivors of the 339th gathered together to receive their fallen comrades, the first war dead to come back to Detroit.

To give some sort of indication of its esteem for the services rendered by its sons the city gave out silver service rings to the returned soldiers and bronze memorial plaques to relatives of the dead.

Mainly About People

Few poet-lovers but are familiar with Thomas Hood's song to the toiler, "The Song of the Shirt," which has been translated into more foreign languages than any other poem written by Hood. This poem was first printed in the London Punch on December 16, 1843, and created a sensation in London, and it was soon reprinted throughout the British Empire, and shortly thereafter it was reproduced practically throughout the world.

There is quite a story connected with Hood's composition of the "Song of the Shirt." On October 25 it was brought to the attention of the poet that a wretched woman named Biddell was charged at Lambeth police station with having pawned articles belonging to her employer. It was shown that she made trousers for sevenpence a pair, and the utmost she could make was seven shillings a week, which her employer looked upon as "a good living for a woman who had herself and two infant children to support."

This case attracted a great deal of attention at the time, and two days later the London Times had a powerful editorial on the incident. Punch quoted from this "leader" with stinging additions—probably by Douglas Jerrold—the following week. Hood, whose sympathies were stirred by suffering, penned the "Song of the Shirt," and sent it to Punch his wife saying as the package was done up: "Now, mind, Hood, mark my words, this will tell wonderfully! It is one of the best things you ever did!"

Mark Lemon, who was at the time the editor of Punch, recalling in later years the receipt of the manuscript, said that the author accompanied it with a note saying that the lines had already been rejected by three papers; that he feared it was not suited to Punch, and leaving it to Lemon's discretion whether to put it in the paper or in the waste basket.

The confidence of Hood's wife in the "Song of the Shirt" was justified. The poem in Punch created a sensation. It was copied in the Times and other journals, and as M. H. Spielmann has put it, in sympathetic appreciation of Hood as a contributor to Punch, it "went through the land like wildfire."

The historian of Punch claims that the publication of the "Song of the Shirt" trebled the circulation of that journal. It may be said also to have trebled Hood's fame and popularity at the time.

VICTIM OF SLEEPING SICKNESS AT PICTON.

Belleville, Jan. 3.—Mr. A. Williamson, of Picton, has passed away being a victim of seeping sickness. Deceased, who was in his 47th year was the elder son of Mr. R. T. Williamson. Easily Fixed.

"Yes, auntie, it is rather sudden, but I am to be married next week."

"But you know nothing about housekeeping."

"Well, there are plenty of magazines on the subject. I shall immediately subscribe to one of them."

Conciliatory Attitude.

"This naturalist says the grizzly is a nasty customer when aroused."

"I am quite willing to believe him," said Mr. Perkleigh, with a shudder. "Dear me! If I should ever be so unfortunate as to encounter one of the creatures in a wild state, there's nothing I wouldn't do to avoid—ahem!—getting on its nerves."

Or Eggstracts Therefrom.

"They say that music pleases the cows—makes them give more milk."

"I wonder if literature would interest the hens. I think I'll read mine the market list."

His Scruples.

Mrs. Flatbush—So your husband didn't go to the war?

Mrs. Bensonhurst—No, he didn't.

"What was the matter? Was he afraid?"

"Yes, that was the trouble. If he went he was afraid he'd just make a slaughterhouse of the battlefield."

CANADA'S FINANCIAL POSITION SURVEYED

NEW YORK HERALD WILL PUBLISH SPECIAL ARTICLE SUNDAY, JANUARY 11TH.

The New York Herald on Sunday, January 11th, will publish an illuminating, authoritative and exhaustive survey of Canda's financial position today. Canadian bankers and business men—all those interested in the industrial welfare of the Dominion—cannot afford to miss this article.

A leading Canadian financial writer recently said: "The salient features of the economic position of Canada before the war were the enormous predominance of imports over exports, the failure of the exports of the country to expand in proportion to the immense amounts of external capital which are being borrowed, and upon which interest had to be paid, and the consequent shortage of cash and liquid assets in the treasuries of corporations, in the vaults of banks, and in the purses of the public."

Read in the Herald article of the 11th of January how the situation has changed today; how Canadian exports have climbed far above imports; how Canada is practically financing herself; what savings deposits and other indications of prosperity show.

Find out here just how the labor situation is affecting industry; how the sterling exchange difficulty is reacting on the Canadian bond market; what leading experts think of the chances of Canada's big manufacturing plants to carry on with undiminished force now that war demands have ceased.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

Editor Review.—The City Council will in a few days be entering on their year's labor. I desire to call attention to the disposal of the old iron bridge over the river on Hunter St., which is now being taken down. It has been suggested to erect it at the [illegible] of London street on the upstream side of the railway bridge [illegible] the power house dam. This site has no street connection [illegible] the east side of the river nor any [illegible] that might be made would accommodate traffic. Now, if erected [illegible] the southend of the street car line where it reaches the river it would facilitate a heavy traffic both ways [illegible] and from town, more especially when the sewage plant is completed. I have thus early published the business that the merits of the sites may be investigated.

BREAD PRICE UP AT KITCHENER

Bakers Also Advance Price of Cakes and Fancy Cookies.

Kitchener, Jan. 5.—The price of bread was advanced two cents a small loaf, making it thirteen cents instead of eleven cents. Cakes and fancy cookies were also advanced. The grocers who have been selling bread have given the bakers notice that they want two cents a loaf instead of one, and there are indications that consumers will be compelled to buy direct from the bakers.

Dictator of the Ukraine

One of the most frequently heard of yet least known personalities of contemporary Russia is Gen. Petlura, commander-in-chief of the armies of the Ukrainian Directorate, the provisional government of the independent republic of the Ukraine. The Ukraine itself, although a country the size of France and Italy taken together, with the population of the latter, is a veritable terra incognita of Europe. Yet, among other things, it should be noted that one of the primary reasons for the German collapse in the war was the failure of the Prussian command to replenish the granaries of the Fatherland with the wheat stores of the Ukraine, the richest part of the former empire of the czar. This failure was due to the desperate resistance of the Ukrainian peasantry to the Teutonic conqueror.

In the general rising that, following the armistice of November 11, 1918, has rid the Ukraine of the German overlords, the leading part was assumed by Gen. Petlura, who has since become the legendary hero of his people and country. The Paris newspaper "Eclair" publishes the following sketch of the Ukrainian generalissimo:

"Petlura was born in 1879, in the heart of that Ukraine to whose cause he vowed his life.

"Son of a poor family of Ukrainian Cossacks, Petlura entered life at a time when the czaristic regime reached the climax of despotism and corruption. His extraordinary intellectual gifts opened for him the gates of the Academy of Theology, theretofore closed to Ukrainian peasant offspring. But, animated by a burning love for his unfortunate country, Petlura organized a group of students for the propagation of Ukrainian literature and popular songs. He was expelled and refused admission to any other school in the Russian empire.

"From this moment dated his desperate struggle against the Russian tyranny—a perilous task that made him a wanderer and an outlaw. He went to live in the Caucasus, in the Ukrainian country of the Kuban Cossacks, and worked there in behalf of the co-operative movement. Later he came to Moscow, entered journalism and became editor-in-chief of the Ukrainian Review there.

"When this publication was suppressed at the beginning of the war, Petlura devoted himself to the services of the League of Zemstovs (provincial assemblies), which concentrated all its activities on assisting in the conduct of the war. He soon forged his way to the foremost rank. After the revolution of March, 1917, Petlura was elected chairman of the Committee on Military Organization of the Congress of Soldiers' Councils.

"His principal endeavor now was to concentrate in the Ukraine all soldiers of Ukrainian origin, in order to defend the country against Teutonic invasion. In the course of events he decided to form a first provisional government of the Ukraine.

"But he met with resistance in Petrograd; Kerensky, the Socialists and the bourgeois reactionaries opposed his plans. It was at this juncture that Bolshevism gained foothold in Great Russia. In vain Petlura pleaded that the defence of the Ukraine should be intrusted to Ukrainian troops exclusively. It was too late; Kerensky refused to listen, and was soon downed by Lenine and Trotsky. Followed the disastrous rout of the Russian armies, the collapse of the eastern front.

"On entering Kiev, holy city of the Eastern Slav world, whence in A.D. 980, under the rule of St. Vladimir, the first missionaries departed to convert Russia, Petlura, now commander-in-chief, addressed the inhabitants and his troops in the square of St. Sophia as follows:

"'Now that the Ukrainian capital has been delivered, I wish to tell you that the Ukrainian people responded to our appeal without hesitancy and without dispute. The sacrifices, the blood shed for the Ukrainian republic, affirm eloquently the will of the Ukrainian people.

"'But at the same time these sacrifices entail on us a great duty. We must combat anarchy for the sake of the nameless heroes who have embodied in themselves the spirit of the Ukraine. Whoever can carry a gun must follow their example and struggle against the rule of disorder, whether it comes from the Left or the Right.'"

Queen Maud.

Queen Maud of Norway often wonders when she will get back to England again to visit her mother, Queen Alexandra, says Tit-Bits. She is the happiest of married queens, and is as fond of her adopted people as they of her. Like a sensible woman, she took up sleighing, ski-ing, and skating to please the Norwegians, whether it pleased herself or not. The Queen still cycles when she gets the chance, and was the first of royal ladies to go a-wheeling. Incredible as it may now seem, lots of people were shocked when first she started riding her bicycle in the Sandringham lanes. King Haakon proposed to her, by the way, when they were cycling together one fine morning.

A Mass of Iron.

Cerro del Nercado, near Durango, is the largest iron deposit in Mexico. It is a great mound 640 feet high, and is said to be almost a mass of iron.

New Alphabet for Japan.

Japan is considering the adoption of an alphabet of forty-seven letters, most of which are Roman characters, some Russian and the remainder original symbols.

The Bore and the Prince.

I like the firm way the Prince of Wales is said to have dealt with a bore about whom he had been warned during his Canadian tour. "I know your father," began the bore. "Yes," said the prince, "so do I"; and he hurriedly engaged himself with the next party awaiting presentation.

The thicker the letter a woman writes the less there is in it.

SCIENCE INDEBTED TO ARAB.

Schools of Medicine Established Under Caliphs.

The origin of the Arab race is a matter of conjecture, but the Arabs were a unified political body with a king of their own long, long before the Christian era, wrote Frederick Simpich in the National Geographic Magazine. Just now there are perhaps 10,000,000 Arabs, and for convenience of classification they are usually separated into two divisions—"Al Bedeo," or "The Dwellers in the Open Land" (commonly called Bedouins), and "Al Hadr," or "Dwellers in Fixed Localities."

The Bedouins, roaming with their herds all over Arabia and even up into Mesopotamia and Syria, are better known to American missionaries, officials and travellers than the Hadr class. They are nomads from necessity and not from choice, and, as the country comes under better rule, roads, trade, and irrigation will undoubtedly reduce the number of Arabs forced to lead this wandering life.

Although Bedouin and bandit are almost synonymous terms in some parts of Arabia, this is hardly fair to the Bedouins when we consider the way they have to live. When they hold up a Mecca caravan, for example, and exact a sum in cash for "protection," they look on this merely as their rightful share of taxes, habitually collected and kept by border officials. A reform of these desert manners and methods will most probably ensue as a result of the British mandate over Arabia.

Although nominally a Mohammedan, the average Bedouin is said to worry but little about the Koran's rules or whether his mode of living would please the prophet. The wilder tribes even worship the sun, trees, rocks, etc., or else have no religion at all, it is said. Marriage is early and easy and divorce simple and frequent.

About 80 per cent. of all Arabs live in towns, villages, or other fixed places of abode and belong to the "Hadr" class. In this group is found the aristocracy of Arabia. Here are old, reputable families, with records of births, deaths and marriages, deeds and honors, running back through generations.

Perhaps the most noted family in modern Arabia is the house of Koreysh, tracing its connections back to the prophet. The men of this family bear the title of Shereef or Seyd; and it was the Shereef of Mecca who led Arabia's break for statehood.

Education, however, as we regard it in America, is almost unknown among Arabians. The few with culture are a class to themselves. Most learning is confined to the classics of religious and secular literature; the Koran is learned by rote. In the smaller towns there are no schools at all.

Yet it was Arab learning and skill, in the long ago, which started the civilized world on the way to its present high efficiency. Under the Caliphs, schools of therapeutics were set up at Bagdad, and botany was studied as a branch of medicine. As one writer says, "the principal mercurial and arsenical preparations of the materia medica, the sulphates of several metals, the properties of acids and alkalis, and the distillation of alcohol were, with their practical application, known to Er-Razi and Geber, professors of Bagdad. In fact, the numerous terms borrowed from the Arabic language—alcohol, alkali, alembic and others—with the signs of drugs and the like still in use among modern apothecaries, show how deeply science is indebted to Arab research."

All of which leads the Christian world to believe that the Arab people, as a nation, can "come back."

The Stronger Sex.

The United States Census Bureau has taken the trouble to enquire into the subject of longevity and has reached the conclusion that the age of 106 is possible for a human being, but that no man or woman has ever seen his or her 107th birthday, all stories to the contrary notwithstanding.

In point of longevity women are far ahead of men, generally speaking. They are more resistant to diseases and they live longer.

Out of 1,000 girls born into the world, 750 live to reach the marriageable age of 18. Out of 1,000 boys, only 700 survive that long—an excess of 50 male deaths. Of the boys, 250 will live to be 69 years old, but 250 of the girls will safely pass their 72nd birthday.

Five boys (nearly) die for every four girls in the first month of life. Out of 1,000 males born during the past year, half will be dead in 1971. Out of 1,000 female babies born in 1918, half will be living in 1976.

And yet women are called the "weaker sex." So they are, muscularly, but it is manifest that they are the stronger sex constitutionally. They possess what biologists term greater "viability"—a superior ability to survive.

Why nature so arranges matters is beyond explaining. Apparently she tries to make up for it to some extent by bringing into the world 1,013 boy babies to every 1,000 girl babies. But it is not enough. So much more hardy are the girl babies that they are actually a majority before the second year of life is reached.

The Lucky Horseshoe.

The superstitious use of horseshoes as emblems of good luck originated about the middle of the seventeenth century. They were at first deemed a protection against witches and evil spirits, and were nailed on doors of houses with the curve uppermost. It was the belief that no witch or evil spirit could enter a house thus guarded. The custom of nailing horseshoes to ships and other sailing craft is still in vogue in many English-speaking countries. To find a horse shoe with an odd number of nails attached to it is considered the forerunner of good luck, and the more nails the greater the good fortune that is likely to attend the finder.

Viscount Jellicoe Looks Mild, But He Is Mighty

Pays Visit to Dominion

Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, the great little British seaman who commanded the British fleet in the Battle of Jutland, arrived in Victoria on the battle-cruiser New Zealand, to pay us a visit.

When the war broke out practically nobody outside the navy had ever heard of Jellicoe. Everybody now could write a nice little essay about his record in the big conflict; but as to Jellicoe, the man, about all the average Canadian knows about him is that he short, clean-shaven and has a peculiar, close-lipped mouth, which he keeps severely shut. Jellicoe has nothing of the look of a popular hero like Beatty and Beresford and "Jacky" Fisher. His appearance suggests that his management of a fleet would be on the lines of efficiency only — no picturesque stunts, simply business done in a businesslike manner. Physically he is the smallest man in the navy, they say, barring the midshipman.

An American newspaperman who saw a good deal of the admiral during the war describes Jellicoe this way: "If he were not an admiral a stranger would think him a rather successful lawyer—the sort of a lawyer who would handle the real estate business for maiden aunts and handle it well. If he were a doctor he would be the kind to which rich and fashionable families would gravitate. He certainly doesn't look the part of 'Hell-Fire Jack,' as he has been called in the British navy. He doesn't talk like it either. He doesn't raise his voice no matter what happens. He doesn't swear—or at least he only swears as much as is necessary. He never places emphasis anywhere. But he apparently gets there anyhow. In fact, he's a whale on doing things."

VISCOUNT JELLICOE.

From another pretty good observer we are told: "Jellicoe is English to his heels. His father was a naval officer and the family is of Hampshire stock. The admiral is always cool and serene. Nothing ever flurries him. He never bullies anyone, and no one ever tries to bully him. He aways seems to be in command of the situation—and silently—whether the situation be at a dinner table or a quarter-deck."

Three times Jellicoe has dodged death by a miracle, and the stories of these escapes throw more light on the little admiral than a couple of columns of character study. Away back in 1880 he was a lieutenant on H. M. S. Monarch near Gibraltar. One day in a heavy storm a Glasgow steamer, the Ettrickdale, was stranded near the Monarch, which had gone out for target practice. All the boats but one small one had been left behind. When volunteers were called to try a rescue of the crew of the wrecked vessel Lieut. Jellicoe was the first to jump forward. With seven seamen in the small boat they struck out. After a desperate struggle their boat went down and they were washed ashore more dead than alive. They had done their best, and they received medals from the British Board of Trade.

On his next narrow shave he lost this medal. This was in 1893, when he was in command of the Victoria, which was sunk by the Camperdown during manoeuvres in the Mediterranean. Jellicoe was in his bunk with a sharp attack of fever. When the crash came he staggered on deck in his pyjamas. He stood on the bridge with flags in his hands ready to signal when he was flung into the whirling waves. Too weak to do much for himself, he would have quickly sank but for a midshipman who helped him. Admiral Jellicoe's medal went down, with the rest of his property, and when the Board of Trade was informed of the loss he was told that he could have another medal by paying for it!

Admiral Jellicoe's third brush with death occurred on land when he accompanied Admiral Seymour on his attempt to relieve the Pekin Legations during the Boxer rebellion. Finding themselves in a hopeless position, they decided to retreat to Tientsin. They encountered cavalry, and Captain Jellicoe, as he was then, was shot through the lung while leading his men in attack. But though his wounde was dangerous his grit pulled him through five terrible days before they reach Tientsin.

The private life of Admiral Jellicoe is a happy one. He is married to a very rich woman, the daughter of Sir Charles Gayser, head of the Clan line of stermers.

(4) Admiralty Islands on November 21, 1914.

(5) Nauru on November 6, 1914.

(6) German Samoe on August 29, 1914.

Milestones.

One of the many curious effects of the war was the way it put news into cold storage. Almost every day that passes, in England as elsewhere, some story or other is gaining publicity and is being eagerly read and discussed, which if peace had reigned instead of war during the past five years, would have long since been forgotten in the back files of the newspapers. Thus Major Hesketh-Pritchard, one time famous as a cricketer, and now famous as a soldier, has been pouring out news as to the many ingenious devices resorted to at the front in establishing an observation post. There is for instance the case of the milestone. It stood on the summit of a little ridge at the cross roads, between the two front line trenches. The French photographed the milestone, had a fascsimile made of it in thin steel with a gauze-covered observation hole, and successfully changed the real thing for a dummy by night; in this way gaining a perfect observation post in the centre of no-man's land. Thus some milestones even have greatness thrust upon them.

Alcohol Developed from Wood Waste.

A bulletin has been issued by the Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research in the Dominion of Canada on the subject of the manufacture of ethyl alcohol from wood waste. The article is from the pen of G. H. Tomlinson, B.A., who states in an appendix that, while he has no recent information regarding developments of the manufacture in either the United States or Canada, it has been reported that several plants for producing ethyl alcohol from wood waste were installed in Germany during the war. Their output of alcohol was relatively large, though, as far as he is aware, no details of the development in Germany have been made public. Further expansion in this direction cannot be looked for, but, as the demand for industrial alcohol is rapidly increasing, he predicts that it must soon be utilized to supplement the gasoline supply. Mr. Tomlinson states that in British Columbia alone sawmills produce from 10,000 to 15,000 tons of wood waste every day, representing sufficient raw material to produce from 30,000,000 to 50,000,000 gallons a year, or enough to operate 100,000 motor cars. In the course of his article, Mr. Tomlinson deals chiefly with plants which have been constructed in the United States during the last ten years, and which have been producing the highest grade of ethyl alcohol at a reasonable cost.

The Last Canadian Knight.

Maj.-Gen. E. W. B. Morrison, K.C.M.G., was formally knighted on November 6 by the Prince of Wales. Sir Edward was the last Canadian knight to be gazetted for knighthood on the final list of Canadian title honors. It is said that Gen. Morrison has also the distinction of being the first man the Prince of Wales has knighted.

Amongst the war heroes to be decorated by the prince before leaving Canada is the name of the late Major-Gen. M. S. Mercer, of Toronto, who was killed in action. The decoration of Commander of the Bath was presented to the late general's two brothers, J. S. and F. T. Mercer, of Toronto.

Monkey-talk.

A. J. SMALL, FORMERLY PROPRIETOR OF GRAND OPERA HOUSE, IS STILL MISSING

No Trace Can be Found of the Theatrical Magnate—May Have Gone South for Rest, One Report Says.

Toronto, Jan. 5. — Up to five o'clock Saturday afternoon nothing has been learned of the whereabouts of Ambrose J. Small, the theatrical magnate of Toronto and Canada, and formerly the owner of the Grand Opera House in Peterborough.

Mrs. Small has no news. Nor has Mr. Cowan, his local manager here for 30 years. Nor has George Driscoll, head of the Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited. Nor has E. W. M. Flock, who was his legal adviser in the sale of the Small theatre to that syndicate. Nor have any of his other relatives or personal friends.

There is no confirmation of reports that he has gone off to race tracks in the south or in Cuba.

Nor do Messrs. Wright and Moss of Aylesworth and Company, know anything new.

He had no extra clothes with him when he disappeared. Nor did he draw any money out of the banks. His wealth is stated to be from four to ten millions. The mystery of his going is more pronounced than ever.

Nothing definite can be said of what the police or private detectives are doing.

That A. J. Small was seen in Toronto later than supper time on the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 2, the last day since his mysterious disappearance, was the statement made by Mr. Fred Lamb, proprietor of the Hotel Lamb.

"Mr. Small left the hotel sometime after seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, saying as he was going out, 'I'm on my way home,' and as far as I know he walked towards Yonge street," declared Mr. Lamb.

"Did he say anything about expecting to leave town?" he was asked. "Yes, he stated he would be going out of town soon and mentioned where it was, but I cannot remember the name of the place at all," said Mr. Lamb. "He travelled frequently, and often would let me know where he was going before he left."

Mr. Small did not have his car with him when he left the Lamb Hotel.

Mr. Minkianick, manager of the London theatre, formerly owned by Mr. Small, rang up members of the Small family Saturday morning and told them to disregard an item in an evening paper to the effect that he knew where Mr. Small was. He said he was being pestered by the newspapers for information, but knew no more about the mystery than the man in the street.

$500 Reward Offered.

Mrs. Small has authorized the announcement of a reward of $500 which will be offered through the Toronto police for any information that will lead to discovery of Mr. Small's whereabouts. Circulars will also be sent broadcast describing the missing man and asking for information of him.

May Have Gone South.

Quebec, Jan. 5.—A. J. Small, the theatre owner of Toronto, who is reported missing for a few days, was well-known in the Quebec theatrical world. He was the first lessee of the Auditorium in this city, which is now leased by the Allen Theatre Enterprises of Toronto. Manager Tanguay of the Auditorium expressed surprise and regret over the news from Toronto. He recalled that Mr. Small was one of the first men to promote big theatre enterprises in Quebec City at the Auditorium and said that Mr. Small was a sick man for a number of years past.

He says that Mr. Small was a keen follower of horse races and possibly he had gone south and that things many turn up right after all.

UNCOMMON HONESTY.

Something That Is Not Often Found Nowadays.

In these days of profiteering, price raising and claims of an absence of business propriety on the part of many of the selling public, a little story of the other kind may point a moral.

Eighteen years ago a little, old and grey-haired Irish lady walked into the office of Mr. Sheriff Hall, at the Court House in Peterboro, and said, "Mr. Hall, I'm Mrs. Michael Hennessey, of Douro."

The sheriff, who is ever courteous, brought a chair and asked where he could be of service. "It's just this way, Mr. Hall," said the old lady. "I want that you find the book in which your father made his accounts in the long ago, when he kept the store at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, beyant."

The sheriff said: "That's a matter of forty-two to forty-five years ago. Surely there's nothing in those books that would interest you or me at this date. "Sure it's meself as knows that of which I'm spakin'. Fetch the book."

Going to the old vault, the sheriff investigated. There he has kept the books of his father's business for many years. Why, he could hardly tell. His father, in the early forties, opened business as a general merchant, afterwards engaged in the manufacture of leather, was appointed to public office, resigned and was elected local representative to the Upper Canada House of Assembly. At the close of his term he was appointed sheriff, his son being his successor.

Mr. Hall found the book corresponding with the year indicated. "The account is here, Mrs. Hennessey, but it is balanced off all right in my father's own handwriting. Give yourself no further concern." But protested the old lady, "Look again, Mr. Hall, be careful and see if there be no some small balance."

The sheriff added up the column of figures (it was in the old pounds, shillings and pence) and presently said that there seemed to be a balance of three shillings, but the account was marked settled at the time when his father went out of business.

Said the old lady, "Indade, 'tis as I would expect, for I've had it in mind too long to be mistaken, an' now I'll tell you all the circumstances."

"We always traded at y're father's store, me and my husband. And one day me husband brought in a load of grain an' sold it for twinty pounds, and took the money to y're father thinkin' it would square the account. But 'twas not so, entirely, for I had unbeknownst to him gotten a few things, an' there would be left, as you say, a balance of three shillings."

"Said my husband, 'I will presintly bring to you, Mr. Hall, that three shillings.' 'Tut, tut,' said y're father, 'what is three shillings between old friends and man and customer? Think no more of it. 'Tis settled, so it is.'"

"'But, Mr. Hall,' said my husband, 'I will pay my honest debts.' And y're father said, right off, to plaze the old man, 'any time you have three shillings to spare, Mr. Hennessey, you may if you care so to do, bring it in.' And they parted good friends as always. D'ye know, from that day to the day my husband died, what with the burnin' down of the barn, an' the loss of many cattle, and the mendin' of the fences, an' two years of bad crops, and the fallin' in of the well and one thing an' another, we never really knew the day that we had three shillings to spare. An' after me husband's death, good man and a diligent provider, I had to manage things as best I might. I never seemed to have three shillings that I could spare. But I'd not forgotten it. But now, praise be, my son who lives in Michigan, writes that his wife is frail, and he axes will I come and live with them and help take care of the childer, an' he sinds fifty dollars for my expinces, and I could not go away and live in a sthrange land, knowin' that three shillings was unpaid. Here, take the money, give me a rayceit."

And the sheriff, moved beyond measure, wrote the receipt, thanked the caller, saw her to the door, gravely shook hands, wished her a safe journey and returning to his desk dropped seventy-five cents into a corner of a drawer, where it reposed until handed to the Children's Aid Society, as being too sacred for other uses.

A Canuck In England.

Capt. Ian Hay, the English writer, has summed up the points about England that strike visiting Canadians as peculiar in the following list,—

There is no ice water, no ice cream, no soda fountains, no pie. It is hard to get the old familiar eats in our restaurants.

Our cities are planned in such a way that it is impossible to get to any place without a map and compass.

Our traffic all keeps to the wrong side of the street.

Our public buildings are too low.

There are hardly any street car lines in London.

Our railroad cars are like boxes, and our locomotives are the smallest things on earth.

Our weather is composed of samples.

Our coinage system is a practical joke.

Nobody, whether in street, train, or tube, ever enters in conversation with you. If by any chance they do, they grouch all the time about the Government and the general management of the country.

London's Ugliest Church.

St. John's, Westminster, of which the rectory will be vacated by the new Dean of Exeter, is sometimes styled "London's ugliest church," though there are several candidates for that bad eminence.

It was compared by Lord Chesterfield, when it was newly built, to an elephant on its back with its four legs in the air.

Sir John Vanbrugh usually has the discredit of this extraordinary pile; but the real architect was his pupil, Archer, who designed Cliffden and the present pro-Cathedral at Birmingham.

Although the general effect is miserable the architectural details are admirable, and if only two towers are seen at a time the æsthetic result is good.—Westminster Gazette.

World Has Been on "Sugar Spree"

WHILE the recent scare over the prediction of 20 cent sugar would appear to have been somewhat exaggerated, there is no doubt that there exists an acute situation all over the world in regard to supplies of raw sugar, and a stiffening of prices of the refined are almost inevitable. The present difficulties are due not only to a serious lessening of the production of beet sugar, but to what has been termed most aptly, the "sugar spree" that has been indulged in by the people of the United States and to almost as great an extent the Canadians, for in four years Canada's consumption rose from 690,000,000 to 784,000,000 pounds. When the per capita consumption in the States, which, by the way, calls for one-fourth of the world's production, rises from 33 pounds per annum in 1870 to 83 pounds at the present time, and when the total consumption doubles since 1900, while the population went up less than one-third, the partial cause for present shortage is evident.

So far, however, as production is concerned cane sugar responded to the increased demand, but beet sugar dropped sadly behind. Germany, Austria and Russia are the three great producers of beet sugar, the three in 1913-14 producing over six million tons, about the same quantity as the cane sugar crop. But the past year this total was cut nearly in two, and although cane sugar increased to 8,370,000 tons, there was a falling off of over 1,000,000 tons in the total.

"Where, then, can Canada hope to secure the raw sugar for her 90 pounds per capita of consumption; where will the United States get its 9,000,000,000 pounds; and how can the best of the world receive a fair quota? With Cuba, alone, it seems, rests the answer. India and Java between them last year produced about 5,000,000 tons, but India will need not only all her own supply, but will have to call upon Java for anywhere from half a million to one million tons. Cuba, it is estimated, will produce about 4,300,000 tons next year, valued at $685,000,000, and in the ability of Sugar Island to increase steadily its production, rests the hope of a sugar-hungry world. Naturally, under these conditions, the price of raws is advancing. The average pre-war price was $2.25 in Canada; in 1917 it was $5.35 per cwt.; to-day it is over $8.12 per cwt., and in view of the huge demand and relative shortage, higher, rather than lower prices, may be expected in the next year or two.

For the heavy Canadian investments in Cuba this situation will be most encouraging, for by far the largest portion of Cuba's exports consist of its national crop — raw sugar cane. For this the island is peculiarly well situated, both from the point of view of geography and climate. In "freight-time" it is nearer its great receiving market, New York, than Winnipeg is from Montreal. In contrast to many other sugar districts the land requires little fertilization or replanting, this applying particularly to Oriente, one of its chief sugar provinces, for instance.

American capitalists have recognized the large possibilities in the Cuban sugar industry, and the five companies controlled in the United States will produce this year more than one-fourth of the total cane sugar. To those interested in stock market movements as an index of values, it may be mentioned that one of these, Punta Alegre, rose from 51 in April to above 80, and another Cuban-American made a still more significant record, advancing from 150 at the beginning of the year to over 400 at the present time.

With such natural prospects and with the successful results that have accrued to Canadian interests already in operation in Cuba, such as the Royal Bank, the Sun Life Assurance Co., and the Cuban Railroad Co., started by Sir William Van Horne, — it would appear probable that further Canadian investments will be made towards the development of the resources of the island.

Timber Line Moving South.

Only the frontier marks the advance of civilization; only the borderland between life and desolation, where nature's last outposts struggle for existence on the edge of everlasting ice, tells the story of the cold that moves inch by inch and year by year to its final conquest of the earth. The timber line of the far north is creeping inexorably southward. Scientists of the Canadian Geological Survey have found that the latitude that permitted the sapling spruces to take root even fifty years ago, now denies them life. The millions of trees that made up the last line of timber to-day will never reproduce their kind; and when they die, desolation gains another step.—Popular Mechanics.

Abitibi's Lumber Prospects.

The total cut of wood expected during the coming lumbering season in the Abitibi region will reach 70,000,000 feet of cut and prepared lumber. This is unprecedented in bulk totals. There are at present in the Abitibi region, 55 sawmills in operation and they work almost the whole year round. The new season's cut is already under way with excellent prospects.

Hand Stirrups.

"See any fancy ridin' while you was east?" asked Three-Finger Sam.

"I sure did," answered Cactus Joe. "But everything's topsy-turvey. People in the cars have to hang on with their wrists in straps."

"Jes' think of that. Usin' the stirrups for their hands instead of their feet!"

Chinaman an Aviator.

Y. M. Lim On, a Chinese Canadian, has the honor of being the first Oriental to complete his flying instruction and receive his F.A.I. certificate in Canada since the war. He received his instruction at Armour Heights and intends to return to his native country to promote aviation interests.

NEW FLAG POLICY.

Will Increase the Patriots in the Province of Alberta.

A new way of spreading Canadian patriotism by means of the Union Jack has been hit upon by the Department of Education in Alberta. The national colors are to be flung from every schoolhouse in the province, but only at intervals long enough to make the people wonder why. Two days each month, or about twenty times in the school year, are all that will see the flag in action, and those days will be chosen for some good and sufficient reason. What that reason is the children will tell when they go home at night. That is how the lesson of patriotism is to be kept in circulation and the whole community stirred to a new interest in the flag and what it stands for.

The new flag policy of the Alberta Government has just been announced by the Minister of Education, Hon. George P. Smith. It is to be put into effect at the beginning of the new year. The Government will supply a flag of uniform size and quality, to each school, the cost to be deducted ultimately from the Government school grant. It will then be required of each school district to erect a flag pole and otherwise to provide for the proper care of the colors. Ordinarily the flag will be displayed on the schoolroom walls, but twice a month, on the days appointed, it will be raised on the flagpole outside, to the accompaniment of a simple but impressive ceremony.

A text-book is being prepared containing historical sketches that will be read to the school children each flag day. These will tell why the day was so selected, the general theory of the selections being anniversary occasions of dates when the British people made some unselfish contribution to human liberty and world welfare. The children will be encouraged to write essays about the day and its doings and to talk about it when they get home.

The Alberta educationalists believe that in this way a deeper interest in the national colors will be stimulated than if they were floated to the breeze every day. Mr. Smith gives it as his opinion that too much flag-waving is a blatant kind of patriotism that does not accomplish much of lasting value, but he expects that by making the occasional flag displays into impressive ceremonies of this kind a better and more permanent end will be served. The scheme anticipates a new popularity for the Union Jack throughout Alberta, with all the countrysides intelligently interested in the flag days at school.

The Wise Doc.

A member of a national medical association tells the following story at the expense of a physician:

"Are you sure," an anxious patient once asked; "are you sure that I shall recover? I have heard that doctors have sometimes given wrong diagnoses and treated a patient for pneumonia who afterward died of typhoid fever."

"You have been woefully misinformed," replied the physician indignantly. "If I treat a man for pneumonia, he dies of pneumonia."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210280) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.20 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $2495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

WETS CELEBRATE NEW YEARS AT CHICAGO

PEOPLE TOO BUSY DRINKING TO BE NOISY—VOLUMES OF LIQUOR

Chicago, Jan. 3.—The arrival of 1920 in Chicago was accompanied by the biggest splash the city has ever known. No other previous New Year in the history of Chicago has been celebrated with such a volume of liquor as that which accompanied the entry this year.

Chief of Police Garrity granted a last minute reprieve. His order to the police was brief: "Arrest no one who carries his own liquor." The news spread like wildfire. Receptacles ranged from spacous thermos to the humble half pint, and no male hip was too proud to bear a cannikin. Even cafes became cafeterias.

Every known brand of whiskey and wine could be bought openly in Chicago. Whiskey sold for $12 a quart, and the popular demand for wine ran to white Tokay, which retailed for $4. Thousands of gallons of intoxicants were sold last night and today. The only embargo placed on the consumption of liquor by the police department was that the celebrants provide and pour their own libations.

Last New Year's celebration was attended by parades throughout the "loop," tooting of horns and ringing bells and a thousand other demonstrations with the aid of noisemaking devices. It was different last night and to-day. No noise, everything quiet and everybody conducting himself with strict decorum. A year ago 168 men were locked up at Central police station for being drunk. Only one man has been placed under arrest in Chicago in the last thirty-six hours for drunkenness. Any saloonkeeper in Chicago who wanted to handle liquor was supplied by a clique of professional politicians, who rented a big warehouse at 2033 North Clark street, and for three weeks they have been supplying the saloonkeepers with liquor by the auto load. All the saloon man had to do was to pay his money with the order and the liquor was delivered during the night by truck.

The clearing house was operated by two liquor wholesalers, protected by the politicians, and a police lieutenant even visited the warehouse on several occasions to see how the sale was going. More than $360,000 worth of the best brands of whiskey and campagne were distributed by this one clearing house in three weeks. To-day at noon they ran out of all their supplies—Champagne sold at retail for $20 a quart.

The Great West Felt Co., Elmira, have placed insurrance on the lives of their employes ranging from $500 to $2,000.

Galt bankers have advanced the price of bread to 13 cents for a 24-ounce loaf.

Want Settlers' Tales.

In order that the Department of Immigration and Colonization may have at its command authentic accounts of the experiences of successful settlers in various parts of Canada, it has been decided to offer cash prizes for letters or articles not exceeding 2,000 words, written by settlers in each of the nine Canadian provinces. The articles will be judged by a committee to be appointed by Hon. J. A. Calder, Minister of Immigration and Colonization, and should be mailed not later than February 14, 1920, to the Director of Publicity for the Department. Three cash prizes will be given, one of $75, one of $50 and one of $25, in each of the nine provinces.

It is explained that the competition is not a literary contest, the official announcement stating that "literary style, correct spelling, etc., will not be considered essential. Tell your story in your words." It is believed that the procuring of a number of graphic and truthful stories of how success has been won from the soil in all parts of the Dominion will do much to contribute to a future movement to Canada of the right class of settlers.

Ice Pack Moves South.

Ice conditions in the Arctic this year have been the most unusual in years. The ice pack was found to extend further south than at any time since the Bear began its patrol of far northern waters. The solid pack extends to about one hundred miles north of Point Lay, or eighty miles south of Wainwright.

Along the lower edge of the pack thousands of walrus were encountered by the cutter, the ice being literally black with the mammals. This, officers of the vessel said, was another evidence that the ice was solid for a great distance to the north, as the walrus stay close to open water.

The Bear, because of the ice conditions, was unable to reach Point Barrow and Wainwright, and its officers expressed the belief that passage to the Mackenzie river section this year may be prevented.

Raising the Rent.

Shoulder Your Own Errors.

We are shallow and selfish and lacking in dignity when we play one thing against another to gain our ends. Is it that we cannot think largely, comprehensively enough to realize that when we disown responsibility for our actions and sayings we are reflecting upon others to their hurt and discomfiture? It is almost as great a crime to be indifferent or unheedful of these matters as to be malevolent. There is something radically wrong with us innately if we cannot sponsor our own individual ideas and opinions without making some one a "butt" for them.—Exchange.

Pathetic Query.

The nurse had been entertaining her patient by singing some of his favorite songs to him. There was one song in particular that the little boy liked much and he never failed to ask his nurse to sing it to him every time she came into the room. She had already sung it a dozen times or more that morning, when on coming into the room after a few minutes' absence she heard a little voice from the other end of the room: "Say, nurse, do you think you have enough tone left to sing that song again?"

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

Advertising Tells Facts About Furs.

It is far easier to sell an article when the prospect knows a great deal about it. People are not so apt to argue in the matter of price, when they are acquainted with the facts of production. It is generally conceded that this point has been neglected for many years, thus making a clerk work twice as hard to sell.

This principle was back of an ambitious campaign introduced by Revillon Freres, furriers, Fifth Avenue at Fifty-Third street, New York city, more than a year ago. The second series is just beginning, and was induced by the unqualified success of the previous advertising.

While other concerns in the same line are running to straight merchandising talk and pictures of pretty women, Revilon Freres started a sort of serial story about furs in local newspapers. It is a continued narrative, in daily chapters, and hikes back to the far places where pelts are secured.

It may be the picture and story of a snow-covered trading post, or sleds bringing in the pelts, or "A Young Hunter," beside his game, with the descriptive text:

"This bright young Cree boy has just shot his first bear, and though hardly grown up he feels himself every inch of a man. A young Indian's ambitions are necessarily much more limited than the white boy's at the same age. All he can look forward to is hunting 'on his own' the possession of an extra good gun and such luxuries as the post traders' store will afford him."

Women are being told the source of Revillon Freres' furs, that they may be certain of their quality and that they may understand why it is necessary to make certain charges for them.

Public Responds to Store's Frank Appeal.

Is it unethical frankly to ask the public to join in and help you, the merchant, make a store record for sales

Bailey, of Worcester, Mass., a very large and popular department store, recently held a remarkable sale, exploited by quite unconventional newspaper advertising. The people of Worcester were asked to contribute to the success of a "Bailey Day," and the firm's active slogan was "A weeks business in one day.'

Could such a thing be possible? It all depended upon the town.

Read this announcement:

"Six days' business in one day! On your mark! Set—oh, boy! Just a few hours more and we'll be off to the biggest goal we ever set—for tomorrow we're out to smash all records and do a week's busiess in a single day. Just come behind the scenes with us and you'll see in a nutshell the reason why you are going to be on hand early tomorrow. See the piles and piles of brand new merchandise, the filmy blouses, the latest millinery, the daintiest baby togs, for which the buyers of our three stores have combed the market for months and months. Look at the price tickets. What's that! your eyes deceive you. Oh, my no. Now just look at the store itself—at the windows that give but a hint of the good things to come—at the pep that animates the whole sales force. Just a few more hours and we're off—with the sale that's going to make history—the sale that lasts but one day. Are you with us? Will you help us make the impossible in your town come true?

And they did help.

"Self-Starters' Club" Good Membership Plan.

To be dropped from the membership rolls of a club is usually nothing to brag about. But to the "Self Starters' of the Reading, Pa., Chamber of Commerce it is a recognition of work "well done.'

The "Self Starters" is a unique organization of prominent Reading business men, all members of the Chamber of Commerce. It originated in the mind of George S. Pomroy, Jr., of Dives, Pomroy and Stokes, department store owners. Heres how it works:

At the suggestion of Mr. Pomeroy a number of Chamber of Commerce members got together to consider plans for increasing membership of the organization. There were the usual "campaign drive" suggestions, but they were all tabooed. Something "new" must be developed, the merchants figured.

Mr. Pomeroy had the "something new." It was organization of the Self-Starters," and the idea was put across with a whoop.

The eighteen members at the conference inducted themselves at once into the "Self-Starters" organization. The "starters" were assigned to get two new members each for the Chamber of Commerce. They were told that the moment they got the new members their names would immediately be stricken from the "Self-Starters,' membership rolls. In other words, they would be "fired'

They were then priviledged to name their successors in the club. The "successors" together with the original club members were to be the guests at luncheon the following week. Then the "sucessors' were formally inducted into office, and they too, were told to go out and get two new members each and name their successors. The club members whom they succeeded were "fired' from the club and given the Chamber of Commerce D. S. O

"The plan gets every member of the Chamber of Commerce canvassing the city for new members, explained Mr. Pomeroy. "It lifts from the shoulders of a 'membership committee' the work of having to increase the organization's membership rolls and spreads this duty among the individual members. In this way each member does his 'bit' When he does he quits the 'Self-Starters.'

"The first luncheon following our initial meeting saw virtually every original 'Self-Starter" lined up with his two new members. A new club came into existence. There will be weekly luncheons, at which inductions into office and the firing of old members will take place.

"Everybody works and the Chamber of Commerce is helped. Then there's a lot of fun in seeing a prominent merchant fired from an organization."

Physicians Conduct Store Baby Contest.

Califoux's Corner (the Little Gray Shop), of Lowell, Mass., has found a way to make the entire town look in its directon — mothers and fathers particularly.

It has been conducting a baby show of its own, and you know how proud parents are of their youngsters.

Two physicians were employed to examine all babies brought into the store—Doctor Tabor, from 10 to 12 each morning, and Dr. Sherman from 1:30 to 5 in the afternoon.

A prize is given the baby that registers the highest record, under the ruling of the physicians. The contests are attracting attention all over the state.

THE MARKETS

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Live stock receipts were fair and trade active.

Prices were higher, as follows:

Heavy beef steers	$14.00	$15.00
Choice butcher steers	12.50	13.50
Medium butcher cows	8.00	9.00
Calves	17.00	20.00
Ewes	7.00	10.00
Lambs	17.00	18.50
Hogs, selects f.a.w.	18.25	18.25

Crude Canada.

We hear many things from the English papers about the prince's visit that we did not hear during his stay here. Note the following paragraph from the Saturday Review. "It is needless to say that the Canadian press married our Heir Apparent to at least three young ladies by name; and hardly a newspaper omitted the headline, "Is it a Royal Romance?" Indeed it was not safe for any young lady with tolerable pretentions to beauty and position to be seen in Canada within a hundred miles of the royal train. And dire were the social feuds left in the track of the illustrious tourist. At Windsor, Ontario, the president of the Canadian Ford Company, we are informed, drew lots for 250 out of 2,600 applicants to dine with the prince; and one lady wrote that she had a special claim to be invited because she was 'familiar with finger-bowls and English etiquette.' At another place, which will be nameless, the governor's lady had long been at war with female society. But when the prince landed she was de par le Roi the first lady in the province, and dealt out remorseless punishment to her foes."

Apt Reminder.

"Come upstairs and let me wash your hands," said Winnie's mother. "I don't want to go up!" wailed Winnie, aged three. "Let her wash them down here," called grandmamma: "she can do it just as well." "No," her mother said firmly, "I want her to come up with me!" Winnie came upstairs as slowly as possible. "Oh," she said, turning a wrathfully tearful face to her mother, "why don't you obey your mother?"

Temperature and Metals.

In a demonstration at the London Royal Institution of the effects of sudden changes of temperature on various materials, Prof. C. H. Lees showed that iron and marble could be removed from low temperature to 630 degrees Fahrenheit, and changed back from heat to cold without cracking. Quartz was shattered, though silica glass was unaffected.

A Floating Fort

SINCE the days when the Dreadnought was in building, no greater interest has been aroused about the design of any ship of war than about that of the Hood. She is the latest British capital ship to be completed. Whether rightly described as a battleship or battle-cruiser, she partakes of the characteristics of both types, and may be said to combine all the qualities and attributes which war experience showed to be desirable, so far as this is possible in one vessel. There is a likelihood, moreover, that she may be not only the latest but—if Lord Fisher and Sir Percy Scott and their school of thinkers are right—the last of the great warships of Britain of her kind, says the naval correspondent of the London Times.

She is the production of Sir Eustace d'Eyncourt and the Constructive Department at the Admiralty, and in her the navy will receive an accession of material strength which embodies the most up-to-date features which technical skill and forethought could suggest. In the future the Director of Naval Construction will probably have to supply, in the successors of the Hood, still further protection both above and below water against aircraft attack. This implies the power of submersion for the capital ship, with which no vessel of the size and fighting capacity of the Hood has yet been provided.

The new vessel was originally one of a class of four, all named after British admirals, but after the armistice the contracts for the Anson, Howe, and Rodney, which were not so far advanced, were abandoned, so that the Hood is the sole representative of her type. The design was approved and orders were placed in the summer of 1916, when Mr. Balfour was First Lord and his board included Admiral Sir Henry Jackson, as First Sea Lord, and Rear-Admiral F. C. T. Tudor, as Third Sea Lord and Controller.

The contract for the Hood was allotted to Messrs. John Brown & Co., Limited, of Clydebank, which firm put afloat in the same year the Repulse, sister ship of the Renown. They were also the builders of the Barham, of the Queen Elizabeth class, and the Tiger, the last battle-cruiser to be launched for the British Navy before the war broke out. The first keelplate of the Hood was laid on September 1, 1916.

It is interesting to note that the Hood is the first capital ship in the British—and probably in any—navy to be built since the battle of Jutland was fought on May 31, 1916. She was launched on August 22, 1918, by Lady Hood, the widow of Admiral Lord Hood of Avalon, who was First Sea Lord at the time of the passing of the great Naval Defence Act.

Since the building of the Dreadnought, the course of British naval construction, so far as the capital ship is concerned, has taken two distinct directions, that of the battleship and that of the battle-cruiser. In the former, weight of metal, was considered to be the primary factor; in the latter, speed was considered to be of relatively more importance; but in both classes the one-gun principle was paramount. The last completed representatives of the two types were the Royal Sovereign and the Renown.

In the Hood, what appears to have been aimed at is a fusion of the two designs, and gun-power, speed, and armored protection are provided in such a degree that it cannot be said that any one quality has been sacrificed for the other. It is for this reason that the Hood is most remarkable, and presents a complete change from previous practice.

The main armament of the Hood consists of eight 15-inch guns, mounted in four gun-houses en barbette, two pairs forward and two aft. The disposition, indeed, is the same as in the Royal Sovereign and Queen Elizabeth, which also have eight 15-inch guns. The Renown class have only six 15-inch guns in three turrets. The gun-houses are protected by armor of a maximum thickness of 15 inches, reduced in places to 11 inches, and there is 12 inch armor on the barbettes. The main armament is thus afforded better protection than in the Hood's predecessors, which had 11 inch armor, and in this respect there is reflected the greater importance attached to this feature since the Battle of Jutland. Provision has been made for giving increased elevation to the guns over that allowed in earlier ships.

Complete details of the armored protection have not yet been afforded, but the Hood has an armored belt at the waterline of 12 inches, tapering to 6 inches and 5 inches, and completed at the ends by a 1-inch armored deck forward and a 3-inch deck aft.

Against under-water explosion the ship is protected by a bulge or blister, the invention of Sir Eustace d'Eyncourt, and there is a very comprehensive system of bulkhead and subdivision. What protection has been given to the deck and the tops of the barbettes is not indicated in the plan, but since all the larger vessels were improved in this respect after Jutland, it may be assumed that similar precautionary protection has been afforded in the Hood.

Geared turbines of Brown-Curtis type, with a shaft horsepower of 144,000, will drive the ship at a designed speed of 31 knots, steam being supplied by water-tube boilers. The power of the engine far exceeds that of any previous vessel in the British navy. The drive is more than five times as great as that of the Dreadnought, and more than three times that of the Inflexible. The furnaces are adapted for oil fuel only, of which the ship has a carrying capacity of 4,000 tons. Her engines were manufactured by the builders of the hull.

Authority.

Grand Duke Nicholas Is Leading Very Quiet Life In a New Home in Italy

AT Sant Margherita in Italy is living Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, former commander-in-chief of the Russian army, and his brother, Grand Duke Peter, and their wives.

To a correspondent of the Associated Press the grand duchess said: "We desire on our past life, on our experiences, on all we have left, that silence should reign. This is our dearest wish, our most fervent request."

"We have come to Italy," Grand Duke Nicholas said, "in this fairy-like corner of the world, on the beautiful, smiling Gulf of Sant Margherita, seeking only peace and repose for our spirits and our nerves. We have determined not to talk with anybody on past sad events. All the tortures we endured must, for the outside world, be hidden in our own breasts. The only request we make is that our silence and our sadness be respected.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS.

"For this reason we lead most retired lives in this villa of Spinola, half hidden in the woods, spending part of the day on the delightful shore of the gulf and the remainder with my brother Peter and his wife Militza, who live nearby at a place known as Due Pini (Two Pines). Our whole life is circumscribed within these narrow limits."

Replying to an inquiry whether they would remain long in Italy, the grand duchess said:

"We have rented this villa until 1920, but between now and then many things may happen to decide us either to prolong or to shorten our stay here."

The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Nicholas take their meals in their own villa and in the evening generally receive a visit from Grand Duke Peter and his wife. Every day Anastasia either drives with her husband or walks to the nearby village of San Michele, which is celebrated for hand-made lace.

The correspondence of Grand Duke Nicholas is attended to by Baron Steel, who acts both as private secretary and master of ceremonies.

The visit of King Victor Emmanuel with the Russian grand dukes appears to clear up the mystery of the whereabouts of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch. He has been at one time or another reported dead, in captivity of the Bolshiviki, and living incognito in various places. The last report had him residing on Prinkipo Island in the Sea of Marmora, between Asiatic and European Turkey.

A Euphrates Valley.

The Euphrates Valley, we are told, is to be the granary of the world, and this makes the construction of a railway linking it with the Mediterranean an imperative necessity. The difficulties from an engineering point of view are not great. It is hardly realized that from the coast of the Mediterranean at the mouth of the Orontes to the River Euphrates is a distance of but 130 miles, only forty miles of which are more than 1,000 feet above sea level. Thus there need be no tunnels and no heavy gradients, and once the Euphrates Valley is reached all is comparatively easy, for the ground is as flat as the proverbial pancake.

The distance saved would be immense. Take, for example, the carriage of goods between London and Mosul (Nineveh) or Bagdad. By the present route it works out as: London to Busreh by sea, 6,700 miles; Busreh to Bagdad by rail, 300 miles; Busreh to Mosul by rail, 500 miles. Now, assuming that there will be a railway from Antioch or Alexandretta to Mosul or Bagdad, the distances work out as: London to Alexandretta by sea, 3,400 miles; Alexandretta to Mosul by proposed rail, 400 miles; Alexandretta to Bagdad by proposed rail, 50 miles. It will be seen at a glance that on the rail journey there is not much to choose either way, but on the sea transport 3,200 miles would be saved, to say nothing of eliminating the cost of the Suez Canal dues.—The Near East.

THE WORD "CAMOUFLAGE."

The word "camouflage," employed impartially as substantive and as verb, has become as much a part of colloquial English as words such as "strafe" and the homely but expressive "Blighty." Also, its significance is in general better comprehended. No one person in ten has the vaguest idea why "Blighty" is employed as an alternative to home; and "strafe," as colloquially employed in Britain to-day, has a number of meanings, all manifestly applied at hazard. But nearly everybody who makes use of the word "camouflage" has a tolerably definite impression of its signification. It is fairly generally understood that it is synonymous with "disguise"—a disguise of ships, fortified positions, guns, gun positions, wagons, motor lorries, even individual soldiers, in order to deceive the enemy. It is deliberately intended to produce confusion.

The evolution of the term is not altogether clear, but there are suggestive indications. In recent French dictionaries the verb "camoufler," to disguise or bedizen, takes its regular place; but in older works it is not to be found. In its place we find a substantive, "camouflet." In Napoleonic times this word implied a small mine—not the huge affairs charged with many tons of gunpowder, with which breaches were made in hostile ramparts, but a small contrivance intended to blow sappers out of an underground cutting — a "puffer" rather than a violent detonator. Feeling backwards, we find that in the seventeenth century "camouflet" had a perfectly definite meaning. It signified a puff of smoke blown into the face of someone with the malicious intent of blinding and confusing. It was employed in this sense by the poet Scarron, the first husband of Madame de Maintenon.

The word as it exists seems to have first been coined in Geneva; but Littre traces it to two Walloon words, "ca" and "foumer," to smoke. From these a substantive, "cafouma," was formed, equivalent to a "puff of smoke." Anyone who has experienced the feeling of dizziness and mental confusion occasioned by a sudden puff of acrid smoke in the face will perfectly comprehend how "camouflet" came to imply a deceptive disguise intended to produce confusion and bewilderment.

In modern Italian there are two verbs and a substantive similar to "camouflet" and "camouflage" all connected with a primary signification of deception or cheating. A secondary meaning, clearly derived directly from the annoying smoke puff in the face, was that sort of unpleasant surprise which is colloquially termed a "facer" or a "rap over the knuckles." In this sense it was employed in early eighteenth-century prose.

On the whole it would seem that "camouflage" is a perfectly logical development from the seventeenth century "camouflet." The earliest ideas of "camouflage" were undoubtedly to mask and confuse with a smoke screen. At Flodden the Scots "camouflaged" their advance down Branxton Hill by firing the rubbish in their camps, so that the English were confused and blinded by a dense rolling bank of evil-smelling smoke. Another "camouflage" was the setting up of dark-colored cloth screens to mask undefended gaps in entrenchments. The concealment of troops or guns by leafy screens is very ancient. The motive was always the same—not to protect the troops, guns, or what not by actual defences, but the bewilderment of the enemy by devices which would deceive the eye.

"Pidgin" English.

Servants in China speak "pidgin" or business English to their employers; and servants from different parts of China will use their weird language in speaking to each other. The formation of the sentence is the same as in Chinese; the language itself is an extraordinary mixture of English, Portuguese, French, and Chinese. Some of the phrases, says Mrs. De Burgh Daly in "An Irishwoman in China," are very quaint and amusing.

A bishop is called "No. 1, top side joss pidgin man." "Top side" means heaven, "joss" a god, "pidgin" business.

There is a story of two men who came to call upon the King of Siam when he was staying in Shanghai. They entered the hotel and asked the proprietor, a courteous American, if his Majesty was at home.

"Boy," called the proprietor, "one piece king have got?"

"Have got, sir," replied the boy cheerfully.

"His Majesty is at home, gentlemen," translated the proprietor.

One day, says Mrs. Daly, a large party assembled on a steamer to bid farewell to home-ward bound friends. Wishing to make certain that the steamer should not carry us off, we informed the steward in excellent Mandarin, that he was to come and warn us of her departure. He stared blankly. Some one tried Ningpo dialect—no use; Shanghai—still a blank stare. At length my husband called out—

"Boy!" "Yessir."

"Wantchee walkee can come talkee! Savyee?"

"All right, sir; me savyee!"

Servants quickly find out our likes and dislikes in food and act accordingly. A friend of mine was fond of snipe, and often ordered them for dinner. One evening, when an unexpected guest arrived, she told Boy that since there were not enough snipe she would not eat one. Presently Boy nudged her and remarked in a loud whisper—

"Missee can have snipe; one piecee man no chow!"

Leather from Fish.

The Government fisheries bureau says the skin of the codfish provides an excellent leather, tough as parchment and very durable. The same is true of salmon skin.

On With the Strikes!

It is evident that people will never be satisfied in this country until everybody has more pay than everybody else.

Crocodile's Agility.

The moment that a young crocodile breaks its shell it is to all intents and purposes as active as it is at any time during its life. It will make straight for the water, even if it be out of sight and a good distance off, and it will pursue its prey with eagerness and agility during the first week of its free existence.

Where He Excelled.

In an Irish village there is a grocer's shop, which is also licensed to sell beer and spirits. The proprietor of the shop prides himself on his skill in making up packets.

One day a farmer of the district bought a pound of coffee.

"I'll bet," said the shopkeeper, "that I can put a pound of coffee in a smaller package than any other man in Ireland."

"I believe it," was the reply. "I know you can put a quart of whiskey in a smaller bottle than any man I ever saw!"

A Frank Confession.

In the foreword to the catalogue of a fine private library now offered for sale in England, the owner gives his reasons for the sale with remarkable frankness. The war, he says, compels him to part with "very many things that I have enjoyed so long, but, perhaps, have had long enough." And he prefers to sell in America. For one reason, he continues, "there is, I fancy, a greater lack in America of the kind of wares I have to offer, and therefore their field of usefulness and pleasure will be greater"; more than that, "a kind of sentiment prevails mightily with me, urging me to avoid the risk of ever meeting a fellow book-lover gloating over something that was once a cause of gloating to myself. When I have parted with these small treasures I want to have really parted with them." And again, "There may be a third reason: that a higher, a much higher, figure will be got for them in the States." In perusing his confession the American collector will no doubt appreciate his frankness, sympathise with his regret, and feel, incidentally, that he speaks also for others.

Poetess Believes in Fairies.

Many readers of Punch will be glad to know that the poems of Rose Fyleman, many of which have appeared in the famous English humorous weekly, can now be had in a slim volume entitled "The Fairy Green." Of course, Rose Fyleman is not one of the great poets, but she seems to believe as implicitly in the existence of fairies as Maurice Hewlitt did shortly before the war when he set science at defiance by declaring that he had seen the little men. Rose Fyleman writes only about fairies and children, and there is a charming simplicity about her descriptions of both. Of course, her fairies chiefly love the woods and open spaces, and yet, strangely enough, one of the most appealing of her poems deals with one of the grayest and most dry-as-dust parts of old London. It is entitled "South Square, Westminster."

In Smith Square, Westminster, the houses stand so grim,
With slender railings at their feet,
and windows straight and slim;
And all day long they staidly stare
with gentle, placid gaze,
And dream of joyous happenings in splendid bygone days.

In Smith Square, Westminster, you must not make a noise,
No shrill-voiced vendors harbor
there, no shouting errand boys;
But very busy gentlemen step swiftly out and in
With little leather cases and umbrellas neatly thin.

Yet sometimes when the summer night her starry curtain spreads,
And all the busy gentlemen are sleeping in their beds.
You hear a gentle humming like the humming of a hive,
And Smith Square, Westminster, begins to come alive.

For all the houses start to sing,
honeysweet and low,
The tender little lovely songs of long and long ago,
And all the fairies round about come
hastening up in crowds,
Until the quiet air is filled with rainbow-colored clouds.

On roof and rail and chimney-pot
they delicately perch,
They hang like jewelled fringes on the ledges of the church;
They dance about the roadway with nimble, noiseless feet,
While the houses keep on chanting with a soft enticing beat.

And still they weave their sparkling webs, and still they leap and whirl,
Until the far horizon's edge is faintly
rimmed with pearl,
And the morning breeze blows out
the stars, discreetly, one by one,
And the sentries on the Abbey signal down, "The Sun—the Sun!"

And long before the butlers stumble
drowsily downstairs,
And long before their masters have begun to say their prayers,
The fairies all have pranced away
among the morning beams,
And Smith Square, Westminster, is wrapped once more in dreams.

Cat Knocks at Door.

The dog seems to have had its day; may I champion the cat, pleads a correspondent, and tell how, a day or two ago, I saw one knock at the front door of a suburban villa to gain admittance?

It was a Persian and, leaping to a small ledge beside the door, stretched out its paw and rattled the knocker several times. I waited on the pavement for the sequel.

There was no answer, so the cat repeated the summons. Result: Admission and a cuff on the ear from the busy housewife who had been disturbed in her household duties.—London Chronicle.

H. A. Cody.

Good, clean, wholesome novels unique in plot and abounding in action, adventure, are the production of H. A. Cody. His early experience as a missionary in the Yukon district supplied him with material which he uses so successfully as the background of his books of western life. As a clergyman who enters into the activities and daily problems of his community he has, in other stories, helped to show the place of the preacher and the church in the life of the people.

Rev. Hiram Alfred Cody was born in New Brunswick in 1872, ordained to the Anglican priesthood in 1898, missionary and rector in the Yukon district for six years. Since then he has been rector of St. James' Church at St. John, N.B.

CUMBERLAND.

Cumberland is one of the most famous sporting counties in England. With its neighbor, Westmoreland, it has world-wide celebrity as a wrestling centre, and its mountain runners are known wherever this peculiar sport is followed. There are annual races up the sides of the mountains and down again, and the local champion, Dalzell, who was killed in the war, was esteemed in Cumberland as Hanlan was esteemed in Canada a quarter of a century ago. The race was derived from the goat, and the performers leap and scramble over rocks like mountain sheep, and while coming down the smooth slopes take strides like ski jumpers. There is lively betting upon this as upon every other sort of contest, no matter in what part of England it is held. Sport is in the blood of these hardy people, and if an astonishing lot of money goes out of the district every week to bookmakers in London, it is also to be remembered that the district raised more money for the war loans than any other part of England with a like population. Keswick, a town of 4,500 people, sent 900 soldiers to the war, more than 150 of whom were killed.

There are two illustrious packs of hounds in the neighborhood, one hunted by Mr. Lowther, Speaker of the House of Commons. This is claimed to be the fastest pack in England, and the remarkable thing is that it is followed afoot, the nature of the surrounding country making it impossible to ride. The record for foxes killed is probably as great as that held by mounted hunts, while the loss in dogs trampled under foot is much lighter. The huntsman has killed 1,000 foxes in the past twenty-five years. Dogs are numerous on the streets, and if you meet a man in a country lane the odds are that he will be accompanied by a short-haired collie, a whippet or a terrier. We have seen more retrievers in the Keswick Lake district than we would see in the Great Lakes district. We hear a well-authenticated story of a fox terrier that went to earth after a fox and lived for three weeks underground after the earth had caved in behind him. When finally dug out he was a hundred yards from the entrance. He shook himself, walked over to his master, rubbed against his leg and once more went to earth.

The lake region has many literary traditions. Wordsworth's tomb is in Grassmere churchyard. It is no more than a slab with a name and a date. One could not improve on it unless by adding one of his own verses, but who would be courageous enough to make the selection, and the implied exclusion? Southey, too, lived here, and is credibly reported to have written his verses about how the waters come down at Ladore at the veritable falls a short distance away. We are glad to have Southey's assurance that the waters came down in some other way than as though poured through the spout of a tea kettle, as they are coming down now. An American who was taken out to see the falls by a guide, became tired of plodding up a dried watercourse and as he sat down on a rock, asked "How much further are these falls, anyway?" The scandalized guide replied, "Mon, you are sitting in them." As a siphon of soda these falls are worth consideration, but Niagara need feel no jealousy of them. In the village of Keswick is a house where Hall Caine is a frequent visitor, and in which he wrote one of his worst stories.

Czechs Superb Artists.

As artists the Czechs have power, imagination and superb technique. Their sketches showed the pride and manhood of the Czech soldier, who has gone through all the demoralizing experiences that have ruined the Russians; but has come through clean and sound.

The Czechs are musical. To hear the marching songs of the Russian soldiers in Petrograd was inspiring. But the Czechs have more than music in their singing—they have a challenge and a promise. The Czechs sang as though they were creating a Marseillaise and not simply repeating it.

Czech music, whether it be the marching song among the box cars, or the violin solo in the Red Cross car among the wounded, is like that. —Christian Herald.

English Customs in Egypt.

Egypt, notes a correspondent, is enthusiastic for English customs. In the case of visiting cards they are leaving us far behind.

I have one before me with the name in the centre written in Latin and Arabic characters, and the address below.

In the right hand corner in gilt letters is the Spanish greeting "Felicidades," and in the opposite corner a gilt anchor and chain wreathed with pale blue forget-me-nots. The whole card is bordered with lotuses.

Another Egyptian uses quite an English card, with the letters "P.T.O." neatly printed in the lower right hand corner. On turning the card over one is advised to "Keep smiling."—London Chronicle.

ALL SHUN THE PIRATES

HALIFAX VISITED BY FIRST GERMAN SHIP SINCE WAR.

Hun Captain Tells Harrowing Story of Hardships — Although the Barque Called for Aid When In Distress, Ships Passed By In Silence on Learning That They Were Teutons — Englishman Played Good Samaritan.

THE first German vessel to enter Halifax harbor since the war was the barque Paul, owned in Hamburg and commanded by Herr Kapitan Wulf Kreuger, who during the war was pilot of a German seaplane operating in the North Sea. She arrived on November 30, bringing an interesting story of battles with the sea.

The Paul left Hamburg on October 18, in ballast, for Philadelphia, and had a succession of fierce storms. She was reported in distress, and it was current talk that passing ships refused to render any assistance beyond taking off the crew in case they proposed to abandon the vessel. No one would take her in tow.

The Paul, a four-masted barque, sailed from Hamburg, October 18, in ballast, for Philadelphia, where she was to loaded by Sonneborn Sons with barreled oil for Hamburg. On November 1, Captain Kreunger says, in longitude 18.00 w., latitude 46.00 n., a heavy storm sprang up, which broke off the foretopmast and forced the vessel to lay-to for four days.

During the storm one of the sailors was on the foremast, making the lower topsail fast, when the main top broke, and the man was thrown to the deck, breaking one of his legs, an arm and also receiving severe internal injuries. The British steamer Idaho soon after arrived on the scene and took the injured man off. The Paul then proceeded on her way for Philadelphia, but on November 19 fell into another gale, blowing from the southeast. They were forced to heave-to again, this time the main topmast was carried away. Later in the day, the mizzen topmast came down. Two days later the Furness liner, Southwestern Miller, hove in sight and the Paul asked for a tow. The Miller replied she would take the barque in tow, but after coming alongside, sailed away without sending further word to the disabled barque. The next steamer to pass was the Furness liner Manchester Merchant, in charge of Captain Musgrave, who during the war had his ship torpedoed by the Germans, and when his crew took to their boats, the enemy submarine rose to the surface and fired on the helpless sailors.

Notwithstanding this bitter experience, Captain Musgrave, realizing the plight of the German barque, did all in his power to help them.

The captain of the Paul spoke of Captain Musgrave as a splendid seaman who did all that he could, sending messages to his owners in Hamburg and his agents in New York, and scattering messages broadcast over the ocean. The Manchester Merchant went on her way, and the Paul started for Cape Race. She had lost twenty-one sails and now had only one lower topsail, one mainsail and one foresail.

On November 25, the Paul ran into a calm, but suddenly a terrific electric storm broke out. After this a coastal steamer passed so close that the captain says he almost could have "spit on her deck." The Paul was showing distress lights, but the coastal steamer passed by, taking no notice of the barque. Apparently, Captain Krueger says, "those on watch were asleep."

Money for Imperials.

Some 50,000 residents of Canada who served in the Imperial forces during the war will be entitled to share in the appropriation voted by the Canadian Parliament to supplement the gratuities they receive from the British Government and bring them up to the Canadian scale. Some of the Imperial veterans are enquiring when they may expect a distribution of the fund. The Government is now engaged in the preparation of an order-in-Council setting forth the manner in which the gratuities will be distributed. Furthermore, the Government will need as a guide to the distribution of the money a concise record of each soldier's service. This, it is stated, is not available in Canada. An Imperial soldier with three years' service, it is understood, receives from the British Government about $160 as a gratuity. He would be entitled to about $400 additional from the sum appropriated by the Canadian Parliament at its last session.

METHODISM IN ONTARIO.

Important Anniversary Observed at Lundy's Lane.

Dr. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist Church, was the speaker at the 125th anniversary celebrations of Lundy's Lane Church which was celebrated on November 16.

On the Niagara frontier the first preacher was a soldier, Major George Neal, who preached and formed the first class meeting in 1788. The first preacher of the gospel was not kindly received, but was pelted with stones until the blood flowed down his face. But as a soldier he stood his ground bravely and the only success that is known of his ministry was the conversion of one Christian Warner, who lived near where St. David's now stands. The Methodism of Upper Canada at this time and for a number of years afterwards, was connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States, as established by Wesley at the close of the revolutionary war.

In the year 1791 is found the name of William Lozee, the first itinerant preacher appointed to Upper Canada, as no circuit had yet been formed. He was commissioned to range at large, preaching where he could find hearers and form his converts into classes. At the end of the year the first circuit was formed, including this Niagara County and reaching as far east as Kingston.

A class was formed, meeting at the home of Christian Warner, and attended by persons from far and near, including the immediate neighborhood of Lundy's Lane. Methodism, then, in this locality dates from 1788, when this Niagara County became a central point of Methodism for the greater part of Upper Canada. William Lozee, the first itinerant, at the time of his arrival in Canada, was a young man, tall, active and strong, and called "One-armed Lozee," on account of the shrivelled state of one arm, caused by an accident. He was a fearless preacher as well as a fearless horseman, his usual pace being a gallop. In the year 1795 there were three circuits in Canada, one being the Niagara circuit. That year Niagara circuit appears for the first time in the minutes of the conference, with the name of Darius Dunham for its first minister. Darius Dunham was a man of good talents as a preacher, but was so plain and blunt in speech that his name has come down as "Scolding Dunham." He never failed to denounce sin or any appearance of vanity or conformity to the world. And brave was the woman or girl who appeared in meeting decorated with either frill or flower. One pretty little blue-eyed, flaxen-haired woman was daring enough to go to meeting one summer afternoon wearing a chintz print dress with a frill at the neck and front. She left the meeting at its close a sadder and a "much madder" woman for having had the finger of scorn pointed at her, coupled with words of strong condemnation for her vanity in dress.

A National Highway.

The Rotary clubs of Northern Ontario have joined forces with the Canadian Automobile Association in urging the construction of the important link of the trans-Canada Victory Highway lying between the great lakes and Winnipeg.

Recently eighty delegates representing the district extending from Fort William to Winnipeg met in conference at Dryden and formed the Canada Colonization and Highway Association. It was pointed out that the only difficult new construction necessary to the completion of the Fort William-Winnipeg highway will be encountered in the rocky, broken country between Scovell and Vermilion. It is said that the proposed trunk road will open up some fifty thousand acres of rich arable country and induce settlement and development. Lateral roads would rapidly be constructed. While the trunk road, it is estimated, would cost approximately five million dollars, it would do for this great country what the Assouan dam has done for the Nile basin — make it not only habitable, but richly tributary to the nation. With the completion of this road, but one considerable gap will remain to be closed in the trans-Canada Victory Highway — that on the north shore of Lake Superior, Port Arthur and Fort William, and the "Soo," the western terminus of the Great Northern Highway.

Hall Caine's Title.

Sir Hall Caine has written to a Manx paper which had familiarly addressed him as "Sir Thomas," "thereby going back to the name by which I was known among my ain folk when I was a boy."

He wishes to hall-mark his name, which stands for forty years of friendship, successes "which have been sweet, and perhaps for some failures that have left no sting."

So he adds: "Please let it be Hall Caine, with or without the prefix."—London Chronicle.

Fire destroyed the residence of W. J. Sheridan, Picton; the contents were a total loss.

One Day's Meals

BREAKFAST with the average Englishman is one of the four or five chief meals of the day, and so he usually makes it a substantial one. He begins the day about an hour or so before breakfast, when he is awakened by a servant, who enters with a tray containing a large pot of tea and rolls or toast. After drinking a few cups of tea, which is almost invariably good, and consuming two or three rolls, the pangs of awakened appetite force him to leave his bed. He brings his hot water from the hall, shaves, baths and goes to the dining-room. The English do not eat oranges or grapefruit as commonly as would Americans or Canadians, and are likely to begin the banquet with a plate of oatmeal. If you are a native of Cumberland you then prepare to have what is called "a hunter's breakfast. It probably acquired the name when men would have a breakfast on Tuesday and expected to hunt the rest of the week, with no other sustenance save what they could derive from the herbage of the forest.

After the porridge the pretended hunter eats a kipper or two or the side of a haddock. Warming to his work, he next attacks a dish containing a poached egg, several rashers of bacon, and a large, real sausage. He may eat his potatoes with this dish or he may prefer to have them with the pork pie that follows. The pork pie may be either hot or cold and jellied. It has a thick crust, and as it is a great favorite with hunters, perhaps half a pound may be consumed. The meal is now practically at an end, save for a sago pudding, a quart of tea, some crackers and cheese, marmalade and a trifling pot of ale. The hunter then rises from the table able and ready to stalk a stag or scale a mountain.

Our Cumberland hunter having had a hunter's breakfast, is ready for a hunter's lunch about three hours later. It begins with soup, and works its way down through fish, game, roast, two or three kinds of potatoes and other vegetables, pudding, sweets, fruit, tea or coffee, and probably whiskey or beer. As a rule the coffee is drunk anywhere but at the table, and the invariable custom is to serve it in the smallest of cups. You may have as many small cups as you like, but apparently you cannot have a real large cup of coffee. Probably it is contrary to the provisions of Dora. Our hunter gets very little or nothing to eat between luncheon and tea-time, though he may have a drink or so, and an Englishman is more likely to do his serious drinking either with his meals or after them than before them. Due to this fact he can absorb a considerable amount of alcoholic beverages in the course of the day, and show no sign of it either contemporaneously or by an early death. Tea-time is about 4 or 4.30, and is designed not as a real meal, but as something to stay the stomach before dinner. There is tea, with biscuits, and several kinds of cake. Cigarettes are lighted and what is for many the pleasantest half-hour of the day begins. Women appear to smoke as generally as the men. It is not considered amazing if they should smoke a cigar. If a man does not care for the cakes and tea he can find a substitute in a decanter.

The hunter's dinner is likely to begin at 7 or 8, and continue indefinitely. Should it be broken off untimely before 10, or should he not feel particularly "peckish," he can return to the attack at supper time. Then if his appetite is still not satisfactorily abated he can take a sandwich or the leg of a chicken before going to bed, or perhaps a confidential servant will hide a lunch under his pillow. The dinner is like the lunch, except that there are more courses, the portions are larger, if the plates are larger, and there is likely to be a bottle of wine, and liqueurs. After the dinner proper the thought crosses the mind of the hunter that hunting is dry work and a bottle of port is opened. The action is frequently plagiarized, and the hunter and his friends settle down to quench the hunter's thirst. This is no mean task, but to Englishmen the more difficult the problem the greater the determination and ingenuity brought to bear upon it. In the end the hunter's thirst is assuaged and he has acquired an appetite for his breakfast the next day. But in order that his cravings for food may not overwhelm him in his sleep he is likely to take a few "spots," not as whiskey but as waters of Nepenthe, before finally consenting to go to bed, and permitting the game of the islands to roam unmolested until the horn sounds the next day and he swallows it.—J. V. McAree in the Mail and Empire.

Bird Sings to Music.

Before "the time of the singing of birds" is over—and the nightingale is beginning already to "jug-jug" rather than to launch Tennyson's "liquid note"—some musician ought to do fuller justice to the blackbird.

He is the most intelligible of all birds—that is, he has intervals like those of our human music; his phrases may be, and have been, put down on our five-lined music paper.

There is a West Sussex blackbird who sang all "last May the first five notes of "The Campbells Are Coming," and he is at it again, in the same garden, this year.

Other blackbirds have composed prettier phrases, but all sound equally jolly and sweet in their trolling.—London Chronicle.

Since Japan assumed control of Formosa a dozen years ago, the annual sugar production has been increased from 75,000 to 630,000 tons.

Robert Standhope, thirty-two years of age, an employe of the Canadian Ford Motor Company, dropped dead while telling a friend he did not have to work again.

YOUNG STATESMEN.

Pitt Made Prime Minister at Age of Twenty-four.

For a long time it has been a British boast that the House of Commons is the most widely representative of all legislative bodies, since it includes not only all social grades, from the miner and the artisan to the scions of ducal houses, but numbers among its membership men of all ages, from the mere youth to the octogenarian.

So long ago as the year 1613 there were forty legislators in the Commons who had not attained their twentieth year, and, incredible as it may seem, certain of these were only 16 years of age.

Edmund Waller, the poet and courtier of Stuart days, was a schoolboy of 16 when he qualified as an M.P. He was, as Clarendon says, "nursed in Parliament," and probably furnished the only instance of a man who could look back upon two-thirds of a century to his debut as a legislator.

Charles James Fox was but 19 when he was "returned" to Parliament for the "pocket borough" of Midhurst. He was not many weeks' older when he made one of the finest "maiden speeches" ever heard at Westminster. "I hear it spoken of by everybody as a most extraordinary thing," his father wrote to a friend, "and I am not a little pleased with it."

Chesterfield was a legislator at 20, when he entered the Commons as a member from St. Germans. His first speech is said to have "electrified the House." His triumph was, however, diminished by the circumstance that as he was not yet of age he was liable to a heavy fine for speaking in the House.

More precocious yet was William Pitt. Although he had passed his twenty-first birthday when Appleby sent him to Parliament he had within a few weeks after the taking of his seat established himself as the keenest debater and the finest speaker in the Commons. Upon the conclusion of his "maiden speech" a member of the Opposition was reported to have observed to Fox, "Pitt will be one of the first men in Parliament." "He is so already," replied Fox.

Pitt was scarcely 23 when he was made Chancellor of the Exchequer. At 24 he was Prime Minister.

Farming Tommies.

In the last year of the war the home forces of the army cultivated 6,668 acres of land at a profit of $80 an acre. In France thousands of acres were cultivated by British soldiers, and vegetables worth no less than $2,500,000 were produced. By irrigation the army in Mesopotamia became self-supporting, so far as vegetables were concerned, and the grain crop was valued at $15,000,000. The Salonica army also was busy cultivating the soil back of its lines, and, in addition to harvesting crops worth some $300,000, saved 52,000 tons of ships which otherwise would have been used to carry supplies to that far-off front.

INTERMEDIATES TAKE ON CANNINGTON IN OPENING LOCAL O. H. A. FIXTURES

Visitors Promise to Put up Good Fight After Friday's Defeat Locals a Much Improved Squad, Especially in Team Work.

Tonight marks the opening of the O. H. A. season here when the Intermediates take on the Cannington squad.

On Friday the locals scored a very decided victory over their opponents right in Cannington, but it is rumored abroad that they were forced to extend themselves to do it. Hodgins and Co. have a good squad but unfortunately for them were not in shape for the opening fixture. They learned much in Friday night's game and are confident of giving a good account of themselves in tonight's game.

In justice to the locals it should be said that it will be a much different squad that romps out on the ice tonight than went down to defeat before the Belleville combination. Those two defeats from the Bay of Quinte aggregation was the best thing ever happened the Petes. They learned the lesson that one man no matter how fast and clever cannot go through a squad of back-checking fiends. They learned that a defence no matter how stalwart cannot stand up against an attack of three crack forwards tearing down the ice unmolested by back-checkers. They learned that even their own "Milkey" Murray cannot stop the puck when it is shot from three feet out after the whole team has been beaten.

Altogether the locals learned a much needed lesson and will go on the ice tonight a much improved team.

A large crowd will be on hand to see the locals in their first league match on their own ice.

"BABE" RUTH STILL HOLDS OUT FOR $20,000

ROGER HORNSBY ALSO MAY GET EXALTED OPINION OF HIS OWN WORK

According to gossip Rogers Hornsby, shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals, has decided to ask Branch Rickey for a liberal increase over his 1919 contract figures. Babe Ruth, under contract to the Boston Red Sox for two years more at $10,000, has served notice through his western business representative, one John Igoe, that he will not play for less than $20,000 next season and that he will not submit to being sold or traded to any other club.

Certain of the magnates who are accustomed to sow to the wind are but reaping the whirlwind. Ruth was a wonderful asset to the Boston American League club last season. At the end he was the greatest individual drawing card of the game. And Harry H. Frazee overlooked no opportunity of advertising the fact on every possible occasion. Repeatedly he made statements (which perhaps were true) that he wouldn't trade the home-run slugger for an entire team. He "shilled" and "ballyhooed" Babe Ruth from one end of the circuit to the other. It was good press work at the time and doubtless helped swell Boston's gate receipts. But is it any wonder that Ruth, as a result, has such exalted ideas as to his value?

Refused $70,000 For Him.

What applied in the case of Ruth may apply equally in the case of Rogers Hornsby. A few days ago Branch Rickey announced that he had refused an offer of $70,000 and was no occasion for making such a statement unless Rickey desired a bit of publicity for his star; that is, there was no reason if Rickey was really serious in his statement that he would not part with Hornsby under any consideration. He neglected even to mention the club that had made the spectacular offer.

Two years ago, when Charles Weeghman was president of the Cubs, Rickey wished to have the Chicago magnate drawn and quartered almost for telling the newspaper boys of the windy city he would give $100,000 for the young Cardinal shortstop. Rickey declared Weeghmans' talk was calculated to make Hornsby dissatisfied with his berth in St. Louis. He alleged, in short, an attempt at covert "tampering."

At its meeting a couple of weeks ago, the National League club took steps to prevent "tampering" by providing a fine of $1,000 for the first offence and expulsion for the second. This rule, of course, doesn't cover the case of Rickey. There is nothing to prevent an owner from tampering with his own property. But it would seem there should be some distinction. How about the old brown derby?

Camping.

When one goes camping with friends it is best to determine beforehand which of the party snores most quietly before choosing a partner for your shelter-half, which is the army word for tent. W. Gerard Chapman, the author, neglected to do this before leaving for the Algoma district when last he went camping with friends. His bunk-mate proved to be a pastmaster at snoring. After he had retired, the small tent vibrated and the ground quivered at the rumbling disturbance and Mr. Chapman was unable to sleep. Remembering an ancient belief that whistling often quieted a snoring sleeper he tried this remedy with but temporary and spasmodic effect. The next morning Mr. Chapman was up bright and early. He chanced to overhear the head of the party confiding to a friend who had come over from a nearby camp: "I got a pair o' grand musicians wid me. Wan of them snores—like a sawmill workin' up knotty spruce, whilst the other wan whistles in his sleep. 'Tis rare harmony, I make no doubt, but between the two of thim songburrds not a wink did I be after gettin'; not a wink the whole night through!"

Origin of Indian Summer.

When the Pilgrim Fathers landed in New England they naturally knew little of the climatic conditions of their new home. With October came the first flurries of snow. The frost nipped the woods, and the chill of the air foretold the coming of winter. "We will now have winter," it is related that one of the band remarked. But the friendly Indians pointed to the skies and to the west and told the Pilgrims that summer would come again before the winter. And they were right. In the last days of October it grew warm again. The air was filled with slanting sunshine. The world seemed wrapped in an atmosphere of sleepy warmth. The Pilgrims looked forward and remarked, "Lo, the Indian's summer."

It's an Ill Wind—

After the big storm on November 29, the fishermen at Port Stanley made huge catches of fish and it is believed the storm blew the shoals of fish to the shores. The first boat in after the storm brought in five tons and the average catch for the next four days were fifty tons per day.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

The appointment of a new Lieutenant-Governor for Ontario has revived interest in the functions of that official. Technically speaking, he is in charge of the administration of government of the province; actually, he acts only on the advice of the executive council or cabinet, and performs no duties that could not be fulfilled by the chief justice of the province, unless they be social duties which are his by tradition, but not by law.

It would not be an easy matter, if desirable, to abolish the position of lieutenant-governor, because the appointment is required by the British North America Act, the constitution of Canada, and the provinces have allotted to him various duties not common to all. For instance, in British Columbia, the lieutenant-governor is authorised to transmit by message to the Legislature the draft of any law which appears to him to be desirable. And in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia he appoints the member of the Upper House or Legislative Council. In Quebec he appoints the Speaker of that body.

The lieutenant-governor is authorized to choose the ministers who shall assist him in the governing of the province and constitutional practice requires that he shall choose them from the party having a majority of the members of the Legislature. In practice, the lieutenant-governor selects the party leader having the largest following to form a ministry, and almost as a matter of course approves of the selections made for the various portfolios.

The other duties of the lieutenant-governor are:

To summon, prorogue or dissolve the legislature.

To recommend the appropriation of the revenues and all money bills.

To assent to or veto bills or reserve them for the consideration of the governor-general.

He appoints all officers necessary to the work of administration.

He may dismiss ministers or demand their resignations.

The lieutenant-governor, contrary to popular impression, is not a representative of the King, and holds no commission from him. He is appointed by the Governor-General in Council and may be removed by the same on the advice of the Dominion Cabinet. Munro's "Constitution of Canada" says he presides over the administration and forms a part of the legislature."

A Captain of Finance.

"The Germans know that their country is down and out," said Sir John Aird, in a recent interview, "and their temperament makes them realize that only vigilance and efficiency will get to the top again. We must be eternally vigilant also, and watch them."

Sir John Aird is one of Canada's captains of finance, whose position of general manager of one of our largest banks enables him to make an accurate survey of the whole financial and commercial situation. A few weeks ago he visited France and Belgium for the purpose of studying the after-war situation. He was impressed with the progress made in the work of restoration.

"Canada," he said, "can provide many things that are needed in these countries, apart altogether from foodstuffs, such as live stock, beef, pork products, and cereals of all kinds. They need all kinds of manufactured goods, such as machinery, structural steel, paper, boots and shoes, cotton and woollen goods, and agricultural implements—articles that they require immediately. I think people fail to realize how important it is that what we can do in the way of assistance, should be done promptly."

Sir John Aird was born on November 15, 1855, in the town of Longueuil on the south shore of the St. Lawrence river opposite Montreal, but in his early boyhood the family moved to Ontario, ad Sir John was educated in the Toronto Model School. Shortly after leaving school he took up clerical work in a railway office and for six years he made that his occupation.

In 1879, at the age of 24 years, he became private secretary to the general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and after passing through many positions, he became general manager.

Speaking of Canada's overseas trade, Sir John remarked that "the rate of exchange is one of the difficulties in the way. I am hopeful that, once the Peace Treaty is ratified, some arrangement will be effected for stabilizing the rate of exchange—I believe $4.50 for the pound would be a reasonable figure all round—then we should know where we were and be able to get on with business, which is badly handicapped by the present uncertainty."

Happy Occasion.

Mother—What's the matter, darling?

Child—P-p-pa hit his finger with the hammer.

Mother—Don't cry about that; you should laugh.

Child—I-I-d-did.

Friend and Foe

By MATILDA FRANCES PFEFFER

With a roll and a yawn, Ben Buttles awoke upon his nest of leaves behind a bush at the roadside. Then he came bolt upright and stared, wild eyed and open mouthed.

An automobile had come to a sudden halt, checked by its driver at a barricade of criss-cross logs. Two vicious-looking men sprang from behind a great tree. One of them darted up to the occupant of the machine, bodily dragged him from his seat, flung him to the ground, and sitting astride of him, began striking at his unprotected head with a heavy slungshot. The other leaped into the automobile and started to ransack it.

"Thunder!" uttered Ben. "It's a hold-up!"

Ben snatched from his pocket his knife. For three seconds he was busily employing it mysteriously about his knees. Then he raised in one hand an odd-looking object, bulging at one end, running to an obtuse point at the other. He rushed quickly past the foliage.

Swish!

The object described a parabola curve in the air. With a cracking sound it landed on the head of the assailant, who uttered a scream and toppled sideways.

"The under dog, every time!" chortled Ben complacently.

The young man whom he had saved from having a broken skull, perhaps worse, had gained his feet. The man ransacking the automobile fled precipitately. The other desperado had staggered off. The young man fixed a grateful glance upon Ben, who was grinning with satisfaction.

"You've done me some service—" began Dean Forster, and then paused, staring in wonderment. "Why," he added, "you've got only one limb, and the other one—"

"Is the old wooden peg I've worn for five years," returned Ben, waving the wooden object he had utilized as a weapon. He proceeded to strap this back into place, adding: "Those fellows seem to have been laying for you, mister."

"There's no doubt of that," responded young Forster. "I travel for a jewelry tool and supply house, and I suppose one little package of watch springs in my sample case alone represents over ten thousand dollars. Now, then, what can I do for you to show my appreciation of your timely aid?"

There was plenty to do for Ben, and Forster proceeded to do it. From a thriftless wanderer with a wooden stump Forster transformed Ben into a respectable looking, well dressed man with the most comfortable artificial limb money could buy. Then he secured for him a position as watchman in the great plant of Warren & Co. at Acton, for whom he was a traveling salesman. Having made the old man comfortable and considering his grateful duty complete, Forster turned his attention to wooing and winning Alice Lane. That precious privilege met with but one setback—Forster had a rival, or rather an enemy, for such Ralph Dykes became. Both young men were in the service of Warren & Co.

One day, to the amazement of the town, Dean Forster was arrested, charged with theft. There had disappeared from the firm something over $10,000 worth of dental gold. The only evidence against Forster was that the stamped and priced wrappings and tags of two of the missing packages had been found, pushed back in a drawer of his desk. How they came there Forster had no idea.

His indignation at the arrest of Forster changed to close watchfulness and suspicion.

One evening Forster was with Alice at her home. They were discussing the approaching trial in court, when a ring at the telephone sent Alice thither.

"It is a call from Mr. Warren. He wishes you to come at once to the plant," she told Forster.

He hurried away. At the office at the factory he found his employer and Ben Buttles.

"Now, then, my man," spoke Mr. Warren sharply to Ben, "you said you had made some important discoveries about the thefts and would disclose them only in the presence of Mr. Forster."

"Be careful what you say, Ben," spoke Forster.

"Oh, that's all right," said Ben, unstrapping his artificial limb. Reversing it, he tipped out various packages that filled its hollow space. The amazed Mr. Warren stared, as there was revealed a variety of some of the most valuable articles carried in stock.

"Where did you get all this?" was asked wonderingly.

"Well, I burglarized the room of the man I suspected, and I also secured some memoranda that will convince you that he has been a systematic thief for a long time.

"I hid them in the limb, for if he had caught me, I would have been searched. I hope justice will now be done to an innocent man."

So, stanch, though humble friend, Ben Buttles had a second time proven his loyalty at a crisis that for a time menaced the good name and happiness of Dean Forster.

Talk of Secession.

In Northern Ontario the question of the secession of that part of the province from Southern Ontario is one of the chief topics of discussion. The movement has gained such proportions as to be impossible now to ignore. Rightly or wrongly, the advisability of such a step will probably be discussed at length and in the finest detail by the leading citizens of the north.

The present situation does not arise as a consequence of there being a lot of disgruntled disciples of the old political parties which now occupy the "second row" in Ontario's Parliament. It appears to have been born of the belief, long standing, that the mining and lumbering districts have not received due recognition. Premier Drury, in selecting H. Mills a former locomotive engineer, to administer the Department of Mines has, it is said, added fuel to the fire of discontent.

It is pointed out that the mining interests have no objection to organized labor playing a part in Canadian politics; neither do they object to any man being chosen to administer the requirements of any industry with which he is familiar. The mines of the districts of Sudbury and Timiskaming constitute the backbone of the mining industry of Ontario. Great industrial centres have been built up on the nickel deposits of Sudbury, the silver mines of Cobalt, and the great gold-bearing lodes of Porcupine and of Kirkland Lake.

English Cars.

England is still the land of great wealth it appears from the columns of some of its advertising mediums. A recent issue of Motor, of London, contains under the head of "Second-hand Cars for Sale" several offers of such cars for over ten thousand dollars each! One car, which dates as far back as 1913, is described thus: "Magnificent open sporting body, leather cover for hood, tapered bonnet, electric installation, Wrigland rims, two spares, one each side; very fast and in perfect condition throughout, price 3,000 guineas" ($15,000).

USE ORDINARY COAL IN FUTURE

London, Jan. 5. — King George is again asserting the necessity for economy in view of the high cost of labor and has decided that hand-picked Welsh coal must no longer be provided for the royal yachts. Noval storekeepers in the future will supply coal free from dust in 100-pound bags, similar to those used on the Admiralty vessels.

Some comment is being made as to the reason for not fitting the royal yachts with oil-burning engines on the ground of cleanliness.

FATE KNOWN THIS WEEK

Mr. Gordon said this morning he had received a letter from the Private Secretary of the Minister of Justice, Ottawa, that he would be advised this week of the decision of the Cabinet regarding the fate of the men charged with murder and who are to be hanged on the 14th of this month unless their sentence is commuted.

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION HOLD MUSICALE

The Women's Art Association began its season's activities under most favorable auspices when, on Saturday afternoon, January 3rd, a most delightful musicale was held. The very pleasant and commodious rooms in the Conservatory of Music, where the society's new studio is situated, were taxed to their utmost capacity, when more than one hundred members and their friends assembled to listen to the most interesting and varied program arranged by Mrs. Alice Rogers Collins.

The president, Mrs. Sherwood, who very charmingly welcomed all to this the first meeting of the society for 1920, very clearly explained the aims and objects of the association, namely: to arouse and stimulate a real interest and love for art among the citizens by means of art study clubs, art lectures, exhibitions of pictures, etc. Accordingly, the president bespoke for the association the sympathetic interest and support of all present and announced a most attractive program for the winter's work.

So delightfully varied was the afternoon's program and so charmingly rendered was each of the numbers, that the musical committee of the Art Association, of which Mrs. Gliddon is convener, are to be congratulated on the success of this the first of their fortnightly musicales.

While all the numbers were listened to with the greatest pleasure, perhaps special mention may be made of the instrumental numbers rendered by Mrs. Alice Rogers Collins, whom Peterborough audiences are privileged to hear only occasionally, and of whose musical success the people of this city are justly proud, claiming her, as they do, as a former citizen.

The program was as follows:

Solo—Land of Long Ago .... Ray
Miss Ina Allen.
Violin Solo—Reverie, Op. 22, No. 3
.... Vieuxtemps
Mrs. Hooper.
Solo—For You Alone ......, Geehl
Mr. Herbert Rush.
Piano Solo—(a) Two Preludes
.... Chopin
(b) The Maiden's Wish
.... Chopin-Liszt
Mrs. Collins.
Solo—The Wood Pigeon ......
.... Liza Lehmann
Miss Florence Scott.
Solo—Love's Coronation... Aylward
Mrs. Amys.
Violin obligato by Miss Laura Logan Hooper.
Solo—(a) My Task .... Ashford
(b) O Gentle Child ......
Mr. Rush.
Violin Solo—(a) Rodino ....
.... Beethoven-Kreisler
(b)—Poem ... Fibich
(c) Berceuse... Neruda
Mrs. Hooper.
Solo—Love is Mine ...... Gartner
Mrs. Amys.
(Violin obligato, Mrs. Hooper.)

At the conclusion of the musicale a pleasant social half-hour was spent by those present. Mrs. Aylmer and Miss Hatton were the hostesses, and tea was served from a very prettily decorated table centred with red carnations and white narcissi.

MONTREAL SCHOOLS CLOSED BY STRIKE

SHORTAGE OF WATER WAS REPORTED AS MENACE TO PUPILS' HEALTH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 5.—Many of the Protestant Public schools closed this morning an hour after opening on account of the situation precipitated by the strike of the civic waterworks employes. Althouhg ther was enough water to heat the buildings, the lavatories were so insufficiently supplied that in view of the possible menace to health it was decided to postpone the classes. A number of the smaller bakers in the city have been hard hit by the shortage of water.

LONDON MAN CLAIMS TO HAVE FOUND A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

Charles Jackson is Not a Doctor But, Says He Has for Years Made a Study of Medicine and Anatomy.

London, Jan. 5.—I started with the full measure of the spirit of "Doubting Thomas" to inquire into the claims of Charles Jackson, of 2B King Street, Dover, to have cured many cases of consumption, and to be regularly engaged in doing so. I was led to the conclusion that, at any rate, these claims deserved the closest investigation by those capable of proving or disproving their accuracy, as the cures appear to be so well founded, and some of them so very extraordinary.

Mr. Jackson told me he will welcome the fullest investigation. He has been in England since 1911, but was born in Australia, and spent many years ago when he discovered the basis of his cure for consumption, which is entirely herbal.

"After working on it and making tests," he said, "I offered the then prime minister of South Australia, Kingston, to treat a limited number of patients under medical supervision at the Adelaide Hospital, but this was refused the Prime Minister replying that medical etiquette stood in the way, and I dropped the whole thing until some six months ago.

Asked whether he was in any way connected with the medical profession Mr. Jackson said he was not, but had made a special study of anatomy, and had been able to give people a good deal of medical attention whilst residing in the "back blocks" of Australia and New Zealand.

When the war broke out in 1914 Mr. Jackson answered Kitchener's call and joined the Buffs, (East Kent Regiment,) serving until 1916, when he was invalided out of the army. He afterwards worked in local engineering yards.

"I had proved in my Australian experiments," he said, "that my discovery would destroy internal germs and parasites, and I had good reason to believe that it would be successful in cases of consumption. But I have always had the medical profession against me, and can only break down that barrier by taking patients who have been discharged from the sanatoria as incurable, and curing them."

Investigation Easy.

Mr. Jackson pointed out that there is no difficulty in investigating the cause of his cures, as they are practically all in Dover and Folkestone. He stated that there are between fifty and sixty cases, including consumption of the lungs, tubercular glands, tubercular hip, etc., many of long standing, which had been given up as incurable by doctors. He has records of the names and addresses of all, and is willing to hand them over to investigators.

One case Mr. Jackson now has in hand is of a striking character. It is that of a discharged soldier named Hearson, living in Dover. Hearson who served throughout the war, and won the D. C. M., and M. M., and who has six wounded stripes, had been sent home incurable after having been in two sanatoria for tuberculosis of the lungs. He has now been under Mr. Jackson's treatment for some six or eight weeks, and has made such remarkable progress that he anticipates he will soon be able to start work. Mr. Jackson claims to have cured the tuberculosis, and declares that the man now needs only strengthening.

In reply to my question, Mr. Jackson said the cure is given in the form of a syrup, one dose every 24 hours a tablespoonful for a man, a dessertspoonful for a woman, and a teaspoonful for a child. His belief is that the specific destroys all germs foreign to the human blood, and causes the cavities in the lungs to heal up.

The fifth day, he says, is always the turning point; the patient then realises that he or she is going to get better, and goes ahead by leaps and bounds. It takes from two weeks to eight weeks to effect a cure, according to the seriousness and standing of the complaint.

Easier to Cure Women.

"A remarkable thing that I find," said Mr. Jackson, "is that it is easier to cure women, and children than men the complaint appearing to be more stubborn in the case of men.'

Asked the proportion of his cures to the number of cases, Mr. Jackson said they had been nine out of ten, the failures being in cases where the lungs are too much diseased, and the patient "has not enough lung to live upon.'

Mr. Jackson makes this offer to the government: "We are told that 35,660 soldiers have developed consumption during the war. If the government will collect these men and put them under canvas for twelve weeks, I will guarantee to cure 34,000 of them."

It is a remarkable offer and the man undoubtedly has the fullest belief in the capabilities of his prescription, whatever it may be.

It sounds rather like belief in a modern miracle to credit that consumption can be cured in the way claimed, but Mr. Jackson is willing to bring in evidence his fifty or so patients, and is anxious for an independent inquiry.

MRS. ELIZA BROOKS DIES

101 Years of Active Christian Work Comes to an End.

Belleville, Jan. 5. — Mrs. Eliza Brooker, relict of the late Mr. George H. Brooker, passed away in this city last night. Deceased was the oldest resident of the city and vicinity, being in her 101st year. On the seventh of March, 1819, she was born at Brighton, England, and for over half of a century had lived in Belleville. Deceased was one of the oldest members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church in Canada. She was quite active until two years ago, when she met with an accident. A family of two sons and two daughters survive, and in addition there are thirteen grandchildren, eighteen great-grandchildren, and one great, great-grandchild.

FAKE WHISKEY DEATHS SWEEPS U.S. AS PLAGUE

STARTLING INCREASE IN NUMBER OF DEAD, DYING AND BLINDED.

Toronto, Jan. 5.—A search that now extends to every corner of the country is being made for Adolfo Paranelli, who until Christmas eve held forth at 311 [illegible] street and who, the police say, has been connected by the Hartford police with the flooding of the Connecticuta Valley with the wood alcohol decoction that already has taken fifty-four lives in the towns of Holyoke, Hartford, Springfield and Chicopee Falls, Mass. The total number of deaths in these towns that can be attributed to the apparently wholesale indulgence in wood alcohol as a beverage undoubtedly will be far greater. At least as many more are in hospitals, many dying and others permanently blinded.

Five men died here in New York Saturday, and the hospital doctors after a brief examination made the terse comment: "Wood alcohol."

Two more such deaths occurred in Newark.

Cleveland reports fourteen deaths and nine men and women in hospitals some of whom are bound to die and others will never see again. From the South and from the West came despatches indicating that bone dry America celebrated Christmas by drinking wood alcohol. Sometimes the victims drank it knowing it was wood alcohol but believing that diluted it was possessed of no more harmful immediate effects than the ordinary ante-prohibition whiskey. In other cases the stuff was sold as whiskey. It is impossible to make an accurate statement regarding the number of deaths throughout the country. But it seems to be within bounds to reckon on hundreds.

Constable W. J. Small, St. Thomas, who is a South African war veteran and has served about five years in France, has just received the Mons Star.

Frank Morris, Norfolk county, was sentenced to one year in Burwash for stealing a motor car.

Wm. Anderson, Owen Sound, drank Columbian spirits Sunday and died.

Roy Sawyer, Amhersburg, 17 years old, while at work at the Brunner-Wood plant, had his leg so badly lacerated that it had to be amputated.

Geo. Mykoff, Hamilton, who eloped with 14-year-old Annie Koluk and married her in the United States, is being tried for abduction.

Y.W.C.A. WHATS DOING THIS WEEK

Work and play at the Young Women's Christian Association are in full swing again after the holiday season. Two gym classes were held Saturday morning and the Ever Bright Club met in the afternoon. The gymnasium work will go on as usual this week and in addition there will be the following meetings:

Tuesday, 6 p.m.—Athena Club for supper, gym and club meeting.

Tuesday, 8 p.m.—Meeting of girls to organize new club.

Friday, 7.30 p.m.—Story-telling Circle.

Saturday, 7.30 p.m.—Campers' League.

Later in the month it is expected that Judge Huycke will give a series of lectures on the laws of Ontario of special interest to women. Further announcement of this will be made later.

RICH MEN IN AUTOS HELPING THE POLICE

VOLUNTEER TO RUN DOWN CHICAGO BANDITS WHO ROBBED WINE CELLARS

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Armed with shotguns and rifles, a company of vigilantes, headed by Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson and composed of various members of Chicago's ultra-fashionable set is patrolling the roads about the Lake Forest suburban colony in limousines.

They are on the alert for a band of wine cellar bandits who within the last two weeks have cleaned out many a precious stock of liquors and whose depredations are said to have resulted to date in a loss to Lake Forest folk of something like half a million dollars.

This band is considered a most cowardly one, for many of its victims for various personal reasons dare not admit that they have suffered at its hands, but among those who have come out into the light with complaints against it are J. Ogden Armour, Walter S. Brewster, Dr. Samuel J. Walker, George A. McKinlock and Jonas Kuppenheimer.

It seems that these and other wealthy residents of the Lake Forest colony recently discovered on visiting the recess where they had laid up their treasures that they were as bare as old Mother Hubbard's cupboard. As each day added new mourners to the list, they have now decided to take matters into their own hands and bag the robbers when they come around again.

A suggestion made by Sheriff Green of Lake County is that folk who still have some of the rare liquids dig moats around their homes erect drawbridges and set a trusty band of armed retainers to watch the stuff, but this adivce comes too late for those who have already lost their precious Scotch, fiery Holand's and the choicest products of Kentucky.

MORTALITY IN TORONTO.

Not One Death From Smallpox So Far Reported.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 5.—The total number of deaths in this city during the year were 5,703, an average of 11.4 per thousand of the population.

There were 508 deaths during December, including 56 of pneumonia. Despite the smallpox epidemic there was not one death from that disease in the city, according to reports.

Sam Haining was elected reeve of Highgate by acclamation.

Gold production in British Columbia has declined 20 per cent. as compared with 1918.

WINDERS AT C.G.E. RETURN TO WORK

WAGE DISPUTE WITH EMPLOYEES TO BE SETTLED BY ARBITRATION

The twenty-five or thirty employes of the Armature department of the C. G. E., who went out last week, returned to work this morning, and the Minister of Labor will organise a board of conciliatoin to arbitrate their disputes with the company, both men and the members of the firm having consented to this course.

The men asked for an increase of twenty per cent., time and a half for overtime, and double time for Sunday work. They also asked a minimum wage of fifty cents an hour for beginners. The company would concede only ten per cent.

When Minister of Labor Robertson heard of the dispute he wired J. H. Burnham, M.P., asking him to try to prevail upon the men to remain at work until the points at issue could be arbitrated. The men sent for their organizer, John Noble, of Toronto, and decided to return to work pending arbitration.

SIR W. HEARST GETS FEDERAL POSITION

APPOINTED MEMBER OF THE INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION FOR CANADA.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—Sir William Harst has been appointed to the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission, filling a vacancy on that body which has existed since P. B. Mignault, K.C., of Montreal, was appointed to the Supreme Court Bench. The salary of the position is $6000, but members of the board are not prevetned from carrying on their regular professional or other business.

The other members of the Canadian section are C. A. Magrath, who is chairman, and H. A. Powell, K.C., of St. John.

Wesley Rennels, St. John, N.B., while working on the freighter Cascalano, fell from a staging and broke his leg.

The tonnage passing through the Sault St. Marie locks during 1919 has been the lightest in five years.

Peter Guermonpes, a French stowaway, who was a prisoner in Lille during the German occupation, was arrested when the steamer Canadian Raider arrived at St. John, N.B.

BOARD OF TRADE COUNCIL TAKES UP APPOINTING OF POSTMASTER

Recommending of Any Person for Position Outside Province of Organization but, Civil Service Rules Should be Followed.

The Council of the Board of Trade at its meeting last evening, took up the activities for January and February.

President Turner, Chairman Barrie, Alderman Frank Whitehouse, J. J. Hartley and Joseph J. Duffus, were present. Ernest F. Mason was added to the Executive committee to take the place of Alva W. Cressman, during the latter's absence from the city.

From many quarters the Board has been urged to express an opinion and use its influence with the federal authorities regarding the appointment of the Postmaster of Peterborough.

The Council considered it outside the province of the Board to recommend any particular person for the position, but it was strongly and unanimously of the opinion that the law, under which the Civil Service Commission was organized, should be respected, unless there is some satisfactory excuse for a different course. Adequate and efficient governmental service is the paramount consideration and the Council believes that promotions on merit through the Civil Service Commission are a means of safe-guarding the post office from any influence other than that of competency.

An early conference of representatives of the several committees of the whole Trent Waterway area is to be arranged in Peterborough. The Orillia Board of Trade was recently addressed by Senator W. H. Bennett of Midland, and the Peterborough Board of Trade has been asked to act as the intermediary body. An inquiry into the problems touching the development of the Kawartha district as a great provincial recreation ground was ordered.

It is felt that the attractiveness of this remarkable area can be greatly enhanced by development of the road and sections that are particularly attractive to sportsmen. The only way to accomplish a specific result is by co-operation of the interested communities, including the railways and the Provincial and Federal Governments.

STEAMER SENDS OUT CALL FOR ASSISTANCE

AMERICAN VESSEL IS IN DISTRESS OFF THE COAST OF NEWFOUNDLAND

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Jan. 6.—The American steamer Herndy is in distress off Newfoundland and requires immediate assistance. In a wireless message she reports the engine flooded and her condition serious. The Harndy is not listed in available shipping records.

Now Out of Danger.

Later messages from the steamer state that she is now out of danger and proceeding to Bermuda under her own steam. The crew succeeded in keeping the water at a standing point with the pumps.

SEVEN THOUSAND ARE DRIVEN FROM HOMES

AND THUOSANDS MORE OUT OF WORK OWING TO FLOODS IN FRANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 6.—Seven thousand persons were made temporarily homeless by a flood in the River Seine, which reached the crest yesterday according to estimates. At the same time twenty-one thousand were thrown out of work by high water. The water receded during the night and the oficial statement says that if the weather continues dry, normal conditions may be expected before the end of the week.

MERCY FOR COMMUNISTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 6.—The Inter-Allied military commission at Budapest was authorized by the Supreme Council today to intervene in favor of some of the more moderate communists who have been condemned to death by the authorities in the Hungarian capital, according to an announcement today.

EX-ALDERMAN A. A. McINTYRE WILL APPLY FOR A RECOUNT OF BALLOTS

Must Present Affidavit That a Deputy Returning Officer Has Improperly Counted or Rejected a Ballot or Made Incorrect Statement.

Ex-Ald. A. A. McIntyre has definitely determined to apply for a recount of the ballots in connection with his recent defeat for mayor by one vote by W. H. Taylor. His affidavit was not filed nor his deposit made this morning, but it is understood these will both be done within a few days.

To apply a recount for a candidate or voter must apply by affidavit before a judge of the county, within fourteen days of the declaration of the clerk of the counting of the votes. He must declare that a deputy returning officer, in counting the votes has improperly counted or rejected any ballot paper, or made any incorrect statement. Besides this the applicant must deposit with the clerk $25 as a guarantee of any expenses incurred by the recount.

On receipt of the affidavit, the judge may set a date for recounting the ballots and must give two days notice, in writing, to the candidates and the clerk of the date set.

Recount in Private.

At the recount those present are the judge, who counts the ballots, the clerk and the candidates, with their agents. Any other admissions are at the discretion of the judge.

The matter of the costs is left entirely to the discretion of the judge, and the clerk in drawing up the expenses is to be guided by the allowances made for an ordinary county court sitting.

Besides the recounting of the ballots a candidate or his agent may bring before the judge any evidence he may desire to prove that any vote was improperly cast or any other mistake in connection with the counting or accepting of the ballots by any deputy returning officer made.

This will be the first recount of a mayoralty election ever held in Peterborough. The only recount in a municipal election in the last twenty years was two years ago when ex-Ald. George Evans was defeated by the late Ald. J. H. Smith by three votes in the east ward. The recount in this case showed no change in the number of votes for either candidate, although every ballot in the entire ward was examined.

WILL SIGN TREATY SATURDAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 6.—There is every indication now in Supreme Council circles that the peace protocol will be signed by Germany and the ratifications of the treaty at Versailles exchanged on this coming Saturday, Jan. 10, the date tentatively set by the Council yesterday.

WHISKEY MEN TAKE CAN. MONEY AT PAR

PRICE OF LIQUOR COMING INTO CANADA RANGES FROM $16.50 A CASE UP.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—There is at least one place in Detroit where Canadian money is accepted at par. This is the agency for liquor which opened near Woodward avenue ferry dock, selling for delivery in Canada.

Deliveries by express were being made over the river, prices ranging from $16.50 a case up, the better brands of imported whiskey being the highest.

The only other development was the systematic canvass of vacant rooms in Windsor being made with bright prospects that soon the town will be full to the brim.

LIBERAL LEADER KING OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

WILL ADDRESS GATHERING OF HIS FOLLOWING AT NEWMARKET TONIGHT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 6.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal Opposition in the House of Commons, arrived in the city this morning on his way to Newmarket, where he will be tendered a banquet by the Reform Association of North York, which constituency he formerly represented in the House. Several local Liberal stalwarts called on the leader today, but, generally speaking, Mr. King spent a quiet day here, in preparation for tonight's event, which will inaugurate his tour of the eastern part of the Dominion.

HEAVY SELLING MOVEMENT

Marked Session of Stock Market in New York Today.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 6.—The stock market was subjected to a heavy selling movement in today's session, leaders recording abrupt declines of from two to five points, despite extremely easy rates for call money. The liquidation was attributed to a statement of Governor Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, who urged the leading bankers of the country now in conference at Washington to discourage all unessential loans.

NEILL-SHEPHERD TROPHY CONTEST

TO BE PLAYED THURSDAY BETWEEN ORILLIA AND PETERBOROUGH CURLERS

Next Thursday will be the first big day of the season for the local curlers. It is the date of the Neill-Shepherd trophy contests between the Orillia curlers and those selected from the local rinks.

Rinks skipped by Geroux, Whiteman, Skinner and Foote will play in Orillia while the rinks skipped by Connell, Lang, Bowes and Mc Dermid will engage four crack rinks from the opponents.

A big day is expected and the local curlers are looking forward to the event with anticipation of success.

Open Bonspiel.

Arrangements are being made to hold the open bonspiel, possibly Peterborough's greatest sporting event, on Feb. 10th. The Brock Street rink as well as the curling rink will be used for this event which promises to be even better and bigger than last year, when 58 rinks were enterred.

Plans are announced for 50 new schools in New York city, costing $25,000,000, and seating 62,455 pupils.

ALIEN EMEMIES PLOT TREASON

OVER TWENTY-THOUSAND ARE ACTIVE IN STATE OF NEW YORK ALONE

AIM TO OVERTHROW GOVT.

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS EXTEND THEIR SUPPORT WHILE SOME MERELY SYMPATHY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 6.—More than twenty thousand alien enemies in the Communist party in New York state alone are openly organized for the overthrow of the government by force and violence under the direction of the Bolsheviki leaders in Russia, Senator Lusk, chairman of the joint legislative committee investigating seditious activities, stated today.

In addition to these there are communist labor party and other revolutionary organizations working actively to accomplish the same ends, as well as many other bodies which agree with their principles and encourage their activities without participating openly in them, the senator said.

SIX MUNICIPALITIES FAVOR HYDRO RADIALS

THREE VOTE AGAINST PROPOSED LINE AND THREE YET TO VOTE

Toronto, Jan. 6.—At midnight last night, Hydro officials were confident that in six out of the nine towns or townships voting yesterday on the by-law for the construction of a Hydro electric radial from Hamilton to Galt, Kitchener, Guelph and Elmira, the measure had carried. The doubtful municipalities were Ancaster, West Flamboro and Waterloo townships.

The Question Submitted.

The question submitted to the voters asked whether they were in favor of entering into an agreement with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for the construction of a Hydro-Electric line between Hamilton, Galt, Kitchener, Guelph and Elmira, costing $3,530,000. The plans for this line provide for the building of a new line from Hamilton to Galt, and for the use of the Grand Trunk Railway line between Galt and Guelph and Galt and Elmira, the line being in the nature of a branch of the Toronto-Niagara line.

Victory in Dundas.

According to a despatch from Hamilton the by-law carried in the town of Dundas by a majority of nearly 300, although its defeat was feared owing to the opposition of Gordon Wilson, M. P., and of other leading citizens. In Preston and Elmira, the two other town in which it was being voted upon, it carried in the former by a majority of two to one.

Out of the six townships voting on the project it was known to have caried in three. These are Woolwich and Beverly, with majorities of 200 and 100, respectively, and North Dumfries. In North Waterloo township the result was uncertain at a late hour last night, while in Ancaster and West Flamborough the by-law was known to be defeated.

Three Still to Vote.

The by-law was already carried in the cities of Hamilton, Galt, Kitchener and Guelph, which voted on it on January 1, and in the town of Waterloo. Three municipalities are still to vote. They are the town of Hespeler and the townships of Gulph and Puslinch.

SAME LIQUOR LAW AS IN 1917

Intoxicating Bevergaes May Not Be Kept in Pyblic Places.

License Inspector Joe. Stewart has received word from the Provincial License Commissioner that the same conditions now prevail regarding liquor as did in 1918, before the order-in-council was passed prohibiting its importation.

Intoxicating liquors can be imported from Montreal for lawful purpose and for use in no other way.

A man may receive shipments of liquor for use in his own private house. He cannot, however, import it for use or keep it in an hotel, boarding house or any place of business.

IS SENT TO REFORMATORY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Kingston, Jan. 6.—Frederick Scales, 16 years of age, who pleaded guilty to opening a switch at Verona on Dec. 20th, which resulted in an accident on the C. P. R., was sentenced to the Ontario Reformatory to a term of not less than three months and not to exceed two years.

SUBMERGED VESSELS WILL BE BLOWN UP

THOSE SUNK AT SCAPA FLOW CANNOT BE RAISED AGAIN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 6.—German warships sunk by their officers in Scapa Flow will be blown up shortly, it was stated here today. The decision to dispose of the vessels in this way followed the completion of the investigations by a special commission representing all the Allies. Experts employed by the salvage department of the British Admiralty spent several weeks taking soundings at Scapa Flow, and the information they furnished was used as a basis to determine whether the ships should be raised or destroyed.

BOLSHEVIK DRIVEN OUT OF STRONGHOLD

LETTISH TROOPS WILL SOON BE IN COMMUNICATION WITH POLAND

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 6.—The Bolsheviki army has evacuated the city of Dvinsk on the Dvina. It is admitted in a Russian soviet communique received by wireless from Moscow today. The place was abandoned under enemy pressure, the statement says.

The Letvian and Polish armies which are engaged in a campaign on this front, continued yesterday their advance along the Pskov railway after the capture of Dvinsk, according to the official advices to the Lettish legation. It is expected to open mail communication at once between Riga and Dvinsk, and the first train between these points will probably leave Riga today, thus establishing direct communication with Poland.

LARGE MAJORITY FOR LAKEFIELD BY-LAW

ONLY DISSENTING NOTES TO HYDRO PROJECT

Lakefield, Jan. 6.—The election held here yesterday held few surprises. The Hydro bylaw for the expending of $33,500, carried with but nine dissenting votes.

The following village officers were elected:

Reeve—J. C. Strickland, majority 83 over J. F. Moore.

Councillors, elected by acclamation—T. B. Marling, George Spence, Sam Charlton and Andrew Young.

School trustees—Dr. J. S. Gibson, E. Galvin and Dr. J. R. Fraser.

FRIENDS THINK SMALL IS ON A VACATION

Toronto, Jan. 6.—If Ambrose J. Small thought fit to take a holiday unknown to his friends as from December 2 there was absolutely no business reason why he should not do so. It was learned from George F. Driscoll, general manager of the Trans-Canada Theatres. Mr. Driscoll also stated that the deal was quite complete and there was not one single rough end left for settlement—in fact, there was nothing left to settle. As the lawyers say, the deal was absolute and there was no reason in the world why Mr. Small should not seek a prolonged holiday. In fact, he had informed Mr. Driscoll he was proposing to take a vacation when the deal was completed. Mr. Driscoll denied that there was any truth in the rumor that the purchasing company were bringing legal action against Mr. Small in connection with the transfer. He said everyone was satisfied over the deal and there was no comeback on either side.

VETERANS ELECT DELEGATES TO THEIR ANNUAL CONVENTION

Officers of Local Branch Were Installed at Regular Meeting Last Night—Preparing for Provincial Gathering Which Will be Held in This City at an Early Dete.

The annual installation of officers of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans Association, took place last night, when the following officers were installed:

President— Comrade R. Muir.

1st. Vice President— Comrade M. Clancy.

2nd. Vice-President— Comrade R. E. Layfeld

Secretary and Treasurer — Comrade S. Whatley.

Executive Committee — Comrades Dr McPherson, W. Batley, L. Lebar, W. Perks, W. Primeau.

The following were elected as Peterborough branch delegates to the Dominion and Provincial Convention Comrades S. Whatley, H. Staunton, H. B. Johnson, J. Milby, R. E. Layfield; alternative Comrade J. Oxley.

Acording to the new orders issued from Provincial Command, all sub-committees must be appointed by the Executive Committee. This committee will shortly go into session and elect the social, sports, games, etc., committees.

The Provincial Convention

The Provincial Convention will be held this year in Peterborough. Over four hundred delegates from all over the province are expected to be in the city at this time. Last year the convention was held in Windsor and the delegates were entertained by the local branch in royal style. It is hoped that the citizens of Peterboro will do their utmost to help this branch make the convention a big success by aiding in the matter of accommodation for the short time the out of town delegates will be here. It is expected that the delegates will be convened some time this month, although no actual date has been set.

OVER 800 ENTRIES ON OPENING DAY OF THE LOCAL POULTRY SHOW

Some of the Best and Highest Class Birds Ever Seen Locally are Contenders—Busy Time in Store for the Judges.

The Peterborough annual poultry show opened today with the clamoring of crowing cocks and cackling hens. From the stairway of the market place, where the show is being held it sounds like a wild hedlum of disorderly racket, but one is pleasantly surprised upon witnessing the interior of the room. Row upon row of neat cages appear filled with large handsome birds of all kinds. Fancy birds with beautiful plumage and tufts around their head and the large carefully cared for more heavily laying birds are all there in large numbers. There are over 800 entries of fowl besides some rabbits and geese.

Although the judging will not take place until tomorrow, the opinion was expressed by many who are well acquainted with the class of poultry that some of the finest birds ever seen locally are contenders in the show now in progress.

A feature is the presence of a display under the supervision of W. S. Scott from the Government Experimental Farm, Ottawa. He will show fowl, particularly Plymouth Rocks and white leghorns, of exceptionally good laying varieties. All the birds he will show are ones that lay over 200 eggs annually. He will deliver lectures and explain how best to care for fowl to get them to produce their best.

Among the prominent contenders are J. Munroe, of Grafton; S. J. Cox, of Colborne; V. D. Ward, of Coburg; Harold Baptie, R. R. No. 5, Peterborough; Peter C. Wilson, Ottawa; J. H. Stewart, Bobcaygeon; Police Chief Jamieson, Colborne, and a great many others.

Chief Jamieson is adding two features to the display with his red speckled Sussex and display of wild ducks.

The market place will certainly be a wonderful event for the next few days for lovers of high bred and stately poultry.

The judges are J. A. Warranton, of Cornwall, and T. J. Kiley, of London, both eminent in all matters pertaining to poultry, especially of the showing varieties.

WANT CIVIC STRIKERS GIVEN BACK JOBS

MODIFIED REQUEST THAT MEN BE GIVEN PREFERENCE IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Jan. 6.—Labor members of the new Winnipeg City Council, which convenes tomorrow morning, are planning to receive the reinstatement issue, but in a compromise form, according to unofficial information at the City Hall. Instead of asking for immediate reinstatement of civic employees who lost their pobs because of participation in the sympathetic strike last summer, the Labor faction, it is understood, will introduce a resolution in the Souncil that these men stil unemployed be given first choice of taking their old jobs in the event of a vacancy. Some members of the opposing element wil fight such a plan, it was declared today.

MUST BECOME VACCINATED

Hamilton Colegiate Insists on This With Pupils.

Hamilton, Jan. 6.—Many pupils of the Collegiate Institute this morning failed to provide themselves with vaccination certificates and they will not be allowed to attend classes until they have undergone the operation. Five cases of the disease had ben found in the institute previous to the Christmas holidays. Some of the pupils say they will refuse to be vaccinated.

COUNCIL YIELD NEW POINT TO GERMANS

NUMBER OF TROOPS TO BE SENT TO PLEBISCITE AREA REDUCED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 6.—An application from the German representatives here for a reduction of the number of troops to be sent to the area in which the plebiscites are to be taken under the peace treaty, has been received by the Supreme Council. Germany will have to bear the expense of maintaining these troops, and her representatives complain that the cost will be excessive. So heavy an expenditure is not necessary, it is asserted.

The Council, it is learned, will reply that in as much as the United States has not supplied its quota of troops, which was to constitute one-quarter of the whole, the number of men sent will comprise only three-quarters of the total originally fixed.

JAP ARMY IN SIBRIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 6.—It was learned here today that the Japanese forces in Siberia to combat the forces of the Bolsheviki will shortly amount to one hundred thousand men.

U. S. Government deficit from railway operation during November was $54,500,000, a low record for the year.

Robbers looted the bank at Fayetteville, Ark., and escaped with $25,000 in Liberty Bonds.

WHY CITIZENS SHOULD OWN THEIR HOMES

THE MAN WHO OWNS his own home has an interest in life and in the community to which the mere tenant is a stranger. The fact of his ownership gives him a standing among his fellows. He is eligible, under certain easy conditions, to become a candidate for the council, for the utilities commission, and even for the mayoralty. He has a place that he can really call his own, where he is practically a monarch in his own right. No landlord pesters him every month with a demand for the rent in advance. No plutocrat can send him a letter notifying him to vacate the premises at the expiration of a certain time. If the dwelling is his own, the occupant will keep it in repair without being under the necessity of importuning a landlord to make some improvements, which, if really eventually made, mean, nine times in ten, a raise in rent.

The home surroundings, too, never fail to be better if the residents are owners rather than tenants. This is only natural. No man can be expected to exert himself in making a flower or vegetable garden if he lacks the assurance that he will be left in possession of the premises long enough to witness the fruition of his labors. In a word, the owner of a dwelling is not only certain to have a more comfortable home, but he is just as certain to make a better citizen, wherever his lot may be cast. Such a man is not likely to pass up the opportunity to vote at least at the municipal elections.

The way for every man to own his own home has been made easy by the Legislature. The City Council has already given effect to the legislative machinery, and a housing commission has been established. No man who has a steady job in the city need live in rented premises any longer. The conditions are easy. It requires only a small sum of ready cash in order to make this opportunity available. The terms are liberal as to repayment of a loan. The man who takes advantage of the new law can acquire property by easy stages. From day to day The Review proposes to explain all the details of this plan, which has been designed for the benefit of the wage-earners.

THE MAN who heads the polls has a right to feel chesty, but a candidate who makes it by a nose must certainly feel elated.

THE COUNCIL FOR 1920.

MR. JOSEPH WEARING recommends the new mayor of the city to take lessons in practical oratory in order to fit him for the duties of his high and honorable office. What does Mr. Wearing suggest in the way of training? Would he have the mayor take himself to the seaside as Demosthenes did, and cultivate his vocal powers by entering into a competition with the sounding waves? And was it not Demosthenes, too, who filled his mouth with pebbles in order to acquire a distinct articulation, and fixed spikes above him to cure himself of the ungraceful habit of hunching his shoulders as he spoke.

Mr. Wearing is a lawyer, considerable of a speaker himself, and it is only natural that he should esteem oratory as one of the highest forms of art. With a lawyer, whose success in a great measure depends upon his power to move a jury, the gift of easy speech is essential.

But in other lines the art may to a great extent be dispensed with. The public have been all these years talked to the very point of death. They are wearied of the preaching of civic and parliamentary statesmen. The eloquence chronicled in Hansard no longer holds them as it did in days gone by. What they demand now is action rather than a tornado of words. If the mayor of Peterborough can really do things, the people will readily forgive him if he is deficient in the accomplishment upon which Mr. Wearing sets so high a store.

Anyone looking over the membership of the present Council cannot help but be animated by the hope that something worth while will be accomplished this year. There is the ability and the experience that is so essential. The personnel is fairly representative. If it is not a breach of etiquette to speak of classes in this connection, then no class can put up the claim that they will be denied a hearing. Eight of the ten aldermen are seasoned veterans. The two new members, Aldermen Whitehouse and Copping are both young men of promise with achievements already to their credit. Mr. Whitehouse is well versed in civic affairs, and for years has been an indefatigable worker in the interests of the city. He is conservative enough to be safe, and sufficiently enterprising to be progressive. If Mr. Whitehouse does not make one of the best aldermen the city has ever had, then his host of friends are due for the disappointment of their lives. And right here it may be said that none of these friends are worrying in this connection.

Ald. Copping is another young man of affairs. He is not only a progressive business man, but is likely to prove a valuable addition to the Council in the work of beautifying the city. His taste in this regard is above question. His own home is an outstanding example of what may be accomplished in this line. Ald. Copping having won the Horticultural Society's cup for the best-kept lawn.

Oratory tends to prolong the sessions of the Council past the midnight hour. A good deal of the amateur variety helps to cloud the very issue which it seeks to illume. The people of the city will not be captious if the new Council talks less so long as they really do what is expected of them.

"HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL."

IT IS NOTHING unusual for individuals to disappear, never to be heard of again, leaving no clue by which they can be traced, and no reason for their action. Their lives in the community have been at least outwardly perfect. All their bills are paid, they leave a balance in the bank, and often their families are left in fairly comfortable circumstances. When such an individual drops out of sight there is usually created a mystery which is never cleared up.

There are hundreds of such cases every year that pass unnoticed outside of the narrow sphere in which the parties move. It is only when a man of affairs, the owner of millions, drops suddenly out of sight, that the matter becomes one of world wide interest. The papers print columns of news and conjectures, and the telegraph lines are loaded down daily with some new feature of the story.

There must be some reason for all these cases. People as a rule do not suddenly lose their senses, and, if they do, their insanity is not likely to take such a form. A modern novelist has attempted to solve these mysteries. He believes that people become tired of the ways of civilization and that a natural craving for reversion to type finally overmasters them. The novelist goes farther, and on a sunny isle in the Pacific draws a fancy sketch of a community made up of men of means whose nerves gave way under the strain of modern business pressure and who fled from it all.

And who can blame them if they seek such a measure of repose. They are really the victims of a disease which none but themselves are able to diagnose. They are wearied with wearing the fardels of conventionality, with having regard to all the calls of fashion and modern society, with the necessity of making an elaborate toilet every day of the week. They have groaned and sweat under the heavy load until they can bear the burden no longer. Unlike Hamlet, they are not discouraged by the fear of greater concealed ills than those from which they fly, but they are willing to take a chance.

After all, such courses are natural. The dignified business man loves nothing quite so well as to steal away from the haunts of civilization with all its petty exactions, and spend a holiday in primeval simplicity in the woods. Others raised on a farm taste again of the pleasures of early days when they revisit the scenes of their youth and again don the cotton shirt and overalls that was the uniform of their calling in days gone by.

And think of that island in the Pacific which the imagination of the novelist has created. There is no labor problem there, no civic elections that go contrary to schedule, no politicians, no furnace men, street car conductors, grafting chauffeurs, or nosey society editors. Eternal sunshine and eternal hope and peace!

ONE YEAR'S WORK AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

The annual report of Librarian Dela Fosse on the work accomplished during the year 1919 at the Public Library is as follows:

The Chairman and Members,
Public Library Board,
Peterborough.

Gentlemen. I beg herewith to present my report of the work accomplished in the Public Library during the ear 1919.

In regard to attendance and circulation of books we have progressed well, the figures being well up with those of former years.

The opening of the Children's Department, which was made a separate unit at the begining of the year, has amply justfied its existence. Its popularity has been most marked and has brought out very clearly the fact that it is from the children rather than from the adults that the most diversified reading it to be looked for.

A further attempt has been made during the year to show to what extent the Reference Library has been used and the figures given below whilst they do not give an absolutely correct record of the attendance in the reference room approximate fairly closely to the number.

The number of new books received during the year was 2237,—of these 1'19 were books for the juvenile department. The large percentage of childrens books was, of course, due to the opening of the new children's department.

One hundred and thirteen volumes were presented to the Library by various donors during 1919. Chief among them may be mentioned a gift of some 70 volumes from Mr. T. F. Matthews

Some eight or ten volumes have had to be destroyed during the year owing to infectious or contagious disease having broken out in the homes to which they had been taken.

I am glad to be able to state that there has been less mutilation of book and magazines than in past years, which is doubtless owing to the fact that the Reference Room is in a more public place than formerly. A few books have been stolen but only two or three that might be termed really valuable. These should be replaced at an early date.

About one hundred books from the Juvenile Department and 150 from the adult have had to be removed owing to natural wear and tear.

I append herewith the figures for both the Adult and the Juvenile Departments in the matter of circulation.

Adult Department

It will be seen from the foregoing that the combined circulations of the two departments exceed those of the prepreceding year by 15133 volumes In face of such figures comment is unnecesary as to the value or otherwise of a separate department for the children

An analysis of the figures shows also that in only one department, that of Philosophy, there has been a small decrease I am glad to be able to add that although we were rather badly put to it to find a successor to Miss Munro, we secured the temporary services of Miss Newton, who, although new to the work has shown herself a good friend to the children and has accomplished her duties in a satisfactory manner

We have had many calls for books from outlying sections bordering on the city and have of course, been unable to supply the needs of those applying, owing to the rule regarding non-ratepayers This past year we have received $10 from residents outside the city for the privileges of the Library

The amount received from fines and sundries amounted to $259,25.

The Museum, owing to the installation of the new Children's Department had to split up to a certain extent and some of the exhibits were removed to the basement and others to the rear of the lecture hall. Owing to the changes made one or two of the exhibitors removed their property. We have received, however during the year, several curios and may, in the near future be recipents of a fine colection of coins. This department still attracts very many visitors

The reading rooms have been as well patornized as in former years in spite of the fact that owing to the printers' strike in the United States, many magazines failed to come for one or two months.

In conclusion I have to add that the work of the whole staff throughout the year has been marked by excellent service

On behalf of the other members of the staff and of myself, I desire to tender our sincere thanks to the members of the Board for the kindness and consideration that we have invariably experienced at their hands.

I remain,
Yours respectfully,
F. M. DELA FOSSE,
Librarian.

PRISON REFORM AND MODERN RELIGION

(By J. E. Wright, in Detroit News.)

We hear much about what civilization owes to Christianity. But, has Christianity no obligation? Is there but one side to this question?

In closing a most interesting sermon last Sunday evening, among other things, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Wilson Cochran said: "I hope that during 1920 I may never refuse to extend my hand to the 'down and outer,' the man in prison or to those in trouble."

While the audience was leaving the church (the Woodward Avenue Presbyterian) at the close of the service, a strange woman bowed with grief, worked her way to the front of the church to shake hands with Dr. Cochran, and when she told him her story Dr. Cochran called to me to come forward and meet the lady, saying to her: "Here is a man who is devoting his life to work of this kind, and I am sure he will be pleased to do what he can for you." The lady agreed to come to my office Monday afternoon, and this was the story:

"Mr. Wright, I am the mother of seven children, ranging in age from 3 to 20, and until my husband went to prison he was a good husband and father, as he worked every day and brought all his money home.

"I have always been an active and interested worker in —— Church, so that many times when the minister called on the sick members of his congregation, he found me there cleaning up the house for them, and I have raised all my children in the church, as a Christian mother should do, but when my husband was taken to prison, our minister asked me to resign from the church and all its activities and get a divorce as soon as I could and live in seclusion. This, with all my other troubles, has been more than I could bear at times.

"The Sunday school teacher that taught my daughters, and all the church members have turned the cold shoulder toward us, so that they have neither called nor inquired after us. What shall I do? My husband wants me to visit him at the prison, what would you advise?

"I said to her: 'My dear woman, you are one of the most fortunate souls on earth to be free from that band of hypocrites, for such religion is a mockery before God and humanity. No matter what your husband has done, you married him for better or worse, and he is the father of your children, and he is human. No telling how many members of that church would be in prison if the truth was known. Go visit your husband in prison, for if you would know Jesus, you will find him there and not in the church and congregation, that asked you to resign.'

"We boast of our civilization, when, in fact, we are nothing more than a refined lot of barbarians when we encourage and maintain a system that provides schools and colleges to train men to preach a religion with no better results than can be shown in thousands of just such cases as this one."

NEW YEAR GREETING

(Mrs. A. F. Calder.)

To you, my friend, so far away,
My warmest thoughts and wishes stray,
And a brief message of good cheer,
To greet you at the dawning year,
Kindly I send;
My prayer is that this year may be
A happy, prosperous one for thee,
May favoring Heaven upon you shine
And every good and gift divine
On you attend.

Though other cherished friends are nigh,
My thoughts to youward ever fly,
Trusting that 'mid your festive glee
You'll spare a kindly thought for me,
For auld lang syne.
If haply, reckless word and vain
Of mine has caused you aught of pain,
For all are prone to err, and yet
To pardon, and the wrong forget,
Is most divine.

Let every bygone by gone be,
And buried deep as the deep sea,
All that would mar or rend in twain
One link of friendship's golden chain,
So firm and strong;
That has the tide of time withstood,
And fickle fortune's changeful mood,
Aye, friendship's pure and steady ray
Shines brightest when life's rugged way
Seems lone and long.

With lavish hand may Heaven supply
Blessings that gold can never buy,
Peace and contentment, friends a host,
And what we mortals value most:
One heart's true love.
Whatever else of fate betide,
A home where kindred souls abide,
A pleasant journey down life's road,
And at its end the bright abode
Of bliss above.

Mainly About People

The late Charles A. Dana, the veteran editor of the New York Sun, and one of the ablest men in his profession, dropped politics once for an evening lecture on journalism, and told an intellectual audience in New York his opinion of the Bible as a valuable book to study. Here is a paragraph from that lecture that may be an inspiration to the readers of these musings to turn to the Old Book now and then as a safe guide. "There is no book from which more valuable lessons can be learned. I am considering it now not as a religious book, but as a manual of utility. There is perhaps no book whose style is more suggestive and more instructive, from which you learn more directly that sublime simplicity which never exaggerates, which recounts the greatest event with solemnity, of course, but without sentimentality or affectation; none which you open with such confidence and lay down with such reverence; there is no book like the Bible. When you get into a controversy and want exactly the right answer, when you are looking for an expression, what is there that closes a dispute like a verse from the Bible? What is it that sets up the right principle for you, which pleads for apolicy, for a cause, so much as the right passage of Holy Scripture?"

DAIRY COWS SELLING FOR $115 TO $160

SUMMARY OF CONDITION ON ONTARIO FARMS FOR MONTH OF DECEMBER.

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Owing to the scarcity of grain live stock generally are not in as good flesh as usual, although otherwise in fair health. Many animals are being poorly bedded owing to the shortness of straw.

Brant states: "Prices for cattle vary so much that any single quotation is more or less misleading. Some animals, a little better than common bulls, have been selling at from 6½ to 7c a lb., while good fair calves running considerably past the veal stage, have brought from 11c to 12c a lb."

Grenville reports that the purebred and grade Holsteins picked up in that country during the past month by American buyers were for shipment overseas.

Dairy cows are reported to be selling at from $115 to $160 in various parts of the Province.

Butter is bringing very high prices. Renfrew reports a local creamery as paying 71c a lb. for butterfat, and as receiving during December much more cream than was handled in that month a year ago.

Brant states that the supply of hogs in that district is rather limited, as the drop in prices helped to cause heavy shipments, including a large number of brood sows. While Wentworth quotes young pigs eight weeks old as selling at $6 each, the prevailing price for little pigs is about $4, Haldimand reporting as low as $3 being paid.

Norfolk reports a number of general purpose horses for sale with but little demand.

York reports that over six tons of poultry were shipped from Newmarket on the 17th of December.

Very little grain is being marketed, most of it being kept for feed.

Hay is selling at from $22 to $27 a ton, except in the north, $35 a ton being paid in the Port Arthur district.

Fall wheat so far appears to be holding to the good promise with which the crop entered the winter.

Haldimand reports considerable activity among farmers' clubs in buying feed, and states that a local club last week unloaded three cars of western re-cleaned screenings, and one car of heavy chop, as well as a carload of miscellaneous supplies.

Middlesex states that a number of farms are changing hands, the owners in most cases removing to town.

BOLSHEVIK SCHOOL.

Pupils Choose Teachers and Dismiss Them at Will.

The Bolsheviks have done many cruel things and many foolish things; perhaps the foolish things they have done are more clearly indicative of their state of mind than the cruelties. In the North American Review, Riley Allen tells the story of Ufa, which he calls "the martyred city," because it was held by the Bolshevik forces and its population reduced from 10,000 to 8,000 in a few months by wholesale butchery—one in every five killed. But perhaps the most striking part of his ghastly recital is when he tells of the efforts of the Reds to run the schools in a Bolshevistic way. On this point, he says:

In principle, the Bolshevik had here what they called "free labor schools." In practice it was a farce—and a tragedy. First there were many school teachers, good ones, killed. Then the Reds installed their own, or the pupils chose them. The Bolsheviks gave to the pupils, even of the grade schools, the right to form students' councils and choose their own teachers. The result was hopeless inefficiency and confusion. The pupils did as they pleased, and if the teacher protested, they dismissed him. They broke up desks and tables, tore down black-boards, and burned school books in frequent outbursts of hoodlumism, unchecked by the so-called committee of education. Few in any school studied, the rest played. The teacher would either give up in despair and go home in the morning for the rest of the day, or get drunk.

To illustrate the Boshevik theory of education: Here is one instance: Their teachers were told to give astronomy lessons from the Socialistic point of view. Every astronomical fact, every comet and constellation, must have a meaning in the progress and ultimate success of Socialism and communism all over the world. And as the heads of the educational system here were ignoramuses their instruction was absolutely ridiculous. Many teachers could not write their own names.

Deflection of Rays of Light

A DESIRE on the part of physicists to reckon motion without relating the object in motion to any other object, is largely responsible for the recent astronomical discovery that light may travel in curved lines through space, being deflected by celestial bodies which it passes, said Prof. E. S. King of Harvard Observatory to a representative of the Christian Science Monitor. Astronomers and physicists generally are not a little aroused by conclusions drawn from photographs taken by the eclipse expeditions of British astronomers to Brazil and Africa last May, seeming to indicate, since on these expeditions the light from stars in the sun's background was found to be deflected in passing the sun, that lines of light are not straight, that parallel lines of light would eventually meet, that what appears to be a circle in space would be noncircular and that the angles of a triangle do not necessarily make the sum total of two right angles, also, that perhaps light has weight, and that Newton's theory of gravitation may need revision.

Prof. King said that physicists in 1887 attacked the problem of finding a means of computing absolute motion, that is, the motion of an object through space independent of any other object in space, as, for instance, the actual motion of the earth without referring to the sun or any other star or planet. This feat has never yet been accomplished. Things move upon the earth; the earth turns upon its axis; the earth follows an elliptical course around the sun; the sun and the whole solar system is perhaps moving as a unit in some course through space in relation to all the other visible celestial systems, and so on, no one can fathom how far. It is evident, therefore, that by figuring the motion of an object according to how it moves with relation to some other object does not get the student anywhere when it comes to the consideration of absolute motion.

The searchers, however, had to begin with something known. They took the fact that the earth moves through the ether at the rate of 19 miles a second with relation to the sun, and that of which they had long been sure regarding the motion of light—that it travels 186,000 miles a second; and they then conjectured that light moving in line with the course of the earth through the ether must show a 19-mile variation when compared with a ray of light traveling the same distance across the course of the earth.

The searchers availed themselves of instruments sensitive enough to register accurately the motion of light even to a 19-mile variation, and made a test of the motion of light in these two respects. Much to their amazement, the motion was found to be the same in both courses—with and athwart the course of the earth. Widespread discussion resulted and numerous theories were evolved, the chief one of which was probably the conclusion that the testing instrument itself changed its length according to the direction in which it was turned. They saw no way of proving this, however, for of course a measuring stick would change its length comparatively when changed from one direction to the other. If the human senses are under this illusion, it appears that we do not see things as they are nor where they are.

Doubtless because light was looked upon as that which travels in every possible direction through space, as that which is most common to all space, and as that which heretofore at least was thought to travel in straight lines, unswerved by objects in its path, it was thought by the natural scientists that the laws of the motion of light should be of value in solving absolute motion. After a while Dr. Albert Einstein appeared, advancing a theory one of the conclusions of which is that star light in passing the sun is deflected by the sun, and therefore made to travel in a curved line.

Reports from the eclipse expeditions indicate that light is deflected from its course when passing the sun. What causes this deflection or what it proves, it will take time to determine. It seems to be generally agreed by astronomers that the Einstein theory has been established, at least. Some assert that the eclipse observations show that light is affected by gravitation. But others are more conservative, thinking that perhaps a more extensive atmosphere or more compact ether exists about the sun than has been heretofore calculated, and that this might act after the manner of a lens in deflecting the star rays of light. Deep interest will of course centre about the next solar eclipse, in September, 1922.

The Afghan Situation.

Britain has no wish to dominate or annex Afghanistan, as Sir Hamilton Grant explained to the delegates, but the continuance of Afghanistan as an independent state on the borders of India must depend upon its good behavior and upon its influence over the tribes. Unfortunately, both by intrigues amongst the tribes and by approaches to the Bolsheviks on the other side, the present rulers of Afghanstan have shown that so long as they remain in power, they will be a potential source of assistance to the new menace that looms across the northwest frontier of India. That menace cannot wholly be disposed of by armed force and it will be necessary in future to keep strict political watch over the Court of Kabul as well as over the traffic through our frontier passes.

British Women Coming to Canada.

Anywhere from 11,000 up of the British women who were organized for war work and are being demobilized, want to come to Canada, Mrs. Jean Robson, of Ottawa, told the convention of Federated Women's Institutes recently, and at present there is only one opportunity open to them, that of housework.

The first party, who are all carefully selected and inspected in England, left England on November 18, accompanied by a Canadian woman officer. All these girls are physically and mentally fit, and should be met with a spirit of friendship and without undue criticism.

The chain of hostels, which are to be established across the Dominion, one in every province where these girls can go on their arrival and receive a certain amount of training in Canadian methods, or can return to if in any difficulty, seem to meet one of the great needs. There is no doubt that the British girls will need safeguarding, and Mrs. Robson asked for the co-operation of all the Women's Institute members in the follow-up work of the British women who come to Canada.

Probably many of these girls have been working on the land during the war, and will naturally go into country districts where the Women's Institutes can do so much to help them settle down in the land of their adoption. It is the first year or so that is the most difficult for the newcomer and for her employers, but so much can be done with a little sympathy and kind neighborliness. The tremendous problem of Canadianization is one of the biggest works for the Western Women's Institutes to do, as Mrs. Robson pointed out, and she asked the women of the east to encourage their daughters to give at least five years—which is equal in length of time to what their brothers gave up—to the great work of nation-building, by going out and teaching in foreign schools. There is a great call and a great opportunity for real service for Canada.

Tuskless Elephants.

An elephant without tusks seems almost impossible, yet in Ceylon the male elephants have no tusks at all; they have miserable little grubbers projecting two or three inches from the upper jaw and inclining downwards.

Nothing produces either ivory or horn in fine specimens throughout Ceylon, according to Tit-Bits. Although some of the buffaloes have tolerably fine heads, they will not bear a comparison with those of other countries. The horns of the native cattle are not above four inches in length.

The elk and the spotted deer's antlers are small compared with deer of their size in India. This is the more singular, as it is evident from the geological formation that at some remote period Ceylon was not an island, but formed a portion of the mainland. It is thought that there must be elements wanting in the Ceylon pasturage for the formation of ivory.

SEND STUDENTS TO PARIS.

Hon. Dr. Roy Has Plan to Perpetuate Racial Good Feeling.

Cecil Rhodes and Dr. G. R. Parkin will presently have a rival scholarship scheme to divide with their own the attraction of undergraduates from Canada. Hon. Dr. Phillipe Roy, the Canadian commissioner in Paris, is proposing such a scheme, with a view to encouraging Canadian students to take finishing-off courses in the great universities of France, at the expense of the several Provincial Governments. His plan is closely similar to that of the Rhodes' Foundation, but instead of taking the students to Oxford and Cambridge it will take them to Paris.

Dr. Roy is now re-visiting this country after several years' absence. He is an old-timer of Edmonton, where he was one of the pioneer medical practitioners, but of late years he has been a Parisian. What he has seen and heard in France, particularly during the war years, has led him to the belief that a good deal could be done to bring about a better understanding between the English and French races, and to perpetuate the good feeling already in existence, by giving a number of qualified Canadian students the opportunity to study in France and so to get a widening of their outlook that would be of international value.

Involved in the scheme is the establishment of a colony home in Paris in which the students from this country will live while prosecuting their studies. The home is projected as a war memorial to Canada's dead soldiers in France, and Canadian Clubs and other public bodies will be asked to contribute toward it after the funds for the scholarships have been provided. These are being asked of the provinces.

Five scholarships from each of the nine Provincial Governments is the request that Dr. Roy is making, and it is a part of his errand in Canada at the present time to interview the several Governments, with this particular thing to ask. As he explains it himself, the project takes at once a national or international significance. The idea behind it is that college men from Canada should go to France for advanced work and on coming back home should devote part or all of their time to lecturing and teaching, thus assisting in drawing the two countries closer together.

"I firmly believe," says Dr. Roy, "that if we could get forty young Canadians to live in France, to learn the language, and mutually to get better acquainted, it would have a powerful effect in creating unity in Canada when these young men finally returned to their various provinces. Previous to the war it was the custom for our students, who had the means to do so, to go abroad to perfect their studies and most of them went to German universities. We will not want this to continue.

"If the provinces create these scholarships—and I am pleased to say that Ontario and Quebec have already agreed to give five scholarships each—I will then establish a central home in Paris for the Canadian students, where they can live together under the guidance and friendly advice of one of the best educated French families. In such a central residence I would then see that our students received the full benefit of all the educational advantages which a city such as Paris can offer. They would come in contact with the French elite of science, literature, art, and technical education of all kinds. In such a home we should be able to promote better understanding and knowledge between races, thus making it a factor in the greater unification of Canad."

The Middle Class.

Class is being raised against class as a consequence of the attitude of the manual laborers in Britain. While monopolist capital has always been able to fight for its rights and maintain its power, it is the unfortunate middle class that is the toad beneath the harrow,—above the beast the spikes of taxation and capitalism, beneath the stony indifference of labor to any other interest than its own. Yet the middle classes form the majority of the educated classes and probably give less trouble to government than any other equal body of men.—Singapore Free Press.

60,000 Names on Walls of Church.

A church will be erected in Notre Dame de Grace, a suburb of Montreal, upon the walls of which will be inscribed the names of every man who died for Canada in the great war. The church will be used by the combined congregations of the Anglican Church of the Good Shepherd and Trinity Church. Sixty thousand Canadians were killed.

Origin of "Eleventh Hour."

The "eleventh hour" means figuratively the last minute, or, as we sometimes express it, "just in the nick of time." The expression now in general use, comes from the parable narrated in the gospel according to St. Matthew of the laborers hired for the harvest.

Graves of the Glorious.

So imperative and solemn an obligation is laid upon those of us who have lived through the war to maintain in sacred reverence the graves of those who have given their lives in it, that one would like to have settled, once and for all, the question whether everything is being done which can be done in fulfilment of that obligation. There had been many diverse, conflicting statements on the matter, some of which we have published—the last, from a lady and her husband who had visited the graves of their sons, saying, "Anything more miserable and uncared for one cannot imagine." We now have a story of a different kind. "I wish to state," says a private of the 69th Labor Company in France, "that I have been in this country for two months, and I can say that during the short time I have been here we have completed 2,000 of our dead heroes. Also that each time a cemetery is completed, our heroes are paid a final tribute by a firing party, and in the presence of an army chaplain the Last Post is sounded also." Perhaps it all comes to this: even in new peace cemeteries in England there is a sense of wildgerness, and out there in France and Belgium it may well be that the wand of nature has not yet given an ordered beauty to the solemn scene. There might, however, be Tending Committees formed to beautify and keep beautiful the graves of our country's saviours. If anything is done in this direction, we should like to hear of it.—John Bull.

The Guides of Egypt.

During the war, as the story now comes out, a correspondent and his party arrived at Luxor on the Nile, and, "We were given a reception," says he, "which had not been equalled since Roosevelt came back from hunting elephants." For four years past the Egyptian guides of ancient Thebes who conduct tourists to places of interest, had been longing for the good old days of the plentiful American tourist, and some 300 fairly mobbed the travellers in their joy at sight of them. There were guides grabbing suit cases, guides contending for the privilege of carrying the camera, guides tugging at the travellers' coats. Porters from the hotel rescued them and got them aboard the hotel bus, and guides swarmed over the vehicle distributing their cards. The war was a sad thing for the guides, and the lament of one of them, no doubt voicing the grief of many another, paid tribute to the United States as the mother of profitable pilgrims. "American tourist he come no more," lamented the old Arab. "All we guides starve. Oh, woe! Oh, woe! Me guide here 35 years. Only real tourist in the world is you Americans. If American see something he want, he say, 'How much!' You tell him, and no matter what price is, he say, 'All right, wrap her up.' Why President Wilson no stop the war, and why you Americans send money and food to Armenians and nothing to poor, starving guides of Egypt?"

AUTO BANDITS ROB BREAD DRIVER OF $53

TAKE LARGE SUM AND THROW BACK 17 CENTS FOR "CAR FARE"

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Motor bandits appeared again on Saturday night and effected a particularly daring holdup.

S. E. Brown, aged 16, a driver for the Lawrence Bakery Company, living at 16 Munro street, was the victim. Brown had finished his rounds and had turned down Parliament street toward Wellesley at 6.15 on Saturday night.

When near Wellesley street two men drove up to his rig in a Chevrolet car. "Where is Beverley street?" they asked Brown. The driver commenced to look through a small directory he had with him. "Never mind Beverley street," said one of the holdup men. "just throw us over your pouch." Brown looked up to find himself covered with revolvers.

He complied with the order: the bandits helped themselves to $53, and tossed back the pouch, with 17 cents left in it. "That will do for your street car fare," one of the men told Brown, with a laugh. They then drove away.

Describing the affair, Brown stated that the holdup men were driving a Chevrolet, with the license numbers turned upside down. The right-hand lamp was broken. He stated that the two men had on dark overcoats, and that they had the collars carefully turned up while they wore peaked caps well pulled down. Only their noses and eyes were visible to him. He reported to No. 4 Station, and police cars went out in chase, but could not locate the bandits.

ALLEGED THAT POLICE ACCEPTED BRIBE

REJECTED BAIT OF $200 AND $10 BUT FELL BEFORE $1000 OFFER

Regina, Sask., Jan. 5. — Ex-Probationary Police Constable Weder is in Regina jail awaiting trial on a charge of having accepted a bribe of $1,000 from one Kallick, a druggist of Leader, Sask. Kallick, is out on bail of $5,000 charged with bribing a police officer.

Evidence at the preliminary hearing was to the effect that Kallick's liquor imports were out of all proportion to his liquor prescriptions. Weder, who was then a probationary constable, made inquiries, and is alleged to have been offered a bribe of $200, then $500, both of which he rejected, and finally $1,000, which he is alleged to have accepted.

At this meeting the Grain Growers may change their name to that of United Farmers of Manitoba. The creation of the farm party in Manitoba will be discussed.

BEAUTIFUL PARKS BROUGHT FACTORY

STRIKING ILLUSTRATION OF VALUE OF PARK TO STRATFORD

Stratford, Jan. 5.—"Your magnificent park system," said E. J. Barklow, Vice-Presdent of the Gerlach-Barklow Company, as he signed the agreement covering the purchase of the McCloy factory yesterday afternoon, "was the deciding factor in bringing us to Stratford. We had a number of other locations in mind," continued Mr. Barklow, "but when the Secretary of your Chamber of Commerce sent us such wonderful views of your parks we decided at once that Stratford was the city for our plant, and (as he handed the cheque to Mr. McCloy) this is the result."

The Gerlach-Barklow Company of Joliet, Illinois, manufactures art calendars, monthly advertising cards, blotters, and similar advertising devices. Some years ago it established a plant in Toronto under the name of the Gerlach-Barklow Company of Canada, Limited, and it now has a dozen salesmen covering the Dominion.

UNABLE TO WORK FOR EIGHT MONTHS

FOR 4 YEARS CONDUCTOR COULD ONLY WORK HALF TIME—NEVER MISSES AN HOUR, NOW.

The remarkable results being obtained from Tanlac is further evidenced in the case of Albert Burgess, a popular conductor on the Winnipeg Electric Railway, who lives at 453 Stradbrook avenue, Fort Rouge. Mr. Burgess called at Liggett's Drug store for his fifth bottle of Tanlac, recently, and made the following statement:

"I have been so wonderfully benefited by Tanlac that I will never stop praising it," said Mr. Burgess "For the past four years I have not been able to work but about three days a week and have had to spend a good part of my wages trying to get my health back. For eight months, I was unable to hit a lick of work and was just barely able to get about. I suffered with awful pains through my forehead all the time and also had spells of dizziness when I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. My stomach finally got in such a bad shape that I could scarcely eat a thing and barely enough to keep me alive. What little I did eat soured on my stomach and I suffered terribly from gas and bloating. I took all kinds of medicines, but still I suffered and could not get myself in shape to work more than half time. I would go for weeks at a time without getting more than an hour's sleep a night. My condition was awful, and I didn't know what to do for relief.

"At last a friend begged me to try Tanlac, and now I wish I had known about it long ago, for it has really made me feel like a brand new man. I used to suffer with a dreadful hurting in the pit of my stomach, but after taking Tanlac a short while this trouble disappeared and now my stomach is in such a good shape that I can eat just anything I want and never suffer a bit with gas or pain, and my appetite is so big that I can hardly get enough to eat. The pains have not only left my head, but all my misery is gone and I have not missed an hour from my work since shortly after I began taking Tanlac. I have also gained several pounds in weight, but what I was after was relief, and thanks to Tanlac I have found it. I can now handle my work as well as when I first got my run seven years ago. It certainly was lucky for me that I got Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

RESTRICTIONS RESCINDED

Aliens of Enemy Nationality Need No Longer Report.

Chief Thompson has received a message from the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police to the effect that all restrictions governing aliens of enemy nationality in Canada are rescinded and it will not be any longer necessary for any of these to report to the authorities monthly.

During the war there was as high as 50 or 60 reported to the local authorities, but since the signing of the armistice this number has been greatly reduced.

DIVORCE PRIVILEGE FOR THE RICH ONLY

REV. F. N. STAPLEFORD DECLARES UNIFORMITY IS NOW NEEDED

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Declaring that under the system existing in Ontario and Quebec, divorce was a privilege for the rich only, Rev. F. N. Stapleford, Neighborhood Worker and lecturer on social service at Toronto University, urged the need of more uniform divorce laws for Canada, in discussing "Some Needed Social Legislation" at the People's Forum in St. George's hall last night. Mr. Stapleford pointed out that all other provinces of the Dominon had established Divorce Courts, but in Ontario and Quebec divorce was only by special Act of Parliament, a process which cost the applicant $700 or $800, or more He said, that as a consequence those unable to afford this were taking the shorter course of desertion and subsequent remarriage without the formality of divorce, in numbers greater than most people realized.

Writing Versus Acting.

Mr. Booth Tarkington, the writer of "Monsieur Beaucaire," is one of the wealthiest authors. It was stated a few years ago that he made $1,000,000 out of his writings.

When success arrives, the pen is a mighty producer of wealth. It is not, however, more lucrative than cinema acting. Charlie Chaplin's annual earnings have been estimated at $1,250,000, and Mary Pickford, who has just declared her intention of retiring, will relinquish $1,500,000 a year when she ceases acting for the screen.

Opera singers, like Caruso, coin hundreds of dollars in a few minutes. But perhaps boxing brings in the biggest sums per minute, if we exclude speculators, and as an instance the recent Dempsey and Williard match may be quoted. Dempsey won in ten minutes and secured $100,000; $10,000 per minute, or $166 per second.

W. H. TAFT PREDICTS U.S. WILL APPROVE TREATY

DECLARES LANGUAGE IN SOME OF THE RESERVATIONS IS DISCOURTEOUS

New York, Jan. 5.—Former President William H. Taft predicted here to night that Congress will approve the League of Nations with reservations, in an address at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The Senators, "who are now getting together on the League," he added "will probaly effect a compromise that will result in the League adoption." Mr. Tafts speech was warmly applauded by an audience of more than 3,000 people.

"Some of the reservations are discourteous, very discourteous, in tone," declared, Mr. Taft. "I, of course, do not know whether the wording was intended to be discourteous or not, but I do hope that the people on the other side will consider us better fellows than the language in some of these reservations makes us appear to be."

"S. O. S." CALL FOR DENTIST

Residents of Alaskan Island Need Services of Man Skilled with Drills and Forceps.

Is any dentist hunting for a location? Here's one. It is on Afognak, an island lying east of the entrance of Cook's inlet, on the Alaskan coast.

While the icebergs float around occasionally and bump one another in the sea like giant monsters in a game of water polo, yet it is comparatively warm up there now, as the summer is coming on with its flowers and mosquitoes. But whether an Arctic winter or a brief summer is on, people will have the toothache up there near the Arctic circle the same as do the sweltering residents these days along the thirty-sixth parallel of latitude.

Miss Virginia Clark, an accomplished young woman who was born and reared on the island of Afognak, and is now teaching the youth of her native land and village, sends out this cry for a dentist. The information is given in a bulletin of the Alaska Bureau of Publicity:

"A dentist located here would have a snap," is the only information given out by Miss Clark. She gives no clew as to the financial standing of the patients, but the lucky dentist could no doubt fight off the H. C. L. nightmare by doing a piece of dental work for an Eskimo and taking his pay in walrus meat. Miss Clark does say that potatoes and garden truck thrive there, the fishing is good, and there are plenty of clams and wild ducks. Copper also is found in paying quantities, and placer gold mining is being successfully carried on along the beaches.

ALIENISTS CAN BE WRONG

Ample Proof That Even Most Able of Psychologists Are by No Means Infallible.

You will not find the word "moron," as used by psychologists and alienists, in many dictionaries, for it is a word coined only very recently to describe a certain type of person who is mentally defective although not insane. Col. T. Easby Smith of the selective service board, Washington, made a little speech at the Atlantic City meeting of the American Medical association in which he rather "guyed" his professional associates on the way they judged a man to be a moron or sub-normal in intelligence.

After relating how the board of psychology had set a certain soldier down as having the mind of a five-year-old child, he drew a hearty laugh at the expense of his colleagues by adding that this same board had analyzed the intellect of a certain member of President Wilson's cabinet and had pronounced it to be on the level of a twelve-year-old, and had in the same way set down an eminent general in command of one of our armies abroad as a ten year-old in intelligence.

INTRODUCES DRUG IN LUNGS

French Physician's Method of Administering Chloroform Said to Be Pronounced Success.

A new method of administering chloroform, brought out in France by Dr. Guisez, is described in the Scientific American. The doctor no longer applies the drug by the usual compress or mask placed over the mouth, but introduces the chloroform vapor directly into the lungs through a tube running into the windpipe. The tube method has already been employed in several hundred cases, and with great success. Besides being very useful for operations to be performed on the head and neck, it is of great interest because it never produces nausea.

The effects of the new method will serve to explain the reasons why chloroform operations always produced nausea when operating by the former method, for it appears evident that the nausea was caused by a part of the chloroform vapors being absorbed by the oesophagus and the stomach.

Pa in Petulant Mood.

"Pa, what is a bolsheviki?"

"A bolsheviki is a man who has the same idea as your mother."

"What idea, pa?"

Average Intelligence.

There have been a number of reports about the results of the psychologic tests in the army which are not particularly encouraging. Of course it is all very well to find that more than half of those taken in the draft were of an average or of a higher intelligence and that four out of every 100 were of a "very superior" intelligence and eight to ten out of every 100 of "superior" intelligence. This will probably average up higher than what would be secured in any European country, but the fly in the ointment is the high relative percentage of those who are "below average" intelligence, or of an "inferior" intelligence or are "very inferior," with several grades and degrees even below the "very inferior."

Coal in British Columbia and Alberta

(1) At the Coal Mines, Lethbridge, Alta.
(2) Coal Mine Building, Fernie, B.C.
(3) Coal Mine Loading Shed, Fernie, B.C.

British Columbia's resources of coal are one sixteenth of the Dominion's coal supply and represent 1,022 of the total estimated resource of the globe. The total tonnage of the deposits underlying British Columbia forests is 83,828 million tons, which is made up of 670 million tons of anthracite, 77,290 of bituminous, and 5,868 of lignite. The actual and probable reserves in the province are semi-anthracite 1.9 per cent; bituminous, 85.4 per cent; low carbon bituminous, 3.3 per cent; cannel, 2.4 per cent; lignitic, 7.0 per cent.

At present there are three main districts where mining operations are being actively pursued. These are the Crow's Nest, Pass region, in the eastern part of the province; the Nicola Valley district in the central part; and the eastern side of Vancouver Island. Besides these, other coal basins are known, and more or less prospected, but the lack of transport and communication have hampered any extensive developpment yet they constitute a reserve of great possibility.

The Crow's Nest coal field is the most important body of coal being mined in British Columbia, and includes an area of 230 square miles. The coal is high grade bituminous, occasionally running into anthracite, averaging [illegible] per cent fixed carbon. There are 22 workable seams with a total thickness of 216 feet, 100 feet of which is estimated as workable. In addition to this there are other coal bearing areas in southern British Columbia, notably at Princeton, where there is a field of 50 square miles, and at Nicola, where seams from 6 to 12 feet have been mined. The Nicola coal is sub-bituminous and analysis about 47 per cent fixed carbon, 39 per cent volatile, and 4 per cent moisture.

The total in Vancouver Island underlain by coal seams is about 600 square miles, and these coal fields contain some of the best steam coal on the Pacific coast. The coal of the Comox field is coking bituminous, and contains 57.2 per cent fixed carbon, the highest carbon content of all the Vancouver Island coals.

The Nanaimo field has a productive area of 65 square miles, though the areas underlain by coal seams are larger than this. The coal fields of the Queen Charlotte Islands range from semi-anthracite to low-carbon bituminous in their deposits, whilst lignite is also found.

In Central British Columbia lignite is found at Alexandria, Quesnel, and Prince George on the Fraser, on the Nazco river, Nechako river, Dean river and Lightning creek. Three rich bearing seams exist on the Morice river, and three on Goat river.

In the Northern part of the province the most important coals thus discovered are the semi-Anthracite and the anthracites of the Groundhog Mountain area. Here, an area of 170 square miles is assumed to be coal-bearing, and contains eight seams with an aggregate thickness of 30 feet.

The location of the British Columbia coal fields has a great bearing on their importance. One of the most productive mines of the Dominion is situated on the seaboard of the Pacific coast, which is of the greatest importance from an industrial and imperial standpoint. The mine has a considerable submarine extension, and is fortunate in possessing a fine natural harbor. Another fine field, also, is admirably located in the proximity of the metal mining industry and within easy reach of the copper and lead smelting centres of both the southern part of the Province and the adjoining states to the south.

With the United States leading in her possession of a trifle more than one half of the world's coal deposits Canada ranks easily second with nearly one-fifth of the globe's total supply of this mineral. Nearly ninety per cent of Canada's coal supply lies within the confines of the province of Alberta, or about one-seventh of the resources of the world. In tonnage the enormous deposits of the prairie province total 1,182,671 million tons, which may be subdivided into 1,182 million tons of anthracite, 217,593 million tons of bituminous, and 963,796 million tons of lignite. This may be compared with the world's total reserve of 7,397,553 metric tons, or the United States of 4,231,352 million tons.

Alberta possesses by far the most extensive coal area of Canada. The greater part of the southeastern part of the province appears to be underlaid with coal, and the minerable coal areas of the province have been estimated at not less than 30,000 square miles.

The coal horizons of Alberta are (1) Edmonton and Paskapoo formation; (2) Belly River formation; (3) Kootenay formation. The Edmonton formation forms a wide trough approximately parallel to the Rockies and extending from the international boundary to about latitude 55°. It is estimated that in these beds there are 789,600 million tons of lignite or sub-bituminous coal, and 11,358 million tons of low-carbon bituminous.

The Belly River formation occupies a considerable area in the south-western part of the province, the most important seam being in the vicinity of Lethbridge. The probable reserves in this area are lignite, 22 per cent, lignitic, or sub-bituminous, 10½ per cent, low-carbon bituminous 66½ per cent.

The Kootenay formation is exposed in and near the Rocky Mountains and is estimated as 1.7 per cent semi-anthracite and 98.3 per cent high carbon bituminous or bituminous.

The production of the anthracite field, of which Banff is the centre, for the year 1917, was 108,336 tons which represents 2.3 per cent of the province's total output. The total amount of bituminous coal produced from Alberta mines was 2,199,308 tons or 46.4 per cent of output. The lignite production formed more than one half of the province's coal production with 2,428,838 tons or 51.3 per cent.

It has been estimated that the Alberta deposits of coal could supply the whole world's needs, at its present rate of consumption for nearly a thousand years.

As seen from these figures the coal resources of the Province of Alberta are barely being tapped, whilst Canada is yearly importing more coal from the United States than her own mines are producing.

HAMILTON TEACHERS REJECT BOARD'S OFFER

WILL HOLD OUT FOR FULL AMOUNT OF REQUEST FOR INCREASE

Hamilton, Jan. 5. — The women teachers of the Public Schools here were offered an increase of $100 recently. This they rejected and demanded an increase of $200, with a minimum of $900 and a maximum of $1,800. The internal management committee of the Board of Education last evening decided to make an offer of an increase of $150, with a minimum of $750 and a maximum of $1,400. The offer means that all teachers will receive $200 more this year than last since the previous scale provided for an increase of $50 a year.

The teachers who had been notified of the internal management committees intentions met this morning voted to reject the new offer and to hold out for their whole original demand.

NO EMBARGO ON CAN. PAPER SUPPLY

PEPER CONTROLLER DOES INSIST ON 11 PER CENT. BEING SOLD IN CANADA

Ottawa, Jan. 5— A number of United States newspapers which receive more or less paper supply from Price Bros. of Quebec, are sending telegrams to the Finance Department here saying that they have been informed by Price Bors. that the Dominion Government is placing an embargo on the export of paper from Canada. Intimations are made that an appeal may go to Washington to stop export of American Coal to Canada. As a matter of fact no order to stop export of paper from Canada has been made but Price Bros. have refused to obey the orders of the Dominion Paper firm is likely. Paper Controller Controller and action against that Pringle says Prive Bros. have been selling in Canada only 2,000 tons out of an annual output of 75,000 and he is calling on them to give 8,000 tons to Canada, or 11 per cent. of their product, which is less than their fair quota.

"LOOT" WILL SHOW AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE

WELL KNOWN MYSTERY STORY ADAPTED TO SCREEN BY UNIVERSAL

Two new motion picture stars take another upward step into fame, in "Loot," the new Universal mystery drama, which begins at the Empire Theatre, Thursday.

Ora Carew and Darell Foss are the featured players in this well known Saturday Evening Post story from the pen of Arthur Somers Roche.

The commendable work of Miss Carew in the role of Morn Light, star of New York's Follies, won her place in the hearts of the spectators. Miss Carew has the faculty of injecting her own personality into every action on the screen. The dramatic scenes in which she, as the little comedy actress, renounces the king of New York's underworld, the notorious Shadow, to save the man she loves, stamp her as an emotional actress of unusual power.

Darell Foss cleverly handles the part of Hildreth, the young Englishman whose life is endangered because The Shadow desires to put him out of the way in order to obtain the famous Arabian jewels.

As is well known, the story itself is an exciting mystery drama that keeps the audience in suspense until the final fadeout. Director William C. Dowlan has built up "Loot" so as to utilize all the splendid dramatic possibilities afforded by the original book.

WEEK OF PRAYER IN THE CHURCHES

Special Services Held in Several Local Edifices and Attedance is Gratifying.

Judging from the reports which have come in from the different churches where the Week of Prayer is being observed a much greater number are observing it than in previous years when all met in one building. This is a hopeful sign for the church and for the Forward movement. It is sometimes asked if prayer has become a lost art. It is to be hoped it has not. It is evident it has not in the churches of the city. The strongest of men have, at times, felt constrained to test the reality of prayer, it may be when some great sorrow has come to them, and they have found that it has not failed them, rather that the God of whom all prayer is offered has not failed them. Those who shut prayer out of their lives shut out a great power and a great comfort. The citizens of Peterborough this week should hear the call of God in these special services for prayer which are being held and should make an effort to attend them. The following is a report of last night's meetings:

Trinity Methodist Church.

At the service last night in Trinity Church Colonel Walker gave a very able address on "Our Gifts and Our Service for Our King." He spoke of the gift giving season and of the effort people make to give suitable gifts to their friends. He drew the lesson from this that our gifts to Christ should be chosen and given as thoughtfully as we choose and give gifts to our friends. He then spoke of the service that God expects of us, describing it as an intelligent service, a hearty service and a progressive service. The address was a splendid New Year's appeal and was quite in keeping with the character of the meeting in view of the work of the Forward Movement which is now engaging the attention of the church. Two meetings will be held tonight. One at the home of Mr. J. H. Northey, 435 Stewart street, and one at the home of Mr. R. F. Downey, 298 Boswell avenue.

St. Paul's and George Street.

There was a fair attendance at the opening service in St. Paul's Church last night. Rev. R. J. M. Glassford based his message on a passage of First Thessalonians: "For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God's word is spread abroad: so that we need not to speak anything." He said: "These words are a wonderful testimony to the power of the gospel to transform the life. These Thessalonians, a little while before, had been heathen, they had been idol worshippers with all the degrading vices associated with that worship, and yet so wonderful was the transforming power of the gospel in their lives, that in a little while their faith had spread abroad throughout the whole region. A transformed life today is the greatest testimony which can be given to the power of the gospel. Members of Christ's Church should let their light shine before men that others, seeing their good works, might glorify their Father who is in heaven. When the world sees the evidences of a transformed life in the members of the church they will be attracted to the church and the church's Christ."

ROUND SHOULDERS FROM POOR EYES—

Many a round-shouldered man would be walking straight to-day if he had properly cared for his eyes in youth. Stooping, in an effort to see better, caused the round-shouldered condition. It never pays to neglect the eyes in order to save the small cost of preserving their full usefulness. Dr. Fowler's expert service is the best you can give your eyes. He guarantees satisfaction.

Bring Gifts to France.

A delegation from Abyssinia bearing rich gifts of ivory and silks for the announced purpose of congratulating France on her recent victory, appeared at the peace conference in Paris. This is in strict accordance with the ancient oriental procedure. The real purpose of a visit is not disclosed until preliminary ceremonies are concluded. These native Africans—claiming descent from Solomon and the queen of Sheba—wished to be in on the carving up of the world, for they have interests which are vital to them although little known to the rest of the world. Seated in that natural bastion of Africa, the Abyssinians have lived in greater or less security for unknown centuries. They are not negroes, but a mixture of Hamitic and Semitic races, with a culture of their own and professing the Christian religion, being a branch of the Coptic church of Egypt. Until recently they have been unmolested save by native tribes.

Keeps Off Potato Bugs.

And now comes a prophet, who arises in Missouri, and has published in a number of papers the following news for the especial benefit of those who detest to chase the elusive potato bug: "If a soup bean or two is dropped into each hill of potatoes when they are planted the potato bug will not bother them, and besides your crop of potatoes you will get one of beans as well. There is one farmer who has tried this experiment for five years and has never been bothered with bugs while his neighbors lost their crops. The bugs don't like the smell of the beans for some reason."—Kansas City Times.

But None Came.

Late the other night on a street car a soldier was going home for the first time. He was happy and proud. And his reason for being proud: there was a wound stripe on his right arm.

One man said to him: "Where were you wounded?" The soldier replied: "I was hit in the back with a piece of shell." The man gave a short laugh and said: "A funny place to get hit; which way were you going?"

It is needless to say that the soldier hit the man and here is what the soldier said: "If there are any more of you fellows thinks that a Yank ever ran, I can change your mind for you."—Indianapolis News.

FAMOUS STEAMER GONE.

"Dora" Will Be Missed In the Far North.

No more trips to the westward will be made by the Dora, a storied little steamer which for years has braved the bad waters lying off that remote part of Alaska west of Seward, strung out along the mainland, Unalaska, and the Aleutian Islands. The boat has been taken from the westward run and sent to Seattle.

Alaskans will miss the Dora, for during these many years they have come to look to her for almost everything. The hundreds she had carried back and forth will regret to learn of her passing from the run.

To the fisherman, prospectors, and natives of the westward, the Dora was the newspaper, the grocery boy, the mail carrier, the supply bearer, and even a Santa Claus. Every year just before Christmas she made it a point to leave Seward in time to get the Christmas mail and packages west before the holiday.

Children of the westward were named after the boat their parents had come to love. It is said there is hardly a town or fishing village on the run that cannot boast of at least one girl christened Dora.

For over thirty-five years the Dora's run has been in northern waters. It has been claimed she operated on the most northerly winter route in the world, the 15th of each month leaving Seward on a 2,200-mile trip to Dutch Harbor, Unimak Pass, and other points and back. Once in a while she would venture north into the Bering Sea with supplies.

The log of the Dora was one thrilling event after another. Occasionally in the winter she would pull into Seward with ice from her topmast to water-line. Gales drove her ashore scores of times, frequently forced her to run for shelter, but never sent her down. She bore but a few scars of her many battles with the elements.

Once the Dora was lost for eighty days, and nearly the entire world watched the progress of the search for her. It happened in 1906. Gales blew her off her run and carried her south over the Pacific nearly to Honolulu. Ultimately she limped into Puget Sound, after what was said to be one of the most remarkable of the many remarkable experiences of the brave ships of the north Pacific.

When the top of Mt. Katmai, Alaska's great volcano, blew off in 1912 the Dora was calling at villages along Sherikoff Island. She was caught in a smothering cloud of dust and volcanic ash. In stygian darkness she fought a gale for two days to get away from danger. Her path was light by lightning and the noise of her engines was drowned by the mountain's roars. Ashes covered her decks and penetrated into every part of her hold.

As a life-saver the Dora had a record higher than any other boat in Western Alaska waters. In 1906 she picked up passengers of the wrecked ship St. Paul, who had been marooned six weeks on Semidi Island. In 1909 she rescued passengers of the cannery ship Columbia, and in 1912 she brought back the men and women from off the wrecked Olympia. In all, she has saved hundreds of lives.

And now the Dora has gone south for good. Her owners, the Alaska Steamship Company, it is said, took her off the westward run when the Government abolished the Alaska mail contracts, one of the big items in the Dora's earnings.

Will Return Again.

"I can never forget it, nor can I express the whole of my deep gratitude for the open-hearted welcome which my Canadian comrades in arms and all my Canadian fellow-countrymen and women have given me." The foregoing is from a farewell message from his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, which was sent to the Governor-General.

The message follows:

H.M.S. Renown, Barrington Passage.

"The Renown is weighing anchor, and I feel that my first visit to Canada is really at an end. I can never forget it, nor can I express the whole of my deep gratitude for the open-hearted welcome which my Canadian comrades in arms and all my Canadian fellow-countrymen and women have given me.

"Will you please convey this message of thanks, most inadequate though it be, to Sir Robert Borden and the whole Dominion Government, whose care and hospitality throughout my visit have been so generous and so kind. The last four months will influence the whole of my life and I shall never be happy if many months elapse without a visit to my house on this side of the Atlantic.

"My best wishes to all the people of Canada till we meet again.

(Signed) "Edward P."

What the Bride Got.

An M.P., while visiting in a rural district, dropped in on a boyhood friend, now a justice of the peace. While chatting over old times a couple came in to get married. The justice married the pair and after accepting a moderate fee, handed the bride an umbrella. The M.P. observed the proceedings in solemn silence, but after the couple had gone he asked, "Do you always do that, Arthur?" "Marry them? Oh, yes, if they have the license." "No, I mean give the bride a present?" "A present! Why, wasn't that her umbrella?" "No," said the M.P. peevishly, "it was mine."

"Immortelle—A Child of Destiny."

Ethel Hueston Butler, wife of A. K. Butler, supervisor of Public Schools in Nova Scotia, and sister of Annie Campbell Huestis, will shortly publish an allegorical poetic play—"Immortelle—A Child of Destiny." Those who have read the manuscript pronounce it a poem of very delicate beauty.

Remarkable Crab.

A peculiar crab has been captured in the Indian ocean. It is nearly two feet in diameter and its longest claws are about a yard. It has projecting eyes like those of a lobster and is very voracious. It was put in a tank of sea water and when darkness came it proved phosphorescent, emitting peculiar white rays.

Better Days

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

Cuddled up like a mouse, lying upon a rude board bench at the side of an abandoned switch shanty, her hand supporting her head and enmeshed in a mass of loose golden tresses, the girl, fast asleep, wore a smile upon her face as though her dreams were pleasant ones.

She could not have been over eighteen and her worn and ragged shoes and crinkled ribbons were not in accord with the general neatness of her attire. A man lurched by, young like herself, paused and stared hard.

"Well, this is a new one!" he muttered. "I say, little one, wake up! This old switch yard is no place for you."

He had touched one hand lying loosely over the edge of the bench. The girl aroused so magically quick and her big blue eyes opened so wide and challenging that Myron Trask retreated a step or two.

"That is the 6:15 western dispatch, isn't it—can you tell me?"

"I can," nodded Trask, "but what have you to do with the 6:15?"

"To get into an empty car. It goes to Meriden, my home town, and that is the only way, unless I walk."

"I see you have done something in that line already," suggested Trask, glancing at her broken shoes, one heelless and its side ripped by a rail splinter, the other with a flapping sole.

"Yes, clear from Chicago. I can't go barefooted as I will soon be if I keep on tramping, so I was going to steal my way."

Myron Trask took a silent survey of the forlorn little figure. He steadied himself erect and breathed hard through compressed lips. "See here, Miss," he said finally, "I had a sister once, and you've set me thinking. Tell me a little about yourself and maybe I can help you on your way."

"Why, yes, I'll tell you all about it," said the girl with ingenuous frankness. "My name is Irma Dalziel. I have been filling a little speaking part in 'Hearts and Homes.' Good people they were, from the manager down. I ran away from home to join them. They went to pieces last week and there wasn't enough left to pay car fare. I've written father and mother that I am through with my foolish dream of becoming a great actress and am on my way back to the dear old place I'll never leave again. Oh, never—never—never!"

So longing, so intense, so rapturous were the accents, so vivid, so rapturous did they frame within the mentality of Myron Trask, that he seemed to covet such a paradise of relief and joy, as if for himself, for Trask was on the seat of contrition and repentance at the present time.

"Strange, Miss," he said in an uncertain tone, "but you and I seem to be in the same boat. I got my dismissal from service last week for going on a bout with the crowd. The road may or may not take me back, but no more of the reckless and silly for me. I've got no money, but the hotel will give Myron Trask anything he wants, and you're going to go there with me and get a good meal. Then you are going to the depot and wait for the 8:15 passenger. I'll put you in charge of old Boyd Wesley, the conductor. He'll see you onto the branch at Aberdeen. At that terminus you'll have only fifty-six miles on the Northern. And when you get back to your dear little home, stay there and once in a while think of the railroad lads, rough and ready and sometimes reckless, but with hearts as big as pumpkins when they see a woman needing help."

"Why you almost make me cry," said Irma soberly. "You'd make a star hit on the stage with such a human interest speech as that. I'll never forget you."

"Maybe I'd have made a better record and kept straight if I had been lucky enough to run across a girl like you," said Myron, with a slight catch in his voice, as he bade her goodby at the depot. "Show this card to whatever conductor you run across," and he handed her a bit of pasteboard upon which he had scrawled a few words. "I'm not much just now, but my name will go as far as that of the president of the road with my true pals."

A sudden rush of tears came to the eyes of Irma as she clasped the hand of her benefactor. She leaned towards him and impulsively kissed the bronzed, beard-toughened face with the words: "How your dead sister must have loved you!" Then a moment later she waved adieu to him through an open coach window and for a long time after the train had gone Myron Trask stood reflecting, caressing the cheek where that warm kiss of gratitude had been bestowed.

It was noticeable by the former reckless comrades of Myron later that he eschewed their company and idleness. By some influence he became reinstated with the road and asked for a position as station agent and his chosen post was the little town where Irma lived.

She was not a dull girl and she discerned a motive in his seeking to be near her. He was frank and outspoken and he emphasized the why and wherefore by a free confession when they had become better acquainted. And so they were married.

HOW C. P. R. ENGINEER WON VICTORIA CROSS

Pte Peter Robertson
who won the Victoria Cross

It fell to the lot of a C.P.R. engineer Pte. John Peter Robertson to win the much coveted Victoria Cross at Passchendaele. Robertson enlisted at Lethbridge with the 175th and was an engineer on that division. He was better known as "Pete" to his Lethbridge friends. He was born in Pictou, Nova Scotia, but lived most of his life in Medicine Hat with his mother, Mrs. Alex. Robertson.

Robertson was aged thirty-four, won his distinction in connection with operations at Passchendaele, November 6, 1917. Details came through authoritative channels that during his battalion's attack Robertson's platoon was held up by uncut wire two hundred yards from the final objective. Our guns were still busy cutting a way through the wire when a German machine gun opened fire and inflicted very heavy losses on the Canadians. Robertson, without waiting for orders and entirely on his own initiative, rushed towards the German gun defying the machine guns' withering fire. Moreover, our artillery barrage was so intense that death seemed almost certain. Working his way to the flank, he eventually found an opening in the wire, got through and crawled until the end of the emplacement was reached. Rising suddenly to his feet he charged down on the astonished Germans, and killed four of the gun crew before they could recover from their surprise. The remainder fled in terror, but their flight was soon cut short when Robertson seized the abandoned gun, screwed it around and poured a hail of bullets upon the backs of the fast disappearing enemy. Several of them fell victims to their own weapon and others were caught by our shells. When the remainder of the platoon arrived Robertson was still firing the captured gun. It was entirely due to his heroic action that the whole line was enabled to advance and capture the final objective. Robertson went forward with the first wave, taking a gun with him. He used it very effectively to keep down the fire of German machine guns and snipers, while his platoon consolidated the new position. Later in the day when two of our snipers who ventured in front of our lines were wounded Robertson volunteered to bring them in. He went into the open, although exposed to a heavy enemy fire, lifted one man on his back and carried him safely to the trench and immediately returned to the second man, staggering back with his unconscious burden while the bullets whistled around him. But as if cruel fate were awaiting until the last possible moment to overtake him, he was killed on the very parapet of the trench, his mission almost accomplished. His splendidly heroic end, like his dashing work done earlier in the day, had a most inspiring effect.

STORY OF GUN-A-NOOT

PROVED HIS INNOCENCE AFTER THIRTEEN YEARS.

Indian Was Accused of Shooting a Half-breed Packer—The Story of His Escape From the Law Makes One of the Strangest Romances In History of Canada's Backwoods.

SOME thirteen years ago last June the body of a half-breed packer, Alex. McIntosh, was was found lying by the side of the Two Mile Trail, near Hazelton. He had been shot through the head by some person unknown. Suspicion fell upon Simon Peter Gun-a-noot, an Indian living near Hazelton, and who was locally known as a very excellent guide and that rare phenomenon, a "good Indian!"

Gun-a-noot was accounted a harmless and good-natured man, with one weakness—the usual Indian love for "fire-water." The night before the body was found he, with some others, had been drinking with McIntosh at a low tavern near Hazelton. A quarrel had ensued and Gun-a-noot had left the place, being overheard to say to McIntosh, "I will go away now and come back and fix you." Soon after this, McIntosh left also, expressing the intention of going to the hospital to have a hurt finger attended to. He never reached the hospital, however, and the next seen of him was the discovery of his lifeless body upon the trail.

A warrant was sworn out for Gun-a-noot's arrest, but he had disappeared. On a later visit to the house by the police, dogs were found tethered upon all the approaches to it, so that no one could come near without a warning being given.

Then began a search for Gun-a-noot that was to last for thirteen years. All over the province rewards were offered and the police were hunting the supposed murderer, but in vain. No trace could be found of him.

In the meantime, old Nah-gun, father, learned of the issue of the warrant and that the police were on the way to capture his son. First warning Gun-a-noot, he then, mindful of the needs of a fugitive in the north, set himself to work to procure a rifle and ammunition, which he hid in a spruce tree in the forest, giving his son explicit directions as to its whereabouts. He then started back to the settlement in order to procure other necessities, but was intercepted by the police and taken to the jail at Hazelton. All this while the real quarry was within fifty yards of the police and fully aware of what was going forward.

On seeing the capture of his father, he secured his rifle and set off through the woods to the north, and before long his wife and two children joined him, while some days after Nah-gun escaped and also attached himself to the little party. When he arrived he brought the information that a substantial reward had been offered for the capture of his son.

Then the little party of five set their faces towards the future. None of the family were provided with food, extra clothing or blankets. Such game as fell in their way, together with edible roots and berries, formed their daily menu. Their attention was concentrated upon finding a safe hiding-place where some provision might be made for the winter and at length after weeks of wandering they decided upon a deep ravine not far from the foot of a great glacier. To reach this place from the nearest trail would have required many hours of hard struggle through tangled underbrush, over huge windfalls and across swamps. Discovery was unlikely; but if they had baffled pursuit the fugitives were by no means safe. Game was scarce, fear of capture prevented the men from ranging far; some sort of food supply must be discovered. A search of the neighborhood revealed nothing but the presence of ground-hogs. These, however, were in great numbers and upon their flesh did the little party subsist all through that first long and desperate winter. Towards the end of February even the ground-hog meat became exhausted and Gun-a-noot resolved to risk a visit to the settlement in quest of food. After two days travel he reached the village, found an old friend and secured his provisions, returning by the trail to his companions.

Many wanderings followed. The summer of 1908 found the fugitives in the vicinity of Kitselas and here old Nah-gun fell ill. His heart was set upon burial in a certain spot some 100 miles away, on the shores of Bowser Lake, and Gun-a-noot promised him that his wish should be fulfilled. The two men set out to traverse the distance but had barely gone forty miles, when Nah-gun's strength failed him. But Gun-a-noot had made up his mind that his father should rest where he willed. Making a rude crate of poles, he placed his father in it, hoisted the unwieldly load upon his shoulders and set off. On the fourth day he was rewarded by the sight of his goal and there Nah-gun died and was buried.

As the years wore on, the bitterness of exile weighed more heavily on Gun-a-noot. Two of his children died as the result of the hardship of their life; three were born to him in the wilderness. He desired them to have the education that he could well afford to give were he once re-established in the property he had had to leave behind him in his flight. His wife also was worn out with her wanderings and desired rest. Early in the spring of 1919 he gave himself into the custody of Constable Sperry Cline of Hazelton and was finally brought to trial for the crime committed in June, 1906.

But when the trial came on, the jury found the prisoner not guilty. He was liberated on the 9th of October, and the question of who killed Alex. McIntosh is still undecided.—The Canadian Courier.

To Protect Ontario's Eyes.

After its defeat at the polls on October 20, the Hearst Government devoted itself almost entirely to routine business until relieved by the new administration on November 14. The former Government, however, had fathered the Optometry Act in the Legislature last session and one of its last official acts was to bring that measure into effect. The act was made effective from November 1, and the Board of Examiners provided for has been appointed. The board, which serves without salary, is made up as follows:

W. J. Maybee, of Toronto, for five years; Dr. A. C. Mackay, of Toronto, and E. Culverhouse, of Stamford, for four years; J. S. Collinson, of Dundas, and Thern T. Barnes, of Sault Ste. Marie, for two years. The order-in-council makes Mr. Maybee chairman and Mr. Collinson, secretary. The former is a leading member of the Optometrists' Association, Dr. Mackay is principal of the Central Technical School.

The important feature of the Optometry Act is that it places a ban upon the peddling of eye glasses by men who have no technical knowledge of the goods they are selling and who often give eye sufferers glasses that aggravate their trouble, when the goods are not worthless. The act prohibits the "selling, fitting or supplying of eyeglasses from house to house or in any other manner than from a permanent place of business. Penalties of $10 to $100 are provided for those who violate the act and similar fines for persons who call themselves "optometrist" or "optician" unless entitled to do so.

Canadiana In Harvard College.

One of the most interesting collections of Canadiana is to be found in the Harvard College Library in Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Clarence M. Warner is the curator of the Department of Canadian History and Literature, and much of the credit for the splendid collection thus far gathered is due his personal efforts. His enthusiastic interest in all that pertains to Canadian history and literature is well known, and his zeal as a collector keeps pace with his enthusiasm. The result is a most valuable department of Canadiana in this great American University. The foundation of the library was donated by Francis Parkman, who left not only his own books and manuscripts, but a sufficient endowment to maintain it. Over eight thousand volumes are now on its shelves, besides innumerable pamphlets.

Mr. Warner was for many years a resident of Napanee, and now makes Boston his home.

New Substitute for Oil.

A factory has been started in Sweden for extracting oil from schist, thus adding one more to the number of substitutes already on the market. Large quantities of alum schist are found in the district, yielding benzine and crude oils.

In the recent brief open season approximately 5,000 deer were killed in Vermont, and game wardens say there are plenty left.

J. DEMPSEY ACCEPTS A $400,000 OFFER

ONE PROMOTER HAS CARPENTIER'S AND THE OTHER CHAMPION'S CONTRACT

Los Angeles, Jan. 5.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, announced here last night that he had accepted an offer of a $400,000 purse from Jas. W. Coffroth for a 45-round fight between Dempsey and Georges Carpentier at Tia Juana, Lower California.

"It's up to Coffroth now to sign up Carpentier," said Kearns, "and I understand he has a representative, Chas. Harvey, in Europe now, trying to do just that.

"This is the most satisfactory offer we have had. We are willing to accept it on a winner or loser basis, perhaps $300,000 for the winner, and $100,000 for the loser. These details will be worked out later.

"Coffroth may not want the motion picture rights, but whether he does or not, we will want a percentage of them and all other privileges."

Kearns' announcement was made after he had been asked if he would accept an offer to Dempsey of $200,000 and a ten weeks' theatrical engagement in Europe at $5,000 weekly, announced in Chicago today by Charles Cochran, an English theatrical magnate.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Chas. Cochrane, an English theatrical magnate, who proposes to promote in London a world's championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, is pushing his plans. He was here on other business yesterday and said he had sent a personal representative to Los Angeles to confer with Dempsey's manager.

Cochrane has offered Dempsey a guarantee of $200,000 to sign a contract, and says he will guarantee the champion ten weeks of theatrical engagements in England and France at $5,000 a week.

He also said that he not only has the French champion's signature to a contract calling for $105,000, but has advanced $25,000 to Carpentier.

"London is the logical place for the battle," said Mr. Cochrane. "It is neutral ground. We have there all the facilities necessary for staging a world's championship and can be assured that our investment will be secure."

Cochrane will return to New York today.

TORONTO DEFEATED IN RELAY RACE ON JAN. 1

PETERBOROUGH BOY RAN FOR TORONTO BUT LACK OF TRAINING HINDERED HIM

At the Buffalo Stadium on January 1st the All-Toronto relay team were beaten by the All-Buffalo team. Two of the best men of the Toronto team, Jack Tait and Jack Tressider, were not running. Peterborough had the honor of having a runner with the Toronto team in the person of H. Phillips, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here.

J. C. GREEN BOWLS RECORD SCORES

BREAKS ALL TEN-PIN RECORDS AT WATER STREET ALLEYS

Last week at the Water street alleys some records in ten pins were put up by Jack Green, who broke the three-game record of 713 held by Wm. Henderson and Geo. Cairn's single record of 280. J. Green rolled 277, 289, 195, totaling 761 in three games and single of 289. His first game of 277 on the sixth frame he started with a strike and finished with 7 strikes. In his second game he got ten strikes in a row, making 17 strikes in a row.

Another record rolled by J. Green in 15 games—214, 181, 226, 207, 189, 190, 210, 236, 205, 211, 234, 212, 232, 203, totalling 3166—an average of 211 in 15 games.

BUSINESS MEN DEFEAT THE KING PINS TWICE

SCORES NOT AS HIGH AS USUAL BUT GAMES WERE CLOSE LAST NIGHT

Last night at the Water street alleys in the Ten Pin League the Business Men took two games out of three from the King Pins. The bowlers on both teams seemed to have a night off and poor scores were put up. For the Business Men, Green was high with 525. For the King Pins, Stuart was high with 503. The scores:

PETES HAVE LITTLE TROUBLE IN DEFEATING THE CANNINGTON SQUAD

What the Visitors Lacked in Experience and Ability They Made up in Gameness—Score Was 13 to 5—Rose Scores 9 Goals.

Many thought that when the Petes defeated the Cannington Intermediates 18 to 7 on their own ice the squad from the small town had no right in the game at all. But this was not right because in last night's game the visitors proved themselves a hard working, snappy bunch, although unexperienced.

Welsh, their little centre, played a stirling game, working every minute and tricking the local speed artists on more than one occasion.

T. Halmand, on left wing, another small man, worked consistently, and his poke checking was very annoying to the local forward line. Williams, in goal, stopped some very nasty ones and was bombarded from all angles during the fray.

The visitor's weakness lay in their lightness and in their over anxiety to score. Time after time they would come down the ice two and three abreast, but would shoot from outside the defence. This style of play was futile last night as "Mickey" Murray seemed to fill the whole net, stopping everything and clearing nicely.

Rose Was Good.

Captain Lorney Rose must be credited with the best game on the ice. His skates apparently suited him and he improved noticeably as the game progressed. There can be no doubt of his scoring ability when it is stated he bulged the net nine times that counted and once that did not. On that occasion he put it almost through the net so it was pulled out the back and not allowed.

Grover Halpin played a good game both at centre and on the defence, his trickiness and speed always being prominent. Walter Jackson was good as times but seemed to be troubled with a bad skate that kept him from cutting loose with his usual dash.

Cherett, although not used much until the third period worked consistently and gave a good account of himself. He is always ready for the pass and when his team mates become more used to that he will probably add more to the scoring columns as he did in the junior ranks. "Banty" Evans, from his two appearances locally, apparently does not like to extend himself. He goes down the ice ahead of the puck and spoils the chances for the pass. He will no doubt amend this when in a strenuous game where all his ability is needed.

H. Thornton and Lowes, on the defence, played nicely and made few mistakes. They do not, however, break away very fast and their rushing is not of the perfect order. Harry Thornton appears to be more at home on the wing than back on the defence where his brother belongs. P. Thornton was not on last night's line-up but will be on hand for Wednesday night's game in Lindsay.

Visitors Started Strong.

The visitors opened the first period with a mad rush that continually threatened the local citadel. All went well with Murray handling their long shots easily until F. Halmand grabbed a loose puck in front of the goal and slammed it for the first count.

Then the Petes woke up and from that on hand things much their own way. To the delight of the fans they uncorked some pretty combination, although many chances were lost through unability to pass quickly and accurately.

But there is one thing certain that when the locals journey to Lindsay on Wednesday they will give the much vaunted Scugogville outfit the time of their lives to come out on the long end of the score. They are developing into a sturdy outfit and with a little more combination and a great deal more back checking should be able to take the Lindsay Intermediate into camp.

MOST FRAGRANT OF FLOWERS

Baltimore Admirer Declares the Breath of the Lilac Stands Unmatched for Sweetness.

When the lilacs breathe, odors of Araby become fetid and astringent in comparison. When the lilacs breathe, their odorous breath carries the fragrance of the distillation of a generation of life and love that they have gathered to themselves, where they have bloomed by the garden wall or against the porch pillar. The old home—wonderful in the vividness of its memories and associations—is created by the picturing of beauty and tenderness that the fragrance of the blossoming lilacs brings to the mind. One sees the path through the garden winding down to the clump of lilacs. The faces of other days are framed in the pictures that fancy creates through the magic of the lilacs.

The panicles of bloom are in full flower and the blooms will be hailed with joy by the multitudes who have in their feelings the sentiments to which lilacs appeal. They are a meditative and reflective kind of flower. They come so quietly in the spring. They bloom forth so abundantly and magnificently. They sing their concert to the airs of April and cause the four winds of the heavens to become their survivors to the joy of mankind.

The lilacs are the softest and most persuasive of all tints, those of lavender and purple, with some of driven whiteness. How wonderful their beauty, the assembling of the blossoms and their disposition upon the branch! How full of art! How exquisitely Dresden is the lilac as it swings in the breeze! And every lilac bush is a product of years of growth, and that growth goes on perennially until one and another generation is laid beneath the sod, and the lilac has been intrusted with the cherished memories of youth and maturity and age—passed out of life.—Baltimore American.

Nelson's Victory Cups.

Recognition of the English "silent navy" which did so much to win the war has come in the presentation of two communion cups to the Royal Naval Barracks church of Portsmouth, England. These cups were used on Nelson's flagship Victory in the battle of Trafalgar. Thus the glory that was England's in the earlier days joins hands with the glory of the present, and the spirit of Nelson is linked with the spirits of the brave men who stood by in all the long months of the North sea vigil. Nine years ago these cups were given to a church in Glasgow. The widow of the rector of this parish now gives them to the navy as the most fitting holder of the goblets, which were made about 1800.

BOWLING CONTEST OF CALADONIAN CLUB

LONG LIST OF VALUABLE PRIZES OFFERED FOR BEST IN THE GAMES

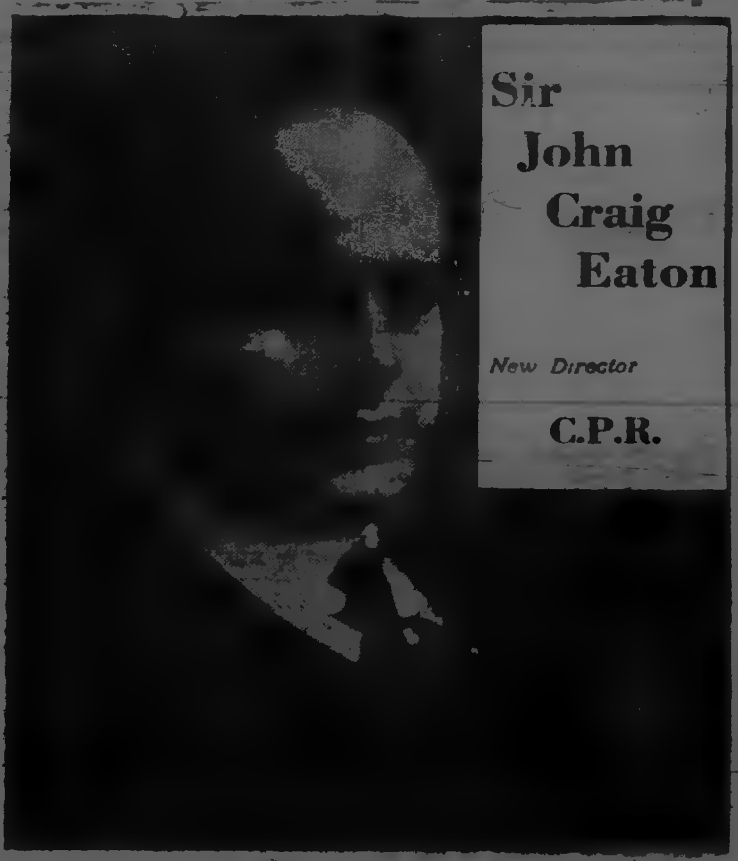
The Caledonian Club are planning for an exciting time tomorrow night when they open their carpet bowling contest for individual players. The contest will be by elimination so that every player will have to be on the alert all the time.

The prizes to be presented are a reading lamp, presented by Ed. Hardie, president of the club, one dozen selected variety gladiolo bulbs, four twelve-inch records; two twelve-inch records, one record cabinet. The last three will be all presented by Mr. Lawson of the Heintzman Company.

All the club members are expected out to the W. O W. Hall tomorrow night to enjoy the games and social events

The moon resembles a marriage certificate, because it has something to do with the tide.

Double tracking will commence in the district around London by the C.P.R. as soon as steel prices become normal.



Sir John Craig Eaton

New Director

C.P.R.

Honorary Colonel Sir John Craig Eaton, K.B., whose appointment to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's directorate has been just announced, is best known to the mass of the American public as president and dominant personality of the T. Eaton Co. Ltd. of Toronto and Winnipeg, the largest departmental institution of the Dominion, for which his father, the late Timothy Eaton, fifty years ago laid the foundation. In official circles Sir John is even better known as probably the foremost Canadian in civilian co-operation with the forces of government during the war period. And in the realm of trade he leads as an exponent of scientific organization, while at the same time recognizing the human equation in the labor factor.

Sir John was born in Toronto April 28, 1876, receiving his education in the public schools of his native city and Upper Canada College. He began his commercial career with his father's growing establishment, the business of which has more than doubled in volume under his administration, his individual foresight leading to the opening of the Western house at Winnipeg in 1905, and the Moncton, N.B., outpost this past season. In addition to being president of the T. Eaton Co., he is director of the Dominion Bank, the Canadian National Exhibition Association, and Wellesley Hospital; a member of the Senate of Victoria College, Toronto; an honorary governor, trustee and member of the Finance Committee of the Toronto General Hospital; a member of the Toronto Board of Trade and of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association; also one of Canada's best known clubmen and sportsmen, with yachting, fishing and motoring as his favorite forms of recreation. Political honors, though proferred like Caesar's crown, he has time again refused.

Knighted June 3, 1915, he was incidentally the recipient on Sept., 19th, 1917 of the special decoration of the Navy League, this being an exceptional honor conferred on but twenty-eight persons in all the Empire within the past twenty years. In partial explanation it will be remembered that early in the war Sir John turned over to the Admiralty his fine private yacht, the Florence, which served on the Atlantic Coast patrol under the ensign until no longer required, in the late autumn of 1916. During the war period he also organized, equipped and sent overseas the Eaton Machine gun batteries; while over $1,000,000 of his private fortune was expended in the maintenance of dependents of Eatonians at the front, the weekly payroll exceeding $10,000. Two thousand six hundred and eighty-two voluntary recruits went from the T. Eaton Co.'s establishments to the war—a man-power little short of three complete battalions—this splendid body representing 39.25 per cent of the company's male employees. And while the men were fighting for flag and freedom, Sir John provided liberally for their families at home, this wage roll of patriotism exceeding $2,000,000 in the ultimate total.

The inclusion of Sir John Eaton on the Canadian Pacific directorate gives that pioneer national transcontinental road not only another experienced business general capable of and accustomed to thinking and acting in large proportions. It also gives it a man who perhaps more than any other in the Dominion believes in the application of the Golden Rule to everyday affairs and has proven recognition of the human equation to be successful policy, in the operation of his own large concerns.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON APPEALS TO PEOPLE

WISHES THAT ALL START NEW YEAR BY PAYING THEIR HONEST DEBTS

Last Sunday evening, in St. John's Church, Rev. Canon Davidson appealed to the congregation, following out his custom in past years to consider as an important new year's duty, the straightening out of financial obligations. Small and miscellaneous debts were likely to accumulate and to be overlooked until a strong effort of will power was required to tackle them, and the new year was a most suitable time for the general putting forth of such an effort.

Men were everywhere dependent on one another and the failure of one person to meet his obligations might prevent many people getting their just dues. What we owe to another man rightly belongs to him and it was only simple honesty to pay up and that promptly.

It was a healthy thing also to find out where we really stood. If a man could not pay in full, it was a call to retrench expenditure, and at least he might face his obligations and set himself to do his best. Canon Davidson appealed to every member of St. John's at least without delay, to do his duty in this respect for the sake of themselves, their religion and the welfare of the community.

THREE NEW CASES

Smallpox Situation in Paris Reported More Serious.

Brantford, Jan. 6.—The smallpox situation in Paris is more serious. One case was recently reported from the Paris Y. M. C. A. to the Brantford Isolation Hospital, and the institution quarantined. To-day an appeal was made to Brantford to provide accommodation for three new cases, said to be of a serious type, but this had to be refused, as the accommodation here is insufficient to care for more than the city cases.

Major H. P. Snelgrove, Toronto, has been appointed to succeed Col E. G. Shannon as officer in charge of Byron Sanatirium, London.

The following sent congratulations by phone or letter: Mrs. L. Cottingham, Mrs J. Yelland, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Mrs. H. P. Ellis, Mrs Helsp, Miss A. Walton and Austin and Hurrie Barnard, of Spencerville.

The reception to the friends of the family lasted from 3:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Rev Mr. Webb closed the day with prayers, and at the request of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Barnard the hymn "The Christian's Home in Glory" was sung. This hymn was also sung at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Barnard sixty years ago. It was a happy reunion of the family, and will live long in the memories of all those who were present. Mr. Joseph Wearing and Dr. J. A. Morgan represented the Murray Street Church congregation.

WEEK OF PRAYER

ducted by Mr. John Bradbury, the president for 1920. A paper was read by Miss Annie Crocker on "Unselfishness in Prayer." Another paper was read by Miss Verda Watt on "The Place that Kingz Young People have in the Forward Movement." A duet was sung by Miss Pearson and Mr. Bradbury entitled, "God's Way is the Best Way."

Tonight the meeting will be in charge of the minister. The praise will be led by a three-piece orchestra.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Speaking from the text, "I know in whom I have trusted," 2 Timothy 1:12, Mr. McConnachie emphasized the need of having settled convictions in the matter of religion. Paul was not given to boasting yet he gloried in his positive purpose. His personal testimony was clear and strong. So far from being ashamed of Christ and the Gospel he rejoiced in them openly before all men. He knew Christ by faith and had committed to Him all his life interests. This positive decision brought power and gladness into his life. He was building on a rock foundation. "I am persuaded," he said, "that Christ is mighty to guard my deposit against that day." There was no virtue in a halty faith. Indecision dishonored God who is worthy of all confidence. God is most honored by a clear, intelligent faith that lays hold of the Christ. This faith brought decision and knowledge that could not be obtained otherwise. Even the scientist had to build on faith. He must take some things for granted. He built upon certain premises that could not be demonstrated with mathematical exactness. Even so with reference to divine things we have a certain sense of God. This must be tried out experimently. We must launch out in faith and the revelation of Christ comes to the believing heart through this spirit. God had made it possible for us to say "I know." Therefore, it was not presumption on our part to claim this blessed assurance. It did not mean perfection. God was pleased to give this joyful certainty to every imperfect but believing sinners. Religion became a source of joy and gladness and power once we were assured of our good standing before God through grace. The urgent needs of our time demanded this type of life-giving faith in religion."

Park St. Baptist Church.

The meeting held last night in Park St. Baptist Church was largely attended and proved a joy and blessing to all who were present. The meeting was presided over by the president, Mr. Neil Porter. The Forward Movement was the subject under discussion. It was considered under three heads—its origin, its spiritual significance, its objective. The meeting tonight will be in charge of the pastor. The subject, which will be considered, is "The Prayer Which Availeth Much." A large attendance is hoped for.

THIRTY MILLIONS DIE IN RUSSIA

PRINCESS OF ONCE GREAT EMPIRE SAYS THIS IS EXCLUSIVE OF FIVE MILLION SOLDIERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 7;—Thirty million men, women and children have died in Russia from violence, famine and disease during the last three years, according to a statement on present conditions in the once great empire which was made to-day by Princess Cantactuzene Spertnsky granddaughter of Ulysheh, in an appeal for Russian relief. The tremendous death toll mentioned by the Princess was exclusive, she said, of five million men who had laid down their lives on the Russian front fighting for the Allies.

DEPUTATION DEMANDS MOTHER'S PENSIONS

SAY THIS STEP IS NECESSARY TO AVOID POSITIVE TRAGEDY IN ONTARIO

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Immediate action by the Ontario Government in the matter of mothers' pensions and other relief measures was demanded today by a representative deputation which waited on Premier Drury, Hon. Walter Rollo, Minister of Labor, and other members of the Provincial Cabinet. Members of the Government expressed their sympathy with the movement for mothers' pensions, and intimated that early action would be taken along this line.

It was pointed out by some members of the deputation that the inauguration quickly of some measure along this line was absolutely necessar, in order to save numbers of Ontario families from positive tragedy.

POISON ENTERS SCOTLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 7.—Soviet centres, backed by American communists, have been established in Glasgow with a subcommittee, and in various towns in the Clyde district, according to the Daily Mail.

GOVERNMENT'S WAGE SCALE NOT APPROVED

RESOLUTION OF THE RAILWAYMEN'S MEETING AGAINST ACCEPTING IT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 7.—Delegates of the unions of railwaymen who met here today to consider the proposition of the Government with regard to a settlement of the wage demands of the workers in the lower grades, adjourned until tomorrow without having reached a decision. J. H. Thomas, general secretary of the national railwaymen's union, in a statement at the close of the session, said: "I clearly think it is my duty to state that the resolutions received from branches of the union and instructions to delegates are overwhelming against the acceptance of the Government' offer."

SHIPBUILDERS ASK FOR STATE BONUSES

DELEGATION WAITS ON DOMINION CABINET AND IS PROMISED CONSIDERATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Representatives of seventeen shipbuilding companies waited on the Government today to urge assistance for shipbuilding in Canada. They requested that for a term of ten years the Government should grant a bonus of $10 per displacement ton and $10 per indicated horsepower on steel ships built and completed in Canada after April 12. Sir George Foster promised consideration, and the delegation will appoint a committee to deal further with the Cabinet.

POWDER PLANT EXPLODED.

Pittsburg, Jan. 7.—Early today the powder magazine in the Dupoint Powder Co.'s plant at Fairchance exploded and destroyed a building. No one was killed.

MR. J. M. GREENE APPOINTED TO VACANCY ON BOARD OF EDUCATION

Unanimous Choice at Final Meeting of 1919 Board Last Night—Increase Science Grant From $100 to $300, $275) for Industrial Classes.

At the final meeting of the 1919 Board of Education last night Mr. J. M. Greene was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. V. Eastwood.

In moving this motion Mr. G. O. Cameron said that the new Board needed the services of Mr. Greene. Particularly the Building Committee needed him as he had been very actively engaged in all matters pertaining to the erection of the new memorial school. Mr. Cameron stated that this committee needed Mr. Greene's experience, earnestness and business ability. Mr. E. G. Patterson seconded this motion and it carried unanimously.

Leave in Case of Death.

Mr. J. W. Worth gave notice that at the next meeting he would bring in a motion to grant leave of absence to teachers in case they were called away to attend the funeral of a member of the family of their wife or husband.

J. M. GREENE.

He called attention to the fact when a teacher recently left his work when his wife's sister died his salary was deducted during his absence. He would recommend that the present resolution be enlarged to include the near relative of the teacher's wife or husband as the case might be.

Mr. Cameron thought that if such a volley were adopted a lot would find they had two grandmothers and would have frequent excuses for holidays.

School Attendance Officer.

Mr. Mowat called the attention of the Board to the fact that by the new act coming into effect on Jan. 1, the truant officer must be appointed by the Board of Education. He stated that the work of Mr. Miller in this capacity had been very efficient and faithful. The matter of this appointment was left with the committee on appointments with power to act.

Truant Officer's Report.

The truant officer reported that during the month of December there had been 20 absentees—8 were from sickness, 1 had left the city and 11 had been kept home by their parents. He stated that he had urged upon the parents the necessity of making their children attend school regularly.

Increase for Science.

The usual grants of $50 each were made toward art in the Collegiate Institute and toward the Collegiate library. On the suggestion of Mr H. R. H. Kenner, the Board increased the grant for the upkeep of the science labratory from $100 to $300. This was done to keep the standard of the local science department up to that of other schools of the same size.

Attendance Records.

The attendance records showed that the following was the per cent. of pupils attending during the month of December:—Central, 91 per cent.; Queen Alexandra, 90; King Edward, 92; Queen Mary, 92; King George, 90; South Central, 90. The average attendance at the Collegiate Institute with a total of 381 on the roll was 365.

On a motion of Messrs. Patterson and Neal Mr. L. D. W. Magee was reappointed on the Public Library Board for the term of three years dating from the 1st of February, 1920.

$2,750 for Industrial Classes.

On the recommendation of Mr. V. Eastwood, chairman of the Advisory Industrial Committee, $2,750 was appropriated for the promotion of the evening industrial classes for 1920.

LIQUOR INTERESTS ARE BADLEY BEATEN

SECRETARY OF COBALT LIBERTY LEAGUE RECEIVES ONLY 59 VOTES

Cobalt, Jan. 7.—In the municipal elections throughout the district of Temiskaming the Liberty Leaguers and liquor advocates in general nearly all went down to defeat. Notable instances of this were the defeat of James Hylands in Cobalt's mayoralty contest, and the defat of J. E. Cook in his fight ofr the reeveship of Tisdale Township at Porcupine.

In a town with a population estimated at aobut six thousand, James Hylands, secretary of the Cobalt branch of the Liberty League and the original organizer of the league, received a total of 59 votes in Cobalt's mayoralty contest, in which Donald McEachran was elected by a large majority.

In the Tisdale township elections at Porcupine, J. E. Cook, an avowed supporter of the liquor traffic, in a field that seemed certain to support him, actually went down to defeat, the new reeve being Charles Gallagher.

ATTRIBUTES SUCCESS TO RABBIT'S FOOT.

St. Thomas, Jan. 7.—Mayor-elect F. L. Brinkman attributes at least a portion of his success in Monday's mayoralty contest to the fact that he carried a rabbit's foot in his right-hand pocket throughout the day. The little talisman was given to him by a staunch supporter early on Monday morning, with the assurance that it would bring victory if Mayor Brinkman retained it on his person all day.

DRURY PLANS TO IMPROVE SCHOOLS

DOES NOT CONSIDER PUBLIC SCHOOL EDUCATION SUFFICIENT FOR YOUTHS

Orillia, Jan. 7.—Hon. E. C. Drury, Premier of Ontario, addressed the Orillia Canadian Club last night on the question of "Education." He spoke for more than an hour, and his address was of intense interest, in that he outlined, in some measure at least, the new Government's policy on this vital question.

The Premier is of opinion that the public school system is inadequate owing to the fact that 93 per cent. of the pupils go no farther than through it, and the passing of the High School entrance examination is neither a fitting conclusion to a school course nor an adequate commencement to a life's career. He was not prepared to say that he had found a remedy for the existing evils, but he had conferred with many prominent educationists, and was prepared to take counsel with other classes as well, and believed that in the multitude of counsel some method would be devised for the improvement of the public school system.

FAMOUS GENERAL LEAVES $8,000

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 6.—The will of the late Maj.-Gen. Sir Sam Steele was probated in Surrogate Court today to the amount of $8,000. This comprised the total amount left by the great Canadian general, and is in the form of life insurance.

Mayor Brinkman declares it his intention to have the little "luck-bringer" mounted and given a place of honor in his home.

EX-KAISER WILL CLAIM PROTECTION

ALLIED DEMAND FOR FORMER EMPEROR'S PERSON WILL PROBABLY BE REGISTERED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amerongen, Jan. 7.—The Allied demands for the extradition of former Emperor William of Germany in which it is known America will not participate are expected at the Hague about January 15. Recent press despatches have stated that Count Hohenzolleron might surrender rather than embarrass the Netherlands Government, but it is authoratively reported that he will rely on the protection of Holland and her refusal to honor the Allied demand.

EMBARGO APPLIES TO ENTIRE PROVINCE

NONE BUT RECENTLY VACCINATED CAN GO TO QUEBEC FROM ONTARIO

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—The ban on unvaccinated Ontario people entering Montreal has now been extended to the whole of Quebec Province, and from now on no person who cannot show a certificate of having been successfully vaccinated within seven years can enter Quebec from Ontario.

800 CASES A DAY FOR TORONTO

Montreal, Jan. 7.—Each day since New Year's approximately 800 cases of various kinds of liquor have been shipped to Toronto. All of it goes by express companies and none by freight.

This is not to be compared with the wild rush for liquor from Toronto just prior to the order in Council of April 1, 1918, but at that time there was only a certain time in which to get liquor into Ontario while nowadays there is no limit of time.

WORK OF JUDGING AT POULTRY SHOW

PRIZE WINNERS AMONG ONE THOUSAND ENTRIES DECIDED BY TO-MORROW

The judging of the poultry on view at the Poultry Show exhibit in the market hall has been started. Its completion is expected some time tomorrow. Two hundred more entries have been received, bringing the total number up to over one thousand.

Miss H. Yates, late of the Guelph Agricultural College, and now attached to the Ontario Department of Agriculture, is to give a lecture this afternoon and tomorrow on The Care, etc., of Fowls, which should prove most interesting.

It is well worth any poultry fancier's while to see the new devices in chicken houses, hen coops, etc., on display in the hall, all electrically illuminated.

$1,500 FOR ALL RETURNED MEN

Winnipeg, Jan. 7.—Financial assistance to the amount of $1,500 will be granted disabled returned men who are desirous of establishing themselves in a legitimate business, according to a wire received by the District Vocational Officer here from Hon. J. A. Calder, Ottawa, today.

Prediction was made in official circles of the military and civilian relief that this grant in time would be extended to take in all deserving cases of this kind of returned men, equalizing the assistance given to city men with that given to men desiring to go on the land.

ABOLISHED POOL ROOMS

Kingston, Jan. 7.—The Loughboro township ratepayers by a vote of 287 to 174 decided against the licensing of pool rooms in that municipality. There was a movement in Sydenham in favor of the pool room.

TOSSED A COIN TO BREAK TIE

Cobalt, Jan. 7.—By the flip of a coin Malcolm Campbell will sit on the Cobalt Town Council this year. He and John Ough, who were tied for sixth place, on the board after the votes were counted Monday night, tossed for the honors, and Mr. Campbell won. Town Clerk O'Gorman, as Returning Officer, confirmed the decision.

ST. CATHARINES MAN COMMITS MURDER THEN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Mrs. Edward Goodall Refused to Elope With Alex C. Templain and Was Immediately Killed—Templain Admits His Crime During Moment of Conciousness.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. Catharines, Jan. 7.—Refusing an invitation to elope with Alex. C. Templain, a broker, Mrs. Edward Goodall was shot and instantly killed by Templain in her home here this morning. He then turned the revolver on himself and sent one bullet through his head and another just above his heart. He regained consciousness long enough to admit the murder and that the woman had refused his plea to run away with him. Templain has a slight chance of recovery.

Templain, who is said to be of German extraction, and who came here from Welland, has been employed in the tool department of the Canadian Crocker Wheeler Co. He is 35 years of age, and his victim was twenty years older. She leaves a married daughter as well as her husband. The family has lived here many years. Templain is a native of Humberstone.

ARMED SOLDIERS RAID SINN FEIN

NEW IRISH PARLIAMENT AND ASSURANCE SOCIETY OFFICE MARKS FOR ATTACK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Jan.7;—Sinn Fein headquarters in this city were raided this morning by a big force of police and soldiers. Raiders also entered the office of the Irish Parliament and those of the New Ireland Assurance Society.

Eighty soldiers armed with rifles with fixed bayonets carried out a raid on the Assurance Society's office. The men wearing trench helmets came up in motor lorries to the office, where it is reported one arrest was made. Michael Staines, Sinn Fein member of Parliament, is chairman of the company.

Large crowds assembled and watched the proceedings in front of the Society's office. There was a similar gathering before the Sinn Fein headquarters where fifty soldiers accompanied by the police conducted the search.

MORE GAMES AND LESS BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS

THIS IS STRONGLY ADVOCATED BY CHAIRMAN OF TORONTO BOARD OF EDUCATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—"In the education of the children in the Public schools of the province more money should spent on hockey sticks and less on text books," declared Dr. John Noble, chairman of the Toronto Board of Education, speaking at a conference of the Urban School Trustees' Association today. He advocated more play, more outdoor work, and increased attractions for the younger children especially, including music, dancing and theatricals.

SIGNING OF TREATY POSTPONED

Paris, Jan. 7.—It is reported in diplomatic quarters that while it will not be possible for the exchange of ratifications to take place Saturday, the ceremony may be delayed until Monday, January 12. This is due to the difficulties encountered by the commissions of experts.

COMMITTEES OF WINNIPEG'S COUNCIL.

Winnipeg, Jan. 7. — Winnipeg 1920 city council was lined up yesterday, all standing committees being appointed at the inaugural session. Labor men have a majority on the fire and light committee, the health committee and legislative committee. Non-Labor men have a majority on the finance works, market, baths, and transportation committees. Labor men have 26 committee representatives and non-Labor men 28. Mayor C. F. Gray had to give one casting vote when Ald. J. K. Sparling was made chairman over [illegible] McQueen for the fire and light committee.

BARBERS JOIN ONE BIG UNION

Winnipeg, Jan. 7.—At a meeting held in the Labor Temple Monday night the Winnipeg Barbers' Union decided to give up its international charter and join the One Big Union, it was announced today at O.B.U. headquarters.

CAN. SHIP "SPINSER". IS NOW RELEASED

FOLLOWS ICE BREAKER "MONTCALM" TO SYDNEY AFTER FLOATING ABOUT FOR WEEKS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—The Marine Department has been advised that the ice breaker Montcalm succeeded in reaching the Canadian Spinner this morning and that the latter vessel has been released. She is following the Montcalm to Sydney. The Spinner has been drifting in the gulf for more than three weeks.

GIGANTIC STILL IS FOUND NEAR GRIMSBY

HAD CAPACITY OF TURNING OUT 90 GALLONS OF LIQUOR EVERY DAY

Grimsby, Jan. 7.—What is claimed by Inland Revenue Inspector Baby to be the biggest illicit still ever seized in Ontario was taken here when the inspector, accompanied by Inspector Sturdy of Hamilton, Chief Clark of Dundas, and Chief Konkle of Grimsby, visited the farm of Charles J. Crooks, three miles east of here, in the township of Clinton, and found buried in the haymow of his barn an enormous distilling outfit, all complete and ready to be set up and started to work.

The still has a capacity of turning out close to ninety gallons of moonshine every twenty-four hours. Crooks for years has been a manufacturer of apple cider, apple butter and other fruit products, and has on his place a large steam power boiler for running this apparatus. The inspectors believe the still was also to be connected up to the boiler. The farm where the outfit was found would be an ideal one for such a purpose, as it sits on a plateau right under the brow of the mountain; cannot be seen from the top, and is faced on two sides by mountain walls. The nearest neighbors on the other side are half a mile away.

ADRIATIC PROBLEM WILL BE SETTLED

A LITTLE GOOD WILL BY ALL PARTIES NEEDED SAYS ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 7.—Premier Lloyd George, Premier Nitti of Italy and the Italian Foreign Minister who have been in conferance here on pending problems in which Italy especially is concerned, will leave tomorrow morning for Paris for a conference of premiers and foreign ministers to be held there. Foreign Minister Scialcia stated this afternoon that satisfactory progress with the Adriatic question has been made during the conferences here and he expressed optimism concerning further conferences to be held in Paris. The Foreign Minister said he believed that with a display of a "little good will" by all parties concerned a settlement could be achieved.

A $20,000 memorial statue of Robert Burns was unveiled in Boston.

HUGE MEETING OF RAILROAD UNIONS

DELEGATES MEET IN LONDON TO DISCUSS GOVERNMENT'S WAGE PROPOSITION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 7;—Delegates of railroads assembled at Union headquarters here this forenoon to discuss the Government's proposition in settlement of wage demands of employes of lower grades. Sixty delegates representing 14 hundred local unions with five hundred thousand members were in attendance. J. H. Thomas, general secretary of the Railwaymen's Union declined to make any statement, but, other delegates expressed belief discussion would last for two days and decision might be reached to-morrow.

LENINE OFFERS TERMS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Stockholm, Jan. 7.—Nicholai Lenine, the Russian bolshevik premier, has made to the Entente a new offer of peace. He promises to suppress all revolutionary tribunals and abolish terrorism.

U. S. WILL NOT BE REPRESENTED

At Exchange Of Ratification Of The Peace Treaty.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 7.—Representatives of the United States, it has been decided, will not be present during the exchange of the ratification of the Peace Treaty of Versailles, which is still set for January 10, but may be put over if all the details have not been completed by that date. The signing of the peace protocol will precede the exchange of the ratifications by a few minutes.

MANITOBA FARMERS TO ENTER POLITICS.

THIS IS GENERAL INDICATION AT GRAIN GROWERS' CONVENTION AT BRANDON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brandon, Man., Jan. 7.—The entry into federal or provincial politics or both is undoubtedly the paramount issue before the Manitoba Grain Growers' convention, which opened with a record attendance today. "General indications now are such as to fully warrant the statement that Manitoba will be found to be practically united when the next Federal election is called," said W. R. Wood in presentin the secretary's report. "No lesser issue nor partisan camouflage must be allowed to disintegrate our unity on the supreme question of the National Policy," he said.

CALDER DENIES STORY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Hon. J. A. Calder today denies the Winnipeg story that the Government has arranged to give fifteen hundred dollars financial assistance to any disabled returned man to aid him in business.

NO FURTHER DANGER OF COAL MINERS STRIKE

MEN PERMANENTLY AGREE TO INCREASE OF FOURTEEN PER CENT IN WAGES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Columbus, O., Jan. 7.—The United Mine Workers in convention here today ratified the action of the international officers in accepting President Wilson's proposal to end the coal strike on a fourteen-per-cent increase basis and a commission to draw up a new wage agreement. The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of acceptance.

ANOTHER FUTILE ATTEMPT

Canadian Sealer Fails To Reach The Magdalen Islands With Supplies

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Another unsuccessful attempt by a Canadian sealer to reach Magdalen Islands with a cargo of supplies for the distressed inhabitants was made this morning. The vessel encountered heavy ice flows and was forced to return to harbor.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1920.

THE PLACE TO BUILD DWELLINGS.

THERE IS SPACE enough within the boundaries of Peterborough to accommodate a population, someone has estimated, of 100,000. These figures may be exaggerated, but one thing is certain, there are too many vacant lots within the city limits. When the new housing commission gets down to business, it is proposed to utilize these lots as sites for workingmen's homes, that is, of course, outside the business centre, where the price of real estate for such purposes will not be prohibitive.

There are a variety of reasons why this policy is advisable. The spirit of the times is against waste of any kind, and a waste of space within the limits of a growing city is certainly a serious matter. Building dwellings on streets already equipped with sewers, sidewalks and other essential accessories, there will be no additional expense in providing for such improvements. The workingman who avails himself of this opportunity to secure a home of his own will be the gainer to this extent. One of the reasons always given for the high tax rate in Peterborough is the cost of carrying city improvements through so much vacant space to dwellings in the suburbs of the city. The first cost of the workingman's home will not be affected, apart, perhaps, from the lot, by the desirable location, but when it is finally completed its value will be enhanced by its surroundings.

A CASE FOR THE BOARD OF COMMERCE.

A LOCAL RESIDENT, evidently possessed of an epicurean taste, complains that, following the recent increase in the price of wheat, bread and other products of that grain have also been raised. The restaurants have brought in a new scale of prices. Such dainties as toast, sandwiches, rolls and pies cost more today than they did a week ago. The excuse given by the dealers is that the cost of the raw material has advanced. The resident referred to appears to make out a case when he asserts that the boost in restaurant prices is out of all proportion to the additional cost of flour. But if that is true, all the talk or newspaper protests in the world will not remedy matters.

The citizen referred to can render the public a real service by formulating a charge which can be submitted to the Board of Commerce. It is not necessary that in such a charge his name should actually appear, if he is too modest to endure such publicity. All that will be required of him is to testify to the facts as they appear to him, in case the members of the Board of Commerce decide to hold a session here. They will do so beyond all question if a sufficient number of local cases are submitted to them to warrant such a step.

A good deal has been heard in Peterborough of the high cost of living, but no definite action has been taken. Discussion simply tends to fan the spirit of popular discontent. Even the city officials have not used the machinery with which the Government has provided them. But there is unrest in the city and something should be done to quiet it. The Board of Commerce has full powers to act in such cases. Let a case or cases be prepared, let evidence be secured, and the Board will pay a visit to Peterborough. If it is established that there is profiteering anywhere or in any branch of business a remedy can be found, just as it has in other places. If, however, it transpires, as it is more than likely to do that all parties are playing the game fairly, one cause for complaint by the bulk of the consumers will be removed.

A POSTMASTER FOR PETERBOROUGH.

THE BOARD OF TRADE has been urged to take up the question of the appointmnet of a postmaster for Peterborough, if not actually to use its influence, at least to express an opinion on the matter. With consistent and constitutional fidelity to its avowed principles, the Board declines to be mixed up in what is really a political matter. The members of the council, however, did put themselves on record as of the opinion that the law governing such cases should be followed and that efficiency should be given first place in the consideration.

The law, new as it is, and operative in this city for the first time, is quite plain. The appointment should under the rules go to Deputy Postmaster Corkery, who has been over thirty years in the service. If for any reason the official in active charge of the postal department deems the eligible candidate unfit for the position, he can consider the case of the next oldest employe in point of service. This reservation in the regulations leaves a wide latitude for party favoritism. It fairly reeks with the old odor of patronage. There is nothing in the world to prevent the deputy from forming his own conclusions and really making an appointment to suit himself, simply by going through the formality of advertising for applications for the position. In that event he could select a man from Ottawa, or from any point in Canada, for that matter, and send him to Peterborough ot fill the vacancy. Experience would not figure in the transaction.

There has been a mysterious delay in making an appointment in the local post office, and this has given rise to the suspicion that there is wire-pulling going on somewhere. Deputy Postmaster Corkery is a faithful and efficient public servant. There is not a man who knows him, not a postal employe under him, who is not convinced that he is in every sense competent to fill the position in question. He has been discharging those duties for months, and the service has not suffered. His years of duty cannot be turned into an objection, as mentally and physically he is still vigorous.

But if the postal authorities are not satisfied as to the competency of Mr. Corkery, they still have a chance to select the next man in order of merit, Chief Clerk Lacheur, whose courtesy in dealing with the public is proverbial, and whose efficiency and experience is beyond question.

As a unit, the Board of Trade may be well advised to keep out of this matter, but every individual member has a direct interest in it. Laws are made to be observed, and governmental regulations introduced with a brave profession of reform should be followed. The postal service is one of the most important branches of the public service. In that, if in any department, experience should be considered essential. If patronage has really been abolished, let a practical demonstration be given in this case. No local man should be appointed simply as a political reward. In that case, Mr. Corkery would continue to be the real official in charge. So long as he is called upon to perform the duties he should receive the compensation. As to the appointment of an outsider, possible under the new regime, no carpet-bagger should be imported to fill a position to which trained and tried local public servants are entitled.

IS IT CAUSE AND EFFECT?

(Farmer's Sun.)

AT A MEETING of the Toronto Methodist Ministerial Association a resolution was submitted recommending, now that the war is over, "that full freedom of speech and press be restored," and also that those under sentence for purely political offences, save where amnesty might be improper, be immediately released. This resolution was not adopted, but a substitute resolution ignoring the case of political offenders, and recommending the Government "to carefully consider whether full pre-war freedom of speech and press ought not now to be restored," was adopted by majority vote.

The substitute resolution was of the "careful" kind all right. It has not very much of the ring of the declaration of the Covenanters of Scotland of the ancient days or of declarations of Non-Conformists of England of more recent times. A State Church Assembly in England in the early part of the past century might have been expectd te mildly suggest the advisability of the English Government of that day "carefully considering" whether the people of the disfranchised city of Manchester should be allowed freedom to express their thoughts. Something more virile was expected in this twentieth century from a representative body of a non-State Church in Canada which has heretofore stood for democracy full and unlimited.

The Methodist body in Toronto is said to contain more men of wealth than any other denomination in the city. Is the weakening in democratic principles on the part of Toronto Methodist ministers a result of growing plutocratic influence in the Toronto laity?

TAKING THE CENSUS IN THE UNITED STATES

When King David took the first census on record the hatred and suspicion aroused by it were witnessed by the belief that "the Almighty punished the whole people for the impiety." In 1712 when Governor Hunter, of New York, attempted to take a census the same Biblical prejudice handed down from the time of David compelled him to leave it unfinished. A few years later when the New Jersey government wished to take a census of that State it did not dare begin.

However, the provisions of the federal constitution made a census necessary, and soon censuses became a part of the ordinary machinery of the federal government. The first census of the United States, in 1790, was taken by the marshals of the judicial districts, sixteen in all, without any fixed form or schedule of enumeration, each marshal acting as he pleased. This first census cost $44,377 and, as might be expected, was very inaccurate and unsatisfactory.

The second census, in 1800, intrusted to the State Department, cost $66,109 and was equally unsatisfactory. The third census, in 1810, somewhat improved in methods and satisfactory in results, enlarged the field of inquiry for the first time to include the industrial and manufacturing condition of the country. The fourth census, in 1820, first separated the white from the colored population, the natives from the foreign born. In the census of 1830 the industrial features were dropped entirely and the field of inquiry narrowed.

The census of 1840 opened a new era in this government activity. For the first time health and educational statistics were gathered. Then was made the first systematic effort to gather valuable statistics on a large scale. However, the statistics were so inaccurate as to cause a public scandal. Furthermore, the expenditure — $833,370 — caused widespread criticism.

Not until the census of 1850 was a Census Board created to prepare suitable and uniform questions. Enumerators were appointed and a Superintendent of Census selected. The result justified the venture and expenditure, which amounted to $1,423,350. From that year the federal census has been an invaluable adjunct to the machinery and the assets of the United States.

The increase in the cost of gathering the census—from $44,000 to 1790 to $12,000,000 in 1910 and probably a larger amount in 1920—indicates the growth of population and the ever widening field of inquiry. The population in 1790 was found to be 3,929,214. In 1910 it was found to be 93,402,151. The fourteenth census, of 1920, on which work began on January 2, is expected to show a population of from 107,000,000 to $112,000,000. Also it is expected that the census will show the wealth and resources of the United States far in excess of those of any other nation.

STATE OWNED TELEPHONES A FAILURE

J. V. McAree the "Fourth Column" writer of the Toronto Mail and Empire's editorial page, is sending some interesting letters to his paper from England. Writing about the government-operated telephone system in the Old Country, he says:

"Complaints about the telephone system appear to be world-wide, and they are heard about every time a man tries to get a number. In a Liverpool booth we heard a gentleman remark, as soon as he got Central's attenion: 'I don't mind telling you that I am taking up this whole telephone matter with the Board of Commerce tomorrow morning.' Apparently, she didn't mind, either. Most of the telephones are of the sort seen by Canadians only on the stage. The listening and speaking apparatus is in one piece, and it is not easy to tell at a glance which end to blow through. In repose, the thing looks like a pair of druggist's scales. At a theatre last evening, G. P. Huntley got a general laugh by telling a story about a man who died while waiting for a call. 'And now,' he concluded, 'the man's heirs are quarrelling to see who will get the call when it gets through.' When Central asks you here if you are through, she means have you got your connection. Instead of saying 'Hello,' you say 'Are you there?' though this is not compulsory. The service is much more expensive than at home. In London, the cost of installation and rental is about the same as in Toronto, but you pay a penny or more every time you use the phone. Thus, as in other things, we have found the charges here somewhat lower and the overcharges somewhat greater. In Liverpool the telephone directory is not much larger than one would expect to find in Goderich, Ontario."

FUTURE BRIGHT FOR NATIONAL RAILWAYS

ONE YEAR'S RECORD SHOWS THAT SYSTEM CAN BE MADE A SUCCESS

Completion of the first year in the life of the Canadian National Railways, says Mr. D. B. Hanna, in the annual financial survey of the Toronto Globe, is an important milestone on the road of transportation progress. If it were a plow we had put our hands to, we might not look back; but the careful engine driver, still keeping a hand on the throttle, should look back now and then to see if his train is all right and if the tail end is coming along, and also to get a high ball or stop signal as he approaches the station. We in the railway world, therefore, can justify a certain amount of retrospection.

The year's operations have, of course, been affected by the fact that 1919 was the first year of the readjustment period following the cessation of hostilities. Apart from the movement of returning troops, the almost immediate effect of the armistice was a falling off in traffic in war commodities, including foodstuffs. It was only to be expected that it would take time for after-war activites to make up the traffic created by the tremendous munition industries established throughout Canada. Also foodstuffs bottled up in other countries, which had not during the war a submarine-swept course to European ports, were thrown on the world's markets, somewhat affecting our exports of such commodities. For these reasons, railway freight traffic has been less than in the two preceding years. The increase in passenger traffic has shown that the higher fares have not kept the public from travelling. The resumption of some train services that were curtailed as war measures has been justified.

The return of our soldiers from the front and the release of men from war activities in Canada has resulted in more labor being available for maintenance work. This condition, coupled with the lifting of restrictions on capital expenditure, which the war enforced, has enabled the railways to put in a busy year on betterment work, and the completion of certain lines in the West commenced before the war, has been proceeded with.

An Efficient Force.

The activities of the year have, therefore, been sufficient to test out the mangement under government ownership. I am glad to state, for the information of those who wish us success, but who doubt that this can be achieved, that I have not observed the slightest tendency of officers to become slack or in any way to lose their interest. Our men are as much on the job as any railway officers I have come in contact with and, man for man, I do not think the staff of the Canadian National Railways is surpassed anywhere on this continet. We have been watching very carefully the train operation particularly where the service initially was not satisfactory, and I am glad to say that we have seen a marked improvement. We shall continue our efforts, and hope that "national service" will become synonymous with "good service."

Mainly About People

Judging by stature, the Rt. Hon. William Morris Hughes, Premier of the Commonwealth of Australia, is a small man, for he weighs less than 100 pounds. Judged by ability, by strength of character, and by achievements, he is one of the big men, not only of Australia, but of the Empire. This was shown during the war, and at the Peace Conference, also to some extent by the results of the general elections through which he recently led his Government. The results are not yet fully and accurately known, but this much is clear—the Government candidates won more seats than did the candidates of either of the other two parties, and with the co-operation of the candidates elected by the Farmers' Party, the Hughes' Government would have a majority of the whole House. The Farmers' of Australia developed a strength that practically gives them a balance of power.

Mr. Hughes has risen from the ranks, and he has risen by means of ability, energy and pluck. He is a fighter and a worker, and without claiming that he has always been right, it can be safely asserted that he has always sought what he believed was for the best interests of Australia, his adopted land, and for the safety of the Empire.

Like the Premier of Great Britain, the Premier of Australia is a Welshman, both by blood and by place of birth. He received a public school education and for a time was a teacher before going out to Australia in 1884 at the age of 20 years.

In the new land he turned his hand to many things, but was always getting on. Since 1894 he has been in public life. Under his leadership Australia stood loyally by the Motherland during the world-war.

EDITOR'S MAIL

ORATORY AND OFFICE.

Editor Review: Since you have called attention to a somewhat whimsical and half-jocular remark of mine with regard to the mayor-elect taking lessons in oratory, I wish to prevent any misunderstanding as to my meaning.

What the Council needs without doubt is men capable of managing the business of the city, men of brains, vision, and sound judgment. Whether they happen to be good speakers or not does not matter much. But the Mayor needs to combine the business ability necessary to direct the interests of a city like Peterborough with some readiness and grace of speech. He is continually expected to speak at important functions, and makes a sorry showing if he is forced to read from a sheet of paper what someone else, perhaps, has written. It is for this reason that it is a mistaken idea that because a man has served on the Council for several years he has a right to the Mayoralty. He may have made a good alderman, but lacks some quality necessary in a good mayor.

After all, the art of oratory simply consists in having something to say and saying it properly. There is no reason why a man should not be able to present a business proposition in such a way as to convey the information required with clearness, brevity and conviction.

Mr. G. O. Cameron is a good example of the business man who can do this. It should be expected, too, that men who aspire to high office should be able on occasion to prove their knowledge of the work connected with the office by public speech. The finest example of this that I have heard for a long time was the speech made by Mr. Robert Hicks at the nominations this year. It was a model of what a business speech should be, and abundantly proved his knowledge of the work of the Utilities Commission.

Let none suppose, however, that I advocate speeches at the meetings of the City Council. Where meetings have been prolonged to midnight it is not that there has been too much oratory, but too much balderdash.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

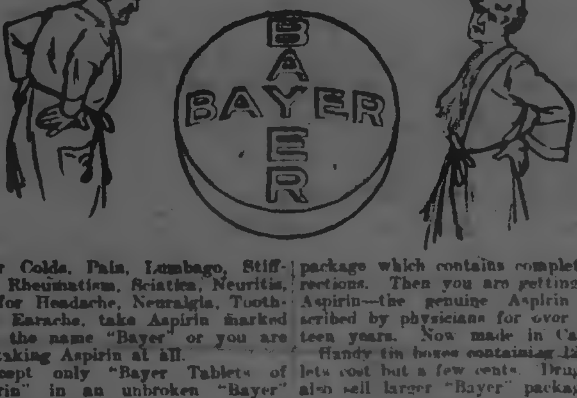
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



For Colds, Pain, Lumbago, Stiffness, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, and for Headache, Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, take Aspirin marked with the name "Bayer" or you are not taking Aspirin at all.

Accept only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in an unbroken "Bayer" package which contains complete directions. Then you are getting real Aspirin—the genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years. Now made in Canada.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

BANK'S ADS HELP EXPLOIT STATE'S INDUSTRIES

The Rhode Island Trust Co., in Providence, R. I., has used newspaper advertising for a great many years, employing rather large space and nearly always adhering to the ethical principles of similar institutes. But its latest copy sets a new standard, and one that might well be studied by merchants themselves.

It is a double-barreled idea, calculated to boost the state as well as the trust company. There has been much favorable comment on this advertising plan and state officials particularly approve of it as an evidence of the broad-minded methods of the modern advertiser.

The tops of three column insertions are taken up with impressive line drawings of the various things for which Rhode Island is famous and each advertisement is a treatise on one paramount issue.

For example, under the head of "Cotton," we find a picturesque illustration of a plantation scene, quaint side-wheelers taking on their cargoes and the atmosphere of the prosperous cotton belt.

The copy reads: "There are probably more than 100 mills in Rhode Island the product of which is based on cotton. Thousands of people in this state earn their living by spinning yarn, twisting thread, weaving bleaching and printing cloth. Hundreds of concerns insure their existence by selling it—from the broker who deals in raw cotton to the jobber and merchant who sell the finished product. Interwoven with the whole cotton industry is banking service. From the cotton field to the drygoods store, some form of banking service is necessary to facilitate shipping, manufacture and distribution. Brokers, manufacturers, jobbers and merchants, all use the bank as a depository for keeping funds safe until they are ready to be disbursed by check or otherwise. They carry checking accounts, rent safe deposit boxes, borrow working capital and discount customers' notes. They use the bank's facilities for keeping in touch with financial conditions, and for obtaining data about credits, shipments and business customs in unfamiliar territory. Perhaps you can use some of these services to help your business."

Advertising is at its best when it is educational and when it elaborates upon the general success and activity of its own community.

"THE DRUG STORE THAT SAVES YOUR JOB"

"The Drug Store That Saves Your Job," is the idea back of the advertising campaign of Guy's Drug Store in Seattle.

After years and years of newspaper advertising this store looked around for a new thought. It grew rather monotonous—this business of talking chills and fever and soda and service.

Now Guy's Drug Store is known as "The shop that keeps you working and earning." This has been accomplished by advertising not merchandise, but an ideal. A man's earning power is regulated by his health. You can't keep on your job if you are not well. Day after day Guy pounds this basic thought into the local consciousness. "A cold lessens your working efficiency tremendously. To-day thousands in Seattle have colds. Come around and let's see what will cure it."

Various diseases and afflictions are taken up, one at a time, and their remedies suggested.

EVERYTHING HAD BEEN SAID ABOUT BREAD—BUT—

The Bradford Baking Co., of Los Angeles, has been a consistent advertiser in newspapers for years. But there came a day recently when everybody concerned was of the opinion that all possible arguments were exhausted. All that could be said of baker's bread had been said.

Then a member of the firm took the stand that housewives—and men—had never paid sufficient tribute to modern bread and its thoroughly up-to-date methods of production. Los Angeles people are taking too much for granted.

"We want to make them appreciate just what a fine loaf of baker's bread really means to modern civilization," declared this progressive advertiser.

A debate culminated in the starting of an entirely new idea for bread baking, and certainly one that has never been done to death by the bread-baking profession. A man was sent to the public library to look up the history of bread making from the very first loaf. He brought back enough material, both for text and pictures, to last the Bradford company for many moons.

A characteristic two-column advertisement visualizes the very first bread ever prepared, with an illustration of a caveman and his good wife at the mouth of their stone house. They have built a fire, and a pone is cooking upon a rock. The copy reads "The caveman's oven was a flat rock, heated in an open fire. A visit to Bradford's White Tile Bakery will show just how far the science of baking has developed since primitive times."

The possibilities of such a series were without end. Bread making was traced right on down through the centuries, to say nothing of the rather crude methods in certain foreign countries. The pictures were interesting and the text instructive.

There's always something new, if enough thought is put upon the problem.

CARDS THAT SOLD GOODS DESPITE COST

A Butte, Mont., luggage store carries several grades of luggage—but cheaper grades are sold under protest. For instance, a window had a display of better grades. But in the center were two pieces of an inferior grade just by way of contrast for those who balked at the necessarily high prices of the dependable kind.

On the cheap pieces was a card in the corner of which was an imitation railway ticket. The card read:

ONE-WAY TICKET

This grade of baggage will no doubt get you to your destination—but, possibly, will not get you back.

The card on one piece of the better grade bore an imitation of a round-trip railway ticket ~~in the~~ corner. The card read:

THERE-AND-BACK TICKET

This grade may cost more—but it gets you there and back in first class shape. Pays to buy this grade and pay a lot more.

MAKING PLANS TO SWEEP DOMINION IN NEXT FEDERAL ELECTION.

Winnipeg, Jan. 6. — Action will be taken up at an important meeting here today to determine the nature of the organization with which the Farmers of Canada will seek to secure for themselves political power in the Federal Parliament.

Under the call of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, and sitting with the members of the Council, representative farmers of the Prairie Provinces, with some of their colleagues from Ontario, are expected to make a choice between alternative propositions—whether a new national Farmers' political party shall be organized to fight the next Federal electoin campaign, or whether the work of furthering the Farmers' political interests shall be left to existing Farmers' Provincial political organizations.

The meeting, it was explained by an oficial of the Conucil, was desigend "to effect a co-ordination of political efforts already made for the purpose of conducting a campaign at the next Federal electinon to place at Ottawa the greatest possible number of members who will support the Farmers' platform.

COMB SAGE TEA INT GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restore Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

SMALLPOX AT GALT

City Has First Case—Origin Is Unknown.

Galt, Jan. 6.—Until to-day this city had escaped the smallpox epidemic that has swept the Province, although all the surrounding municipalities have the disease. Dr. Radford announced that a young man of 18 years had been taken from a Harris street house suffering from a mild type of the disease. How he contracted it is unknown. He is in the Isolation Hospital.

OUT O' ORDER STOMACHS

Indigestion, Acidity, Sourness and Gases ended with "Pape's Diapepsin"

The moment you eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin all the lumps of indigestion pain, the sourness, heartburn and belching of gases, due to acidity, vanish—truly wonderful!

Millions of people know that it is needless to be bothered with indigestion, dyspepsia or a disordered stomach. A few tablets of Pape's Diapepsin neutralize acidity and give relief at once—no waiting! Buy a box of Pape's Diapepsin now! Don't stay dyspeptic! Try to regulate your stomach so you can eat favorite foods without causing distress. The cost is so little. The benefits so great.

A Cherished Fee

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

There was the sound of crowding feet and hushed but excited voices. Young Dr. Allen Reeves, just at the threshold of professional practice, faced a group of half a dozen women and children who bore in their midst the figure of an exceedingly beautiful girl, but limp, lifeless, her face devoid of all color.

"It was at the alley, Doctor Reeves," babbled forth one of the women. "She was passing its end when Murphy's horse ran away. She was brushed against the wall and she went down like a broken flower. She is so still and white. Is it dead she is!"

The poor of the neighborhood knew the young physician well in time of illness and trouble and were friendly and familiar. Doctor Reeves spoke a reassuring word.

"No bones broken, one shoulder bruised quite badly, but there's the shock," he said to Mrs. Hannigan. "Just hold this phial to the nostrils and fan the young lady till I go to the drug store and get some medicine I find I have run out of."

The young doctor moved with celerity. He was not a man given to trivial impulses, yet his whole soul was enlisted in the present case. Never in his life had a lovely face so impressed him as that of this haphazard patient. He wondered who she could be, obtained the remedy he was after and was not gone from his office more than ten minutes. His face clouded as he entered it, for his absence, brief as it was, had been of sufficient duration to mark the return to consciousness of his mysterious patient and her departure:

"I couldn't stay her, doctor dear," explained Mrs. Hannigan. "She was all nervous and troubled. She said she must hurry to a train and that her sister had her railroad ticket. And when I told her of you she looked at your picture on the wall there and said you must be a truly kind-hearted man. Then she said something about having no money and after she'd gone I found this lying on the little stand yonder."

"This" was a small pretty finger ring holding an amethyst surrounded by small pearls. Along its inner rim was the inscription: "Anice from Sister." Doctor Reeves traced an element of pathos in the situation. This Anice, whose fair features were so powerfully impressed upon his mind, had left the ring in lieu of the money for his fee. He made a great many vain inquiries regarding its owner the next day, but it was of no avail. Pietro Santos, a settlement favorite who made and peddled plaster of paris images, was brought into his office that afternoon with an injured limb, and this distracted his thoughts from this provokingly beautiful and persistently haunting Anice. She was back in his memory and cherished regard, however, within a few hours. Reeves attached a ribbon to the ring and wore it hidden from view.

"Go-a de country, doctor," announced Pietro a month later, all mended up and staring on one of his usual trips away from the city. "Owe-a for you fix-a Pietro up so fine. Pay-a when I come back."

"Don't you worry about that," said the young physician waving the grateful itinerant an encouraging adieu.

Two afternoons later at the edge of a little village Pietro came across a gang of rough loafers, who attacked him, took his hard-earned money, bound him and, setting his pretty wares on fence posts as targets, proceeded to demolish them. An hour later, passing the spot, a moan attracted the attention of a fair, gentle-faced girl. Dr. Allen Reeves would have given a good deal to have seen, for she was the patient who had disappeared so disappointingly—Anice Merrill.

Her true sympathetic soul was revealed as she set the victim of brutality and havoc free and heard his pathetic story. She led him to her home, cared for him until the next day and even provided him with the money to pay his fare to his city home.

"You save-a my courage, my life," he told Anice. "I never forget. When I come again I bring-a you a great work of art. Ah, you have inspired the poor mock sculptor. He mak-a your beautiful face live!"

It was two months after that when Pietro appeared in the office of Doctor Reeves. He was thin and showed a strain of incessant hard work, but his eyes glowed and his face was irradiated.

"Doctor," he said, placing on the table an object done up in a cloth, "I never pay-a yet, but now I go out with a new image—oh, such beauty! Ah! it sell-a everywhere. Soon I will have for you the glad-a pay. See, you are my good-a friend. Is it not beautiful?"

And removing the drapery Pietro revealed to Doctor Reeves his marvel of handiwork—a statuette in which genius and gratitude had portrayed true to life the dazzling features of Anice Merrill.

After that there were two cherished objects in the household when Doctor Reeves and Anice Merrill were installed in a home of their own: the little amethyst ring and the statuette which had led the ardent Allen straight to the presence of the girl he loved.

That's the Question.

Doctor—How can I do anything for you if you still persist in smoking? "That's what I'm paying you to find out."

THE PEARL PUZZLE.

Can Stones Be Secured by Artificial Means.

A final solution of the much-vexed problem of producing natural pearls by artificial means seems to have been found.

To get at it has required a series of rather remarkable scientific discoveries, most important of which was the fact that the pearl in the fresh-water mussel (the mollusk here considered) owes its origin to a tiny worm that bores into the flesh of the bivalve. This worm is an intestinal parasite of the muskrat. Its eggs find their way into the water, where they are hatched; the baby worms infest the mussels, which are in turn eaten by muskrats, and thus the biological circle is completed.

So far, so good; but this knowledge does not make practicable the artificial "breeding" of pearls. Success in this kind of enterprise depends upon quite another point.

It was supposed that the worm, on getting into the flesh of the mussel, set up an irritation which caused the mollusk, for its own protection, to envelop the intruder with a series of coats of "nacre," thus forming a pearl. But this notion is now proved to have been a mistake. The worm produces the pearl, but not in that way.

The valves of the mussel's shell are lined with a delicate membrane, the surface of which is covered with tiny cells that secrete pearly material. It is these cells, in fact, that produce the "mother-of-pearl" of the shell itself—a substance exactly the same as that which makes a pearl.

When the worm bores into the mussel, it sometimes (not always) carries with it some of the cells in question. The latter then, though buried in the flesh, continue to function in their ordinary manner, and thus produce a round ball of nacre which we call a pearl.

If the pearl be formed close to the shell—especially if near the hinge—it is liable to be more or less misshapen, and becomes what is called a "baroque pearl."

Now we come to the point. If a worm convey pearl-making cells from the lining membrane into the body of the bivalve, it ought to be practicable to accomplish the same thing by artificial means.

As a matter of fact, it is. The thing can be done, without injury to the living mussel, by a small surgical operation, a curved needle of special pattern being thrust between the valves of the shell, through the lining membrane, and into the flesh of the animal. It does not achieve the wished-for result every time, but in a fair percentage of instances.

With this bit of knowledge available, anybody ought to be able to grow pearls for market, with only a small outlay for the producing plant. All you have to do is to dam a little stream, so as to form a pond, and stock it with mussels of a selected variety. They are plentifully found in rivers and lakes all over the Mississippi basin.

To make them yield pearls by the simple means described ought to require no very great amount of practice. And it is not necessary to destroy the mussels to find out if they contain pearls, or whether the latter are yet big enough; for this can easily be ascertained by examining the bivalves with a fluoroscope. The X-rays make the pearls visible through the shells.

Oldest Tune In the World.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," is said to be the oldest tune in the world. The origin of the air is lost in antiquity but it is supposed to have been learned from the ancient Babylonians by the Egyptians, who popularised it in Africa, and Asia Minor Arabs still sing it. The Crusaders caught the tune from their Saracen enemies, and sang it under the walls of Jerusalem. The air was ultimately carried into Europe, where it survived, in various forms, among the folk songs of the different nations. In 1709, after the defeat at Malplaquet, the French, following a false rumor of the Duke of Marlborough's death in battle, composed a satiric lament, "Malbrook Is Off to the War." Like most topical songs, this one was of short-lived popularity, but in 1781 it suddenly echoed from one end of France to the other. The young Marie Antoinette gave birth to an heir, and the baby prince's nurse used to put her royal charge to sleep with the old song of her village home, and as if by magic the song became the craze of the day.

Making Humans Transparent.

Moved to experiment by noticing that a drop of oil made paper transparent, a French scientist professes to have discovered a fluid which similarly renders the human body transparent, and is likely to supersede the X-rays. Indeed, the inventor claims that his fluid is superior to X-rays, in that it allows the pathologist greater liberty in handling, and at the same time shows not only the bone structure, but also the inner muscular and nervous systems. The degree of transparency produced by the action of the fluid can be regulated at the will of the operator. It is said that a board can be made as clear as glass, so that a newspaper can be read through it.

FOOD HOARDERS IN TROUBLE

Mr. B. Z. Ant and Mrs. Camel Called On for Explanations as to Pernicious Activity.

Mr. B. Z. Ant, a well-known citizen of this community, was arrested at his home last night on orders of the food administrator and charged with hoarding food. A large quantity of bread crumbs and other high-priced foodstuffs were found in the basement of Mr. Ant's home. The discovery is somewhat of a surprise as Mr. Ant has always borne an excellent reputation for industry; in fact the proverb "Go to the Ant, thou Sluggard," so often used, was originally written about a direct ancestor of Mr. Ant.

Witnesses testified that they had seen Mr. Ant on many occasions carrying food to his home and it is thought he has gone so far as to enlist the aid of his friends and relatives in carrying food. Enough edibles to last all winter were found at the Ant home.

Mr. Ant is unable to give any satisfactory explanation of his offense except that some unseen force compelled him to store the food away, as he would need it later on. He denies vigorously that he intended to hold it for higher prices. The case is being considered by the food administrator.

This is the second arrest made by food officials in this neighborhood recently, Mrs. Camel having been found guilty of violating the food regulation regarding the hoarding of fat. Other arrests are likely to follow.—"Bugtown Bugle," Correspondence of the Indianapolis Star.

Shortage of Husbands One of Direct Results Of Slaughter of Great War

SOME of the most serious results of the great war have not yet made themselves visible; but they are rapidly blowing up on the horizon, and they are worth thinking about. David Starr Jordan once said that the worst effects of war do not appear until the next generation, having in mind what might be termed the artificial reversal of "natural selection" whereby the best young men go to war and die, and the weaklings, who make the poorest fathers, stay at home and marry. In this war the rule was not followed; everybody went to war and the weakling was just as apt to be killed by poison gas or high explosive shells as the brave man.

This war has produced, however, a situation even more menacing, equally tragic, more directly visible, in the almost world-wide shortage of husbands. France, so M. Tardieu tells us, has lost more than half her young men; Germany's figures can be hardly any better, and Great Britain and Belgium are in about the same boat. Of these lost young men it is likely that more than the normal proportion were unmarried, since marriage brought a certain degree of immunity from danger even in those countries where it did not excuse a man from service. It is safe to assume that more of the married men than of the single men have got through alive.

But even of the bachelors who are now returned to civil life a smaller proportion will marry than would have been the case if they had stayed at home. Those who had made a start in life must now, in many cases, begin all over again, which spells postponement of romance, especially with living costs soaring and industry half paralyzed. Many thousands of others are afflicted with the soldier's restlessness, and will wander, instead of settling down to the business of raising a family.

On the face of it, this looks as though a great part of the feminine population is doomed to celibacy; but unfortunately the history of mankind teaches us that the human race simply will not, in large masses, remain celibate over long periods of time. An incidental spinster now and then, yes—a specimen thrown up by the economic pressure of the time, or by individual variation from the normal; but spinsterhood as a rule, no. When the Thirty Years' War was ended with the Treaty of Westphalia in 1648 the German states which took part in it had been reduced in population from 20,000,000 to 6,000,000. The greater part of the adult male population was wiped out, and, as a result, polygamy became the rule throughout what is now the German empire. Apparently the same development had begun in Germany long before the close of the great war; and there is reason to believe that the Government was far from hostile to it.

In less brutally sophisticated countries such a complete breakdown of our established morality is not likely to occur, but there will be social consequences none the less interesting. Relaxation of standards among the wives of soldiers is a phenomenon common to several countries; while the reckless indifference of many fighting men on leave is notorious, and is well portrayed by Arnold Bennett in "The Pretty Lady." Possibly we may find nothing worse in England and France than a desperate competition for every bachelor, whether eligible or not, according to normal standards. Lovely woman will try to emphasize her personal charms to the slacker who has not yet taken to himself a wife, and possibly this thought has a bearing on the remarkable styles of dress which prevail in London and Paris to-day. The whole subject is one which, while to the unthinking it is chiefly amusing, is very serious, too; and in the indictment of war such a situation as this is one of the most serious items.

A Baltimore woman left a will providing $10 a month for the board and keep of her pet dog.

No man appreciates poetry unless he has a little of it in his make-up.

MYSTERIOUS FIGHTING IN PARTS OF IRELAND

CARS OUT, GRENADES USED BUT NO OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

London, Jan. 6;—There was another mysterious affair in Phoenix Park shortly after Sunday midnight, says a Central News despatch from Dublin.

"A volley of shots was heard. Then all was quiet for twenty-five minutes, when a fusilade started, and lasted for several minutes. It apparently came from the direction of the magazine of the fort near the Vice-Regal Lodge.

"It is also stated that from then until dawn the park was scoured by armored cars with bright searchlights. No official explanation has yet been made."

Musicians Attacked.

Dublin, Jan. 6;—A party of musicians motoring from Dungarvan to Ardmore, county Waterford, were attacked by eight armed men, who punctured the tires and petrol tank of the machine with revolver shots. The attacking party overturned the automobile and forced the musicians to walk home.

The police used hand grenades to repulse an armed attack on a patrol which was ambushed near Ballyvaughan, county of Clare, Saturday night. Shots were fired, and a civilian doctor who was passing the scene of the attack was wounded.

Grenades also were used early Sunday morning, when an onslaught was made against the barracks at Kilmurry.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Let "Danderine" save your hair and double its beauty

Oh, girls, such an abundance of thick, heavy, invigorated hair; a perfect mass of wavy, silky hair, gloriously fluffy, bright and so easy to manage.

Just moisten a cloth with a little "Danderine" and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this magically removes all dirt, excess oil and grease, but your hair is not left brittle, dry, stringy or faded, but charmingly soft, with glossy, golden gleams and tender lights. The youthful glints, tints and color are again in your hair.

"Danderine" is a tonic-beautifier. Besides doubling the beauty of the hair at once, it checks dandruff and stops falling hair. Get delightful Danderine for a few cents at any drug or toilet counter and use it as a dressing and invigorator as told on bottle.

A Hateful Sight.

Sir Arthur W. Brown, the navigator of the Vickers-Vimy biplane that crossed the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland, was studying his instruments one afternoon at St. John's when two pretty girls drove up in separate automobiles.

The girls, descending from their cars, ran forward and kissed each other rapturously.

Lieut. Brown made a wry face and said to a correspondent:

"There's a thing I hate to see."

"What's that?" the correspondent asked.

Lieut. Brown nodded towards the girls who were embracing each other.

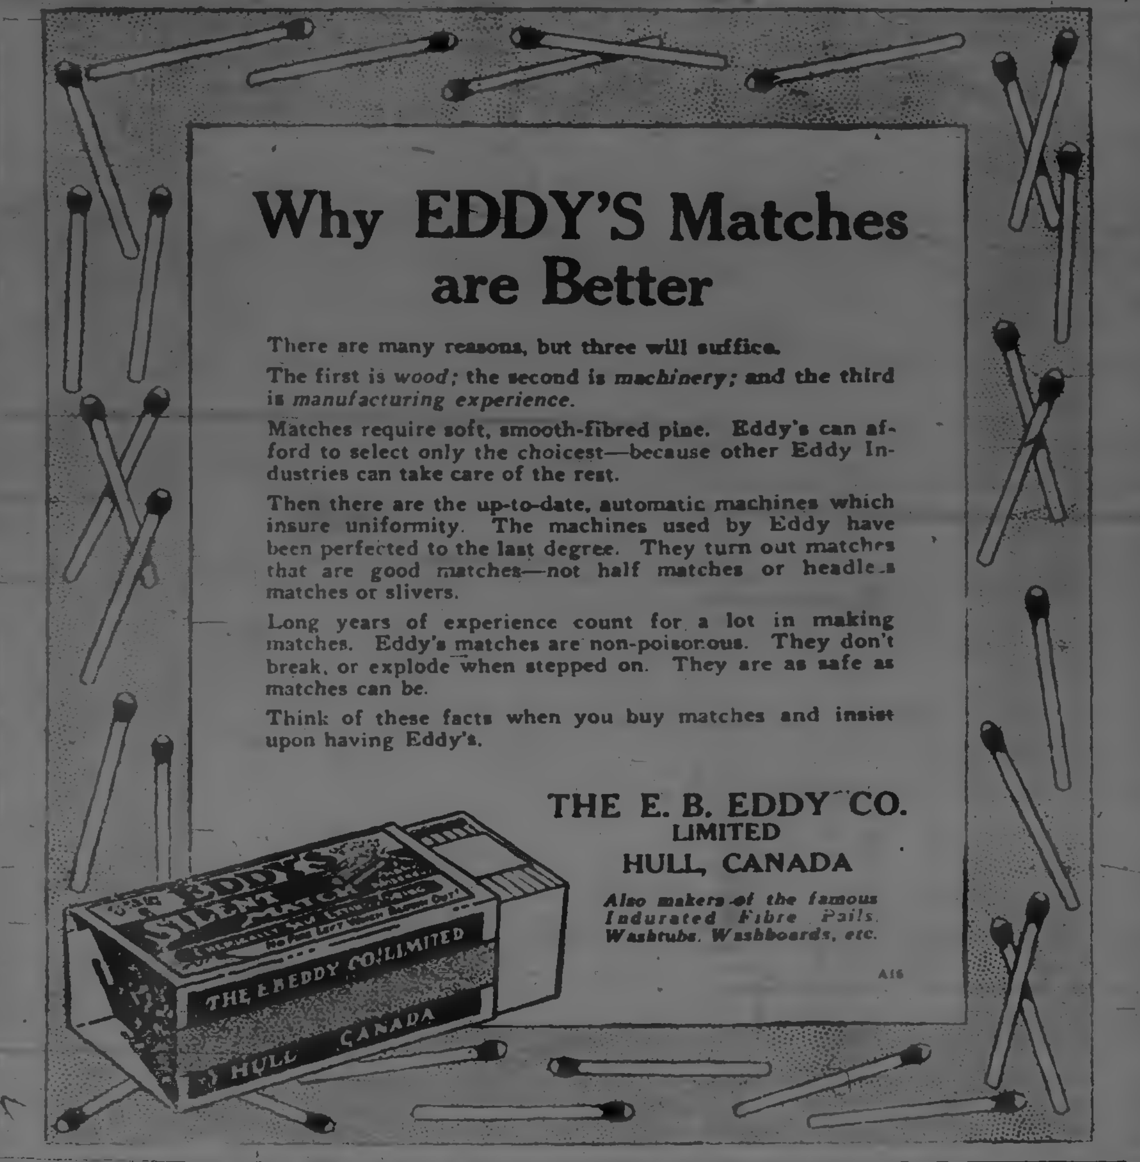
"Women doing men's work," he said.

The World Is Flying.

The airship R 33 has been making a tour of the French battlefields, says the London Sphere; and it carried a chef and gave its passengers French cooking, and real beds, with sheets. "On September 15," says the same paper, "during a flight from Amsterdam to England, this lunch was served on a passenger airplane: Salmon mayonnaise, cold chicken, fruit salad and wine."

A Detective.

The policeman in a London suburb gazed long at the hole in Mrs. Brown's parlor window. Then he produced a pocket book. "You 'eard the crash at four o'clock?" "Four o'clock," echoed the lady. "You ran to the door, but seed nobody?" "Nobody." After that he could think of no more questions, so he shut his book and walked off dreaming of promotion. Soon he was back again with a full-face smile, eloquent of triumph, and remarked: "You're sure it happened at four, ma'am?" "Yes. Have you caught the culprits?" "Well, not yet, ma'am, but I'm a-narrowing it down all right. It wasn't Bill 'Iggins, 'cos 'e was killed by a moty-car at 'arf-past three!"



Why EDDY'S Matches are Better

There are many reasons, but three will suffice.

The first is wood; the second is machinery; and the third is manufacturing experience.

Matches require soft, smooth-fibred pine. Eddy's can afford to select only the choicest—because other Eddy Industries can take care of the rest.

Then there are the up-to-date, automatic machines which insure uniformity. The machines used by Eddy have been perfected to the last degree. They turn out matches that are good matches—not half matches or headless matches or slivers.

Long years of experience count for a lot in making matches. Eddy's matches are non-poisonous. They don't break, or explode when stepped on. They are as safe as matches can be.

Think of these facts when you buy matches and insist upon having Eddy's.

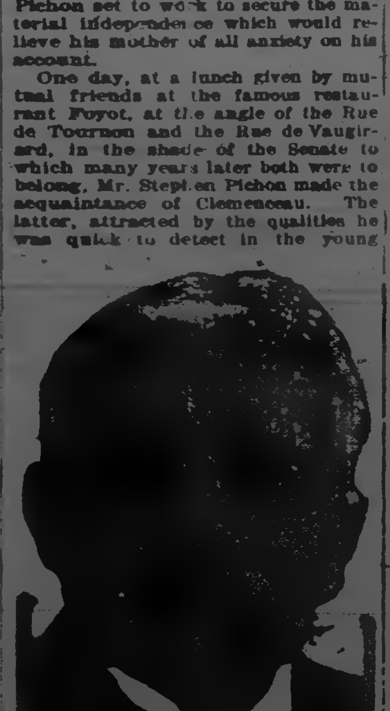
Stephen Pichon Stands Among the Greatest Men Now Working for France

ONE of the strongest men in France is Stephen Pichon. He has always, it would seem, taken life seriously even when as a staid, grave little boy, clad in long trousers and in a jacket of distinctly Etonian tendencies, he trotted dutifully to school through the quaint old streets of Anay-le-Duc. He was, it is said, a very good little boy; his elders praised him highly; he rarely made a noise, and did not care to play with his livelier schoolmates. In fact, his father, who was tax-collector in the tiny Cote d'Or city, was very proud of his quiet little son.

It would hardly appear at first sight, that such a retiring—almost timid—child would be well equipped for the battle of life. Yet Mr. Stephen Pichon is, in all the acceptations of the phrase, a "self-made man." When his father passed away his family had great difficulties to face, but convinced that where there was a will there was a way, young Pichon set to work to secure the material independence which would relieve his mother of all anxiety on his account.

One day, at a lunch given by mutual friends at the famous restaurant Foyot, at the angle of the Rue de Tournon and the Rue de Vaugirard, in the shade of the Senate to which many years later both were to belong, Mr. Stephen Pichon made the acquaintance of Clemenceau. The latter, attracted by the qualities he was quick to detect in the young man, engaged him as reporter in the Revolution Francaise, of which he was then co-director with Sigismond Lacroix. A couple of years later, having founded La Justice, Clemenceau intrusted "little Pichon" with the task of reporting the meetings of the Senate. The young man continued to write for that paper until 1880, and it was while on it that he made the acquaintance of Millerand, Aurelian School, and Jules Roche.



STEPHEN PICHON.

Mr. Pichon was an excellent journalist. He revealed both a diversity of ideas and a penetrating judgment, which were the precursors of that sagacity which has always character- [illegible] with equal care and talent the most varied subjects, ranging from sociology to literature, from history to political economy, and he has also written a particularly fine essay on Charles Pauvety, the forerunner of Socialism, one of the great French thinkers of the fifties.

Nevertheless, journalism did not satisfy him as a "life work." Politics soon exerted a great and irresistible attraction for him, and in 1883 he succeeded in being elected as Municipal Councillor of Paris, the almost inevitable stepping-stone toward the more enviable position of deputy, which he attained in 1885. At this period he definitely abandoned journalism, never again to take it up, and this mental attitude is extremely characteristic of Mr. Pichon, who in the course of his life never resumed any of his former occupations—thus resolutely turning his back upon the past and looking only toward the future.

Failing to be re-elected in 1893, he immediately concentrated his attention on a diplomatic career, with such success that he was soon appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Port-au-Prince. It should be remarked that Mr. Pichon—unlike any of his colleagues, ministers for foreign affairs—has actually visited widely different countries, with the result that he has acquired a very real and useful knowledge of racial characteristics.

In 1891, Mr. Pichon went to Tunis, as resident-general, and he fulfilled the high and delicate duties intrusted to him greatly to the satisfaction of the Bey, while developing French interests throughout the whole protectorate in a most important manner.

Although he seemed definitely to have abandoned politics, Mr. Pichon had never ceased to remain in touch with Mr. Clemenceau, and when the latter became Prime Minister in 1906, he did not forget to recall his old friend from Tunis to assume the portfolio of Foreign Affairs.

Thirteen years have elapsed since then. Both Clemenceau and Pichon again occupy their respective positions of yore, at a moment of the reconstruction of France.

Old Carpets.

Carpets now on display in London will surprise those who are unacquainted with the strides made in the manufacture of carpets by British factories during the war. The carpets are claimed to be exact reproductions of rare Eastern carpets and are being offered at prices not much higher than those of ordinary loom production. The most remarkable feature about them is considered to be the true rendering of that eastern lustre which has hitherto defied successful copying. Some of the most notable reproductions are those of the seventeenth century coronation carpets which were made for the Shah of Persia; the Khorassan rug, and the famous carpet manufactured for the Sheik Ismail, the original of which hangs in the Victoria and Albert Museum of London. The carpets vary in size and have all been made in a British factory during the past three or four years.—Family Herald.

Soft Drinks.

Have you any idea what things are in the bottled soft drinks you consume? Some contain one thing, some another, but all contain water, flavor, sweetening and carbon dioxide gas. Those four things are the basic essentials of a bottled soft drink. There is likely to be some coloring matter and there may be an acid—usually either the citric acid found in lemons or tartaric acid found in grapes, though sometimes mineral acids are used. Frequently there is a condiment, such as red pepper, cinnamon, allspice, cloves or nutmeg. There is almost certainly a trace of alcohol. And that just about covers what is likely to be found in these soft drinks.

Couldn't Be.

Miss Passe (playfully)—I'm older than you think I am. Mr. Blunt—I doubt it.

AN ANCIENT DISPUTE.

Will Settle Boundaries of Peninsula of Labrador.

The long-standing dispute between Canada and Newfoundland, as to the boundaries of the peninsula of Labrador, which is part of the latter dominion, bids fair to be settled at a comparatively early date.

For years the two dominions have been disputing not only as to the boundaries of this desolate land, but as to the method by which the dispute should be settled. It was only, however, after the extension of the boundaries of the Province of Quebec, some years ago, that the controversy became really acute. That province now claims jurisdiction over a much larger section to the north of the peninsula than Newfoundland is willing to concede, the latter claiming the country at the headwaters of the rivers which find their outlet on the Labrador coast.

Since the Quebec Government scored jurisdiction over the extended territory to the north, there have been numerous clashes between the two Governments in the matters of grants of timber, limited mineral rights, and so forth. In spite of the fact that the country is generally recognized to be desolate in character, it is stated that it is rich in timber, minerals, fish, and fur.

Canada and Newfoundland have now decided to submit the dispute to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in England. They have also decided upon the form of the reference, which is as follows:

"What is the location and definition of the boundary as between Canada and Newfoundland, on the Labrador peninsula?" Under statute orders-in-council and proclamations, Newfoundland formerly opposed having proclamations submitted. It is stated that certain of them favor the Canadian contention. Correspondence is now passing between the two Governments as to the method of procedure in the arbitration.

His Desire.

Last autumn Roland was much in love with his new teacher, and tried to prove his affection by doing many errands for her. One of them was the hauling of the fertilizer from his father's barn to her flower garden.

This spring Roland became interested in a victory garden and started one. One day he journeyed to the home of his last term teacher, told her of his garden and then ended the conversation with, "Do you remember that fertilizer I gave you last fall? Well, I'd like to have it back now for my own garden."

Ingenious Automobile Thief.

An automobile owner at Hallowell, leaving his car, hitched it to a tree by winding a chain around one of the wheels of the machine and fastening the end of the chain around a tree. An automobile thief jacked up the car, loosened the wheel which was chained to the tree, took it off, and then removing the extra wheel from the rear of the car put it on in the place of the wheel which had been dropped off and drove away, leaving the single wheel chained to the tree.

Time the Best Doctor.

At Lund, in Southern Sweden, there is an obelisk commemorating a great battle. It was fought between the Swedes and the Danes in 1676, and the Danes were beaten and lost the province of Schonen. Contrary to what might have been expected, this monument is not a commemoration of victory but of reconciliation. It was put up by both Danes and Swedes, and both were present at its dedication. It may be added that it took 200 years for the obelisk to be set up.

It is not the men with wooden legs that retard civilization, remarks a contemporary, but those with wooden heads.

A LUX Shampoo is a real luxury

Perfect cleanliness and a refreshing stimulant for the scalp are the best of all means for ensuring hair health. In other words—try a LUX shampoo.

Dissolve a tablespoonful of LUX in a gallon of very hot water, whip into a creamy lather, and then temper with cool water. Rub well into the scalp—you'll enjoy the invigorating, cleansing sensation. Then rinse thoroughly in fresh tepid water and dry the hair, in the sun if possible, never with strong heat.

Lux is sold at all grocers, departmental stores, etc.

A handy recipe book "The Care of Dainty Clothes" is gladly sent free on request.

DON'T WHIP!

Stop Lashing Your Bowels with Harsh Cathartics but take "Cascarets."

Everyone must occasionally give to the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders, and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics.

What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can constantly be used without harm. The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil or Purgatives.

Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.

DON'T PAMPER YOUR STOMACH

Fear of Dyspepsia Robs the Entire System of Necessary Nutriment. Eat a Diversified Meal and With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets You Will Avoid the Distress of Indigestion.

Just because the stomach sours with gassiness, heartburn, water brash and such distresses after eating, is not a good reason for depriving the system of nourishment. Instead of indigestible and innutritious bran and skim milk try the better plan of eating what you like and follow your meals with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They digest food, they assist the stomach to secrete juices that keep the stomach sweet, active and with the alkaline effect, just as when the stomach is in perfect health. Nor is it necessary to discriminate. You may eat freely of onions, sausage, mince pie and baked beans, or other dishes such as the average dyspeptic views with horror, and suffer no distress if you follow with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. There is thus no need to fear any kind of food at any time or place, for with these tablets, you may prevent those distresses that formerly made you pamper your stomach as if it were a tender infant. You can get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in any drug store at 50 cents a box.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat, also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

A Taxi Detective.

Some time ago Sir Arthur Conan Doyle arrived in Paris from the Riviera, and, having hailed a taxi at the station, drove to his hotel. As he paid his fare he was rather surprised when the chauffeur said, "Thank you, Monsieur Conan Doyle!"

"How did you know my name?" asked Sir Arthur.

"Quite simply," the chauffeur replied. "I read in the newspapers that you were coming from Nice. At the station I examined you and saw that you were English. Your hair seemed to me to have been cut by a southern barber, and on the heel of your shoe were traces of Marseilles mud."

Sir Arthur stared at him in astonishment. "Are those the only signs by which you recognized me?"

"Oh, no," said the driver. "There was one other. I saw your name painted on your trunk."

Village Theatres in Ulster.

In view of the possibilities of an artistic renaissance it is proposed to establish a repertory theatre in Belfast, and to have similar theatres in many of the villages. It is hoped to create a dramatic literature for Ulster, and also to try to put before the people of Belfast examples of intellectual drama as it has been developed in other countries. In the villages it is hoped to get the loan of large rooms or barns for their theatres, and the companies would be trained by experienced players.

EDITOR'S MAIL

SHALL THESE MEN HANG?

Editor Review: That day is drawing near upon which the five unfortunates, at present lodged in the county jail, have been sentenced to die upon the gallows.

Presently their fate will be decided. It has been proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that those five foreigners entered into a conspiracy for the purpose of committing a robbery, and, while in the act, one of the number shot a man. According to the accepted dictates of justice, all are deemed guilty and all have been sentenced to pay the supreme penalty. This is justice—"an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

We are living in an enlightened age. We pride ourselves on the huge intellectual progress of our generation—on the heights reached by scientific research. We study the laws of cause and effect. We are given to understand, on good authority, that environments, early training and such influences have a direct and pronounced effect on the mentality of a human being.

Our great specialists of today tell us that they understand the criminal—that they can cure the diseased mind as readily as the diseased body.

We meet in clubs and various organizations and discuss at length ways and means for the uplifting of the human race—for the wiping out of moral, mental and physical disease; and we are to all appearances a serious people. And yet we stand by and countenance this most barbarous, most primitive thing—capital punishment.

If this is right, then the rest is all a huge hypocrisy.

BEWILDERED.

"PUSSYFOOT JOHNSON."

American Prohibitionist Was Mobbed in London.

"You had a good time. I had a good time. I have no complaints, but, if you want fun, get into the game against the greatest enemy of the human race—drink." Such was the message sent by William E. Johnson, the American prohibition worker and Anti-Saloon League organizer, to the great army of students who had broken up the prohibition debate in London, in which he was to have taken part, had hustled him from the platform, and carried him in mock triumph down the Strand.

The debate had been arranged by the Overseas Club and the Patriotic League, and from the first it was clear that there was going to be trouble. Large masses of students carrying banners bearing such legends as "We Want Beer and Stout," had marched down the Strand, and swarmed into the hall. At the commencement of the meeting the chairman and members of the Overseas Club attempted to obtain a fair hearing for the speakers, but the students cheered and booed, as only students can. They shouted, they sang, and they let off flashlights, interspersing these activities with ever louder and more insistent calls for "Pussyfoot," the name which Mr. Johnson has been given by students in London, and by many others who disagree, or think they disagree, with the cause he advocates. And so, at last, in response to repeated cries of "We want Pussyfoot!" Mr. Johnson arose to speak. Immediately the platform was besieged, and, within a few minutes, the great coup of kidnapping "Pussyfoot," evidently the whole purpose of the raid, was an accomplished fact.

"Pussyfoot," however, was equal to the occasion. One quick glance round and he had grasped the situation. Here was a great army of boys, out to have a glorious time, wild with joy at having accomplished the grand feat. Well, as far as he was concerned, they should have all the fun they wanted. "Pussyfoot" "entered into the spirit of the thing and enjoyed himself." Amidst loud and triumphal cheers, with students surging round him on all sides he was carried, shoulder high, through the streets.

It is a procession which is likely to become historic. If there is one thing that the English boy is ready to "worship" it is "a sport." And "Pussyfoot" is undoubtedly a sport. All England is quite satisfied on that point. His meeting had been broken up. He had been carried in mock triumph through the streets. His face had been badly cut with a stone, hurled from the crowd. And yet, what was his "come back," as he, no doubt, would put it? Why, just the message quoted at the beginning of this article, sent off with the imperturbably good-humored remark, "The boys are all right." One thing is quite certain, that the great majority of "the boys" are entirely convinced by this time that "Pussyfoot Johnson" is all right. Mr. Johnson has expressed the hope that, as soon as he is able to do so, he may visit the college and address the students.

London's New Lord Mayor.

Shipping and marine insurance are the business interests of Sir Edward Cooper; the next Lord Mayor of London. Sir Edward's first schoolmistress was Mrs. Horatia Ward, daughter of Nelson and Lady Hamilton.

One of his favorite stories concerns a lady who approached a small boy who was looking after the stall outside a bookseller's shop.

"Have you 'The Life of Moses?'" she asked.

"No, mum," replied the urchin. "I have the life of a dog, and they're goin' to give me notice on Saturday."

Recount of the ballots cast in Ohio on the Federal prohibition amendment is now going on.

ANCIENT PROFITEERS

HIGH COST OF LIVING WAS ALWAYS A PROBLEM.

References Found in History of Romans, Jews and Other Highly Civilized People to Efforts Made to Make It Possible For the General Public to Get Necessities of Life at a Reasonable Price.

THE high cost of living has been the subject of governmental investigations since the earliest existence of governments. It is interesting to note what results some of those investigations brought, and what measures, if any, were, taken to alleviate the sufferings of the multitudes.

Sixteen hundred years ago the Roman Emperor Julian sent out a committee to investigate the altitudinous expense of existence, and Gibbon, in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," reports these findings as follows:

"It is an unequal contest in which the price of the land is claimed by one party as his exclusive property, is used by another as a lucrative object of trade, and is required by a third for the daily and necessary support of life. All the profits of the intermediate agents are accumulated on the lands of defenceless consumers. The hardships of their situation were exaggerated and increased by their own impatience and anxiety; and the apprehension of a scarcity gradually produced (because of hoarding) the appearance of a famine."

Six hundred years before that, Chi-hoang-ti of the dynasty of Thsin, the builder of the Great Wall of China, had already sought to devise protection against the high cost of living.

"Intermediaries were exacting from the people a greater share for their non-productive occupation than the producer was given for his labor, more that the tithe of the priest, and still more than the All-High One ever demanded in qualities as payment for eternal bliss," (Rech. Asiat. 2d ser.)

The cry against intermediaries was so strong in old Palestine that the Talmudists devote page after page protesting against them. The prophets too hurled more than one dart against them.

Price-fixing by governments is an old remedy resorted to in times of stress. Julian had already done it. Gibbon says about it:

"When the luxurious citizens of Antioch complained of the high price of poultry and fish, Julian publicly declared that a frugal city ought to be satisfied with a regular supply of wine, oil and bread; but he acknowledged that it was the duty of a sovereign to provide for the subsistence of his people. With this salutary view the emperor ventured on a very dangerous and doubtful step, that of fixing, by legal authority, the value of corn. He enacted that in a time of scarcity it should be sold at a price of which had seldom been known in the most plentiful years; and that his own example might strengthen his laws, he sent into the market four hundred and twenty-two thousand modii, or measures, which were drawn by his order from the granaries of Hierapolis, of Chalcis, and even of Egypt. The consequences might have been foreseen, and were soon felt. The Imperial wheat was purchased by the rich merchants; the proprietors of land, or of corn, withheld from the city the accustomed supply; and the small quantities that appeared in the market were secretly sold at an advanced and illegal price. Julian still continued to applaud his own policy, treated the complaints of the people as a vain and ungrateful murmur, and convinced Antioch that he had inherited the obstinacy, though not the cruelty, of his brother Gallus. The remonstrances of the Municipal Senate served only to exasperate his inflexible mind. He was persuaded, perhaps with truth, that the senators of Antioch who possessed lands, or were concerned in trade, had themselves contributed to the calamities of their country; and he imputed the disrespectful boldness which they assumed, to the sense, not of public duty, but of private interest. The whole body, consisting of two hundred of the most noble and wealthy citizens, were sent, under a guard, from the palace to the prison."

Price-fixing had been resorted to much before that. We read in the Bible (II. Kings, vi.): "And there was a great famine in Samaria—an ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab (about a pint) of dove's dung for five pieces of silver.

"Then Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the Lord. Thus said the Lord, "To-morrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria."

a measure was a little more than one-third of a bushel.

Ataxerxes Mnemon had already tried price-fixing long before. Plutarch tells us that it resulted in hoarding, and that during the reign of Artaxerxes Mnemon, an ass's head fetched sixty silver pieces. (Plut. VII. Art ch. 24.)

It was also tried in Sparta (Bernhard Shoenberg: Der Wert and Preis XI.), and fell into disuse in a short time after its enactment. But in the British Isles it was still urged as a remedy in the sixteenth century.

"The price of wheat against which the populace had risen had become standardized. The price of labor had gone up somewhat to meet, half way, the new price. But the accumulated riches augmented dangerously. They set a higher standard of living to the sons and daughters of merchants; a standard which could only be met by a further increase in profits, which could only be obtained either by lowering the price of labor or by raising the cost of the necessaries of life. (Bach. Hist. of Money.)

Telephonic Newspaper.

An attempt is to be made to introduce into the United States the telephonic newspaper which was such a novel success in Budapest before the war.

A special telephone was installed in every subscriber's house, and from the central office the day's news was announced by a clear-voiced speaker. At 9 a.m. you had a call to give you the correct time of day—this being repeated hour by hour—and all Stock Exchange fluctuations, murders, and so on came over the 'phone as they occurred.

At noon you had the news of the day condensed in a clear narrative, and then, keeping the receiver to your ear, you could listen to a snappy story or a thrilling instalment of a serial.

For two hours each afternoon you were electrophonically connected—if you wished—with the performance of a famous military band, and on five evenings a week with the Grand Opera House.

And all this for the equivalent of sixty cents a month!

"For Valor."

How many have heard during the past five years of the King's watch—one of the most highly-prized of all decorations that the King of England can bestow? Obtainable only by members of the British Secret Service, it has been won during the Great War by upwards of a dozen men.

At a glance, just an ordinary gold hunter, it bears inside the cover the inscription: "For Services Rendered.—George," in a facsimile of the King's handwriting.

A certain naval officer, who is one of the envied dozen referred to, received the watch as a reward for spending eighteen months in the German naval bases at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven. An excellent linguist, he mixed freely during that time with the Hun sailors, transmitting to England knowledge that was invaluable.

Wireless Works Best by Night.

As a result of certain observations made during the solar eclipse of May 29 last, further evidence is forthcoming with regard to the phenomena of day and night wireless signalling.

Under normal conditions the wireless station at Meudon, Paris, is unable to receive daylight signals from Ascension Island, but can do so during the hours of darkness. During the eclipse, which was not visible in Ascension, special tests were made between the two stations, and it was found that whilst the moon's shadow passed between them Ascension was quite audible at Meudon, the signals failing as the shadow passed away. This may be taken as additional proof that the increase in the distance at which a given transmitter is able to affect a given receiver as a result of nightfall, is due to the diminution of the effect of solar radiation on electro-magnetic waves.

Accident Led to Discovery.

In 1796 a ticket-stamper, employed at a Munich theatre, carelessly left his salary cheque on a table in the room where he worked. A gust of wind suddenly blew the cheque off the table into a basin of water on the floor. He dried the cheque as best he could, and, to straighten the paper out, he placed it underneath the whetstone, which had been resting on his printing-stamp, and left it lying there throughout the night.

The following morning, on lifting the stone off the cheque, he was surprised to see that the imprint from the stone was transferred to the cheque, and the thought struck him that by means of a larger stone he could "print" programme and songs. He made experiments, and finally discovered—through this accident—the art of printing from stone.

NEW POLICY IN EFFECT AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

HIGH CLASS VAUDEVILLE ACTS LAST THREE DAYS EVERY WEEK

Commencing with tomorrow's matinee the management of the Grand Opera House will inaugurate their new house policy which provides for several high-class vaudeville acts the last three days of each weeks. The booking is from the Keith circuit and will include all the best vaudeville acts seen at such theatres as Shea's in Toronto and the Princess in Montreal. In addition, eight reels of pictures will be shown and the already high standard attained in this line by the Grand will be maintained.

For the opening engagement four vaudeville acts will be shown. Keno and Wagner, song and dance specialists; Lou Elliott, a character comedian; Knight and Gail, comedy and harmony singers, and Hamlin and Mack, in a vaudeville surprise, will provide amusement for all who will patronize the Grand Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

The pictures include Hayakawa in the "Gray Horizon," Roscoe Arbuckle in a comedy entitled "Joy Skidding," and Pictorial Life. The Grand orchestra, under the direction of Mr. G. Howarth, has been lately augmented by the addition of several new members and will play concert selections at each performance.

REALISTIC PICTURE AT EMPIRE THEATRE

NO MONEY NOR PAINS SPARED TO MAKE "LOOT" NATURAL AS POSSIBLE

—Realism—what expenses are perpetrated in thy name!

"Loot," the well known Saturday Evening Post story, now playing at the Empire Theatre, has as its supreme punch and biggest scene the robbery of a large jewelry store by fifty masked bandits.

Of course, it would have been possible for the Universal to construct its own jewelry store set, but Director William Dowlan realised that the little tintimate touches that distinguish a good picture from a mediocre photodrama could only be obtained with a real store.

So the leading Los Angeles jewelry store was chartered, with its hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of precious gems, while the masked bandits proceeded to "loot" the store carrying off the jewels to big auto trucks waiting on the street.

After the scenes were over, inventory was taken of all the jewels used in the picture, and their value was found to total over $500,000. The famous Arabin necklace used in the picture was itself valued at $100,000.

The hotel scene in this Universal feature was made in one of Los Angeles' finest hostelries, which it was necessary to rent from midnight until 6 in the morning, thus entailing a neat outlay of money for the sake of realism.

The story of "Loot" is an intense, absorbing drama on the workings of New York's underworld, sweetened by a beautiful story of a woman's love. Charming Ora Carew and Darrell Foss are the stars in this Universal feature.

Sir Evelyn Wood Dead

After Splendid Career

As a Builder of Empire

FIELD MARSHAL SIR EVELYN WOOD, who died in London on December 8, was the youngest son of Sir John Page Wood. One of his ancestors had been mayor of London for nine successive terms.

Born at Braintree, in the County of Essex, in 1838, he was educated at Marlborough. In 1852 he entered the navy and served as midshipman in the Russian War. He was employed ashore with a naval brigade which was operated before Sebastopol. Later he was severely wounded at the assault on the Redan, in 1855.

When he had recovered he left the navy and almost immediately entered the 13th Light Dragoons in the British army. He received his lieutenancy in 1856 and was transferred to the 17th Lancers. He served with them through the Indian Mutiny and won great distinction as brigade major of a flying column. He was decorated shortly afterward with the Victoria Cross. In 1861 he became a captain in the regular army and in 1862 a brevet major. He transferred to the Brack Watch, but after three years returned to the cavalry.

He served as aide-de-camp at Dublin and was next employed on the commanding general's staff at Aldershot until 1871, when he was appointed regimental major of the 2nd Scottish Rifles.

In 1867 he married Mary Pailne Southwell, sister of the fourth Lord of Southwell.

Sir Evelyn served in South Africa, in the Ashanti War and in the Kaffir War. In 1879 he was in command of the left column of the army which crossed the Zulu frontier. At the close of the South African war he received a K. C. B. for his services and was appointed brigadier general commanding the Chatham district.

In 1881 he was again in South Africa and negotiated the armistice with Gen. Joubert. He was promoted for this to the substantive rank of major-general of the Chatham district. In 1882 he was made G. C. M. G., and commanded a brigade in the Egyptian expedition. He remained six years in Egypt. During the Nile operations, in 1884 and 1885, he commanded the forces in the lines of communication under Lord Wolseley. He was made a local lieutenant-general in 1886 and appointed commander of the Aldershot district. His lieutenant-generalcy was confirmed in 1891 and he was also given a G. C. B.

He then entered the War Office as quartermaster-general. Four years later he became adjutant-general and in 1895 he was promoted to full generalcy. He was then assigned to the command of the Second Army Corps and the Southern Department. He served there four years. In 1903 he became field marshal and in 1907 returned to active list as brevet colonel of the Royal Horse Guards.

After he had retired from active service he took an active part as chairman of the Association of the City of London in organizing a territorial force.

He is an author of some note. His books on cavalry are in use in most of the armies of the world. One of his best known writings was "From Midshipman to Field Marshal."

He was especially prominent as a tennis player in his youth. He was an excellent huntsman and an expert shot.

The country seat of his family is at Brixton, near Plymouth.

Smoking Harmful to Women.

"Many of the women here smoke as many as a hundred cigarettes a day," writes James Gall, of Glasgow, to the London Daily Express.

"The effect of smoking on university students has been a bad one," he added. "At the last big examination the results were poorer than ever before—a fact which may be safely attributed to the detrimental effects of smoking on the students' mentality."

A Harley street physician, discussing the subject with a London Express representative, said it was difficult to say whether the smoking tendency among women was due to the nervous strain of the war or was an outcome of the community life which had been developed.

"A few cigarettes a day," he continued, "cannot hurt the normal, healthy woman, but when the thing becomes a habit, and one cigarette is lighted from another, it is most injurious to the eyes, heart, nerves, lungs and entire system.

"I can quite believe that the families of hard-smoking women would be less healthy than those of non-smokers.

"As a woman's nervous system is far more delicately attuned and of finer fabric than the average man's, excessive smoking has a worse effect on her than on her men folk.

"I find that a large percentage of my nervous patients started smoking when under some severe grief or strain. While the cigarette soothes them for the moment, it aggravates their nervous conditon."

Cost of British Army.

British army estimates for 1919-1920 provide for the expenditure of $405,000,000. These figures, made public recently, foreshadow an army strength at the end of the fiscal year, March 31, 1920, of 300,000 British troops and 100,000 Indian troops. These forces, however, will be reduced later.

When estimates were made in March, 1919, an army of 2,600,000 men was provided for, of which 1,548,000 were in process of demobilization, and since have been released.

FRENCH MERCHANT FLEET.

By 1922 Total Tonnage Will Be Four Million.

From 1881 to 1917 the French state appropriated, under the heading of premium or armament compensations, about 500,000,000 francs to the merchant fleet.

These monetary sacrifices seem to have been useless, for it is a secret for no one, that on the eve of the war the French commercial fleet was quite inadequate and corresponded in no way to the exigencies of modern traffic. The shipyards only constructed about 15,000 tons a year, and foregin shipping received more than 400,000,000 francs for French maritime transportation, says the Paris correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor.

During the war France lost more than a third of its merchant ships and it expended the enormous sum of 11,000,000,000 francs for the freight carried for it by the allies and neutrals; so that the shortage of maritime tonnage is one of the causes of the low rate of exchange and the high cost of living in France to-day.

It would seem as though these elementary truths were not understood when one notices the absolute indifference of public opinion in France concerning maritime matters. It appears to be inadmissible that a great country like France, surrounded on three sides by water and possessing an immense colonial empire, should not be interested in all that concerns the sea. England, by national tradition, Germany in virtue of its economic policy, Holland and Norway on account of their geographical situation, are all preoccupied by their merchant fleets; and in the United States it is the one absorbing question.

The day when, in France, peasants and bourgeoisie, artisans and workmen will awaken to the fact that they will neither drink their coffee nor be provided with their cotton shirts unless they build ships, there will be a maritime opinion in France. The country needs a merchant fleet of 5,000,000 tons. A first credit of 850,000,000 francs has been voted by the Chambers and has already been expended in the buying or constructing of 500,000 tons. Add to this 125,000 tons coming from America and about 400,000 tons, which represent the French part in the German commercial fleet, and with what remains of the French mercantile marine, the total is about 2,725,000 tons.

But Mr. Clavelle wishes to do more than this. After having valued the orders given to French and foreign shipyards at about 1,000,000 tons, he foresees the construction in three years of steamers aggregating 716,000 tons, 55,000 tons of which will be delivered by the state arsenals of the state, and 458,000 tons of cargo boats, 50,000 tons of which will come out of the arsenals. Thus in 1822 the French merchant fleet will comprise more than 4,000,000 tons.

What Birds Say.

The terms used in describing the notes and vocal efforts of various birds are both curious and interesting.

Everyone knows that among the denizens of the poultry yard the cock crows and hen prattles, assuming a cackle when she has done her duty. The duck quacks, but the drake is contented with a mere wheeze. The geese cackle, and the pigeon coos.

But it is less common knowledge that the rook caws, whilst the crow and larger members of his race croak. The jackdaw chacks, the lapwing cries, the nightjar reels, but also utters castanet notes and makes a loud clapping noise with his wings. The snipe bleats, the bittern booms, the white owl cries, but his brown cousin shrieks and mews.

Dabchicks laugh—a bubbling, trilling love-call, like a peal of fairy laughter — the cuckoo calls, telling his name to all the hills. The thrush sings, but the blackbird whistles; the blackcap warbles and the red-breast lilts; the wren trils, ditto the domestic canary; the bulfinch pipes.

The song of the yellowhammer is described by a set form of words. To the Midlander the bird appeals for "a little bit of bread and no chee-se," with strong accent on the "no" and a long-drawn-out "che-e-se"; but the north countryman only hears him calling spitefully, "the de'il tak yer all an' lea-v-e me."

Telling the Time by Cat's Eyes.

In various parts of Turkey the watch and the clock are extremely rare, but the natives have an exceedingly ingenious way of approximating the time, and some of them hit it with considerable accuracy. They locate two cardinal points of the compass, and then folding their hands together in such a manner that the forefingers point upward and in opposite directions, they observe the shadow cast. In the morning or the evening, at certain known hours one finger or the other will point directly to the sun. A comparison of the two shadows will determine the hours between.

Another system followed in Turkey and some other countries of the Orient is to observe the eyes of a cat. Early in the morning and evening the pupils are round. At 9 and 3 o'clock they are oval, and at noon they consist of a narrow slit.

His Position.

"Hey, you!" yelled a lieutenant to a negro soldier who, at the screech of an approaching shell, had jumped from his shell hole and run over to another, "What do you mean by moving without orders? Do you want to give away our position?" "Position?" replied the darky scornfully, "when dat shell come over dere, mah position am ovah here, an' if a sh'll come here, mah position am somewhah else. Ah ain't got no regular position."

Patrol Memorial.

The Dover Patrol Memorial Committee has decided to allocate $60,000 each for the obelisks to be erected on the cliffs to the east of Dover and at Cape Blanc Nez, France, and $300,000 for the monument to be erected in the United States. This will leave about $75,000 for the erection and furnishing of the hostel for sailors at Dover which is to form the other section of the memorial.

Sullivan and His Method

"AS a matter of fact, Arthur Sullivan was one of the most gifted prodigies known to fame, and his facility in every department was simply stupendous. He could read anything at sight, play from a formidable score, clearly distinguish and declare any and all combinations of sounds, even at the very top of the piano, without seeing the notes struck; and he accomplished in the line of study in five minutes what others could not accomplish in five months," W. B. Findon writes in "Sullivan and His Operas."

"We even find in the 'Buttercup' duet the suggestion of contrasted subjects progressing concurrently which stand out more prominently in 'The Sorcerers,' and afterward find complete expression in the duet in 'The Pirates of Penzanze,' where the lovers are singing in waltz rhythm, while the chorus of girls are chattering about the weather in two-four time. The policemen's chorus, with the counter-theme for the sopranos and the trio for the three men in the first act of 'The Mikado' with three different times going on at the same time, are the notable instances of his facility in this respect. Only a musician with a complete command of the scientific and technical branch of his art could accomplish such unique results."

"Of that wonderful melody which flows with such crystal purity and charm through the whole of his work there is no need to speak. It has spoken eloquently enough for itself throughout the past generation. Its captivating quality made gay the drawing room and cheered the man in the street, as he unconsciously hummed one or another of the various airs which winged their ways through the doors of the Savoy Theatre to the four corners of the earth.

"His consummate musicianship helped him, without doubt. Once an idea had fixed itself in his mind he had no difficulty in putting it on paper. He scored his operas with the readiness and facility of a man writing a chatty letter to his friend. His method was to leave the orchestration until the scene had been finally fixed at rehearsal. By that time he had penetrated to the depths of its humor and sentiment, and with unerring touch he was able to give exactly the required coloring to the instrumentation. He scored quickly, and with what certainty he worked may be estimated from the fact that the elaborate overture to 'The Yeoman of the Guard' was composed and scored in twelve hours, while the splendid epilogue to 'The Golden Legend' was begun and finished in the space of twenty-four hours.

"He wrote of his method: 'The first thing I have to decide upon is rhythm, and I arrange the rhythm before I come to the question of melody, and my first aim has always been to get as much originality as possible in the rhythm, approaching the question of melody afterward. Of course melody may come before rhythm with other composers, but it is not so with me. If I feel I cannot get the accent right in any other way I mark out the meter in dots and dashes, and it is only after I have decided the rhythm that I proceed to notation. One day work is hard and another it is easy; but if I had waited for inspiration I am afraid I should have done nothing. The miner does not sit at the top of the shaft waiting for the coal to come bubbling up to the surface, one must go deep down and work out every vein carefully.'

"The captious and pedantic critic has said that, with his musical endowments, Sullivan should have devoted himself more to the abstract side of his art, but it became Arthur Sullivan's mission to minister to the happiness of the greatest number, and to give distinction to a light form of art instead of gratifying the exacting desires of the comparatively few. He might have gone on writing symphonies and quartettes his whole life through, and made his mark among the academicians, but would the final result have compensated us for the loss of that beautiful series of operas which are familiar to the whole world? He knew the danger of over-elaboration and diffuseness, and always chose the simplest means to serve his purpose. There is no superficial work in his operas. They are as perfect in their way as the most delicately cut diamond. With his profound knowledge of the capabilities of the orchestra it was absurd to suppose that he could not have produced as much sound and fury as Richard Strauss himself had he been so minded.

"He made himself loved because he associated with our happiest hours. He locked for us the doors of daily trouble and took us into a veritable Rosamund's bower, filled with the sweetness of roses. He did one thing superlatively well, and if we had to judge Sullivan by his light operas alone we should say, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant!'"

Home of Mocha Coffees.

All the genuine Mocha coffee and the hides known to the trade as mochas come from the Yemen plateau in Arabia. From Sana, the centre and capital of this rich and fertile district, to Aden on the coast is about 200 miles, and to Hodeida about 150 miles. Everything is transported on the backs of camels, though a railroad thirty miles long, running from Aden to Lahey, has just been opened.

A Great Loss.

A colored soldier whose hand had been blown off was admitted to a base hospital. "Nurse," he said, "kin Ah go back to de front to-morrow?" "Certainly not," said the nurse. "You have lost a hand." "Dat's why Ah wants to go back, nurse. Ah left mah razor in dat hand."

Refusal of UP. S. officials to issue passports into Mexico disappointed the hopes of thirsty hundreds at El Paso, Tex., during the holidays.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Rotten Row is Where the London Swells All Go.

"Rotten Row" is an ugly name, but it is that given to London's most fashionable driveway. The strange part of it is that this homely appellation misplaced as it obviously is, was born of one of the most beautiful phrases in the French language.

When the Normans populated England after the invasion of 1066, it followed that they gave French names to many locations and places, not alone in London, but throughout England. So they named the driveway through London parks 'Rome du Roi' (route of the king) because it led to the imperial palace. Time passed and the Londoner had great difficulty in pronouncing this phrase, and "Route du Roi" degenerated to "Rotten Row."

Rotten Row is one of London's show places. It leads to Buckingham Palace from Hyde Park Corner. It is the centre of interest from a special standpoint, as it is the favorite drive of fashion. On Sundays the church parade is a most brilliant spectacle.

The French influence in nomenclature in London is evident wherever one goes. Charing Cross, which the modern Londoner calls the "centre of the world," is an English corruption of a one time French nurse.

When Edward the Confessor was bringing the body of his queen from North England his retinue in their route to Westminster Abbey deposited the bier at nightfall when they struck camp. At each resting place a cross was erected.

Throughout England there are now towns, villages and hamlets which bear the name of "cross." One can thus almost trace the course of the cortege. The last resting place they reached before they got to Westminster was "Chere Reine Cross" (Dear Queen Cross), now corrupted to "Charing Cross."

"Birdcage Walk," in St. James Park, is an interesting example. Popular belief generally is that in medieval days they used to hang bird cages with song birds in them from the boughs of trees that mark the walk, so that folk rambling by could be delighted with the music of the feathered warblers. This is erroneous. "Birdcage Walk" is nothing more than a corruption of the French word "bocage," meaning grove. And Birdcage Walk is indeed a pleasant grove where lovers have been rambling since the Norman conquest.

The First Opera In England.

In 1856 there was produced "The Seige of Rhodes: Made a Representation by the Art of Perspectives in Scenes and the story sung in recitative Musick," which a writer in the Dictionary of National Biography characterized as "in some respects the most epoch-marking play in the language." It was virtually the first opera produced in England. Dryden in his essay on heroic plays explains that the rigorous prohibition of tragedies and comedies in Puritan times forced d'Avenant "to turn his thoughts another way and to introduce the examples of moral virtue written in verse and performed in recitative music." D'Avenant took the Italian opera for his model as regards the musical part of the entertainment, while his characters were molded after those of Corneille and other French dramatists. The actors were nearly all musicians; and it is interesting to recall that among them were Henry Purcell, greatest of English composers, and Matthew Lock, composer of the music to "Macbeth." It is noteworthy also that "The Seige of Rhodes" was the first dramatic piece to be performed in England with movable scenery, and even more important, the first in which a woman acted a part. Furthermore, it practically revived the drama in England, which had been quiescent since the earlier years of James I.'s reign, when the play was ousted by the masque. D'Avenant did more. He raised the theatre "from the condition of a booth at a fair" and brought it to some extent into line with modern conceptions of dramatic representation.—From an article on Sir William d'Avenant, in "The Poets Laureate," by W. Forbes Gray.

Crown Has Many Vicissitudes.

The Hungarian crown, which is reported to have been stolen lately by revolutionists, has suffered many vicissitudes. A King of Bohemia once stole it, but Otto of Bavaria subsequently recovered it. He, in sending it back to Hungary, packed it in a cask, but it was nearly lost on the journey, because the jolting of the wagon threw the cask into a ditch. At a later period Elizabeth, widow of King Albert, appears to have thought it rather a good thing to have with her when she fled to Germany, in case she should ever be financially embarrassed—a piece of foresight which stood her in good stead, since she eventually pawned it to the Emperor Frederick. During the revolution, 200 years later, the unfortunate crown was again in danger of being unlawfully appropriated, and so it was buried in a forest. After remaining in this dim security for fifty years it was subsequently removed to Budapest.

Damp, dirty hog pens invite trouble.

Misunderstanding.

"The Germans are always being misunderstood, and this misunderstanding is always to the poor fellows' disadvantage."

The speaker was Adolph Junck, the millionnaire dye importer of Duluth.

"I know a German motorist," he went on, "who arrived one June evening at a crowded country road house. When the clerk told him the house was full, he said desperately:

"'Can't you at least give me a bundle of hay somewhere?'

"'There ain't a thing left, mister,' said the clerk, 'but a bit of cold mutton stew.'"

JEWS AND PALESTINE.

Country May Become a Purely Self-Governed Commonwealth.

When Mr. Balfour, then British Foreign Minister, conveyed to Lord Rothschild, just two years ago, a statement declaring that the British Government favored the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and would do its utmost to bring about such a settlement, the news was hailed throughout the world's Jewry as marking a new era in the history of the Jewish race. Mr. Balfour's announcement was made just prior to the conclusive victories of Gen. Allenby, which drove the Turk from Palestine, and registered the full measure of achievement for the Ninth Crusade. Since that time Jews in all parts of the world have been interesting themselves in the great project.

Such projects, however, are not achieved in a day. Another full year of war followed Mr. Balfour's announcement, and when actual warfare came to an end, in 1918, those who knew anything about the matter fully recognized the immensity of the task to be accomplished before such a question as the final disposition of Palestine could be reached. Now the Jew is used to waiting; nevertheless, as the days of the Peace Conference lengthened from weeks into months, during the year now closing, and he saw so many high hopes deferred and hearts made sick, he might be excused if he grew anxious as to the fulfillment of the promises that had been made to him. It was, therefore, a peculiarly grateful piece of intelligence which Lord Curzon was able to convey to the great Zionist meeting, held in London, lately, that no change had occurred in the policy of the Government concerning the establishment of a national home for the Jewish people in Palestine. The problem is a peculiarly complex one, but it is quite clearly the Syrian question, with its supposed clash of French and Arab interests, which is delaying the settlement, and not any change of policy, actual or contemplated, on the part of the British Government.

In Mr. Balfour's original statement it was carefully emphasized that nothing should be done to prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine. The point is important, and should not be lost sight of. As Mr. Herbert Samuel very justly pointed out to the meeting in London, no responsible Zionist would propose the immediate establishment of a complete Jewish state in Palestine. Such a settlement would place the government of the country in the hands of a minority, and would thus transgress one of the first rules of democracy. The aim, however, is ultimately a Jewish state, and the way of it is simple. The policy of the British Government, Mr. Samuel declared, is the promotion to the fullest degree that the conditions of the country allow of Jewish immigration and land settlement; the provision of Jewish money for much-needed public works; and the active promotion of Jewish agricultural development and self-government, so that, in time, the country may become a purely self-governing commonwealth under the auspices of a Jewish majority.

Thus, the realization of Palestine as a Jewish state and national home is intrusted to the Jews themselves. If they are really in earnest, as no one doubts they are; if they emigrate to Palestine from all quarters of the world in sufficient numbers; if they bring to the great work of nation building a just measure of the energy and resources which have made them successful workmen, business men, and scholars in almost every other country, then the future of the Jewish national home in Palestine is secure.—Christian Science Monitor.

Forced to Move.

"We've got to have a bigger house."

"Outgrown the present place?"

"No. We have rooms enough, in fact more than we need, but the cellar is too small."

"What's the idea?"

"We can't store six tons of soft coal in anything less than the basement of a church."

Hospital Humor.

In an American hospital in France a lieutenant who had lost both his legs in battle received a package from his wife. In it were six pairs of socks. Raising himself as best he could in the cot, the lieutenant said:

"Say, boys, what am I going to do with these now?"

"I guess you're just out of luck," was the reply.

While replenishing a grate fire, celluloid combs in the hair of an Oxford, O., woman were ignited. She was severely burned.

CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE OPENS FRIDAY NIGHT WITH A GOOD DOUBLEHEADER

One of Best Hockey Leagues in History of City Promised for This Season—Six Nights With Double-headers Each Night.

On Friday evening the City Hockey League, which promises to be the greatest local sporting success for many years, will get under way with a double header. In the curtain raiser the C.G.E. tool room and Business College oppose each other and as each team has been practicing faithfully, a real hot time is expected during the hour these teams face each other.

The closing fixture of the night will be between the Belmont Club and Canadian Woollens. This latter team, commonly known as the Auburn, are vaunting their strength and claim they will have little difficulty in disposing of any of their opponents. They have classy looking uniforms and if appearance has anything to do with it they certainly have a good chance of carrying off the bacon.

But their opponents of Friday night, the Belmont Club, were always strong on the ice in pre-war days and are determined and confident of living up to their old standard by starting out with a win over the confident Auburn squad.

Although a great night of sport is promised and five other equally good double-headers are in store for the holders of the season's ticket, which sells at the very moderate price of $1.

The Schedule.

Jan. 9—C.G.E. vs. Business College, Belmont Club vs. Can. Woollens.

Jan. 14—Belmont Club vs. Business College, Can. Woollens vs. C. G. E.

Jan. 23—Can Woollens vs. Business College, Belmont Club vs. C. G. E.

Jan. 28—Can. Woollens vs. Belmont Club, C. G. E. vs. Business College.

Feb. 4—Can. Woollens vs. C.G.E., Belmont Club vs. Business College.

Feb. 11—Belmont Club vs. C. G. E., Can. Woollens vs. Business College.

Miller, formerly of the Montreal Wanderers, will probably handle the bell in all of the games.

CARPENTIER ACCEPTS OFFER OF J. CROFFROTH

DESCAMPS SAYS TALK OF 45 ROUND FIGHT IS STUPID

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 7.—Descamps, manager for Carpentier, wired James W. Coffroth, manger of the Lajuana race track, last evening accepting the latter's terms for a championship bout between Carpentier and Dempsey in America. Carpentier favors a ten-round battle. The decision to accept Coffroth's offer a purse of $100,000 came after a long consultation with the French promoters. "This talk of a forty-five-round fight is stupid," remarked Descamps last night.

CHESS CLUB BEING ORGANIZED HERE

ALL THOSE WHO WISH TO JOIN SHOULD INFORM DR. E. V. FREDERICK

The game of chess is among the most ancient games known and those who have been able to learn it look on it as the most interesting of all indoor amusements and mental exercises.

During the war thousands of men in hospitals and barracks learned to play it and there are probably many who would still like to enjoy a game occasionally.

With a view to finding out all those persons in the vicinity of Peterborough who play chess it is requested that they drop a postal card with their name and address to Dr E. V. Frederick, 300 Charlotte street, city.

France's Lost Colors.

The Treaty of Peace with Germany provides that within six months after "the coming into force of the present treaty," Germany shall restore to France the "trophies, archives, works of art, souvenirs" and "particularly the French flags" taken in the war of 1870-71 and the present war. The French are very explicit about the flags taken in the Franco-Prussian war. For more than forty years these flags have been gloated over in German cathedrals.

Now, however, the French are indignantly charging the Germans with having removed and concealed the flags, apparently with the intention of pleading their theft as an excuse for not being able to comply with the provisions. A French deputy asserts he has proof that a stand of old French colors exhibited for years in a Berlin arsenal was recently removed and burned by a German soldier who acted without opposition by the custodian, who had been apprised of the terms of the treaty. Flags in several cathedrals, notably the one at Potsdam, have been removed without authority, and the whole outlook is unfavorable for the recovery of the French trophies.

Hawaiian Idols Unearthed.

Of the two old Hawaiian idols lately found concealed in the earth at Hookanpu, Paukukalo, one, a female idol, is in a fairly good state of preservation. The idol is supposed to be that of Kihowahine, the Undine of Maui myths. Her haunts are the springs at Paukukalo, the Kauaha Pond, and the matchless pools in the wooded glens around Pilholo, Makawao.

In some of the latest legends woven around her she is reputed to have lured two natives at different times on a merry chase only to see her disappear in one or another of the deep, clear water pools among the wooded glens of Pilholo. One, a doctor, ended his aimless wanderings to her glenwood haunts by becoming a paralytic, the other, a woodcutter, never ceased to describe the charms of this "wonderful woman with the golden hair," always able to elude his embrace, but ever beckoning him on to her lair among the vines and trees and pools and crags of the glens about Pilholo.

Why an Engine Puffs.

Why does a locomotive engine puff? And why do some seem more asthmatical than others and puff more.

It all depends on the size of the driving wheels, which govern the number of puffs which the engine gives in a certain distance.

For every turn of the wheel it gives four separate puffs. It has been reckoned that if the circumference of the wheel is twenty feet and the train is going at fifty miles an hour, an engine, on an average, gives 880 puffs a minute. The puff is really due to the abrupt emmission of waste steam from the smokestack. When there are more than eighteen puffs a second the human ear cannot distinguish them separately.

Fourteen Thousand Inquests.

For thirty-five years Samuel Brighouse, the well-known Lancashire coroner, has been presiding over inquests, and during that time 14,000 cases have occupied his attention. It was Mr. Brighouse who dealt with the famous Maybrick poisoning case in 1889.

As an example of the eccentric findings of muddled jurymen, he relates the story of the foreman of a jury at one inquest who said the verdict was "Accidental death, but no cause to show."

"Then why do you say accidental death if you have no cause to show it was?" "We have no cause to show it wasn't, so there it is."

"Then you think it was an accident?" "I suppose that is what we mean, but we don't understand inquests much."

Mr. Balfour's Blue Sofa.

War souvenir collectors have had their opportunity recently in Paris. There has been an auction sale of furniture used by the Peace Conference delegates.

Mr. Balfour's apartment, where many informal meetings took place, has been dismantled, and the furniture sold including chairs on which the "Big Three" and Mr. Balfour sat. These were sold privately at prices ranging from 660 francs to 1,020 francs, and an easy chair, in which he often rested after the labors of the conference, went for 3,070 francs. His mahogany bedroom suite brought 6,650 francs. The franc is worth about 19 cents.

Feet.

"The men who make the best husbands," says a writer, "are those who possess the knotty type of foot with square toes." But a young friend of ours, addicted to stopping late, says they make the worst kind of prospective fathers-in-law.

Ancient Cameo Sold.

Probably executed for that patron of the arts, the Roman emperor Hadrian, a superb cameo of the head of Medusa, wonderfully carved from a boss of translucent chalcedony, was sold at auction here, recently, bringing 1,750 guineas (about $8,750). It was a classic reminder of a classic sale, for it formed part of the incomparable Marlborough gems which realized, en bloc, 35,000 guineas in June, 1875, passing to the late David Bromilow, of Battlesden Park. The collection was formed by George, third duke of Marlborough, and comprised gems which had belonged to such famous connoisseurs as Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel; William, second earl of Bessborough, and Philip Dormer, earl of Chesterfield.—London Telegraph.

Aerial Compasses.

Many difficulties had to be overcome in the production of a satisfactory compass for aerial work. Chief among these was that of neutralising the magnetism of the engine (and in particular the magneto), and of preventing the effect of centrifugal force, which caused the card or dial inside the compass to swing in a direction quite independent of north when the airplane was banking on a turn. However, a truly excellent compass is now in use.

Soldiers Learning English.

It has been discovered that there are thousands of men in our National army who cannot speak or read English. For that reason the library war service of the American Library association has established classes in English in nearly all of the big training camps. There is a heavy demand for books, and even "First Readers" are on the list of books asked for and—of course—supplied.

REGULAR MEETING HELD YESTERDAY AT HOME OF MRS. MORRISON

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Trinity Church was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. A. Morrison, Hunter street.

The program was most interesting and helpful. Mrs. Morley Lyle gave a scripture travel talk, Mrs. Thomas Barrie a reading on "New Year's Thoughts," and Mrs. King contributed a solo.

A basket hung on a wreath of flowers and foliage prepared by the Misses Kidd and McBride proved a unique way of receiving talent money made by members of the Aid, and which amounted, including a cheque of $152 from a calendar birthday party, to $310.

Mrs. Morrison, assisted by Mesdames Padgett, Mann, Barrie, Wotten, Neville and Lyle, served tea, from which they realized about $10.

The Aid is very much indebted to Mrs. Morrison for her kindness in throwing her home open for the occasion.

Charity may cover a multitude of of sins, but greed isn't one of them.

LADIES AID MEET IN GEORGE STREET CHURCH

REVIEWED WORK OF PAST YEAR AND PLANNED FOR THE FUTURE

The holiday season is over and the ladies of George Street Church showed their eagerness to begin work again by attending in considerable numbers the meeting of the Aid held in the church parlor yesterday afternoon. The president, Mrs C. E. Smith, was in the chair and took charge of the business part of the program, while Mrs. Hetherington led in the devotional exercises.

Many letters were read from those who, through application, had been remembered by the Aid during the past month with flowers, plants and letters of sympathy. At the Christmas season fifty or more of the aged, sick and others who from various reasons were compelled to remain indoors had been sent plants or flowers. Besides this overflowing baskets containing Christmas dinners had been sent to many families.

In a discussion regarding new work to be entered upon, the ladies amongst other things, decided to begin at once to sew for a sale in April.

This being the first meeting of the New Year the latter part of the program took the form of a consecration service. Short talks and papers on New Year resolutions were given by four of the ladies, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Foote, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. C. E. Smith.

POST OFFICE NOW LEAD 5 PIN LEAGUE

WON ALL THREE GAMES FROM THE LEFT OVERS LAST NIGHT

Last night at the Water street alleys the Post Office took three from the Leftovers, placing them in first place. The Pastimes have to win three tonight to tie up with the Post Office. For the 1st round for the Post Office Fallon was high man with 582, Rightmeyer next with 564, W. Turner also passing the 500 mark. For the Leftovers A. Ross was high with 513. N. USED STOLEN TRUCK TO CARRY LIQUOR

Windsor, Jan. 7.—Sentence was deferred upon Ernest Perrault in Police Court today, after he had pleaded guilty to the theft of a truck valued at $1,775 from the garage of John Housin. Perrault admitted he had stolen the machine in an attempt to run liquor across the border. A cargo of some two hundred bottles had been seized, as well as the truck, by United States Customs officials when Perrault tried to drive across on the ferry.

BULGARIANS BLOW UP BRIDGE

Saloniki, Jan. 7.—Bulgarian strikers have blown up a bridge on the railway between Sofia and Varna, according to advices from Sofia. Similar attempts have been made at several other points. Two hundred of those involved in the affair have been arrested, of whom four were shot.

MR. & MRS. JOHN HARPER HOLD GOLDEN WEDDING

OVER 100 GUESTS HONOR FORMER PETERBOROUGH COUPLE NOW IN TORONTO

Toronto, Jan. 7.—With many friends of other years surrounding them in their home, at 375 Perth avenue, Mr. and Mrs. John Harper celebrated their golden wedding Monday night, and received numerous congratulations on their good health and happiness.

Lieut.-Col. R. J. Stuart, who presided at the supper, tendered to the happy couple and guests, pointed out that during their long residence in Peterboro for fourteen years, and Norwood, Ont., of over thirty years, in Toronto for the past nine years the bride and bridegroom had always been held in the highest esteem by all who had the pleasure of their acquaintance. "They have lived exemplary lives and have shown us the way to find complete domestic happiness," said he, "and we are glad to be here to-night to do them honor."

Mr. and Mrs. Harper are both in their seventy-second year. They were married in Norwood on January 5th, 1870, and have one son, William H. Harper, who was present at last night's celebration. The guests invited numbered over one hundred.

TORONTO POLICE ARE OUT FOX HUNTING

BELIEVED THAT YOUNG'S POINT ANIMALS ARE IN THAT CITY

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Toronto police have been invited to help search for two foxes stolen on December 28 from Young's Point, near Peterborough.

One is not an ordinary fox. It is described as a "silver grey male fox, grey on the back with stripes of red on his shoulders, breast all black, head grey." The other, a female, is merely a red fox, and would probably pass unnoticed on the streets of the city.

The silver grey animal, however, is a rare specimen, and is also stated to be worth considerable money. The fact that both wore collars, and that the fur around their necks is slightly worn in consequence, should assist the police considerably, it was stated last night.

The Chief of Police of Peterborough has sent word to the local police to keep an eye open for them. As a reward is offered, fox-hunting may become popular among the constables.

DUFFUS GARAGE CHANGES NAME

WILL HENCEFORTH BE KNOWN AS DUFFUS MOTOR SALES

The Duffus Garage is now doing business under the name of "Duffus Motor Sales" but under the same management, and with no change in the personnel of the firm. Some twelve months ago Mr. Joseph J. Duffus launched into the "whole-sale" motor accessaries business in connection with the garage, and his enterprise has succeeded in establishing this department on a firm footing with a big and growing demand for accessaries of all kinds in this city and for many miles around: hence the change of firm name to one more in keeping with the scope of its operations.

Duffus Motor Sales deal in automobiles, trucks and tractors, and accessories and supplies (wholesale and retail).

HAMILTON MAN BADLY HURT

Hamilton, Jan. 7.—The summer home of O. W. Cook of the Firestone Tire Co., near Station 14, Beach, was the scene of a shooting affray yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock, of which Mr. Cook was the victim. He was shot in the abdomen by one of two burglars who were in his house, but the wound is not serious. Two men were later captured who gave the names of Alfred Simard and Alfred Augar of Sault Ste. Marie. They are charged with housebreaking and shooting and wounding.

MRS. H. E. GRAY MEETS WITH PAINFUL INJURY

FELL ON ICY STORE STEPS YESTERDAY AND BROKE COLLAR BONE

While entering the store of the Canadian Packing Co., corner George and Brock streets, yesterday, Mrs. H. E. Gray, 489 Aylmer street, slipped on the step, and in falling sustained painful injuries. Mrs. Bradley, leader of the Girl Guards of the Salvation Army, who was with Mrs. Gray, gave first aid, and the injured lady was taken to her home. Dr. Eastwood, who was called, found that her shoulder blade had been broken.

AIMS BODY BLOW AT MODERN ROUND DANCE

OLD TIME REVIVAL NOW IN PRORESS AT MARK STREET CHURCH

One hundred and fifty people attended the service at Mark Street Church last night, where a great spiritual awakening is in progress. A song service was held at 7:45 and continued until 8, when the regular meeting began. Promptly at 8 o'clock the Leaguers left the rink and its attractions to attend the revival. No finer class of young people are to be found anywhere than those here in Peterborough, but they require strong, fearless, faithful leadership. We must never sugar-coat the devil and offer him to our young people, saying, "Take it, Willie; yes, take it, dear; it's good for you." We must stand up like men, take all the forms of evil by the forelock, and, dealing particularly with the modern round dance, hit it hard between the eyes; and most of our Peterborough young people will say "Amen."

Come to the meeting tonight at 7:45. Everybody welcome.

TWO O. H. A. FIXTURES WITH LINSDAY TONIGHT

INTERMEDIATES GO TO SCUGOGVILLE WHILE JUNIORS PLAY HERE

Tonight is a big night in local hockey circles. The intermediates journey to Lindsay, while the juniors take on the speedy juniors from Scugogville at Brock street rink.

Both teams will present their very strongest lineup against the old enemy, and two hard clashes will no doubt be seen tonight.

Many will go with the intermediates to Lindsay, but all who do not should not miss the opportunity of seeing the juniors in action for the first time this season.

DEMOBOLIZE "IRON DIVISION"

Berlin, Jan. 8.—Denial is made by the Norddeutsche Allgemein-Zeitung that the "Iron Division" will form the border guard in the north-east corner of East Prussia. Transportation of the men to all points of Germany has already begun, says the newspaper, and the demobolization and distribution of the Baltic troops will soon be completed.

REDS IN RUSSIA IT IS FEARED MAY OVERRUN NORTHERN PERSIA

Recent Military Successes Makes the Situation as Bad as it Possibly Could be—General Denekine's Army Has Been Cut in Two by Bolsheviki Forces.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 8.—The situation in Russia is about as bad as could be, from an anti-Bolshevik point of view, according to the British war office reports, and there are few signs indicating any likelihood of improvement. There are two especially menacing developments. In the first place, Gen. Denkine's army has been cut in two through the Bolsheviki push to the Sea of Azov at Taganrog, and its flanks have been thrust back, leaving a large gap. In addition, comes the claim from the Bolsheviki of the capture further east of the town of Krasnovodsk on the Caspian sea, and, while this is not confirmed, it is generally accepted as true.

The capture of this important part of Krasnorivdsk, it is pointed out, creates the grave possibility that the Reds may overrun Northern Persia and occupy Teheran, which would probably mean the establishment of Bolshevik rule in Persia. The taking of Krasnovodsk permits the Reds not only to control a large part of the important Krasnovodsk-Merv railroad, but gives them free access to the Caspian Sea.

EXPLOSION AND FIRE DESTROYS A GARAGE

OVER TWO HUNDRED CARS WERE LOST IN DISASTER AT MONTREAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 8— An east end garage caught firre this morning in some mysterious manner and as a result over two hundred cars which were stored there, have been destroyed with an explosion which blew the roof off the building anw a few minutes afterwards, the entire building was in flames.

Fire Now Out.

A fire at the east end garage was put out shortly before noon today and the gasoline tank saved. The building was completely demolished, the estimated loss being in the vicinity of three hundred thousand dollars. An enquiry will be held into the cause, which so far remains somewhat obscure. Many of the cars were not insured.

PREMIER ON TRIP WITH JELLICOE

WILL ACCOMPANY THE VISCOUNT TO CUBA FOR REST

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 8.—Sir Robert Borden, who has been spending a brief vacation in Florida, left last night with Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, former British First Sea Lord, who passed through here on his way from Washington to Key West. It was understood that Sir Robert would go on to Cuba, where Viscount Jellicoe will board a British warship.

RECOUNT OF BALLOTS SATURDAY MORNING

JUDGE WILL GO OVER EVERY VOTE CAST IN MAYORALTY CONTEST.

Ex-Alderman McIntyre has deposited his guarantee with the city clerk and taken the required affidavit calling for a recount of the ballots that elected W. H. Taylor mayor of the city by one vote on New Year's Day. The judge has set the date for the recount at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at the Council Chamber.

This will be a new experience for Peterborough and the result of the count will be watched with a great deal of interest by the electors.

"FORWARD OR FAIL" IS WATCHWORD OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCHES TODAY

Special Service Show Encouraging Attendance—Chance for all to Make Real Advance in Christian Life.

The note which is being struck in the meetings, which are being held this week in the different churches of the city is the note of "Forward" This is a good motto for the churches to take at any time. It is especially appropriate this year when all the churches of the land have united in a great inter-church Forward Movement. "Forward" is the law of all life. When anything ceases to grow or advance, decay and death have already set in. The Master enunciated this law of progress in the words: "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." A great opportunity presents itself this week to the members of all the churches of the city to take a real forward step in their Christian life. Now is the time to take a fresh hold of the great eternal truths of the Gospel, and for Christian people to dedicate themselves anew to the great unfinished task of giving Christ to the whole world. He is the only solution of the world's unrest, as He is the only Source of rest to the individual who is tired and weary of sin. The following is a report of the services last night:

George Street and St. Paul's

In the absence of Mr. Glassford, who was called home on account of a funeral, Rev. Mr. Thomas spoke. The address was based upon the latter part of Thess. ::10, which was a call to the early Christians to reveal their allegiance to the truth of the Gospel, and thereby adorn it. The Apostle's words suggest the greatness of the doctrine of God, our Saviour. Much is meant when we speak of the eloquence of Demosthenes, the philosophy of Plato, the poetry of Shakespeare; but the truth of God has a glory of its own. The fundamental elements of this doctrine are the existence of God, the sacrifice of Christ, the personal obligation to develop a Christian character, the purpose of God in the world, and the future with its rewards and punishments. This doctrine is unchanging and abiding. It is not true that the day has come when creeds should be and will be cast aside. It is still important what a man believes. While the Apostle was a great theologian he did not overlook the practical aspect of Christian character. Therefore he emphasized the duty of adorning this wonderful doctrine. We agree that life is the supreme demonstration controversy, but for the inspiration of life. We should make it visible and intelligible to mankind. We may intel-

CO-OPERATION TO BUILD UP PETERBORO

President Frank Whitehouse of the Mercantile Association which succeeds the Retail Merchants Association, expressed appreciation of the efforts to secure general co-operation to build up Peterborough as a greater trading centre. He said the plan being worked out includes, as a first step, the meeting and organization of the special trade sections. The dry goods section has already met and the other trades will immediately follow. When each has been organized the general cooperative activities will be taken up.

Mr. M. J. Maher and the Secretary visited the headquarters of the Provincial Retail Merchants' Association at Toronto and made a study of the nation-wide organization of retailers and gained much information on the subjects of legislation to protect legitimate merchandising.

The new association proposes to make Peterborough the magnetic centre of its natural trading zone by making buying here attractive and profitable. The active interest and co-operation of the buying public is to be sought and cultivated.

The Council of the Board of Trade have relieved Assistant Secretary Frazer of his work on the Board in order that as secretary of the Mercantile Association he may be able to devote his whole time and effort to the organization of the new body.

The Mercantile Association will be distinctly local but it will be allied with the Ontario and Dominion Association whose membership is made up of the leading retailers of the country and in which Peterborough has already some thirty members.

MR. CORKERY IS ENDORSED BY THE TRADES COUNCIL FOR POSTMASTER

Resolution Recommending His Appointment Unanimously Adopted Last Night and Will be Forwarded to Ottawa, Letter Cariers Behind Movement.

At the meeting of the Trades Council last night a delegation from the Letter Carriers' Association urged the members to adopt a resolution endorsing Mr. John Corkery for the position of postmaster and to send a copy of the resolution to the postal authorities at Ottawa. This request was unanimously concurred in.

The letter carriers went into the situation fully. They explained that under the new civil service rules the appointment in the event of a vacancy went automatically to the next highest in the grade of the service. This put Mr. Corkery in line for promotion to succeed the late Postmaster Edgar. According to the rules the vacancy should have been filled one week after it occurred. Why then this delay?

The spokesman of the delegation asserted that he had a letter in his possession, received from the Deputy Postmaster-General, in which that official states that Mr. Corkery, who is nearly seventy, is too old for the position. This the speaker disputed, and stated that among his associates at the postoffice Mr. Corkery is regarded, physically and mentally, as the equal of any man of 45. He has been in the service for 35 years and is qualified in every way for the higher position, the duties of which he has really discharged with general satisfaction for months past. Promotion will mean an increase in salary of only $300 a year, but what is wanted is the observance of a principle and the reward of merit, to which all Mr. Corkery's friends feel he is entitled on his record.

A petition was circulated in the city asking for Mr. Corkery's appointment and this was signed almost to a man by those to whom it was submitted. It should not have been necessary to take this step if the civil service rules had been followed, but it was decided upon in order to hasten the appointment. The letter carriers believe that there is wire pulling going on somewhere for the place and that no one need be surprised if an outsider is appointed.

A committee, consisting of T. Tooms, M.L.A., and T. Lane of the Carpenters' Union, to ascertain if an employee who works for a bonus as Carpenters' Union will ascertain if an allowance from the Workmens' Compensation Board if he is injured, a dispute on this point having arisen in this city recently.

At the next meeting of the Council on January 21st officers for the year will be nominated and elected.

Sound Financial Standing.

The twenty-fourth semi-annual report shows a balance on hand of $599.16 in cash and a hundred dollar Victory Bond. This report was presented by the secretary-treasurer, Ald. Gainey, who has held that position for the past six years and who last night announced his desire to give up the office owing to a press of other work. The Trades Council will release Ald. Gainey from his duties with genuine regret.

Democrats Endorse Treaty of Peace

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 8.—Resolutions endorsing the treaty of Versailles and denouncing as unpatriotic the attitude of the senators, who would defeat it directly or by nullifying reservations, was unanimously adopted today by the Democratic National Committee in session here. The "arrogant" Republican leadership of the Senate was denounced as having earned the contempt of the world by throttling the treaty for seven months, and the Senate was called upon to "quit playing politics" with the question of ratification.

CATALONIA NOW IN STATE OF SIEGE

SPANISH GOVERNMENT TO TAKE STRONG MEASURE IN DEALING WITH UNREST

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Madrid, Jan. 8.—The announcement was made late last night that a state of siege had been proclaimed throughout the Province of Catalonia. The Minister of the Interior declared at midnight that Barcelona was calm and confirmed reports that more than three hundred arrests have been made in consequence of recent outrages. Leaders of the Syndicalists there had disappeared, he said. The Minister added the Government intended to take strong measures to put an end to the present state of affairs, the first step being to order a termination of the lockout recently declared in Barcelona which, he stated, was keeping one hundred thousand persons out of employment.

SOVIETS CAPTURED MANY PRISONERS

CLAIM FIVE THOUSAND CAPTURED FROM TRANS-SIBERIAN RAILWAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 8.—An official statement issued by the Soviet Government at Moscow dated Wednesday claims the capture of five thousand prisoners forty miles southeast of Achinsk, on the Trans-Siberian Railway. Another four thousand were taken near Kemchug, forty-five miles east of Achinsk, the statement says.

LABOR OPPOSES BONUS SYSTEM

NO IMMIGRATION AGENTS SHOULD BE PAID PER CAPITA PRICE FOR WORK

8 HOUR DAY-44 HOUR WEEK

ORGANIZED WORKINGMEN HAVE ANNUAL CONFERENCE WITH FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—Organized Labor presented its claims to the Government at the annual interview this afternoon. The deputation was headed by Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress. The chief requests were: Legislation for an eight-hour day and forty-four-hour week and the establishment of a fair minimum wage, the repeal of amendments to the Criminal Code imposing heavy fines for the possession of certain literature, restoration of all workers of the right to organize, the encouragement of collective bargaining, proportional representation, and assistance in the formation of co-operative societies. Regarding immigration, the deputation recommended the appointment of a Labor representative on the Central Empire Board, the revision of the present method of admitting orientals and the elimination of any system of bonusing for the introduction of industrial workers.

For Eight-Hour Day.

In presenting their claim for an eight-hour day and forty-four-hour week the delegation submitted a written memorandum to the effect that efforts in this connection have been the most fruitful cause of strikes. It is also pointed out that the claim for a maximum eight-hour day is recognized in the treaty of peace, to which Canada is a signatory. Regarding industrial disputes, the delegation emphasized that the compulsory clauses of the Industrial Disputes Act had been shown time and again to be generally impossible of enforcement. While refusing to repeal them the Government had refrained from enforcing them and this attitude brought about disrespect for law and was undesirable.

S. R. PARSONS,
who headed the delegation from the Manufacturers' Association who waited on Premier Drury yesterday to ask for changes in the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Law.

SEEKS UNIFORM TEXT BOOKS FOR DOMINION

FIVE PROVINCES ALREADY LINED UP FOR THIS CHANGE

St. John, N.B., Jan. 8.—For the purpose of consulting with the Nova Scotia authorities on the subject of uniform text-books, Dr. W. S. Carter and Dr. H. S. Bridges are leaving for Halifax, where they will discuss the possibilities of agreeing on certain standard books which might be used in common by the various Provinces, and thus greatly reduce the cost. The Text-book Committee of the New Brunswick Board of Education has decided that several of the books in use in this Province should give place to better works, but has not yet recommended any in their [illegible]. The movement towards greater uniformity is reported gaining ground steadily, and already an agreement has been reached by the Provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

DR. McPHERSON DENIES RUMOR OF LOCAL CASE OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

Report Started Yesterday Following Death of Visitor From Belleville Had no Foundation—Six New Cases of Smallpox—Citizens Urged to be Vaccinated.

There have been many rumors to the effect that sleeping sickness has invaded Peterborough. According to Medical Officer of Health McPherson, there are no grounds for this supposition. It appears that a certain party, who was visiting in the city from Belleville, died yesterday with some indication of having suffered from sleeping sickness. These symptoms, however, have not by any means satisfied Dr. McPherson, who does not think the case was one of this disease at all. He also states that there is no case of sleeping sickness in the city at the present time, to his knowledge. The rumor is, therefore, without foundation or fact.

New Smallpox Cases.

Dr. McPherson, however, states that there have been about six new cases of smallpox during the past few days, and again urges the people to take advantage of the offer of free vaccination.

Shortly before the holiday season a board of doctors gave free vaccination to the different schools. Over one thousand pupils were attended to. The clinic for vaccination of the citizens free of charge was not a success. The first night it was open only two people went in, the second night one, and the third night five. Most of these were people travelling to the United States, and with them it was a case of necessity.

Dr. McPherson urges all citizens to be vaccinated, and as soon as possible for their own good. It is entirely up to them now, and an ounce of prevention is always worth pounds of cure every time.

CAN. EMPLOYERS VISIT CABINET

ASK FOR CHANGES IN ADMINISTRATION OF THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

DESIRE NEUTRAL ON BOARD

CLAIM THEY ARE NOT INFORMED OF ANY CONTEMPLATED CHANGES

The Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association sent a representative deputation, headed by Mr. S. R. Parsons, to Queen's Park yesterday to lay before the Government two matters which, in the opinion of the manufacturers, call for early attention—the framing of legislation based upon the report of Mr. Justice Masten upon fire insurance, and changes in the system of administration of the Workmen's Compensation Board, together with the appointment of a "neutral" to fill the vacant position on the board.

Want "Neutral" Appointed.

Mr. Sam Harris, of the Harris Lithographing Co., dealt with the question of Workmen's Compensation. He stated that the employers preferred that the appointment to the board be of a neutral, one connected with neither manufacturers nor employes, but if this was not done then the appointment should be of a representative approved by the employers. The manufacturers asked that before a decision was arrived at on important questions of policy or principle by the board, the employers should be given a chance to be heard in a representative way. Mr. Harris complained that while the board treated the employers courteously their representations appeared to have little weight with the Commissioners.

Mr. Harris stated that the board made its changes without notifying the employers—they heard about them after they had been approved by order-in-Council.

The system of accident prevention as it is administered through the Safety Associations was also criticized. At the present time the inspectors nominated by the employers are doing work of a nature that overlaps the work of the Provincial Factory Inspectors. The manufacturers want the work of the Safety Associations extended to permit more effective accident prevention. At the present time, while there is adjustment in rates between groups as one or the other reduces its hazard, there is no such adjustment between employers in one group. The aim of the C.M.A. is to secure a system that will enable the careful manufacturers to make the careless individual put his plant in proper shape to prevent accidents. The comparison of expenditure and accidents would be one means of bringing this about.

Reserve Is Too Large.

Objection was also taken to the large reserve fund of the commission—now about $5,000,000—which is loaned to loan companies at an average rate of about 5 4-8 per cent. The manufacturers consider that in view of the fact that the law permits the board to make an assessment of any necessary amount on the employers on thirty days notice, this large reserve is not necessary.

RELIEF WORK COMMENCED

FOREIGN COLONIES MAKING LIBERAL CONTRIBUTIONS TO WORK IN MEXICO

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mexico City, Jan. 8.—The estimated number of casualties attending the earthquake Saturday in the western part of Vera Cruz State still stands at two thousand. It is probable that the death toll will be much higher as the despatches from the stricken area do not even estimate damage done nor do they give accurate lists of the dead. On the other hand they do not deny reports of the disappearance of one village, the total destruction of several others and the inundation of several towns by waters pouring down mountain streams.

Relief measures are gradually taking form and a fund has been started in this city, foreign colonies making liberal contributions. Military expeditions with ambulances, doctors and supplies contributed by individuals, municipalities and Government, have been sent into affected districts.

INFLUENZA ON BOARD FRENCE SHIP "MALTI

FIVE PASSENGERS DEAD AND SEVEN DANGEROUSLY ILL ON LANDING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Buenos Aires, Jan. 8.—The French steamer Malte from Havre and Vigo with passengers and cargo for Rio Janeiro and this port, arrived here yesterday afternoon with five passengers dead, seven dangerously ill, and a large number of others suffering from an attack of influenza, which broke out in violent form a few days ago. The ship's doctor reported that he daily attended fifty patients since the disease was first reported, and that the epidemic continued to spread to other passengers.

THE FOLLY OF WAITING.

THERE WAS LITTLE little or no building of dwellings done in Peterborough last summer., The reason urged was that no one could stand the cost of labor and material, and even those who were anxious to own their homes decided to wait until industrial conditions resumed their pre-war status. If this is done, the waiting multitude, at least such of them as have survived the passing years, may find themselves in the millennium. Human patience will be taxed to the limit before that date is reached.

There is no immediate prospect of lower wages and cheaper building material. The tendency in both cases is still in the opposite direction. There is no iron, brick or wood used in the construction of a dwelling that stands the slightest chance to become cheaper for years. Wages have gone up steadily since the signing of the armistice, and it is the schedule of wages that really sets the price of everything. The production of the raw material is what counts.

The big lumber companies that are operating this year are paying their laborers $85 a month with board and easy hours. This is at least three times the rate paid for such labor only a few years ago. In every grade of preparing the timber for its final purpose, the same high rate of wages will prevail, in the sawmill, the planing factory, and even the transportation rates will be higher. The lumber dealers must raise the price of their wares in the same proportion as wages and other unavoidable expenses have been increased. The lumber that is produced in the woods this winter is not likely to reach the market in a finished state under two years. For that space of time at least there is no prospect of cheaper wooden material for building purposes, and in every variety of material used in the erection of dwellings the same producing conditions prevail.

In the meantime, why wait? The building of dwellings is essential. House room in Peterborough is at a premium, and the city cannot grow unless some means are devised to accommodate the workingmen and their families. The way has been made easy for any man of fair earning capacity to acquire his own home. The Housing Commission will see that he gets a square deal. The man who avails himself of the easy terms offered will be doing business with the city instead of with a private individual. He can pay back the required loan with interest and feel no financial burden heavier than that which he carries while paying rent. At the end of twenty years he is the undisputed proprietor of a haven for himself and family, actually money ahead on the enterprise. It can be shown that the man who during the same twenty years has been satisfied to pay rent has really expended more money than his foresighted neighbor and has nothing to show for his outlay.

MORE FADS AND FRILLS.

FRESH FROM the triumph of election to the chairmanship of the Toronto School Board, Dr. John Noble spoke at the conference of the urban school trustees at Ottawa yesterday. He advocated more play, more outdoor work, and increased attractions for the younger children especially, including music, dancing and theatricals.

More fads and frills. Dr. Noble would have done well had he stopped with his recommendation for more outdoor work. But the school life of the average child, even in the city, is too short to make it advisable to abandon the essentials for what is merely ornamental.

THE CHURCH ITSELF A MIRACLE.

IN THE LITERATURE which they are distributing to help the Forward Movement, the members of the United National Campaign say that any ordinary church, standing in city or country, is a continuing miracle. Its organization, from a business viewpoint, is merely absurd. There is a general manager, called a minister, who is paid, perhaps, $1500 a year to supervise the "plant" and inspire the staff. All other workers are volunteers. A group of men and women give Sunday afternoons and a good many evenings to teach the children the principles of Christianity. There are half a dozen societies or guilds, all staffed by volunteers, who "carry on" despite the little annoyances which arise in all human associations.

Critical persons declare that social pleasure attracts the members. Growlers have said that the Young People's Society is a mere courting school. The criticisms are unjust. Social clubs are established every year outside the church. In these organizations the occasion for social pleasure and even for "courting" is constant. Yet such clubs die. The members grow tired. Someone yawns at the anneal meeting and the landlord gets the key back. The church continues.

All over Canada one finds Anglican churches, Baptist churches, Congregational, Methodist or Presbyterian churches, which exist year after year, always manned by volunteers, always doing good and effective work for the welfare of the community and the nation. They have a corporate spirit. All the churches of any one denomination determine to support missionaries overseas, or to send teachers to the pagans living in Canada. Despite the fact that the only resources of these churches come from the voluntary gifts of the people, the leaders, with magnificent faith, make contracts with individuals for a life-term of service and guarantee to pay them certain sums annually.

What business man could carry on a secular organisation of any sort on such a basis? The meanest club down town has an entrance fee and an annual membership fee. The finance committee knows what money will be available to meet current necessities. But the managers of a church stand at the beginning of the year in thick darkness. They buy coal. They make contracts of various sorts. They undertake to pay a rector, perhaps also a curate or a deaconess. They have no guarantee that the people will provide the necessary money. Their only hold—mathematically speaking—is the theory of probability and doubt.

The men who say that the Church is a super-human organization are speaking by the book, but they might speak by experience as well. It is unique among the societies of men.

COST OF GOVERNMENT OPERATION.

(New York Herald.)

ACCORDING to the report of the Bureau of Railway Economics the Government deficit from railroad operation during November was $44,560,000. The Government's net loss in the operation of railways since December, 1917, has thus far amounted to approximately $548,000,000. The loss for the year 1919 was more than $331,000,000.

Despite these figures, promoters of the Plumb plan, members of the four railway brotherhoods and leaders of other labor organisations are urging a program of continued government operation on the theory that such operation has not received a fair and adequate test. However, to all these appeals the President has turned a deaf ear and announced that the roads will be turned back to their owners on March 1.

In the meantime the members of the Senate and House Conference Committee are struggling to harmonise their differences. An agreement has been reached to give the Interstate Commerce Commission supreme authority in fixing interstae rates, with power to suspend and annul rate orders of State commissions when interfering with interstate commerce. This agreement more definitely establishes the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission and would remove conflicts as to State and interstate tariffs raised in many cases brought before the United States Supreme Court.

The stumbling blocks in the Conference Committee will be the Senate creation of a new transportation board, the anti-strike provision in the Senate bill, and the radically different methods of adjusting disagreements between employers and employes. While it is hoped that all these differences may be ironed out before March 1, it is useless to conceal the fact that a stormy time is ahead before the end of the road is reached.

WHAT EVERY CITY STANDS IN NEED OF

The Athenian Oath.

We will never bring disgrace on this, our city, by an act of dishonesty or cowardice.

We will fight for the ideals and Sacred Things of the City, both alone and with many.

We will revere and obey the City's laws, and we will do our best to incite a like reverence and respect in those above us who are prone to annul them or set them at naught. We will strive increasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty.

Thus in all these ways we will transmit this city, not only not less, but greater, better, and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us.

An Ideal City.

A city, sanitary, convenient, substantial;

Where the houses of the rich and the poor are alike comfortable and beautiful.

Where the streets are clean and the sky line is clear as country air; Where the architectural excellence of its buildings adds beauty and dignity to its streets;

Where parks and playgrounds are within reach of every child;

Where living is pleasant, toil honorable, and recreation plentiful;

Where capital is respected, but not worshipped;

Where commerce in goods is great, but no greater than the interchange of ideas;

Where industry thrives and brings prosperity alike to employer and employed;

Where education and art have a place in every home;

Where worth and not wealth give standing to men;

Where the power of character lifts men to leadership;

Where interest in public affairs is a test of citizenship and devotion to the public weal is a badge of honor;

Where government is always honest and efficient and the principles of democracy find their fullest and truest expression;

Where the people of all the earth can come and be blended into one community life, and where each generation will vie with the past to transmit to the next a city greater, better and more beautiful than the last.

NEW NATIONAL POLICY OF FARMERS

Winnipeg, Jan. 8.—The conference of representatives of Farmers' organizations in the Prairie Provinces and the East, called to complete plans for action in Federal politics, concluded its business by deciding that the organizations should continue on provincial lines, the different units being united on the new National Policy.

Appeal to All Classes.

This policy, as set out in the resolution adopted, appeals for support to all classes in the community who believe in the principles it lays down. The conference did not discuss the question of action in provincial political affairs. Neither was the subject of alliance with Labor broached further than the call to all parties believing in it to aid the success of the new National Policy.

The following final resolution embraced the result of the full deliberations:

"Whereas the cause of better government in Canada has been ever a principal consideration in the work and aspiration of the organized Farmers' movement in all the provinces of the Dominion:

"And whereas, this clause has been the dominating feature of our work as organized Farmers during the past twelve months:

"And whereas, the need of continued action to bring into effect the reforms recommended in the Farmers' platform, which has been promulgated by the Canadian Council of Agriculture, is most urgent, considered from the broadest national point of view;

"And whereas, this platform, which has been described as a new National Policy for Canada, is based upon the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number of people living in the Dominion, without regard to race, creed or occupation; and is in no sense a demand for special legislation to benefit the few at the expense of the many;

Elect Federal Representatives.

"Therefore, be it resolved that we, the members of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, in conference with the accredited delegates of the Federal electoral districts of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and the representatives of the rural districts of Ontario, here assembled in the city of Winnipeg on this 6th day of January, 1920, do declare our intention of electing as many representatives as possible to the House of Commons at the next general electon who will endeavor to bring the Farmers' platform into effect; and to this end invite the support and assistance of all citizens who believe in the principles ennunciated in this platform.

"Whereas, the political platform advocated by the organized Farmers is in no sense a vocational class platform;

"And whereas, it is the hope of those advocating this platform that those of all classes who believe in the principles enunciated in it will support candidates at the next Federal election who will have been pledged to its support;

"Therefore, be it resolved that this platform shall be known in future as the new National Policy."

WIT AND WISDOM

Hard Words For an Egg.

"When I rose to speak," related a martyred candidate, "some one threw a base, cowardly egg at me. It struck me on the chest."

"And what is a base, cowardly egg?" asked a fresh young man.

"A base, cowardly egg," explained the statesman, "is one that hits you and runs."

Acquaintances Cultivated.

"They met at a lawn party. Appropriate, wasn't it, seeing she was a grass widow?"

"Yes, and he such a rake."

Self-sacrifice.

Parent—Of course, as my daughter is of age she can suit herself as to marrying you, but the day she does I shall cut her off without a cent.

Suitor—In that case, it's all off. I could not think of depriving a young lady of her inheritance.

Dreadful.

An Irishman brought an action against a neighbor for threatening to murder him.

"What particular form did the threat take?"

"Begorra, yer worship," said the complainant, "she threatened to whitewash the yard with me blood."

A Love That Failed.

Housewife — "If you love work, why don't you find it?"

Tramp (sadly)—"Alas, lady, love is blind."

The next New York Legislature is expected to increas the salaries of twenty thousand State employes by $4,900,000 a year. The present payroll is $27,000,000.

Similar petitions on behalf of nine men now awaiting trial for either seditious conspiracy or publishing seditious fords in connection with last summer's sympathetic strike wil be circulated.

INCREASE TO PRINTERS

New Schedule is Accepted in Halifax Establishments.

Halifax, Jan. 8.— James Drury, of Montreal, representing the International Typographical Union, anounces a new contract and wage agreement between the publishers of five daily newspapers in Halifax and ten printing establishments. The minimum day wage is $30 and nights $35. The old scale was $25 and $27.

Mainly About People

The recent death, at the age of seventy-seven, of the Countess Magri, long known as Mrs. Tom Thumb, called out interesting newspaper articles, from one of which we quote the following paragraphs:—"Her parents were of large stature, and, with two exceptions, their children were of normal size. These two were Lavinia Warren (her right name) and her sister Minnie, who was even smaller than Lavinia and died thirty-five years ago. At her birth she (Lavinia) was of average size, weighing six pounds. She grew very slowly until she was nine years old and was thirty-two inches high and weighed twenty-nine pounds, when she stopped growing altogether. Lavinia's first appearance in public was at the age of seventeen years, under the management of a cousin who operated a "floating palace of curiosities" on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers before the war. In 1862 she met P. T. Barnum and her long public career began, which occupied over fifty years, her last appearance having been at Luna Park, Coney Island, in the Lilliputian Village, a few years ago, where she lived one summer with her husband, Count Magri. A gray-haired, lovable old lady who charmed the younger generation with her pleasant manners and her soft, sweet voice, and brought back memories of their youth to the older generation who attended her receptions and listened to her tales of travel. While Lavinia and her sister Minnie were traveling with Barnum she met General Tom Thumb and they were married and lived many years together. He died thirty years ago, and a number of years ago she married Count Magri, of Italy, also a dwarf, who became a naturalzed American citizen before his marriage."

HON. MACKENZIE KING OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

MAKES FRESH ATTEMPT TO REORGANIZE OLD LIBERAL PARTY FOR FEDERAL ELECTION

Newmarket, Jan. 7;—To North York, where, in 1917, he went down to defeat as a Laurier anti-conscriptionist, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King came to-night to prepare the way for a fresh attempt when the people are again called upon for their verdict in a general election. The new leader of Liberalism in Canada was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the North York Liberal Association. The diners were fairly representative of North York Liberals, but there was a noticeable absence of outsiders. Just two Ontario Liberal M. P.'s—Pedley of South Renfrew, and W. D. Euler, of North Waterloo, were present, and though the new leader was making his first public appearance in Ontario, neither H. Hartley Dewart, K. C., the Provincial leader, nor any of his supporters, put in an appearance.

Following the banquet Hon. Mr. King spoke to an audience of perhaps three hundred men and women, but the two-hour oratorical effort with which he favored them was intended for far wider consumption. It was an extended survey of the political situation, of the Liberal platform and of the problems and tasks facing Liberalism in the immediate future. The Liberal leader started with the war, and the problems that have come in its train. The solution of these problems was the real task ahead of Liberalism. It was a task that called for tolerance and for understanding—understanding, for instance, of the course taken by Unionist-Liberals in 1917 and appreciation of their sincerity. Mr. King, who was defeated in 1917 by the votes of North York Liberals who could not accept his opposition to the Military Service Act, made it clear that he held no ill-will toward these men—he was willing to let by-gones be by-gones.

Party System Best

Making all due allowances for the unsatisfactory conditions that had given birth to class political movements in Canada, the Liberal leader was not prepared to admit that they were entitled to be classed with "the grand old Liberal party." The party system was hallowed by tradition and tried by generations of British Governments.

MEN WHO KISS.

Custom Still Exists Among Gallant French.

The kiss, which appears constantly in Semitic and Aryan antiquity, as in the Book of Genesis, "The Odyssey," and in Herodotus' description of the Persians of his time kissing one another, and which is still prevailing even among men in France and the Slavic countries seem to be unknown over half the world, where the prevailing salute is that of snuffing or smelling, which belongs to the Polynesians, Malays, Burmese and other Chinese, Mongols, etc., extending thence eastward to the Eskimo and westward to Lapland, where Lynnaeus saw relatives saluting by putting their noses together.

Among the manners and customs of the French allies in France, which most Canadian soldiers "over there" saw for the first time, nothing probably seemed stranger to them than the practice of kissing among the men. The poilus thus greet and take leave of one another as regularly as do school girls on this side of the seas. But—each nation to its own habit—for salutations vary the world around according to taste and temperament and the different peoples, and in the same people according to the degree of respect designed to be shown to the person addressed.

As for the custom of kissing men on both cheeks, that has come down from the days when young French noblemen, about to be knighted for some valiant deed, spent twenty-four hours in solitude and prayer and then came forth, knelt down, received the stroke of the sword across their backs and were kissed by the knight who was conferring knighthood. Napoleon, when he formed the Legion of Honor, eliminated many of the old customs, keeping the touch of the sword and the kiss. To-day his is the formula repeated when the British or French soldier is being decorated with the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

"In the name of the President of the republic, and in virtue of the power he has, I make you chevalier officer, commandant, or as the grade may be, of the Legion of Honor."

A Clever Baboon.

An almost incredible instance of the human-like ways of a baboon is recorded in an interesting volume, "The Natural History of South Africa." Jack was a baboon who for nine years previous to 1890, when he died of tuberculosis, served as understudy to a legless pointsman and signalman on the Graff Reinet line called Wide, wheeled him in a lorry to and from his work, assisted him in his garden and in his household operations, and for years worked the levers at the signal station, without error or accident. "A gentleman told me how he watched Jack adjusting the trolley on the rails in front of his master's cottage. This job completed he went into the cottage for Wide's walking-stick, which had been forgotten, and on emerging he carefully locked the door and handed both key and stick to his master, who was sitting on the trolley."

Diplomatic Immunities.

Ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary for foreign powers are in the main free from the local jurisdiction. The members of their official suites have similar immunities. Ambassadors, etc., cannot be arrested unless they are actually engaged in plotting against the security of the state to which they are accredited, but they cannot be tried and punished by the offended state. The law of the United States prohibits the service of writs upon the resident ministers of foreign states. In Great Britain, not only are the persons of diplomatic ministers inviolable, but all writs and processes, whereby their goods and chattels may be distrained, seized or attached, are "utterly null and void."

GOAT MEAT GOOD AS MUTTON

It Is Said Only Experts Are Able to Tell the Difference Between the Two.

There is a growing disposition to give the goat his due. Heretofore this rubbish-eating animal has been regarded pretty much as a joke, but he has continued to eat tin cans and thrive until now his race has acquired census-listing proportions and a market has been established in a middle-western city where surplus goats will be converted into "spring lamb" for the benefit of our non-vegetarians. As an addition to the poor man's meat perhaps the goat will be welcome, especially if his advent tends to lower the present high prices.

Goat meat tastes much the same as mutton, it is claimed, and that the difference cannot be told save by an expert. Perhaps that is just as well. Our imagination has much to do with our taste. Many people are eating horse meat in this country under the impression that it is beef, for horses are slaughtered, but almost nowhere is their meat exposed for sale under its true name. No doubt the easiest way for us to get used to goat meat is to camouflage it as mutton. It is another case of ignorance being bliss.

But, as we are assured by the experts that it is wholesome, a name will not make much difference in the end. Mutton, the world over, has been the poor man's meat. If goat meat can add to the supply, so much the better. The meat of goats was a favorite in the days of the patriarchs, it is still highly prized in the East. There seems to be no reason why it should not ultimately hold a respectable place on our menus.

SHE UTTERED NO CRITICISM

But Many Will See Deep Significance In That Kiss Bestowed by Minister's Wife.

Now, everyone knows that the minister's wife must not say harsh things about anyone, no matter how she thinks. Also that though she be forced to listen to criticism she herself must not give any. The other evening an Indianapolis parsonage woman was sitting on her front porch, when one of the young girls of her husband's congregation came to call. Hardly had she settled herself comfortably before the young miss began to condemn vigorously a very parsimonious member of the church.

"He wouldn't give a cent to recarpeting the parsonage," stormed the visitor, "yet he had plenty of money to buy himself a new seven-passenger touring car. I just hope that every time he starts out in it he'll have a puncture."

The minister's wife had only that morning spent three hard hours mending the old carpet. She didn't say a word of reproof—merely looked at the young girl a minute and then went across the veranda and kissed her cheek.—Indianapolis News.

Ticklish Bit of Tunneling.

A very interesting bit of tunneling was recently done on the Fourteenth street tube under the East river, New York. The heading was being run in rock and at one point test holes showed a thickness of only eight inches of sound dry rock above the line along which the top of the tunnel was to run. As the tunnel was being driven without the use of compressed air it was decided to drop the upper heading four feet until this thin cover of rock was passed. The cast iron lining was set in place at each side of this section and then the rock was removed very carefully by using a great many holes each loaded with about one-eighth of a stick of dynamite. As each bit of rock was removed the arch of the tunnel lining was set in place. By this means the dangerous section was tunneled without breaking through the thin shell.—Scientific American.

Longevity.

Extreme longevity has its drawbacks. An English paper reminds us of this fact by quoting the story of Janos Mergesai, a Hungarian, who at the age of eighty-four was arrested for attempting suicide by jumping off a bridge at Budapest into the Danube. This, however, was not the case of extreme longevity referred to: Janos, in explanation of his attempt to end his life, declared that he was the sole support of his father and mother, and that the burden of caring for them was becoming too great for him. They were aged 115 and 110 respectively, he stated! The story goes that the statement proved to be true, and that a public subscription for the three was started, which placed them above want.

Gaza "Pot of the Desert"

CHURCHMEN and archaelogists alike were shocked at recent despatches which tell more fully how Gaza, Palestine, was shell riddled and half destroyed, like a war-ravaged city of France, by the fierce fighting which restored the Holy Land to Christian dominion.

Deep as may be the regret that present day Gaza has been injured, yet there is no indication that the Gaza, which once was the Liverpool of Philistina, and later the St. Louis of Palestine, has been damaged.

Modern Gaza is set upon a hill some 100 feet above the surrounding sand dunes and verdant garden spots. It is the hill, and not the present city, which has yielded some of the richest treasures of recent Assyrian study.

The fortunes of geography laid Gaza open to the misfortunes of war. Not only was the ancient city the focus of all the sea roads of the days when the Mediterranean encompassed the civilized world commerce, but it was nicknamed "the port of the desert." It was on the edge of a sea of sand, depot of the freight-laden caravans, between Egypt, Babylonia and Arabia; provisioning point, too, for the Bedouins, Capt. Kidds of the rolling desert.

Gaza, in 1914, had about 40,000 people, considerably fewer than it had 2,000 years ago, but the number represented a rapid growth for an eastern village of 2,000 in 1840, and had but 15,000 a half century ago.

Its site has been hallowed by the passing of nearly 4,000 years of recorded history, and while the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza may have secured a considerable journey to Philip, Gaza is but a little further to the southwest of Jerusalem than Washington is from Baltimore.

To-day the city is three miles removed from the sea, and for a long time it was thought that after its destruction by Alexander Jannaeus, a Jewish Richard II. of a century before Christ's time, it had been rebuilt at a new site. Researches show it to be more probable that the ancient Damascus of the south extended from the site of the modern city to the sea. No Arnold Bennett lived to make the life of the "five towns," a Philistina league of cities that included Gaza, vivid to future generations of readers, but Herodotus, the Greek Macauley, acclaimed it equal to Sardis.

Residents in Gaza will show the visitor Samson's tomb. The tradition of his burial there is unfounded, but there is more reason for believing that a bare, isolated knoll to the south of the city, is the hill "before Hebron" to which the strong man carried the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts.

So important was Gaza during the second millenium before Christ that it then served as a barometer of world history. The nation that dominated the restricted "world" of that time held Gaza. Consequently Tholmes III. reached out for it at about the same date, B. C., that Columbus discovered America, A. D.

As Egypt passed the apex of her glory, a sturdy people with a higher material culture but none of the moral grandeur of Israel widened their sphere of influence, and for a time Gaza became conspicuous in Philistine history. It was in Samson's time that a sort of guerilla warfare between the Israelites and the Philistines began, such as that examplified when he tied the firebrand to the foxes' tails and sent them scurrying, like modern Zeppelins among the grain fields and vineyards of the enemy.

The city was under Hezekiah, of Judah, for only a brief time, if at all. With the rise of the Assyrian kingdom attempts were made to subdue Gaza which, for a short time, were resisted, but by the seventh century, B. C., it had become a vassal of that early war lord and art patron, Assurbanipal, and also is mentioned in the reign of Tiglath Pilsner III, who bolstered his autocracy by a bureaucratic system and deported conquered peoples as he spread Assyrian "Kultur" by the sword.

Gaza's strategic military position is well illustrated by its resistance for five months to Alexander the Great. After it was razed by Jannaeus it was more than a century before it was rebuilt, and by the second century, A. D., it had become a Greek city of high rank. It was a stronghold of Neoplatonism, the last of the pagan philosophies to give way before Christianity.

The Minimum Wage.

It is said that in Italy the workers are giving two hours of their time as a free gift to the state. They realize that increased production means ultimately increased wealth. In Germany there are signs of the same spirit among the colliers. But in old England the following story admirably illustrates the industrial situation: Two miners were discussing the minimum wage. "Say, Bill," said the first; "What's this 'ere minimum wage." Bill spat. "The minimum wage! That's what we gets for goin' down; an' if we wants ter make any more brass, we goes and does some work for it."

A Colored Juryman.

In court, a few days ago, a colored gentleman was being questioned for the purpose of ascertaining his fitness for jury service. "I cain't serve on dis jury, judge—no, suh," said Clarence Green. "Why not, Clarence?" "Well, suh, my mind's made up—yes, suh—" "Is that so, Clarence? Since when has your mind been made up?" "Well, suh, judge, you might say ever since the incipiency of my information, suh, yes, suh."

A GREAT OCEAN RIVER

THE GREATEST OF ALL TERRESTRIAL PHENOMENA.

Many Theories Have Been Advanced Regarding the Cause of This Great Ocean Current Which Does So Much Towards Tempering the Climate of Many Countries—Named by Benjamin Franklin.

THE Gulf Stream is probably the grandest and most mighty of any terrestrial phenomena. Its waters are characterized by a deep indigo blue color of great clearness and high temperature. It can be penetrated by the eye to considerable depth, and generally its meeting with the less saline polar waters can be at once distinguished.

It is difficult for the mind to grasp the immensity of this great ocean river. The Straits of Florida at its narrowest point is about forty miles wide. A calculation of the average volume of water passing in one hour gives the enormous sum of ninety billion tons.

The theories as to the cause of ocean currents have been many.

Franklin's theory, which has many advocates at the present day, was that the winds produce the current by the air moving over the surface of the water, and he illustrated this theory by the following: "It is known that a large piece of water, 10 miles broad and generally only three feet deep, has by a strong wind had its water driven to one side, and sustained so as to become six feet deep, while the windward side was laid dry." As will be seen later, this is a well-taken example of the force of the wind in causing the Gulf Stream, but it does not quite show the whole of the truth.

In the tropical regions there is a steady movement of the air from east to west, known as the trade winds. South of a certain line situated near the equator these winds flow from a southwesterly direction, while north of the equator they come from a more northeasterly direction. The winds are not always strong, nor are they constant in direction, but they do not vary much, and then only for brief periods.

Winds blowing over the surface of the water induce a current in the latter due to friction. At first it is only the merest skim that moves, but gradually the motion is communicated from layer to layer until at last, if the wind is long continued, as in the trade wind region, the movement extends to lower depths, 300 or 400 feet, or perhaps more.

These trade wind currents meet finally, the partial barrier of the islands forming the eastern part of the Caribbean, and a portion of the flow escapes through the passages between them. From here it continues its course across that sea until it reaches the obstruction of the Honduras and Yucatan coasts, from which it escapes by the easiest route, which is into the Gulf of Mexico.

It has been found, however, that the water entering the Caribbean by this means is not more than one-half of the amount which flows through the Straits of Florida from the Gulf of Mexico, and the other half is supplied from a source which does not come under the head of a measurable current. The other source is the wave caused by the wind. Every ripple carries a certain amount of water in the direction toward which it is flowing, irrespective of the current caused by its friction, and when the waves become large, tons of water are hurled from the crest into the trough every time the wave breaks.

When one is on board a vessel, floating upon its waters, one is not as much impressed at the power and grandeur of this wonder of nature as he is when he stands before a towering mountain, an immense iceberg, or a fall of water such as Niagara, but when one remembers that the mighty torrent, speeding on hour by hour and day by day, in a volume equal to all the largest rivers in the world combined, carrying its beneficent heat to temper the climate of continents, one begins to realize that of all the forces of the physical world none can equal this one river of the ocean.

Ponce de Leon, while on his famous search for the Fountain of Youth, made the discovery of this great stream. After his failure to find, on the coast of upper Florida, the means of cheating death, he turned to the southward and skirted the shore for hundreds of miles, thus stemming the current.

The name of "Gulf Stream" was first suggested by Benjamin Franklin because it issues from the Gulf of Mexico. While it is only a part of the grand scheme of ocean circulation, and the Gulf of Mexico is in reality only a stopping place, as it were, for its waters, this name is generally applied to the current now as it was given by Franklin—that is, the current coming from the Gulf of Mexico and spreading abroad over the North Atlantic.

In a large area like the Caribbean, having a comparatively constant wind blowing over its whole surface, this action is practically a simultaneous movement of its surface waters to the westward and a continual escape of the water heaped up at the obstruction offered by the land into the Gulf of Mexico, through the Straits of Florida, and into the Atlantic.

The Gulf Stream would be little felt on the coast of Europe did it not receive a great addition to its volume of heat when en route. This is by means of a gentle flow from the northeast trade wind current that passes outside the Caribbean Islands and the Bahamas. The surface temperature of this outside current is [illegible] the same in its passage along the West Indies islands as the Gulf Stream in the Straits of Florida, but it is less violent in its movements, and there is less intermingling of its upper and lower waters, so that it arrives off Cape Hatteras with a much higher temperature than that of the more turbulent Gulf Stream.

WAR AFFECTS ROAD BUILDING.

Nations Take Increased Interest in Their Highways.

One of the most noticeable effects of the world war upon the nations of the world has been a marked attention to and improvement of the roads. A great South American newspaper, the Mercurio of Chile, in pointing out the United States as a model nation in this respect, informs its readers that no less than $550,000,000 will be spent for purposes of road improvement and related work by that country during the next two years, says the writer of an article in the Christian Science Monitor.

Japan is at present investigating the American road system and methods, and is intending to invest appreciable sums in applying the lessons learned. An association of the most prominent Japanese men of affairs is being formed for the express purpose of extending improvements to every corner of the islands. China, too, is said to have awakened to the fact that her bad roads are a hindrance to progress, and has likewise named a commission to go to the United States and study the matter at first hand. The intention, as reported, is to make use of China's huge army for the purpose of laying down first-class highways.

Similar activity is reported from the leading countries of South America as well as from South Africa and Australia. Large sums have been laid aside for the purpose. Of course, the immediate impulse has come from the great part played by roads in the waging of such a war as the world has just come through; but the application to purposes of peace is no less evident. The effect of the good roads, especially in smaller nations is felt in the most divers ways. The farmer, for example, with plenty of good roads at his disposal, may himself transport his produce to market, without having to depend upon outside assistance; the lack of railroads is partly compensated for, making possible the employing of automobile trucks.

The Appian Way, together with famous military highways long ago built in France and Great Britain still stand as an example of what may be accomplished for permanent use. It is said that Napoleon I. was defeated by the bad roads, which prevented him from moving his reserves with the requisite speed. The French, however, surely must have learned their lesson well, for it was just the contrary state of affairs that saved Verdun and made possible the defence of the Somme and Chateau Thierry.

The Food Problem.

Once upon a time this problem of food was a very simple matter. Three times a day, as a rule, the attention of man was drawn to a hollow feeling located due east of the lower end of the vertebral column. This vacancy he proceeded to fill with a slab of bread, a chunk of beef, a pot of rice, etc., flavored, as a rule, with butter, grease, jam, garlic, etc., according to race, religion, climate, age, etc. This settled the problem till the next call from the Far East. It pains us to say that this was living to eat and not eating to live. It showed no adjustment of means to end. It was a system of food that made no distinctions between a longshoreman and a free verse poet. It was internal anarchy. Happily the truth has been realised. The consumption of food is no longer destructive but constructive. Man no longer eats corn beef and cabbage, but the vitamins in the beef and the polyzeugmatics in the cabbage. When he picks up the bill of fare, he no longer says, "What will most speedily and cheaply allay the unrest in my Far East?" but he says, "Where can I find the 12,500 carbonuxates that will give me the right outlook on the League of Nations?" And he finds it in unpolished rice. Or he says to himself, "I am now at work on the fourth act of my poetic drama; to make it convincing to Belasco I must absorb 3,200 permaganazoids daily for the next thirty days." So he shaves the kernels off the corn and eats the cob. Perhaps with cocoanut butter, for the added colloidal saxaphoniams. This very midnight in our great city a couple of army corps of teething infants will be lulled to rest with 23,175 pneumadactylines warmed up in a bottle.

Fish That Cannot Swim.

It sounds strange to say that there are fish which cannot swim! Yet it is a fact.

A Brazilian fish called the maltha is one of these species of fish. It can only crawl or walk or hop. It has a long, upturned snout, and resembles, to an extent, a toad. The anterior fins of the maltha are quite small, and are not able to act on the water. They only move backward and forward, and are, in reality, thin paws, which are of no service for swimming, as are the fins of other fishes.

A TREACHEROUS SPY.

Hun Saved His Life by Betraying Comrades.

Joseph Marks was deported to Germany during the last week of November, after having saved his life by confession that he was a German spy and by turning state's evidence, thus clinching the Government's case against his associates Karl Lody and Lieut. Bushmann both of whom were executed in the Tower of London. A weeping woman was at the Charing Cross station to see him off by the continental express.

Marks has been in England since the early days of the war. He landed at a southeastern port with an album of foreign stamps, constituting a code by which he was to keep the German Admiralty informed of the movements of the British fleets and coast patrols. At no time did he make secret of his identity or deny that he was German-born. Scotland Yard suspected him and kept him under close surveillance, finally arresting him. Under searching examination by Sir Basil Thomson, Director of the British Secret Service, he broke down and confessed his mission.

He said it was the policy of the German Intelligence Department to make use of any tool to further their plans. The department had even sent adventurous women to the capitals of Europe in order to lure men possessing official information and wheedle it from them. Marks was tried by court-martial in Middlesex Guildhall. Owing to his confession he was sentenced to penal servitude for an indefinite term, rather than to execution. He had been arrested in Tilbury by Scotland Yard detectives.

Speaking with a reporter at the railway station of his jail and other experiences, he said:

"Bushman and I were tried by the same court, and kept in Wandsworth jail, where we had long walks together. The night before his execution we had a farewell chat, in which he related to me the romantic circumstances of his courtship and marriage with the daughter of a Prussian millionaire.

"The next morning he went to execution with a smile on his face and came to salute as he stood before the firing squad that was to send him to his doom. I talked with several of the German spies who were shot. Everyone of them met his death like a brave soldier."

Marks said he came of a well-known family in Aix-la-Chapelle. In the very beginning of the war the Germans suspected him of espionage and arrested him three times. Then they became convinced that he could be useful to them as a spy, and they sent him to England.

Exportation of print paper would be prohibited for one year by a bill introduced at Washington.

GIRL OF SAME NAME RECIEVES PRESENTS

PECULIAR INSTANCE OF RECEIVING WEDDING GIFTS WITHOUT CAUSE

St. Thomas, Jan. 8.—That it proves extremely profitable, and also extremely embarrassing at times, to possess a name similar to some other person, was evidenced in this city this week when Miss Pearl Sheppard, a resident of Forest avenue, was the recipient of a veritable deluge of wedding presents, letters of congratulations and telephone calls.

The young lady was inclined to think that she was the victim of a wonderful dream or that a large portion of the city had been affected with insanity, until she learned that there was another Miss Pearl Sheppard dwelling on Forest avenue until a few days ago, when she became a Mrs. Chapman and moved to Windsor. The gifts have all been forwarded to that address, with explanations.

Edward T. Daley was sentenced to five years at Burlington, Vt., for having caused the death of a young woman by striking her with his auto.

FOX CARCASSES ARE RECOVERED

FOUND IN YARD AT NORTH END OF CITY THIS MORNING

NO TRACE OF SKINS YET

WORK WAS ACCOMPLISHED BY EXPERTS AT THE BUSINESS

The fox hunt for the two animals stolen from Mr. Brooks, proprietor of the South Beach Hotel, resulted this morning in the recovery of two frozen carcasses minus their skins. The find was made in a yard at the north end of the city this morning.

One of the foxes, a silver grey male fox with stripes of red on its shoulders, is valued at about $300, while the other, an ordinary red fox, was worth in the neighborhood of $150.

The thieves, whoever they may be, knew their business perfectly and made an excellent job. No marks appear on the carcasses and the skin has been removed by an expert at the business.

It is impossible to ascertain accurately the method that was adopted in making the capture, but it is thought by the police that the foxes were killed on the scene of their capture. The possible manner is that a bag was placed over the head of the animals and when they entered it they were probably rapped on the head with some weapon. Then the chains were cut and the party made off with their booty. These with the collars were also recovered by the police this morning.

Word has been sent around to the various municipalities and a thorough search will be made for the missing skins.

About Olive Oil.

In Spain there are 3,853,283 acres planted with olive trees. Of their product about 97 per cent. is for oil. The yield of olive oil varies widely from year to year; in 1911 it was 421,782 metric tons; in 1912 it was 63,001 tons; in 1917, 427,836 tons; in 1918, 255,202 tons. In odd years one yield is normally greater than in even years.

Though there are oil mills, the greater part of the oil is pressed by the producers. After pressing, the pulp, called orujo, is sold to the sulphur-oil factories, the product of which is used in making soap. The residue is a brown, flaky charcoal-like substance used as fuel. This generates high heat.

The quality of oil depends upon the acid content. Oil with less than half of one per cent. of acid brings the highest price, but anything up to three per cent. is considered edible.

It is contrary to law to mix olive oil with any other oil in Spain, but of course this does not prevent its adulteration in other countries. In the first five months of 1919 edible olive oil to the value of $3,153,214 was exported to the United States from Malaga.

AVIATORS MUST DO "STUNTS"

Feats That Seem Foolhardy Really Are Most Necessary in the Training of Airmen.

Before the war there was, says Edwin Bidwell Wilson in the Yale Review, much criticism of professional exhibiting aviators who, to thrill spectators, put their machines into all sorts of dare-devil attitudes and frequently themselves came suddenly down to death. In fighting, the ability to do all manner of "stunts" is essential. The more completely a pilot can control his machine, the more easily he can toss it hither and thither—cutting figure-eights, looping the loop, nose diving and tail diving—the better chance he has for his own life and the more certain he is to get his opponent. Sad as are the continual reports of death by accident at our aviation training camps, we may rest assured that for an untrained pilot to go overseas to the front is almost certainly fatal, and that for every life lost in training, many are saved in fighting. Fortunately airplanes today are so much stronger structurally and so much better equipped and controlled than before the war, that this necessary "stunting" in school and on the field is no longer really dangerous—the real danger now lies in physical inability to "stunt." Not only must the pilot of the single-seated fighting scout be thoroughly expert on the wing, he also must be a crack shot with his machine gun. Small wonder that it takes months and months to train an aviator who may develop into an ace.

HAS GOOD WORD FOR CROW

Australian Writer Points Out Occasions When Bird Becomes a Real Benefactor to Mankind.

There are those who say that the crow deserves no mercy. There is no other pest eradicator, imported or otherwise, doing its bit so patriotically as the self-same crow. In Bananaland, Australia, says the Sydney Bulletin, the ravages of the sheep-maggot fly must make a loss of hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of jumbuck every year, about the only difference in one season being that the damage is probably greater than the last. Were it not for the bird whom no one has a good word for, the fly pest would soon duplicate itself with losses to sheep-owners increased accordingly. Every dead sheep or piece of offal in the bush is the depository of the eggs of unimaginable numbers of prospective sheep destroyers. Just about the time that the grubs are the size of a grain of rice, and a few days before they burrow into the soil, where they remain for about 15 days before coming forth, as a developed sheep-maggot fly, Brother Crow spies out the colony. Then he sends the glad tidings by wireless system, and all the family within range hurries to the banquet. When it is over a supply of grubs for the next meal has to be found elsewhere.

New Explosive.

The Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter mentions a new explosive being tested by the government which will save a considerable amount of glycerin. It is called nitrobyronel and is the product of Dr. Byron E. Eldred. It is claimed that it blows a chamber twice the size of that caused by T. N. T. (trinitrotoluol). In the manufacture of nitrobyronel neither nitroglycerin nor toluol is used. It is a hydrocarbon obtained by a by-product in coke-oven processes.

It is estimated that 50,000,000 pounds of glycerin is used in American industrial concerns, and a big saving in this important material, now growing scarce, can be effected through the employment of nitrobyronel.

If a shortage of glycerin should become imminent, the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter believes that the government would promptly start in to manufacture nitrobyronel.

The Least of These.

It is not the support of a nation buying billions of dollars' worth of Liberty bonds, breaking bottles over the sterns of new ships, knitting socks or cheering us in the movies that brings home to us the magnitude of our trust.

It is all fine, but it is all too big for any one man of us to grasp. But we appreciate how great our trust is when we hear that the folks have had two pounds of sugar in six weeks, that the lady next door let her bread burn in the excitement of reading our last letter, and that the lady next door to her is working in an office and keeping the children in school while her husband is over here.—The Stars and Stripes.

Finger-Prints of Families.

There is nothing unreasonable in the theory of Prof. Larson of the University of California, based on investigations begun in 1912 at Boston University, that there is a similarity of finger-prints among members of a family sufficiently marked to enable scientists to trace family groups and determine positively whether a given individual is really a member of the family to which he claims relationship.

Rabbits Supply Fur.

Rabbits, through a great agricultural misfortune to Australia and New Zealand, fetch to those commonwealths a very considerable annual revenue from the sale of their pelts. The latter furnish the bulk of the commercial material for felt hats, and are largely used for fashionable furs.

There is hardly any fur in the market that is not imitated by the skillful preparation of rabbit skins, the art having attained so high a perfection that they are made to counterfeit even seal, otter and ermine.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210280) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

FACTS ABOUT FLAGS.

Some Points of Etiquette Connected With National Emblems.

How many flags do you recognize?

Though the world war has served to familiarize us with flags of some of our allies, the average person's repertoire of flags still does not exceed half a dozen.

Flags are important not only as patriotic and artistic emblems, but many times the histories of nations are symbolized in their flags.

The red and white flag of Monaco floats over the smallest nation on earth. The entire area of the territory, whose symbol of authority it is, is only eight square miles. Although it is the smallest area, there are three smaller in population. It has 23,000 inhabitants, as compared with 5,231 for Andorra, 10,716 for Liechtenstein and 11,513 for San Marino.

Monaco is the smallest principality on the Mediterranean, surrounded by the French department of Alpes-Maritimes, except on the side toward the sea. After 968 A.D., it belonged to the house of Grimaldi. The reigning prince was dispossessed during the French revolution in 1792 and died in 1795. In 1814 the principality was re-established, but placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the treaty of Vienna in 1815. In 1884 the towns of Mentone and Roccabruna (now known as Roquebrune), revolted and declared themselves free. The prince thereupon ceded his rights over them to France and the principality thus became geographically an enclave of France, when the Sardinian garrison was withdrawn and the protectorate established in 1815 ended. The prince was then an absolute ruler until 1911, when a representative government was set up.

San Marino claims to be the oldest state in Europe. Next to Monaco, it is in area the smallest independent country in the world. It has thirty square miles of territory and a population of 11,513. The coat-of-arms consists of three hills of gold upon a field of blue. These hills are Monte Guiato, Monte Cucco and Monte Gista, each bearing a castle surrounded by a plume. The shield has a gold crown as crest and is surrounded by branches of laurel and oak united by a ribbon inscribed with the word "liberty."

The ensign of the republic of San Marino consists of a field, the upper part of which is blue and the lower half white. The coat-of-arms is centered on it.

The blue, yellow and red flag of Andorra, with its coronet in the centre, is the youngest thing in the nation. It is only fifty years old, having originated in the reform of 1866 to emphasize the automony of the valley; but neither of the co-suzerains has approved it. It is displayed when the council is in session.

Cessation of war has not meant the furling of flags. Instead they are in constant evidence, and the proper manner of their display constantly arises, especially on parade days.

While there is no federal law pertaining to the manner of displaying the flag, there are many regulations and usages of national force bearing on the subject, continues the bulletin from the National Geographic Society. The bulletin quotes from a communication to the society setting forth "flag etiquette" as follows:

In raising the flag it should never be rolled up and hoisted to the top of the staff before unfurling. Instead, the fly should be free during the act of hoisting, which should be done quickly. It should be taken in slowly and with dignity. It should not be allowed to touch the ground on shore, or the deck of a ship, nor should it be permitted to trail in the water or in the dust.

The flag should not be festooned over doorways or arches. Do not tie it in a bow knot. Where colors are desired for decorative purposes use red, white and blue bunting.

International usage forbids the display of the flag of one nation above that of any other with which it is at peace.

When the national colors are passing on parade, or in review, the spectators should, if walking, halt; and, if sitting, arise and stand at attention and uncover.

Those Professors.

Two contributions to the stories of the absent-minded professor are found in Karikaturen, of Christiania, Norway: Prof. Petersen is dead. He is duly buried. His brother professors have attended the funeral. At the end of the ceremony the professors take their departure and on the way from the churchyard Prof. X, who had assisted in conducting the services, looks around, and, eying his companions, says: "Where's Petersen? Didn't he come with us?"

And another about a professor. Prof. A. becomes infatuated with a young lady and woos her with great ardor. "But," says the maid, "how can I marry you? You are already married!" "Am I?" says he. "Wait a bit." (Pulls out his note-book.) "Oh, yes. So I am! You are right, my dear!"

THE JEWISH PEOPLE.

Always Believed That They Would Possess Homeland Again.

The Jews are the only race, so far as history records, that have carried with them through centuries of dispersion what they firmly believed to be a divine promise that the homeland of which they had been dispossessed should, at some indefinite period, again come into their possession.

That this long-deferred hope promises ere long to reach its realization is evident from a written statement from Lord Curzon, British Secretary of Foreign Affairs, read the other evening at a mass meeting in New York. "I have great pleasure," read the statement, "to assure you, if such assurance is necessary, and I cannot believe that it should be necessary, that no change has taken place in the policy of British Government in reference to the establishment of a Jewish national homeland in Palestine."

About two years ago, and a year before final victory was assured the allied forces, Arthur J. Balfour, the then Secretary of Foreign Affairs, in a letter to Lord Rothschild, made a similar statement. "The Government," he said, "view with favor the establishment of Palestine as a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object."

When, however, the matter came up before the Peace Conference for adjudication both Syrians and Arabs set up an insistent claim for possession of the original homeland of the Jewish people. Great Britain's championship of the Jewish cause they warmly resented, and as a last resort pleaded for the right of self-determination. The conference, however, decided that Palestine should become a guaranteed state. In other words, that it should become the homeland of the Jewish people. The recent statement of Lord Curzon is, therefore, important, showing as it does that the British Government is insistent on the terms of the Peace Conference being carried to a successful issue.

The territory embraced by this Jewish homeland is 140 miles long and from 70 to 100 miles in width and is practically an isolated oasis, but relatively small, as Palestine is characterized by a wide range of climate, being sub-tropical at the lower Jordan and sub-alpine at the upper part of the famous river. Its principal interest, of course, lies in its religious associations, an interest which is alike shared in by Christians and Mohammedans as well as by Jews. The exports of the country are about $3,000,000 and the imports $4,000,000.

Approximately three thousand years have elapsed since the Jews, by David's capture of Jerusalem, came into full possession of Palestine, while about 1,850 years have passed since, with the destruction of the capital by the Romans, the Jewish nation ceased to exist as a political entity.

According to a statement made public during the first year of the war, the Jew is prepared to colonize the land, to develop it, and to make life there healthy and prosperous on a scale which no other nation is likely to attempt."

It does not follow, however, that for at least a long time to come, Palestine will become, in the true sense of the term, politically independent. In fact, there are few, if any, Jews advocating it. Palestine, in all its history, has seldom been able to stand alone, and now, with its need of large capital expenditures, to say nothing of the divergent races which occupy it, its need of an over-ruling power, such as that of Great Britain, is an absolute necessity. Eighty-six years ago Palestine was ceded to Egypt by the Turkish Government, but seven years later the British Government compelled its restoration to the Sublime Porte. Had this intervention not taken place it is possible that Great Britain's campaign in Palestine during the recent war would not have been a necessity. Neither might that in Mesopotamia.

A recent estimate places the number of Jews in the world at 14,500,000. In Canada there were at the last census 74,564, compared with 14 401 ten years before.

Reading the Old Books.

An old book—if it is a good one—should improve on acquaintance. The better you know it, the more you can get out of it. To know it better you must read it again from time to time.

The books which you will care to read again will be full of character.

Read the old poems again for their music and for a better insight into their meaning. Every day should add something to your emotional experience, and the broader your experience, the more you will get out of the poem. Besides this, you may be able to read it in a new mood and see it in another light—and every poem has a thousand and one lights reflecting from it. That's why most people cannot enjoy reading poetry once.—

Read the old books again!

Combines the Two Essentials of Tea Perfection

There are two prime essentials in the production of this delicious new tea called Lanka.

First, the original tea must be the choicest pickings from the finest varieties grown.

Second, the blending of these choice growths must be done with superlative skill to attain the highest perfection of flavor.

The teas which achieve the Lanka blend are the best the hill gardens of Ceylon can produce.

The result is exquisite flavor, delicious bouquet and the rich sparkling color which proclaims fine tea.

Your grocer can supply you with Lanka Tea. He welcomed its introduction as the opportunity to supply his customers with the best tea the world produces. It comes in the handsome striking package, illustrated in this advertisement. The price is but 75 cents a pound.

Lanka Tea is imported and packed by

AMMONIA NOW USED BY TORONTO BANDITS

INVENTIONS FOR ROBBERY NOW BRING FINANCIAL RESULTS

Toronto, Jan. 8.—Ammonia is now being used by hold-up men; in addition, the first woman is reported with a hold-up gang. Two men dressed as soldiers and a girl took part in the assault and robbery of D. J. Selvage, a taxi driver living at 8 Eileen avenue on Runnymede road, below Bloor street.

Selvage had driven the three to a house on Runnymede. They got out and the girl said "yes, this is it." The words seemed to be a signal. Ammonia from a syringe, which was left in the taxi, was squirted in Selvage's face and he was struck over the head with a "billy." The two soldiers pulled him into the back of the car and beat him until he told where his money, $25, was located.

The three then left to take a civic car towards the city and Selvage was left to recover as best he might. Selvage finally drove to the residence of Mrs. A. R. Perry, 79 Runnymede avenue, and from there to the office of Dr. James Dow, 188 St. John's road.

LONDON TEACHERS ARE AFTER $300 INCREASE

CLAIM THEY ARE FIFTEENTH ON THE LIST OF ONTARIO MUNICIPALITIES

London, Ont., Jan. 8.—Claiming that London is fifteenth among the municipalities of the Province in regard to the rate of salaries paid to pedagogues, the London Teachers' Association stands by its demands made last year, and will ask that the new Board of Education grant an increase to every teacher of $300 this year and an additional $200 for 1921. It is claimed that the St. Thomas School Board has made increases equal to those demanded here. It is also pointed out that the teachers in Cleveland, Ohio, are insisting on an increase in salary which amounts to one hundred per cent.

URBAN TRUSTEES ASSOCIATION MAKE WAR ON ENTRANCE EXAMINATION

Supporters of Present System Receive Few Sympathizers at Ottawa Convention—Desire Lifting of Restrictions on Athletic Expenditure.

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—War on the entrance examinations was declared by the urban school trustees association in its last day of meeting yesterday. Led by Mrs. Ada Courtice, of Toronto, a lively discussion showed that the entrance examination system had few defenders. General applause greeted the assertion that fifty per cent. of the children in Ottawa public schools were moved up into the high school on the advice of the principal based on a knowledge of their assiduity in study, record in classes and general ability.

A resolution moved by Mrs. Courtice and seconded by Mr. C. F. Swayze, of Niagara Falls, was passed unanimously asking the department of Education "to abolish the entrance examination as far as it affects city schoolboards or other boards of education."

Some Resolutions.

Three resolutions arose out of the discussion on the previous day on the value of athletics for pupils, on feeble-minded children and on private schools. The first resolution carried asked the Government to remove the restrictions on the amounts which boards of education may spend on athletics. Another requested the Department of Education to have legislation introduced at the next session of the Legislature requiring urban school boards to establish auxiliary classes when the number of mentally defective children eligible for such classes is not fewer than ten, and that the grant for auxiliary education should be liberal enough to enable boards to establish such classes, and that further aid be given where such classes are already in existence.

The resolution dealing with private schools, asks the Department of Education not to accept the education given in any private school "until the Government has satisfied itself that the instruction given is equivalent to that given in our public schools, according to the grade the pupil may be in." It was also moved by Mr. W. Phillip of Galt, seconded by Mr. F. N. Rutherford of St. Catharines, that "this association recommended the Minister of Education that, when calculating the cost per pupil for any particular year, that the word maintenance shall induce interest on the value of school buildings and sites." Another resolution asked that the Government should make a grant to the association of an amount equal to the fees paid in for membership.

GRAND TIMES AHEAD FOR THE DOMINION

SIR HERBERT HOLT, PRESIDENT ROYAL BANK, PAINTS BRIGHT PICTURE OF FUTURE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 8.—Prophesying a fall in price in the near future, Sir Herbert Holt, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, during the course of his address at the annual meeting of the shareholders, was most optimistic regarding the future of Canada, giving credit for most of the phenomenal progress made in recent years to the early administrators who laid a solid foundation for it, he pointed out that it would be only a matter of time before there would be greater supplies in the world with competition keener than at present and dollars saved today would have a greater purchasing power. For this reason we must strive to produce to the utmost capacity while the market is high, exercising most rigid economy to conserve our gains. In the difficult times ahead, Sir Herbert was of the opinion that the Dominion holds a commanding position owing to the great natural resources which need only the touch of energy and capital.

Military Foot Work.

Many of us feel that feet won the war, says Dr. John B. Huber in Leslie's Weekly. Anyway, "they went a long way" toward winning it. Painful feet are often incorrectly attributed to rheumatism or to fallen arches. And in the former does in many cases lie the reason. And the rheumatism may have for its source some infection focus in the nose or throat, or in a tooth cavity or elsewhere in the body. Also in some cases the fallen arch is to blame. But there are other causes. A military surgeon examined 500 enlisted men and found hardly 30 per cent. of them with really normal feet. Above 70 per cent. were wearing ill-fitting shoes and presented a choice assortment of corns, fissures, bunions, ingrowing nails, hammer toes, overriding toes, crowded, jammed, and shapeless toes. There are those having pes equinus (horse foot); and in 60 per cent. of the men the first toe was crowded out of its natural alignment — hallux valgus (in the high brow), most torturing on the march. Before a march all men with any foot soreness should report for examination, and they should be regularly inspected.

Same Effect.

"There go two intoxicated men. Where do you suppose they got liquor to make them so violent?"

"It isn't liquor; they're arguing about the League of Nations."

TRIP TO SPRINGS WAS A FAILURE

CROSSED CONTINENT SEEKING HEALTH BUT COME HOME DISCOURAGED.

"I really crossed the continent—went from Calgary to Hot Springs, Arkansas, and back—trying to get relief from my troubles but nothing helped me until I took Tanlac," said Mrs. Jessie E. Morgan, wife of a wealthy farm living fifteen miles north of Calgary, Alberta.

"Rheumatism has kept me crippled up for the past three years," she continued. "Not a day or a night passed that I haven't had terrible pains running all through my lower limbs, and at times my feet would swell until I could hardly get a shoe on. I took all sorts of medicines that were recommended for rheumatism, but they tore my stomach up so that I got to the place where I could hardly eat anything without suffering misery for hours afterwards. When my appetite left me and I began to suffer so badly from indigestion, I began to lose weight and get weaker every day. At night I would be so nervous and restless that I couldn't sleep and I couldn't find any relief. I went to Hot Springs, Arkansas, and took the baths there, but came home in as bad a shape as ever. Then I heard Tanlac recommended so highly, and as I had taken nearly everything else I thought I might as well try it too.

"I really took Tanlac hoping that it would straighten out my stomach, but didn't think that it would help the rheumatism too, but it was one of the happiest surprises I ever had when I found that after my stomach began to get better, the rheumatism was relieved. I kept on taking Tanlac and after a five weeks' treatment, I am not bothered anymore by either the indigestion nor the rheumatism. My appetite is wonderful and I can just eat anything I want and digest it. I can tell by the way my clothes fit me that I have gained several pounds in weight and I just feel myself getting stronger every day. My nerves are as steady as a rock, I sleep eight or nine hours every night and I only regret that I didn't know of Tanlac sooner, as it would have saved me a whole world of suffering and misery."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

NO SUPERINTENDENT FOR HON. R. H. GRANT

NOT ADVISABLE FOR NEW GOVERNMENT TO CREATE ABOLISHED POSITION

Toronto, Jan. 8.—"I have no intention of having a superintendent of education in Ontario." This was the emphatic statement yesterday afternoon of Hon. R. H. Grant, Minister of Education, when questioned with regard to the story eminating from Ottawa to the effect that Dr. George H. Locke, chief librarian in Toronto, would probably be appointed to that position.

"The position of superintendent of education was done away with at the last session of the legislature on the recommendation of Hon. Dr. Cody, and in consequence it would be a rather strange procedure for a Government pledged to economy to create an office which its predecessors had abolished. The salaries paid in the civil service are not sufficiently large to encourage a man to leave the position of chief librarian," he added.

ALD. J. BONE IS PRESIDENT.

Belleville Official Rewarded for His Faithful and Useful Service.

Belleville, Jan. 8.—Ald. J. Bone has been elected president of the new chamber of commerce by the board of directors. This position was tendered Mr. Bone because of the splendid service he has given to the board of commerce movement. Lt.-Col. W. Marsh and W. R. McReary were elected vice-presidents, and Mr. J. G. Moffatt treasurer. Mr. W. P. Shatts will act as temporary secretary until a permanent appointment is made.

DEMANDS OF TEACHERS APPROVED

Labor Backs up Calgary Teachers in Their Appeal for $1,300 Minimum.

Calgary, Alta, Jan. 8.—The question of a minimum wage of $1,200 for school teachers, as demanded by the Alberta Teachers' Alliance, formed one of the principal discussions on Wednesday morning at the convention of the Alberta Trades and Labor Congress. The demand received the approval of the convention.

TAX COLLECTION RECORD.

Kingston, Jan. 8.—Kingston probably holds the best tax collection record of any city or town in Canada for 1919. It is announced that at the close of the year only one-third of one per cent. of the collectable taxes had not been paid in, and this amount will be secured shortly.

FAMOUS GEOLOGIST DIES

DEATH AS ENTRY INTO JOY

Writer Thinks Mankind Exaggerates Importance of Incident of Earthly Dissolution.

Apart from the mystery of lives cut off in their early prime, and this is the horrid catastrophe of war, it is certain that in our natural clinging to life we exaggerate the importance of the incident of death. "Will you never find an abiding peace?" said a friend to a restless poet. He replied, "All life is a wandering to find home."

Michael Fairless writes in the Road Mender: "To the large majority death is Pluto, king of the dark unknown whence no traveler returns, rather than Azrael, brother and friend, lord of the mansion of life. Strange how men shun him as he waits in the shadow, watching our straining after immortality, sending his comrade sleep to prepare us for himself. When the hour strikes he comes—very gently, very tenderly, if we will have it so—folds the tired hands together, takes the way-worn feet in his broad, strong palm; and lifting us in his wonderful arms he bears us swiftly down the valley and across the water of Remembrance. Very pleasant art thou, O Brother Death, thy love is wonderful; passing the love of women."

Local Patriotism.

"The extent to which all classes of society have brought their patriotism into practice has been marvelous, was a remark made by Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V. C., in a recent conversation.

As an instance of this he mentioned how cheaply yet efficiently a wounded soldiers' hospital, within a stone's throw of his residence at Harlow, was run.

Sir Evelyn is actively interested in its management, and his daughter works there every day as a pantry maid, along with others similarly stationed in life. The cooking is done by three ex-cooks, who will not accept a penny for their services. The whole laundry work is done free of charge.—London Times.

Levity In the Churches.

Parsons should permit no rowdyism at the altar during marriage ceremonies is the solemnly worded advice given to his colleagues by Rev. Peter Green, rector of St. Philip's, Salford, England, and chaplain to the King, in a book he has just published entitled "The Town Parson."

After years of experience it is his opinion that bad behavior at weddings is common, and the writer says he has seen many weddings marked by deplorable conditions of levity and profanity. He says:

"The bridegroom is often nervous and attempts to pass it off with horseplay, or a middle-aged woman in the company with a local reputation as to wit thinks it incumbent on her to play the fool, or the whole party has been drinking and one or two have taken a good deal too much."

While not advocating "dry" weddings, Rector Green says that no clergyman has a right to marry a man or woman not sober enough to know what is happening. Reverence, he declares, should be insisted on.

Rector Green also criticises slang in modern sermons, citing as an example the words of a parson who said the Lord had been "done in" by the Pharisees and Judas.

He protests against the cheap vulgarity of the advertised titles of some sermons, such as "It Touches the Spot!" and "Insist on Seeing the Label." The rector should hold babies during the baptismal service, says Mr. Green.

GREEKS WANT KORYTZA.

Reasons Why Albania's Claim Is Opposed.

Although the claim, put forward by Greece, that, in the final settlement of the northern Epirus question, the town and sanjak of Korytza shall be ceded to Greece, has support from many sources, perhaps the one that makes most immediate appeal is the geographical one. The Greek claim to Korytza on the basis of race is, of course, quite irrefragable. There is no question with those who know anything about the Christian Epirote that he is a Greek of Greeks; whilst it is a matter of simple record that of the two races inhabiting the sanjak, namely, the Orthodox Greeks and the Mohammedan Albanians, the Orthodox Greeks are in a decided majority. From a cultural point of view, the ethnological question being settled in favor of Greece, the claims of the Greek are overwhelming. All the culture in the sanjak is Greek culture. Of the seventy-three schools in Korytza, no less than seventy-two are Greek; whilst the one which is Albanian owes its existence and maintenance mainly to the efforts of American missionaries.

It is, however, the "geographic claim" which, other things being equal, is the most striking. From time immemorial, the only road connecting the towns and villages of Epirus with the towns and villages of Serbian Macedonia, as it is to-day, has run through Korytza. Winding in and out amidst the valleys of one of the most mountainous countries in Europe, it finds its way from the Adriatic at Prevesa to the Ægean at Salonika. In passing through Korytza, which lies at the apex of the great triangle formed by the Tomaros and the Pindus mountains, this road makes straight for the only gap between the two ranges, namely, that lying between Lake Orchida and Lake Presba. Korytza has no outlet either to the Ægean or to the Adriatic, except along this road. With Albania, to which the United States delegates to the Peace Conference, alone amongst the representatives of the powers, are desirous of uniting the sanjak, it has no communication of any value at all, from a commercial point of view. The only communication of any kind is through the Acroceraunos and Tomaros mountains, by a narrow road running along the banks of the Voiussa river as it forces its way through the pass of Tepeleni. No trade of any importance has ever been carried on over this road, and the people of Korytza have never been accustomed to have much dealing with the people at the other side of the great barrier.

An Albanian Korytza, therefore, must mean the economic deterioration of northern Epirus, artificially cut off from its natural trade outlet eastward. Whilst for Korytza itself, practically isolated as it would be, it could only mean deterioration also.

The whole proposal to hand over Korytza to Albania is based on a curious misconception, for which the American missionaries in the sanjak are largely responsible. The contention is that the northern Epirote, inasmuch as he speaks Albanian, is really an Albanian and not a Greek. Now the great mass of the people in northern Epirus are bilingual. They speak an Albanian patois in their homes, but they read and write in Greek, and until the inauguration, some years ago, of a carefully organized propaganda, subsidized by both Austria and Italy, the northern Epirote never thought of himself as anything else but Greek. Such, at any rate, is the Greek claim, and, whatever the rights of the matter may be, the seventy-two Greek schools in Korytza to the one Albanian is alone significant evidence in support of it.

Dogs and Moving Day.

Two modern authors of considerable renown have noted that dogs hate and dread moving day. In "Monsieur Bergeret a Paris" it is through the eyes of the dog character that France lets his readers know how M. Bergeret's goods are moved from provincial town to capital. It is hard to tell, though, whether the furious dog's anathema of the moving man does not really represent France's own sentiment. On the other hand Galsworthy, in his "Memories," now republished, with very appealing illustrations by Maud Earl, shows such an intense and sincere interest in canine psychology that his account of a pet spaniel's hatred of moving must be as true as certainly it is convincing, says the New York Evening Post. Says Galsworthy of the little animal's attitude on this point:

"For so conservative a dog, his environment was sadly anarchistic. He never complained in words of our shifting habits, but curled his head round over his left paw and pressed his chin very hard against the ground whenever he smelled packing. What necessity—he seemed continually to be saying — what real necessity is there for change of any kind whatsoever? Here we are all together, and one day was like another, so that I knew where I was—and now you only know what will happen next, and I—I can't tell you whether I shall be with you when it happens. What strange grieving minutes a dog passes at such times in the underground of his sub-consciousness, refusing realization yet all the time only too well divining. Some careless word, some unmuted compassion in voice, the stealthy wrapping of a pair of boots, the unaccustomed shutting of a door that ought to be open, the removal from a downstairs room of an object always there—one tiny thing, and he knows for certain that he is not going, too. He fight against the knowledge just as we do against what we can not bear; he gives up hope, but not effort, protesting in the only way he knows of, and now and then heaving a great sigh.

"The words, 'Yes — going, too!' spoken in a certain tone, would call up in his eyes a still-questioning half-happiness, and from his tail a quiet flutter, but did not quite serve to put to rest this doubt or feeling that it was all unnecessary — until the cab arrived. Then he would pour himself out of door or window, and be found in the bottom of the vehicle, looking severely away from the admiring cabman. Once settled on our feet he would travel with philosophy, but no digestion."

She Guessed.

"Robson, do you know why you are like a donkey?" the jester asked.

"Like a donkey?" echoed Robson, opening his eyes wide. "I don't."

"Because your better half is stubbornness itself."

The jest pleased Robson immensely, for he at once saw the opportunity for a glorious dig at his wife. So when he got home he said:

"Dear, do you know why I am like a donkey?"

He waited a moment, expecting his wife to give it up. But she didn't. She looked at him somewhat pityingly as she answered:

BLACKHEAD OF TURKEYS

Intestinal Disease Which Causes Considerable Mortality.

No Known Cure for the Trouble—Immediate Killing Recommended—Turkeys Affected Should Be Kept From Other Birds—Handling Asparagus After the Cutting Season.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture Toronto.)

THE disease of turkeys commonly known as blackhead (entero-hepatitis) is one that has caused untold havoc to the turkey-raising industry in North America. It is responsible for more sickness and deaths among turkeys than all other diseases combined. It has practically stamped out turkey-raising in many districts.

It is an infectious disease primarily affecting the intestines, more particularly the caeca (blind pouches) and later the liver. It is caused by "Entamoeba meleagridis," a minute unicellular animal organism to see which a high power microscope is necessary. This minute organism is picked up with the food on infected soil. On reaching the caeca with the passage of food it penetrates the mucous lining, where it induces inflammation, congestion, thickening of the caecal walls and ulceration. The contents of the caeca thicken into a cheesy or hard dry mass mixed with blood and broken-down epithelial tissue from the mucous lining of the caecal walls.

While this condition of the caeca is developing some of the entamoeba make their way to the liver, where they establish themselves and multiply. The areas of the liver tissue in which the entamoeba establish themselves soon become necrotic, that is they degenerate and die. On post-mortem examination these necrotic areas are very noticeable as whitish or gray, round to irregular, flat or slightly sunken patches in the liver tissue. Sometimes as much as sixty per cent. of the liver tissue will be composed of these necrotic areas.

Needless to say the congestion and ulceration of the caeca and the necrosis of the liver interfere very materially with the functioning of these organs and as a consequence the affected bird becomes listless, mopy, loses flesh and the head loses its bright colored appearance, becoming dull in lustre and dark in color, which condition is responsible for the common name of the disease—blackhead.

Turkeys are liable to contract the disease at any age; they, however, mostly become infected when young. Many die as poults from an acute attack of the disease; others have the disease in a chronic form and live to maturity, but these are never thrifty and always look poor and miserable when compared with healthy birds.

There is no known cure for the disease. Turkeys that show the symptoms of the disease should be killed. If the disease be not too far advanced and the muscle meat in fair condition, it may be used for human consumption as there is little or no danger of man contracting the disease or suffering ill effects as a consequence, particularly if the meat is well cooked. The texture and flavor of the meat, however, will not be so desirable as that from a healthy bird.

Immediate killing of affected birds is recommended because the droppings from such are liable to be heavily infested with the organisms that cause the disease. These being scattered around will naturally spread the disease. It is from the droppings of affected birds that the land gets contaminated and other birds contract the disease.

If affected turkeys are out on free range it is practically impossible to control the spread of the disease amongst others of the flock. If, however, they are kept in colony houses and small runs there is a chance to practice hygienic measures which will limit the dissemination of the causal organism to these small areas which can be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected after the sick birds have been disposed of.

The ordinary domestic fowl is liable to suffer from the same trouble, but usually much less acutely than the turkey. In fact, the domestic fowl may harbor the parasite without showing any signs of ill-health. For this reason blackhead is found more common amongst turkeys that run with flocks of domestic fowl than amongst those which are kept by themselves, hence turkeys should not be allowed to run with other fowl.—D. H. Jones, O.A.C., Guelph.

Monument to Bible Translator.

There is at Vilvorde, near Brussels, a monument to William Tyndale, translator of the Bible. On its low flat base are inscriptions in English, and Flemish.

Tyndale was a native of Gloucester, England, but his sympathy with the new learning aroused suspicion, and he removed to London. Finding it, however, impossible to complete his translation of the New Testament and the Pentateuch, upon which his fame with posterity rests, he removed to Hamburg and later to Cologne, and hence became identified with the continent. He began his printing in 1528 in the very city which now forms the headquarters of the British army of occupation on the Rhine.

She Knew the Signs.

"Madam," announced the new maid, "your husband is lying unconscious in the reception hall, with a large box beside him and crushing a paper in his hand." "Ah," cried her mistress in ecstasy, "my new hat has come!"

Compressed Air to Wind Clocks.

Apparatus has been invented by a Frenchman to compress air in a reservoir as doors are opened and use it to wind clocks.

Fashions Change.

"What are all these blond hairs doing on this vest you wore last winter?" asked the wife, as she held up the article she was going to hang out to air. "What are they doing there?" replied the husband. "Why, you were a blonde last winter, weren't you?"

TWO FAMOUS GRAVES.

Charles O'Malley Is Buried In Toronto Cemetery.

Two graves of special literary interest are to be found in Canada, each linking us up with the British isles.

One is to be seen in the Necropolis, in Toronto, where rests the dust of the original of Lever's Charles O'Malley. The covering is an unique one—a coffin-shaped stone of Irish granite, decorated at the corners with shamrocks beautifully worked in filigree. It bears the following inscription, now nearly undecipherable:

"Francis Gettigs Keogh Cohortis
XXIX. Dux Obit. Jan. 19.
MDCCCLIV. Aetatis suae lx."

Keogh, as an officer in an Irish regiment, is said to have had such a remarkable series of experiences that Lever utilized them as his famous character in the rattling and rollicking story of "Charles O'Malley," in which, according to a Saturday Reviewer, "pistol shots circulated as freely as claret, the one being generally a consequence of the other."

Keough retired from the army and went to the United States after the book appeared, living with friends in Buffalo. A then resident of Toronto, Matthew Codd., took a deep interest in Keogh, either from a personal knowledge of the family, or knowing that he was the original of the O'Malley character. When Keogh fell ill in Buffalo, Codd had him brought to Toronto, where he died, and was buried in the Codd plot.

This reminder of Lever recalls the visit of the novelist to Canada, when he walked through the streets of Quebec, clad in moccasins and feathers, in addition to his ordinary attire.

The other grave of literary interest happens to be in Quebec.

In the historic Protestant Cemetery adjoining St. Matthew's Church, is the tomb of Thomas Scott, the oldest brother of Sir Walter.

Many references to his brother, Thomas, occur in the various "Lives and Letters" of the Knight of Abbotsford. During his school days in Edinburgh Thomas acted as guardian of his younger and physically weaker brother, and they stood side by side in the scraps that marked Scottish high school life late in the eighteenth century. After recounting one of these boyish adventures Sir Walter wrote: "Of five brothers, all healthy and promising, in a degree far beyond one whose infancy was visited by personal infirmity, and whose health after this period seemed long very precarious, I am, nevertheless, the only survivor. The best-loved, and the best deserving to be loved, died before his day in a distant and foreign land."

The "distant and foreign land" was Canada, where Thomas Scott was stationed, in Quebec, as paymaster of the 70th Regiment.

It will be remembered that Thomas was for long thought to be the author of the Waverley Novels. One of Sir Walter's letters to "My dear Tom" reads: "I cannot acquiesce in your plan of settling in Canada. Should you remain there, you must consider your family as settlers in that state, and as I cannot believe that it will remain very long separated from America, I should almost think this equal to depriving them of the advantages of British subjects." Sir Walter was certainly no prophet in this matter. Thomas ended his days in the distant colony as a British subject, and his tomb is one of the many interesting links between the Mother Country and her Western daughter.

Sir Ian Malcolm a Popular Dandy.

Sir Ian Malcolm, M.P., who is destined for the important semi-diplomatic post of British Consul-General in New York, is one of the dandies of the House of Commons. He is also one of the most accomplished and most popular. His long diplomatic training — he was attached successively to the embassies of Paris, Berlin and Petrograd—and his close association with foreign secretaries—he has been private secretary to the great Lord Salisbury and to Mr. Balfour—will stand him in good stead in America.

Sir Ian Malcolm's wife, the daughter of Mrs. Langtry (Lady de Bathe), is as popular as her husband. The new consul-general's accomplishments include violin playing and writing poems and plays; he is a keen cricketer and racquets player, and he glories in the kilt. He was a member of the British mission to Russia at the coronation of the late Czar, and he attended the ceremony in full Highland costume—much to the amazement of the Czar's circle of attendants. He is also a Scout master and a staunch churchman.

Mixed Metaphors.

A well-known public man in a little Staffordshire town is remarkable for his curious habit of getting hold of the wrong word. Some time ago, for instance, he made his audience laugh by asking them to carry a resolution with exclamation!

At a local debating society, the English county, one of the councillors, referring to a recent quarrel, said: "I had been hoping that the hatchet was buried, but it was sprung up again like a mushroom."

At a local debating society, the danger of being buried alive was discussed. One of the debaters remarked, "Well, gentlemen, I have come to the conclusion that although dangers continually surround us while we are alive, we are not even free from them when dead, for then there is the danger of being buried alive."

Venice.

The Browns (father and daughter) had been doing Italy. On returning, Brown, relating his adventures, was asked if they visited Venice in the course of their travels. "I say, Mary," he asked his daughter, "did we go to Venice?" "Why, no, dad, don't you remember? We got to the station, but there was a flood on, so we didn't get out."

NOTABLE "PORTERS."

Peers and Celebrities Helped In Railroad Strike.

One development of the great railway strike in Great Britain in which the public took an intense interest was the appearance of titled and other celebrities among the volunteer workers who responded to the Government's call for help.

Most of these high-priced residents of Mayfair chose Paddington station as the scene of their activities and many of them performed their duties as porters and milk-pail shifters at such an early hour that few of the curious were ever able to catch them in the act of doing manual work. By the time London was properly awake, the early morning rush at Paddington was over, and visitors invading the graveyard-like quiet of the strike-affected station saw only deserted platforms buttressed with countless milk cans, empty and forlorn. Not a peer was to be seen, not even a baronet.

Lord Portarlington, Lord Hendly, Lord Annesley and the Earl of Alnwick were among the daylight shift of porters, dressed in overalls and aprons and pretending that hard work was a "lark." Earl Drogheda was there for a morning or two, and it was rumored that the Duke of Wellington also was present on one occasion. Whether the duke tackled any of the milk pails was not revealed.

There was no doubt about the yeoman work performed by army officer volunteers at Paddington and elsewhere. They were to be seen at their jobs all day long. Major-Gen. Stuart-Wortley lent a hand at loading up the mails. Capt. Gilby and other officers of the Guards were also engaged at that work.

A few Americans, long residents in England, also offered their services including Miss Eleanor Ryan, the tennis expert. "I just had to come down to see Lord Portarlington doing his bit, and sign on myself," she told the reporters.

Famous cricketers, among them the Hon. H. L. Tennyson, and other sportsmen swelled the ranks of the volunteers.

One exceptional figure was Rev. W. Pollock-Hill, former president of the Oxford University Athletic Club. He was an army chaplain during the war, and was waiting to get out to a post in Egypt when the strike came on.

"So I'm just doing a little portering in this emergency," he remarked, loading his pipe with cut plug. "Most of us find the work all right, but the fish loads are a slimy job. We get to Paddington at 5.30 and work in shifts.

"I have always been used to hard work and can claim to be the only Oxford man who has won the mile and three-mile events in the same afternoon. True, the full milk churns make one's back a bit stiff, but I'm 53."

Moping his brow, he trumbled off a truck piled high with a woman's baggage.

The Liverpool Street Station also boasted many notables among its volunteers. On the Underground District railway were to be found several members of Parliament, working as motormen and signalmen, and a number of distinguished officers of the Royal Air Force.

Handling Asparagus After the Cutting Season.

Handling of beds of asparagus after the cutting season is comparatively simple. The first thing necessary is to stop all cutting no later than the first of July. At this time give the bed a thorough cultivation and a heavy coat of manure to the depth of about four to six inches. The addition of commercial fertilizer at the rate of 800 to 1,000 pounds per acre made up largely of nitrogen and phosphorous will be a great help to it. Then allow the bed to grow until the fall, being sure that it is kept sprayed with poison Bordeaux Mixture to keep down the asparagus rust and destroy the asparagus beetle, both in the adult and larval stage. To this poisoned Bordeaux should be added a sticker made of resin or soap as the spray will not adhere to the smooth surface unless this is done. In October when the berries are turning red all the tops should be cut off and burned to remove and danger of asparagus rust or larvae being carried over to next year. The final preparation in the fall is by ploughing toward the row. This will give drainage during the winter time, thus drying out the soil much earlier in the spring when the burrows will be throw back and the bed gets a much earlier start.—A. H. McLennan, Vegetable Specialist.

INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT LINDSAY BY 5 TO 4 IN OLD TIME ROUGH BATTLE

Petes Played Good Hockey and Earned Advantage Over Old Rivals For District Honors—"Mickey" Murray Proved Invincible to Lindsay's Fusilade of Shots

Last night was a great night for Peterborough hockey enthusiasts when both Intermediates and Juniors defeated the old-time rivals from Lindsay and to some extent gained revenge for the 17 to 2 defeat that brought last year's O.H.A. season to such a disastrous finish.

The Intermediates, playing on the Lindsay ice, faced a real hard proposition, but after one of the most strenuous and hardest fought battles ever staged between the rival towns came out on the long end of a 5-to-4 score.

The ruling circumstance of the evening was the heavy, sticky ice which spoiled all chances of team play or clever individual effort and turned the game into a more or less rough and tumble scramble. The only actually brilliant play of the whole game came with four minutes to go in the last period when Banty Evans stick-handled his way through the Lindsay defence and scored the goal that broke the tie and won the game.

Murray the Star.

Without the shadow of a doubt "Mickey" Murray, the local goal tender, was the star of the game. He was bombarded from all angles during all stages of the game and on different occasions saved shots that were billed for sure goals. His work throughout the whole game was wonderful and a great deal of the credit for the victory should go to the work of the local goal guardian.

Evans Good.

Banty Evans secured 4 of Peterborough's 5 goals and he was always in the limelight turning in a wonderful game both offensively and in assisting the defence with his consistent back checking.

Halpin and P. Thornton on the defence worked steadily using their weight to good advantage against their heavy opponents. Halpin rushed nicely on occasions, but was often unable to carry the puck through the slush and over the bumps.

Cherett and Jackson worked under a disadvantage owing to their lack of weight. They worked consistently, however, and were always on the puck laboring with might and main to bring success to the green shirts.

Harry Thornton, who substituted on the defence, was not used during the greater part of the game and seldom appeared to strike his stride.

Captain Lorney Rose was in his element last night and played like a regular pro. He cast his weight all over the ice, bodying everything in sight and on more than one occasion, bowled over one of the Lindsay huskies, most of whom towered over him by inches. The veteran, Pete Spratt, started for the home team on the defence, but one collision with Rose was enough for him and he did not return to the fray.

The Game.

The game opened at a furious pace for the condition of the ice surface and Murray was called on to make some saves during the early moments of the contest.

The first goal, however, came to the local squad when Evans accepted a pass from Cherett and bulged the net behind O'Loughlin. A few minutes later Coombs evened it up when he grabbed a loose puck in front of the Pete's net and slammed it in without giving Murray a chance to see what was happening.

Then the play grew strenuous with heavy body checks and frequent penalties being the order. Coombs drew the first penalty and was followed by Carew and P. Thornton, the latter twice in a few minutes.

Lipsett, the former Peterborough boy, was then inserted and added to the scoring column with a beautiful high shot from the wing that hit the upper left hand corner of the net.

Before the period ended Evans broke away and on a nice shot evened up the count.

Second Period.

The ice was very stickey at the commencement of the second period and heavy body checking was engaged in by both sides. After about one minute of play Evans added his third count of the evening, breaking the tie. A few minutes later Halpin, Jackson and Rose combined nicely, the latter scoring with a well-placed shot

Then the Lindsay squad came to life and commenced bombarding Murray from outside the defence. Finally their efforts were rewarded when Lipsett went around behind the Peterborough citadel and swinging round shoved the rubber into the corner of the net. A few minutes later the same player grabbed a loose one in front of the net and tied the score.

The rest of the period was a slam-bang affair with three penalties being handed out, two to Lindsay and one to Peterborough. The period ended with the scored tied, 4-4.

Third Period.

As the game progressed the ice became heavier and the play more rough. Halpin drew a penalty and was followed in order by Carew, P. Thornton, Rose, Carew and drew another penalty himself. During the most of this period the play was at the Peterborough end of the ice, but Murray proved unbeatable. Finally Evans broke away, and with a beautiful play, scored the winning goal.

Then followed four minutes of excitement with the Lindsay forwards carrying the puck up the ice only to see it shot back to their own end by one of the locals. This style of play was not pretty to watch but proved effective in defending the one goal lead.

It was a great success for the local boys and on the play they deserved to win. This gives them a much desired start for the championship of the district which they are now determined to win.

The Line-up.

LOCAL JUNIORS SPRING A SURPRISE AND DEFEAT LINDSAY BY 10 TO 6

Unexperienced Squad Display Speed, Combination and Steadiness That Spelt Defeat For Opponents—On Last Night's Showing the Juniors, With More Experience, Will Be Hard to Stop.

Much to the delight and it must be admitted somewhat to the surprise of the fans, the local Juniors handed the Lindsay Juniors a very decided defeat in their opening clash at the Brock street rink last night.

Not one of the local boys ever entered an O. H. A. contest before and fear was expressed in some quarters that they would suffer from stage fright. As it turned out, however, the youngsters did not suffer from fright of any kind, but waded into their heavier opponents with a vigor and earnestness that brought them 10 goals while the Lindsay crew were gathering in six contests.

The ice was in good condition last night, and a very clear, interesting game was witnessed. The locals showed vigor and careful traning, and Peterborough can, at last, boast of a team that follow instructions and are willing to pass the puck.

The Petes romped out on the ice an unknown quantity, but turned in one of the best games seen here for some time. The forward line worked like Trojans and went down the ice three abreast, like trained veterans. Their passes were good and they always seemed to know just where the other man was so that no efort was wasted in futile passing.

Sheehan and Lawson, on the defence worked exceptionally well, standing in their positions, waiting for the oncoming Lindsay forwards with a steadiness that was marvellous, considering their inexperience in fast company. Time after time the visiting forwards bore down on them only to be chased into a corner or lose the puck. Lebar, in goal, played nicely, stopping many fast ones. His clearing was not as fast as might be desired but that will undoubtedly come with more experience and practice.

The substitutes did not get into the game enough to really get warmed to their task, but while on, gave a good account of themselves.

Collins, as centre, deserves much credit for the victory as he secured six of the goals. Most of these, however, were on combination plays and his associates on the wings kept feeding him during the whole night. Both Foley and Jackson worked hard and effectively, showing a burst of speed that brought the crowd to their feet time after time.

The Lindsay forward line worked hard all night, but in Lebar, Sheehan and Lawson, met more than their match.

Green and Garnett, both of last year's team, tried hard but were unable to either stop the forward combination of the locals or shake off the back checkers in their rushes. Oliver in goal, turned in a nice game, but the shots from Collin's stick proved too hard for him.

The line-up:

Peterborough: Goal Lebar; defence Sheehan and Lawson; centre, Collins; right wing, Jackson; left wing, Foley; subs, Ranger and Edy.

Refree—Jerry Laflamme.

HEINIE ZIMMERMAN HAS REAL GRIEVANCES

RECEIVED NONE OF GIANTS' SHARE OF WORLD'S SERIES SPOILS

New York, Jan. 7;—Heinie Zimmerman, the favored son of the Bronx, has a weather eye peeled toward Cincinnati, where the annual meeting of the national commission is booked for Monday next. Heinie has a grievance. He intends to lay it at the feet of the national commission—when the national commission gets in a position to function—if redress is not forthcoming meanwhile from what he considers the proper quarter.

Heinie claims to be in the same boat with the New York Yankees. He has never received any part of the prize money from the world's series that was awarded the individual members of the Giants for finishing second in the National league championship race. Each share of this consolation pot ran over $1,000.

"It is true," said Zimmerman the other day, "that I was under suspension for alleged violation of training rules the last few weeks of the season. But it is equally true that I haven't received a cent from the club since September 12. I played in more than 100 of the 1.0 scheduel games and I always played to win. My individual effort certainly had some influence in keeping the Giants in the thick of the fight so that the club was able to finish second to the Reds.

"I hear I am to be traded," Zimmerman went on. "Well, I can't object to that. If the owners aren't satisfied with me, it is their affair. But I do not propose to be the "goat" for anybody. I have every right to a share in the world's series money; a fractional share at least, if not a full share. Some of the youngsters who took part in but a few games were awarded half shares, and one or two who played in less games than I were given full shares.

"But whether I remain with the Giants or am sent elsewhere, I intend to collect what is my right due of the world series' pot, even if it is necessary to go to law. I think I have such a case that the national commission is bound to hear me favorably. But unfortunately at the moment there appears to be nonational commission."

It may be impossible for a few days to get the version of the local National League in this controversy, if controversy exists. President Chas. A. Stoneham and Vice-President Manager John J. McGraw are both in Havana. Secretary John O'Brien is holidaying at his home in Milwaukee.

Friends of a 90-year-old Franklin, N. H., man claim he can swing an ax with the best of the choppers in the woods.

J. Wylie	15	E. Hardie	11
J. Smith	15	McCall	8
J. Naples	15	W. Young	10
A. Irwin	15	J. Morton	8

The following members will play off on next Wednesday night at 7.30 sharp:

French vs. Thompson.
Veitch vs. Naples.
Haddow vs. McLeish.

The losers in the first round will play for a special consolation prize. The schedule for this will be drawn up later.

Next Wednesday night a picked team will play against the S. O. E. Lodge. This should be a very interesting match. So far the Caledonian Club have come out ahead, winning in the last game by nine points. The S.O.E., however, are out after the Scotchmens' scalps next Wednesday, and as they will have strengthened their team considerably, it should be an exciting event.

QUAKER OATS WIN TWO FROM THE GROCERS

HIGH BOWLING SCORES IN CITY TEN-PIN LEAGUE LAST NIGHT

Last night in the Ten Pin League at the Water street alleys, the Quaker Oats took two out of three from the Grocers. The Grocers lost the second game by two pins. Origin of "Gone West."

The following is given as the origin of the phrase "Gone West." More than 3,000 years ago the ancient Egyptian spoke of the dead as "the Westerners," or those who had "gone west." For the abode of the dead was believed to be in the realm of the setting sun, in that Amenti where Osiris reigned. This belief by the ancients in the soul going west has at least a reflection in the customs of some of our own North American Indians, who cherished the belief that their "happy hunting grounds" lay in the West, and who practiced the custom of laying their dead away on well-provisioned scaffolds facing the west. The belief of the ancients died long, long ago with the religion of that far-distant time—died only to return to earth again during the Great War.

So quickly did the phrase become a part of vocabulary of the soldier in the trenches that to-day it would be difficult to find a reading person in all the earth that does not instantly perceive its affectionate pathos.

CARPENTIER WILL MAKE CONCESSIONS

60 PER CENT TO WINNER AND 40 PER CENT TO LOSER IS ACCEPTABLE.

Paris, Jan. 8.—Georges Carpentier, heavyweight champion of France and England is wiling to give concessions in the matter of weight in order to meet Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, in America, according to a statement made to the associated press by Carpentire's manager, last night. Descamps stated he was willing to split the four hundred thousand purse ofefred by Coffroth, on the basis of sixty per cent for the winner, and forty per cent for the loser.

"Carpentier is willing to journey to strange lands, face an exotic climate, give away 25 to 30 pounds in weight and accept a split of 60-40 of cofforth's offer," said Descamps. "We had intended to demand a fifty-fifty split, but are willing to accept sixty-forty division, in order to show that this is not merely a money making proposition, but also a sporting event. We will endeavor to give American sportsmen a real championship battle."

HAMILTON GROCERS TO SET THEIR PRICES

COMMITTEE WILL MEET EVERY MONDAY FOR THIS PURPOSE

Hamilton, Jan. 8. — About one hundred of the four hundred retail grocers of the city met in the board of trade building to form an organization to fix prices. The wholesalers, it is proposed, shall be honorary members, and they have promised to contribute handsomely to the fund needed to establish the new organization.

The project, as outlined, is for a committee to meet every Monday night to fix the prices for the week of all goods sold by retail grocers. In case any grocers sell below the fixed price, it is proposed to bring them before the board of commerce.

The organization aims to do away with price cutting, chains of stores, and mail order businesses. They will notify Lever Bros. that some dealers are selling the firm's products at less than ten cents, and they threaten to refuse to handle the firm's goods unless the price cutting is stopped.

CLARK CASHED CHECKS WITHOUT FUNDS

WIRED MONEY TO HIS WIFE IN OSHAWA—COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Belleville, Jan. 8. — Bertram H. Clark, a music dealer, who was accused of securing $1,800 or $1,900 in currency from the local branch of the Union Bank in November by false pretences, was this morning given a hearing and committed for trial. The local Manager of the Union Bank testified that Clark claimed that he had a sum to his credit in the Bank of Commerce in Oshawa. Clark had no credit here, and opened an account in June. On November 12, November 14 and November 15 a large number of cheques were cashed here on the Bank of Commerce at Oshawa. The cheques came back protested and marked "not sufficient funds."

The local C.P.R. Telegraph Manager testified that Clark wired large sums of money to his wife at Oshawa every few days in September, October and November, and on November 12, November 13, November 14 and November 15.

ONE THOUSAND ATTEND CHURCH CONFERENCE

$500,000,000 BUDGET NEEDED TO EVANGELIZE THE WHOLE WORLD.

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 8.—A budget of more than $500,000,000 will be necessary to evangelize the world, according to leaders of the Surevy Conference of the Inter-Church Movement of North America, launched here yesterday, with Dr. John R. Mott, chairman of the Executive Committee, presiding. More than one thousand delegates, representing 28 denominations, responded to the roll-call.

Dr. Fred P. Haggard, head of the Survey Department of the movement, outlined the great task confronting the Protestant Church, and pictured the extent of the job of building up the material involved in the world survey.

Samuel Guy Inman, in charge of the Latin-American survey, declared that American mission boards are the only organizations which have developed a practical, comprehensive and inclusive program for solving the Mexican problem. Mr. Inmann said the Mexican problem was not a question of a "revolution to be squelched, but an evolution to be guided."

"Mission boards," he added, "are planning to help Mexico to solve her land problems by setting up social centres in every town of more than 15,000 people, and to solve her educational problems by establishing a university in the City of Mexico and enlarging and multiplying high schools, normal and day schools.'

"FORWARD OR FAIL"

lectually assent to all the elements of the doctrine but the proof that they have taken hold of us is found in a practical religion. Only thus we adorn the truth. When we thus demonstrate the Gospel is will become attractive. It is often asked: "why do people not come to God in larger numbers?" The answer is that the world does not see in us enough of Jesus Christ. Chirstianity will not prevail by means of eloquence, logic literature only. People will accept what they see. Mr. Glassford will speak tonight in St. Paul's.

Trinity Methodist Church

At Trinity Church last night three very helpful addresses were given by members of the Official Board. Mr. R. P. Downey spoke on "Building Home Altars. Mr. J. M. Green's address was on "Prayer and the Kingdom of God," while Dr. Morrison spoke very ably on "Stewardship" Mr. R. J. Kidd presided at the meeting and Mr. H. C. Hawley read the scripture lesson. There will be no meeting in Trinity church tonight, but tomorrow night a meeting of great importance will be held in the church, when the Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, of Toronto, will speak. It is hoped the church will be filled to capacity tomorrow night. Visitors are welcome.

Park Street Baptist

The series of prayer services that are being held in Park street from night to night are proving a source of great blessing to all who attend. The subject "The Open Door," which was under consideration last night, revealed the greatness of the Church's opportunity and hope of life, vision and service. The subject which will be considered tonight is "The Field of Labour." We invite in the language of Moses: "Come with us and we will do thee good, for the Lord spoken good concerning Israel." Numbers 10:29.

St. Andrew's Church

The attendance and interest in the services of the week of prayer in St. Andrew's church is increasing each night. These meetings are proving so helpful to all who attend that it is hoped the entire congregation will take the opportunity to be present tonight and on Friday night. Mr. McConnachie gave a very illuminating address last night on the great text: "Without shedding of blood there is no remission of sin." Heb. 9:2. The evangelical meaning of the words was plain. In order to bless men with forgiveness Jesus must needs shed His blood and die for us. Believing that it was possible at the same time to find in the words a lesson for today. In the light that God gives us for these times we may read: "Without the shedding of blood there is nothing worth while." And men must be prepared to shed things almost as dear as life in the pursuit of the highest good. No great attainment, no high achievement was possible [illegible] we were prepared to deny ourselves and live laborious days. In the pursuit of knowledge in business and professional life this holds true. A man must [illegible] himself, must often drain his vitality if he is to succeed. To bless was to bleed. For the perfecting of our own lives we must be prepared to die daily unto sin. If we were to contribute anything to the moral uplift of these times we must be ready to shed many pleasures and hours of leisure dear to the world. The early missionaries often sacrificed freedom and health, and home in order to preach Christ and bless men. At home or abroad the same principle is true. When goodness becomes aggressive it will bear the marks of the fight. We ought to be good to some purpose, taking active part in the campaign for righteousness. Without the shedding of Jesus' blood, there is no heaven for us. We, in turn, must show the same spirit as our Saviour in our service to men. The tragedy of some lives today was that they were growing rich while the soul within was starved. No cross, no crown was true of this life as well as of the life to come."

Knox Presbyterian Church

At Knox Church last night the meeting was conducted by Mr. M. M. Clarke, superintendent of the Sunday School. Interesting papers were read by Miss Hazel Huffman, and Miss Lillian Cadwell. Tonight the meeting will be in charge of the ladies of the congregation.

BOKHARA, NEAR AFGHANISTAN FRONTIER, CAPTURED BY REDS

Bolshevik Plan Extensive Operations Westward in Direction of India in Conjunction With Afghans and Others Influenced by Pan-Islamic Aspirations.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 9.—Bokhara, in Central Asia and less than two hundred miles from the Afghanistan frontier, has been entered by the Bolshevik forces, according to war office reports. Further west, it is repoted that Soviet troops have entered Krasnovodsk on the Eastern shore of the Caspian Sea. The Bolshevik have as their ulterior purpose an offense against the British and plan important movements in the direction of India in conjunction with Afghans and other people who might be influenced by Pan-islamic aspirations, it is asserted.

For this purpose, swarms of propaganda agents are said to be undergoing intensive training and may have been sent into Persia and the caucus, being provided with large supplies of forged English money. It is reported fifteen hundred Soviet agents have gone into Persia and anti-Bolshevik authorities have taken steps to put a stop to this movement.

Intend to Penetrate Persia.

Direct railway communication between Transcaspia and European Russia has been secured by the Reds who will be able to concentrante important bodies of troops in Turkstan with a view to carrying out positively far reaching plans westward towards the Caucasus region and southward toward Persia and Afghanstan. It is said Bolsheviki authorities have announced their intention to penetrate Persia by way of Khorasian as soon as they could secure control of the Caspian Sea and recent reports have indicated that the Soviet garrisons along the Khorasan frontier have been heavily reinforced

TWENTY VILLAGES WERE DESTROYED IN MEXICO

BELIEVED ESTIMATE OF TWO THOUSAND CASUALTIES IS NOT TOO HIGH.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mekico City, Jan. 8.—The latest advices regarding the earthquake, which caused such terrible havoc in the State of Vera Cruz and Puebla, tell of two hundred deaths near San Miguel and in the Cordoba district. It seems improbable that the final list of casualties will fall below original estimate of two-thousand. It is believed twenty villages were destroyed.

SITES OF SEVEN TOWNS NOW COVERED BY LAKE

TERRIBLE EARTH DISTURBANCES WRECK PROSPEROUS COMMUNITIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mexico City, Jan. 9.—Seven towns near Teocelo, south of Jalapa, have been overwhelmed by earth disturbances and a great lake is covering their former sites, according to message received from Teocelo through Vera Cruz. Thirty-four bodies had been recovered when the message was filed.

BURFORD VILLAGE HAS 26 CASES OF SMALLPOX

LARGE PROPORTION TO POPULATION OF ANY ONTARIO CENTRE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brantford, Jan. 9.—A local business man returning from Burford village in Brant County, reports that in proportion to the population the village has more cases of smallpox than any other Ontario centre. He reports 26 cases there, all fortunately of a mild type.

SIX MONTHS' STANDARD RETURN TO RAILROADS

SENATE AND HOUSE REACH AGREEMENT UPON THIS PERIOD OF TIME

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 9.—The continuation of the standard return to railroads for a period of six months after the termination of Federal control was agreed upon today by the Senate and the House Conferes on Railroad Legislation. In fixing this period the Conferes accepted each bill provision.

LENINE ADMITS NO REVOLUTION IN ITALY

POINTS OUT THIS WOULD HAMPER HIS NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE POWERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Jan. 9.— According to Epoca Lenine has written another letter to the directors of the Socialist party imploring them not to precipitate any revolutionary movement, which under the present conditions would have no probability of success. The Soviet head points out that he is about to negotiate with the powers for acknowledgment of the present state of affairs in Russia. All this would be rejected if another revolution occurred in Italy.

249 UNDESIRABLES WILL LAND AT HUNGO

SWEDISH AUTHORITIES MAY NOT ALLOW TRANSIT THROUGH COUNTRY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Stockholm, Jan. 9.—The 249 undesirables deported from the United States on the transport Burford, the "Soviet Ark," will probably land at Hango, Finland, and will proceed to Russia by rail under a strong guard. It was said here today that Swedish authorities declare those deported from the United States will not be allowed transit through Sweden.

RESOLUTION OF FARMERS

Federal Political Action Should Be in Hands of Farmers' Organization

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brandon, Man., Jan. 9.—With a heavy day's work ahead, the United Farmers of Manitoba this morning passed a resolution declaring that the prosecution of political action in support of the new National Policy should be in the hands of the Farmers' organization. "I am talking in regard to Federal action," said C. R. Burnell, in presenting the resolution, which embodied the report of the special committee of the board of directors.

HEAVY SEAS AND ICE PREVENT LANDING

STEAMER "SEAL" RESCUER OF MAROONED COLONY HAS NOT ARRIVED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Jan. 9.—The Newfoundland steamer Seal, which rescued the marooned colony on Belle Isle over a week ago, has not yet arrived at St. John's, Nfld., according to information reaching here. Under normal conditions the Seal should have made the trip in three days, but reports indicate heavy seas and the presence of much ice about the island.

TRUSTEE MORRIS IN SECOND SEAT OF HONOR

SITS AT FOOT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD TABLE OPPOSITE CHAIRMAN DENNE

Trustee Morris has been received by her colleagues on the School Board with the courtesy which every lady has a right to expect in her association with men, either in a business or a social way. The lady members of the School Board in Toronto testify to the chivalrous treatment which they have been accorded by the male members. Trustee Morris occupied the seat second in point of honor only to that of Chairman Denne himself. He sits at the head of the table while she faces him from the other end. This place was occupied last year by Trustee Worth who vacated it out of courtesy to the new member.

RAILWAYMEN REJECT GOVERNMENT'S OFFER

WILL NOT TAKE EXTREME ACTION BUT WILL NEGOTIATE FURTHER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 9.—Delegates of the Union of Railway Workers in conference here today decided to reject the Government terms for a settlement of wage demands of the workers in lower grades. It was decided to refer the Government's proposition back to the executive of the union for further negotions with the Government

It was expected, however, that a way would be left open for negotiations with the Government on the contested points and it was stated that there was little liklihood that the union at this time would take any extreme action. Delegates were in session throughout yesterday without reaching a decision.

REJECT GOVERNMENT OFFER

Union Representatives Will Probably Reach This Decision Tonight.

London, Jan. 9.— the opinion prevailed at the headquarters of the Union of Railway Workers today, that the union representatives who have been deliberating on Government wage offer since Wednesday would conclude discussions today and adopt resolution rejecting proposals.

REPORT SYMPTOMS OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

LOCAL PHYSICIANS HAVE BROUGHT MATTER TO NOTICE OF HEALTH OFFICER

The rumors which have pervaded Peterborough in reference to the sleeping sickness today have been brought up again. It appears that two cases have been reported to Dr. McPherson, and although the M.H.O. himself has not seen these, in the opinion of the doctors who had charge of them and of the doctors called in in consultation, there is practically no doubt that there are at least strong symptoms of this disease in the above cases referred to. At the time of a recent interview with the M.H.O. these cases had not been fully diagnosed, but the M.H.O. is now satisfied with the reports received.

EXPECTED THAT SENTENCE ON THREE OF THE RUSSIANS WILL BE COMMITTED

Government Will Probably Make Official Announcement To-night—Very Little Hope for Originator of Scheme or for the Man Who Fired the Shot.

Word received here today from Ottawa intimates that the sentence of three of the condemned Russians, whose day of execution was set for next Wednesday, will be commuted. The case is now before the Government, and a final decision is expected tonight.

It is not expected that there will be any interference with the sentence of death pronounced on Thos. Korachek, who fired the shot, or of Michael Bahri, who is said to have organized the plot and who acted as guide to the party.

Although the jail officials will tell nothing, it was learned today from reliable sources that the men are showing signs of nervousness as the day of hanging approaches. It was stated today that for some time they have been awakening in the night and crying out through firght, apparently caused by some unpleasant dreams.

It was further stated that the men stand for hours at a time during the day with their ears to the door, listening for noises in the corridor. The only explanation that sounds plausible for such conduct is that they are buoyed up, in spite of the Justice's warning, with the hope that the sentence will be commuted.

It is now very probable that the hopes of the three accomplices of the crime will be realized, while the other two must pay the supreme penalty for their crime at daybreak on Wednesday morning next.

SIXTEEN CENTS THE NEW PRICE OF SUGAR

BOARD OF COMMERCE FIXES THE RATE FOR NEXT THREE MONTHS

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—The Board of Commerce has issued a statement as to its reasons for rescinding the order for limitation of sugar profits, made last September, and for the issue of a new order fixing a maximum retail price for sugar and making the same price of 16c per pound at retail applicable throughout Canada.

In its statement the board points out that when the previous order was made, raw sugar was procurable at its place of origin at about 6½c per pound. It now costs at place of origin 11½c pound. Granulated sugar was then selling for [illegible] pound in the United States and 12c in Canada. It is now selling at from 18c to 22c per pound in the United States, and is likely to go higher.

PARLIAMENT WILL MEET ON FEBUARY 26

SIR ROBERT BORDEN WILL NOT ATTEND IS GENERAL OPINION.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—Sir George Foster acting prime minister has made the definite announcement that parliament will meet for the transaction of business on Thursday, February 26. He stated that in all probability the address in reply to the speech from the throne, to dispose of which is the first business of parliament, will be moved by Hume Cronyn, M. P., for London, and seconded by Alexander McGregor, member for Picton. The acting prime minister also stated that writs will shortly issue making provision for the filling of the only two seats in the commons now vacant—Kamouraska and Timiskaming.

The M.H.O. again wishes to impress the citizens with the need of vaccination. The small-pox outbreak being corralled as energetically as possible, but that does not do away with the need of vaccination. It is entirely up to the citizens.

More Work Than Workers in Peterborough

Manufacturers Predict Greatest Year in Industrial History of the City.

The Manufacturers' Association held their regular monthly meeting last evening in the council room of the Board of Trade. Chairman W. R. Breyfogle presided.

An application for membership from the Bon Marche Mfg. Co., of which John E. Bates is manager, was unanimously approved and duly elected.

A communication was read from the Hydro Electric Power Commission, referring to the new tie line from Healey Falls to Peterborough, which it was believed would effectually protect the power industrial service at Peterborough.

A communication was read from the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Limited, regarding ocean freight rates.

During the course of the evening it was particularly noted that there is at present more work than workers in Peterborough. There is room for more skilled mechanics, judging from the amount of work on hand in the various industries.

It was the unanimous opinion that this year should prove the biggest year of production in the history of the city and also that the outlook is most encouraging.

HUGE AMALGAMATION OF CANADIAN COMPANIES

THREE OF DOMINION'S LARGEST COMPANIES MEETING AT MONTREAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

North Sydney, N. S., Jan. 9.—Indications here point to the final amalgamation of three of the largest industrial concerns in Canada, the Canadian Steel Co., the Nova Scotia Steel Co., and the Dominion Coal and Steel Co. An official of one of the companies stated yesterday the negotiations were going on in Montreal between representatives of each

THE LARGEST LOCAL POULTRY SHOW ENDS

MANY BIRDS OF ALL CLASSES AND KINDS AWARDED PRIZES.

The biggest poultry show ever held in this city was brought to a close last night, after an exhibition lasting for three days. It was an undoubted success from every point of view.

Peterborough stands high in the list of winners, Mr. H. Brault taking the cup for the most points in white wyandotts and Mr. A. O. Kidd for barred rocks. Mr. J. Capstick has won the Mayor's silver cup for the second time in succession and now owns it. He took all firsts in Leghorns and seven specials. The winners in the sweepstake badges for the 15 classes in the American standard were:

American Class, Barred Rock (pullets)—Mr. A. O. Kidd, Peterborough.

Asiatic Class, Light Brahma (hen)—Mr. C. J. Cox, Colborne.

Mediterranean Class, Black Minorca (cockerel)—R. D. Robertson, Peterborough.

English Class, Blue Orpington (hen)—F. H. Brown, Port Hope.

Golden Poland (hen)—Mr. H. Lush, city.

Hambourg Class, Golden Spangled (pullet)—Harold Baptie, Springville

French Class, Houdan (cock)—Harry Lush, city.

Golden Campian (cockerel) —Harry Lucas, Peterborough.

Game Class, Black Game (hen)—Thos. Bothrell and Son, Bowmanville.

Bantam Class, Bircher (cockerel)—Thos. Bottrell and Son, Bowmanville.

Turkey, Bronze—S. J. Cox, Colborne.

Old Gobbler—S. J. Cox, Colborne.

Black Tumbler Pidgeons—Tomas Bottrell and Son, Bowmanville.

Belgian Buck Hares and Rabbits—Bert Trotter, Peterborough.

Miss M. Yates gave her last lecture last night. This was on killing, dressing and cooking a chicken by practical demonstration and was followed with great interest by a large audience.

Hilton Sherry, London, who is alleged to have forged a cheque for $200 was committed for trial.

MR. ROLAND DENNE RE-ELECTED PRES. OF BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mr. J. M. Greene Accepts Appointment and the Standing Committees for the Year With Their Chairman are Elected—First Meeting for Trustee Morris.

For the first time in the history of the Peterborough Board of Education a lady member took her place on the Board at last night's meeting for the appointment of the standing committees. No grand ceremony accompanied the ushering in of Trustee Morris, the members merely showing their respect by rising to their feet at her entrance.

J. M. Greene Accepts.

At the opening of the meeting Mr. J. M. Greene, who was appointed to the vacancy on the Board at the last meeting, signified his willingness to accept the position. He thanked the members for the honor they had bestowed upon him aud for the kind words they had said of his past services to the Board. He congratulated the other members for their success at the polls and also stated he was glad to make room for Trustee Morris on the Board. "It is a gentleman's duty to make way for the ladies anyway," he remarked. In conclusion, he assured the Board that he would work for the interests of the institutions under the care of the Board of Education during the coming year.

Trustee R. Denne Re-elected.

Then followed the election of a chairman by ballot without nomination, according to custom resulting in the re-election of Mr. Roland Denne.

Trustee Denne, in thanking the members for his re-election, stated that he would use the best of his ability for the betterment of education in the city. He welcomed Trustee Morris to the Board and hoped all the members would work together for the betterment of the educational matters.

Standing Committees.

Then Trustees Neal, Fowler, McKone, Greene and Patterson were appointed a special committee to strike the standing committees for the year.

Their report, which was as follows, met with the unanimous support of the trustees:

Finance Committee—Messrs Patterson (chairman), McGrath, Fowler and Neal.

Property Committee—Messrs. A. R. Fowler (chairman), Greene, McKone and Worth.

Supervision Committee—Messrs. Dr. Neal (chairman), McKone, Cameron and Mrs. Morris.

Committee on Appointments—The whole Board. Chairman, Trustee Cameron.

Building Committee—Messrs. Patterson (chairman), Neal, Greene and Fowler.

Advisory Industrial Committee — Mr. V. Eastwood, Mrs. Morris, Messrs. Roland Denne, E. G. Patterson, G. R. Munroe, John Corkery, T. B. McGrath, J. M. McKone, J. W. Worth, Wm. Sangster, W. R. Breyfogle, Dr. Neal.

Advisory Commercial Committee—Mrs. Morris, Messrs. A. A. Fowler, Wm. H. Pretty, G. O. Cameron, H. Cressman, E. F. Mason, G. O. Cameron, J. M. Greene, T. B. McGrath.

The last two committees have yet to meet and choose their chairman.

Desire Rink.

A motion was passed requesting the City Council to flood the South Central yard for the purposing of using it for rink purposes. It was stated that this practice had been carried out in previous years, but had been overlooked this season.

$1,000 for Playgrounds.

A delegation, consisting of Mr. A. G. Roberts, Mrs. Stevenson and Mrs. Frederick, was received from the Playgrounds Association.

Mr. Roberts stated that last year's grant of $150 had been much appreciated and the money had been carefully and judiciously spent in buying suitable equipment for the playgrounds.

The desire for this year is, he explained, to increase the standard of the central and King Edward grounds by applying them with steel swings. There would be a saving in the end, he thought, as they would eventually become part of the permanent pixtures of the grounds. They asked the Board to set aside $1,000 in their estimate for the coming year for the Playgrounds Association.

Mr. Denne assured the delegation that all the trustees were in favor of the playground movement and their request would be given consideration. He suggested that they should ask the city Council for a grant to build a tank, covered over by a rough, and from two to four feet deep for the small children to bathe in during the hot days in summer.

After the delegation retired Dr. Neal informed the Board that the supervision committee were considering a $1,000 grant for this purpose and on a motion of Trustees Cameron and Geene this amount was granted.

After Trustee Morris had thanked the members for their kind welcome to her on her first appearance at the Board, the meeting adjourned.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES ACT TO BE REVISED, PERHAPS REPEALED

Government Has Asked Workingmen to Make Suggestion as to Improving Measure—Organized Labor Has for Years Sought the Repeal of This Measure.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—The revision of the Industrial Disputes Act is to receive early consideration. In past years the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada has opposed the Act and demanded its repeal. Latterly there has been a shifting in the attitude of organized Labor towards the Act and Labor representatives in an interview with the Government yesterday offered to participate in a joint conference with a view to revision. In reply the Government invited the Labor men to submit a concrete proposal of amendment for consideration. While the Labor men have not yet decided upon any proposals one of their first demands will no doubt be for a complete revision and remodelling of the Act rather than amendment of a few clauses. They will ask that the Act be made appliable to workers employed by publicly-owned as well as privately-owned utilities.

It is likely that the question of revision will be submitted to a special commission on the uniformity of Labor laws recommended by the National Industrial Conference.

AT THE "Y" TONIGHT

A class is being formed at the Y. M. C. A. tonight to take up the Schofield Bible Course of the Moody Institute of Chicago. This course is an exceptional one, and those who are interested in real Bible study should attend tonight at 8 o'clock. Capable leaders will conduct the study, and opportunity will be given for thorough discussion.

The High School Club will meet tonight at the Y. M. C. A. at 6:15 for supper.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 9, 1920.

MR. R. DENNE RE-ELECTED.

ONE YEAR AGO Mr. R. Denne was entitled to the chairmanship of the Board of Education, both on his record and by precedent, being at that time the oldest eligible candidate in point of service. Mr. Denne was re-elected last night a handsome tribute by his colleagues to his fidelity, ability and fairness qualities, which have distinguished his administration of the duties of that important position during the year 1919. Peterborough has been fortunate in its choice of representatives to look after the educational affairs of the city. They have been men of business ability, of devotion to the cause of childhood, undefatigable in their efforts to advance the cause of education. The system which they have built up is the best testimonial to their worth. In the perfecting of that system no member has ever shown a keener interest or devoted more time to his duties than has Chairman Denne.

THE FUTURE OF ASHBURNHAM.

PERHAPS the electors of Ashburnham have not at[illegible] all the objectives they had in mind when they decided to link up their destiny with the city across the river, but the majority of them are not insensible to the advantages that have come from annexation. In one stride a village passed into the status of a modern city Ashburnham received benefits in the way of sewerage, electric lights, fire protection and other improvements that would have been impossible of attainment for years to come if the village had decided to hold on its own way. Ashburnham has prospered since annextion, but the best is yet to come. The completion of the Hunter street bridge will mark an epoch in the history of the thriving suburb.

Street car connection with the rest of the city is now one of Ashburnham's immediate and reassuring prospects. The abolition of the old ward system of representation and the adoption of the general vote plan has done much to abolish everything like a sectional spirit that may have prevailed in the past. The two communities are united and the union will be cemented when they are bound together by a modern system of transportation. Ashburnham's advantages as a residential section are ideal. From the elevation of Armour's hill there is no finer view in every direction to be seen in Canada. The high land and excellent natural drainage assures the best in the way of sanitary conditions. There is an excellent field across the river for the work of the Town Planning Commission and this work is now likely to be taken up until Ashburnham is made one of the urban beauty spots in Ontario.

Another valuable asset has also been secured by Ashburnham in Riverside Park, the purchase of which by the municipality has just been authorized. The city, as a whole, will pay for the property, but the location and the immediate possession belongs to Ashburnham. Surrounding real estate holdings are sure to go up in value. Ashburnham's business boom is on the way. Other suburbs that dream of annexation can take this case as an object lesson and remember that the latchstring of the city portal still hangs on the outside.

THE NEW LIBERAL EDITOR.

GIVING EVERY MAN his due it must be conceded that Mackensie King, the new Liberal Leader, has already shown a disposition to depart from the paths that have been trodden into the consistence of adamant by the passing of countless political feet. This fact is especially shown in his choice of a man to edit the official publications of his party, publications that were suspended temporarily owing to the war, but which it seems are now to be revived. Mr. King has selected for this post Mr. John Lewis, at present one of the editorial writers on The Toronto Star and one of the best known and ablest journalisti in Canada. Mr. Lewis received his first training on the Globe but that experience did not develope partisan beams in his vision. He can still see clearly. He does not worship without reason or question any creed, party or leader. He is an independent thinker and under his editorial care the Liberal publication cannot fail to show improvement. The editorials that are prepared and canned at Ottawa for distribution among the faithful party organs will, we venture, have infinetly less of the spirit of intolerance than that which marked them in the past.

THE GAGE OF BATTLE.

MEETING IN WASHINGTON yesterday to prepare for the presidential contest less than a year away the Democratic National Committee of the United States picked up the gage of battle flung at their feet by the Republicans in the Senate. The ratification of the treaty of peace is to be made an issue in the coming campaign with the Democrats in favor of and the Republicans still opposed to the acceptance of the terms of that agreement without reservation. As was to be expected the Democrats accuse the Republicans of playing politics with the question and cast suspicions upon their patriotism, a charge that never fails the seasoned politician in a pinch.

The main issue, aside possibly from the tariff, between the two parties in the United States is now clearly defined and the presidential election of 1920 will be of moment to the entire civilised world. If the United States refuses to become a party to the League of Nations it must be admitted that the successful operation of that alliance will be seriously hampered.

But the American Senate has no excuse for holding aloof or for, in effect, multifying the treaty by making new reservation after reservation. The outstanding objection of the Republican Senators is that as the League of Nations was originally organised, with the consent of President Wilson, the United States would find itself in a helpless minority on all issues raised. The American nation would have one vote while every Dominion in the British Empire would be similarly endowed. In all questions deciding the future course of the parties to the League as to peace or war, the United States could easily be forced into action to which the majority of the American people were opposed.

It has been shown that there is no foundation for this objection. The Supreme Council is really the executive, the deciding power, on all such matters and on the Supreme Council each party to the League has one representative and one vote. If the Republicans are really innocent of the charge of playing politics, they are at least obessed with national traditions and are standing out for the theory that is the part of wisdom to keep out of the entanglements of European affairs.

The main thing is the desirability of wholly removing the power of any government o reward party service to itself by the gift of office, in the awarding of contracts, or in the disposal of the public property in the form of natural resources. No important contract should be awarded except by public tender; no mining, timber or fishing lease should be disposed of save in the same way, and offices filled by appointment should be open to anyone, regardless of political affiliations, who can satisfy a no-partisan board of civil service commissioners, consisting of not less than three men, that they possess the qualificatoins called for.

TIDE OF IMMIGRATION TO UNITED STATES

(New York Sun.)

The Commissioner-General of Immigration, Mr. Caminetti, notes in his annual report that it is now just a century since the United States began to keep tally of the newcomers to these shores. Considerable immigration followed the Revolution, but it declined during the war of 1812, only to start afresh after the peace of 1815. Twenty thousand arrived in 1817, and probably there would have been more if it had not been for the wretchedness of the ships. These were so crowded that Congress began to look at immigration traffic.

The influx was steady but not great from 1820 to 1845, most of the invaders coming from the United Kingdom. Then came two European tragedies which hastened immigration: famine in Ireland, revolution in Germany. From 114,000 in 1845 the human flood increased to 428,000 in 1854. In the latter year the German arrivals were 215,000. That was the end of that great Teutonic rush for a land of freedom. Our own war checked immigration, but in 1866 the Germans came again in a steady stream of about 130,000 a year until after the Franco-Prussian war. Then the American business depression of '70s kept German immigration down to about 40,000 annually. Also the Germans had a new empire to be interested in and deluded by.

The early '80s saw a new rush for America and happiness. In 1879 the immigration men counted 179,000 arrivals; in 1882, 789,000! The United States was winning back its prosperity. Germany was in an economic slump. The Scandinavians, Austrians and Italians were just waking up to the American opportunity. This wave lasted about ten years, until the hard times of 1893. About this time the immigration, which had been largely from northern and western Europe, began to shift. Southern and eastern Europe, which furnished only 11 per cent. of the total in 1882, furnished 75 per cent. of it in 1902. The floodgates were wide open. The flow westward in 1907 was 1,285,349. In 1914, just before the war, the figure was 1,218,480. Last year's immigration was the lowest since 1862.

In the last century more than 30,000,000 Europeans have come to the United States to live. The principal sources of our immigration have been as follows:

United Kingdom (except Ireland)	3,850,000
Ireland	4,350,000
Germany	5,500,000
Italy	4,100,740
Austria-Hungary	4,068,448
Russia	3,311,400
Scandinavia	2,134,414
Other countries	5,884,887

Of the future of our immigration Mr. Caminetti is not sure. He does not believe that the people of the recent enemy countries will resitate about coming on account of national feeling: "such differences are soon forgotten by the immigrant classes." Our immigration from Spain increased after 1898. The Commissioner believes the Germans will keep coming in spite of their losses of 2,000,000 men in the war, but it may be a different class of immigration—"army and navy officers, landowners, small capitalists and others upon whom the burden of changed conditions will fall so heavily that they will resort to emmigration for relief." The Austrians may come over, for they are badly off economically. Hungary, at least in the agricultural regions, is in better condition. Russia is in such a whirl that none can guess at its emigration. Probably when peace is restored many people will go back to pre-war tendencies and start for Ellis Island.

Fighting The High Cost Of Living

Organized labor leaders throughout the United States, including executive heads of 14 railroad brotherhoods, are to meet in Detroit within a week with representatives of the Farmers' National Council, to plan a concerted fight against the high cost of living.

The conference follows initial success of the venture of the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employes and Railway Shop Laborers in the manufacturing business, undertaken primarily to supply goods at cost to members of the organization. Other railroad brotherhoods and the Farmers' National Council have watched development of the plan, and have expressed a desire to co-operate.

Opposed to Division.

A. E. Barker, grand president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employes and Railway Shop Laborers, said that while his organization is opposed to division of control of factories operated by it, he saw no reason why other organizations should not operate factories manufacturing other lines of goods.

Maintenance-of-Way now owns knitting and underwear factories at Ypsilanti, a glove factory at Williamston, Mich., a tubing factory at Little Falls, N. Y., and is negotiating for two large plants in Toledo.

In addition to doing a mail order business, retail stores will be operated. The first one will be opened shortly on Fort street, in Detroit. Because of the limited scope of their factories, some lines of goods to be offered will be bought by the brotherhood.

Public is Admitted.

Originally it was intended to sell only to brotherhood members. It now is planned to admit the public to the plan's benefits. For protective purposes goods will be sold at a slight advance on cost. Profits will revert to the brotherhood, insuring goods at cost to members.

Mr. Barker is convinced that efforts to reduce living costs have begun at the wrong end. He believes the jobbers and retailers to be the real profiteers, and says personal investigations have convinced him. Mr. Barker says the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers contemplates establishing a bank. This and other plans will be discussed at the convention.

Mainly About People

The Hon. T. C. Norris, Premier of Manitoba, has said this much respecting the future things political in his Province— There will be another session of the present Legislaure, then an announcement will be made in regard to the general elections which may be held in July, and the voters' lists will contain almost twice as many names as were on the lists used at the last elections.

Those elections were held on September 16, 1915, when the 49 constituencies returned a majority for the Government of Mr. Norris that had taken office on May 12, 1915. Mr. Norris has, therefore, held office 4 years and 8 months.

It is almost 24 years since he entered public life, having been elected to the Legislature in 1896, re elected in 1899, but defeated by 16 votes in 193. Four years later he again won a seat, and has held it ever since.

By leading the Opposition for several sessions Mr. Norris served an apprenticeship to the position of Premier into which he entered upon the downfall of the Roblin Government in May, 1915.

Mr. Norris is a native of Ontario, having been born at Brampton, in Peel County, on September 5, 1861. Both of his parents were of Irish descent, and his father was a farmer Farming was also Mr. Norris' occupation before the duties of public life made other demands upon his time. His present home is in Winnipeg, but his earlie home was at Sifton in the northwestern part of Manitoba.

MEN AS CRITICS OF WOMEN'S CLOTHES

(By Mrs. J. E. Leslie.)

Men like to see their women dressed in pretty clothes. They are not critical as to quality of goods nor is high price an essential to beauty in their eyes. They just notice the general effect. Details mean nothing to them. If you don't believe it, ask some man to describe his wife's new coat or hat.

It is color and line that attract the average man. He likes bright or deep colors. The neutral shades do not appeal to him. He likes material that is soft to the touch. He doesn't know he likes all these thinks— that is, he doesn't know it definitely—nor why he likes them—but if you ask him he will tell you after puzzling over it a bit.

A girl who made a frock of pink cheesecloth to wear in some amateur dramatics afterward wore it in the bosom of the family once or twice. Years afterward her brother asked her why she never had another dress like that— that it was the prettiest she ever had. It mattered not to him that it was cheesecloth or that it was only basted up. It was pretty and becoming and his masculine mind could see no reason why it was not all right.

Husbands vary on the subject of their wive's clothes. Some are over critical, though maybe not expe... Some never notice what their wives wear—or never mention it, if they do.

One dear soul, asked childmgly by the woman of his heart why he never spoke of her clothes as some other husbands did, rose bravely to the situation by replying that he never had to.

One husband had a hobby for hats his wife's hats. Nothing else she wore ever attracted his attention in the least. But he always seemed to want her to have a different hat from what she had. Finally, she asked him what kind of a hat he wanted her to wear and discovered that there was a picture of a little brown hat in his mind that she had worn before their marriage some ten years before. That was his ideal. Nothing had ever reached it in her after marriage hats. It mattered not that the hat in mind was the kind that sat precariously on the top of the head, while the prevailing style was drawn down to the eyes.

One dear elderly lady wore her hat "wrong side to" all da in the presence of her husband. When his daughter asked him if he didn't see that "Mother" had her hat on wrong he said he thought she looked darned queer, but he didn't know what was the matter with her.

It is a common occurrence in a home where there are girls to hear father command them to go and do their hair differently or take some of the powder off their faces before they go out. A little poke at the offending hair and an airy assurance that the powder will blow off usually satisfies him.

He doesn't know the why or wherefore of his women's dress, or why he likes or disliges it. but he does and he doesn't and that's all there is to it.

Work of Peterboro Health Association

Editor Review— Now that the busy days of the holiday season are drawing to a close, it seems well to have our attention drawn to the regular systematic work being accomplished in the city by the various philanthropic organizations. By no means the least of these is the Peterborough Health Association, of which all our citizens, in a sense, are members, as a grant is placed in the hands of the treasurer of the association annually by the vote of the City Council.

During 1919 the services of the Association nurse have been faithfully and efficiently rendered, wherever and whenever asked for, and her yearly report of visits made should convince the most skeptical that for many reasons the services of a trained nurse placed at the disposal of the physicians of the city by the Health Association, is becoming increasingly valuable and necessary. Indeed two nurses could be kept very busy were the funds of the Association in a condition to warrant the outlay.

Although Shakespeare has told us "Comparisons are odious," yet for the sake of estimating the value of the work done b the Health Association Nurse during 1919, let us venture to compare her report with that of the Nursing Mission of Toronto. The Globe gives the annual report of this mission under the caption "Good Year Reported by Nursing Mission." This report, among other items, gives the number of nurses employed as ten, number of patients visited 870, number of visits paid by the ten nurses 5690, and adds: "Among the obstetrical cases, not a mother had died."

Now let us compare the above with the report of Miss Hamilton, our Health Association nurse. For eleven months of the same period, Miss Hamilton visited 121 patients, made 1455 visits, and 24 of 121 patients were obstetrical cases, of these the report states "not one mother nor one baby died." Such a report as this needs no apology, the obstetrical cases alone with the cheering addenda of "all safe' vindicates the employment of the trained nurse.

It must be the despair of the conscientious physician to administer maternity cases where no trained help is available, where mother and infant must be left in incompetent hands or to the chance dropping in of a neighbor. Recent statistics in the United States, show that 1600 women die every year in childbirth or one to every thousand mothers, nor is the proportion less in Canada. The maternity death rate in both countries comes next highest to that of tuberculosis.

Perhaps no group of citizens is more valuable or more necessary to the nation than these women. Every death means a home broken up, and perhaps one or more children, who will never know a mother's love. This is a fundamental loss to the nation as well as to the individual and community life.

Nor will it be out of place to express satisfaction at the completion of arrangements for the well babies' clinic, which will be opened very shortly in the city. During the eighteen months, the United States was in the war, the total number of its soldiers who died as a result of actual combat or wounds received in battle was 70,000. During the same period 450,000 children, under five years of age died in the United States, the vast majority of preventible diseases, and although statistics for Canada are not available at the moment, it is safe to assume the death rate of children of the same age in the Dominion will be found to measure up far to near to the percentage of the United States. Let the good work go on, let our citizens join in helping every effort which has for its object the conservation of the life and health of the community. Yours sincerely for

STRENGTH FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restores Health and Strength.

Lansing, Mich.—"After the birth of my child I was not able to stand on my feet. I was so weak I could not get up. I suffered such pains in my back I could not work or hardly take care of my baby. One of my neighbors recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I got better right away and was soon a new woman and could work hard, and I can recommend these remedies to other young mothers who are weak and ailing as I was."—Mrs. Ora O. Bowers, 621 S. Hosmer Street, Lansing, Mich.

Women who are in Mrs. Bowers' condition should not continue to suffer from weakness and pain—but profit from her experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For suggestions in regard to your condition write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience is at your service.

OLD TIMERS WERE NOT ALL THEY ARE CRACKED UP TO BE

Spectators Used to Leave Between Bouts in Older Days.

Human nature wills it that the present is never as good as the glorious past. Oldtimers will go on with the good old days and the good old fighters. Tix Kreling, a Frisco oldtimer, however, has the temerity to show up some of the old-timers.

"They're all the time talking about what happened at the old California Club— about how Corbett and Peter Jackson boxed 61 rounds.

"Know what Corbett and Jackson really did? Just stood and looked at each other for six or seven rounds at a time—until Mr. Fulda ordered Hiram Cook to stop the thing and throw them out.

"Great fights they had at the California Club! The fights were so interesting that the spectators would go out in the middle of them and eat ham and eggs.

"Sure they did! Used to go across the street and buy drinks— at the Charter Oaks saloon, at Cully's at the Grand Hotel bar, and at Cashman and Doyle's.

"George Dixon wasn't much. He looked like a little colored jockey and Johnny Kilbane could have pecked him to pieces.

"Peter Jackson would have stood as much chance of whipping Jack Johnson as I would.

"The oldtimers boxed like they were catching butterflies."

Hamilton retail grocers have formed an organization to fix weekly the prices on all goods sold by them.

DEFENCE LOSES FIRST POINT IN THE APPEAL

RUSSELL CASE IS NOW BEFORE FIVE JUDGGES AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Jan. 9.—One of the objections upon which counsel for the defence of R. B. Russell, are making their reserved case in the Court of Appeal in an endeavor to overturn the conviction and gain a new trial, was settled in favor of the Crown at the opening session of the appeal.

The first argument to be proceeded with was that upon the propriety of the first count of the indictment. After a long argument by Robert Cassidy, K.C., Chief Justice Perdue announced to the court that the learned judges were unanimous in the opinion that Mr. Cassidy's point was not well taken.

Argument Unfinished.

The second point to be argued was the second count on the indictment which set forth many of the acts brought about by the seditious intention, such as the strike. Mr. Cassidy argued that the mention of all these overt acts was improper and had exercised a prejudicial influence on the minds of the jury.

A great mass of extraneous matter had been improperly introduced in this matter, he said. The argument of this count was not finished at the adjournment. By mutual consent the appeal is being conducted before the evidence has been extended into written form. Only those portions of the evidence that are in question in the reserved case are being typed out. There are many of these, however, and it was stated that the work would not be completed for several days.

Five judges—Chief Justice Perdue Mr. Justice Haggart, Mr. Justice Cameron, Mr. Justice Fullerton, and Mr. Justice Denistoun, were present when proceedings commenced.

Mr. Robert Cassidy, K. C., senior defence counsel, briefly outlined the case. There had been a motion to quash the indictment, he said, on the ground that it was so framed as to prejudice the accused on his trial.

Much Difference of Opinion.

This motion was unsuccessful and during the trial there had arisen many differences of opinion, such as the right of the Crown to try Russell alone upon an indictment of conspiracy against him as well as seven other individuals, and the stand taken by the Crown in connection with the trial of all the accused together that they must exercise their challenges jointly or else proceed with the trial of one of the accused. Mr. A. J. Andrews, K. C., Crown counsel, said Mr. Cassidy, had declined to permit the defence to use four challenges of each of the eight accused, or thirty-two challenges in all.

Asked by Chief Justice Perdue if he contended that the Crown did not have power to try R. B. Russell separately, Mr. Cassidy replied in the affirmative.

RUB ON SPRAINS, PAINS SWELLING

Don't suffer. Relief comes the moment you rub with "St. Jacobs Liniment"

Don't stay crippled! Rub this soothing, penetrating liniment right into the sprain, ache or strain, and out comes pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling.

Get a small trial bottle from any drug store now—limber up! Rub the misery right out. A moment after "St. Jacobs Liniment" is applied you can not feel the slightest pain or soreness, and you can go about your regular duties.

"St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It has been used effectively for sprains, strains, soreness and stiffness for 60 years—six gold medal awards.

NO HAVEN IN CANADA FOR THE BOLSHEVIKI

AUTHORITIES ON THE ALERT TO PREVENT MIGRATION FROM UNITED STATES

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—Immigration authorities at Ottawa, while admitting that the hunted "Reds" of the United States will endeavor to secure sanctuary in Canada, point out that the immigration laws of Canada are very strictly opposed to the entry of undesirables and that immigration officers all along the border are on the alert to keep them out and that in addition a mounted police cordon is now spread from the Pacific through the Prairie Provinces and down toward Rainy River and Thunder Bay.

As a matter of fact several entrants have already been turned back on suspicion. Others may be held pending investigation and a clean bill is being demanded of all would-be immigrants.

"All our immigration officers have been soundly instructed to use their greatest care. We have little fear that large numbers of these objectionables are entering Canada without detection," said Mr. F. C. Blair, of the Immigration Department.

Border Cities Tighten Doors.

Windsor, Jan. 9. — Vigilance at both the Windsor and Walkerville ports has been doubled to provide against a possible influx of "Reds," following the numerous arrests of members of these organizations throughout the States.

Orval G. Adams, immigration officer here, stated to-day that he felt reasonably sure that there had been few, if any, enter Canada at either of these ports.

"When the authorities in Detroit commenced raiding the meetings of these organizations, I fully expected that many would seek refuge in this country," he said. "I consequently had a special lookout placed at each port and I feel safe in saying that the number to get through here would be small indeed."

TORONTO ALDERMAN GIVES A TEA PARTY

UNIQUE FUNCTION BY MRS. HAMILTON, FIRST LADY MEMBER IN COUNCIL

Toronto, Jan. 9.— Yesterday Toronto woman clubdom was treated to the unique sight of an alderman giving an afternoon tea.

For there from four to six the numerous friends of Canada's first feminine alderman called to personally offer their congratulations to a woman who had worked so long and so continuously for the welfare of women and children.

Lovely flowers made the cozy rooms with their wealth of tapestries, pictures and books more attractive than ever. Not only did Mrs. Hamilton give each guest a warm personal greeting, but just before the party was over the alderman-elect made a little speech.

"I want to tell you all," said she, "that I feel m election was just the flowering of all the work that has been done by the women. It was just the culmination of all the work women have been doing for so long. I can't begin to tell you how much I have appreciated the help which you gave me. I want to here express my love and affection to those who have helped."

Then Mrs Hamilton referred to the many messages of congratulation and well wishes she had received from coast to coast.

Mrs. Hamilton speciall mentioned "a delightful letter" from the Mayor and one from Manager Kent, of the Exhibition, one from Mrs. Hannington, of the Victorian Order, from various local councils and read one from Mrs. Walter Buchanan, of Ravenna.

Afterwards many a guest had a peep at the rare tributes which came from such varied directions and people.

The Mayor of Toronto added to his congratulations the hope that he might have her active co-operation in all things pertaining to the good government of the city in this most important year, while Miss Church said she considered Mrs. Hamilton's presence would be an acqusition to the council. Father Minehan wrote that he was glad she had been a candidate on account of her interest in social questions, and thought she would promote the "amenities of debate." One prominent business man congratulated Toronto on its "vision of a new day." Mr. Ralph Connable declared he looked forward to a "Lady Mayor."

London's Local Council of Women considered Mrs. Hamiltons victory a "safeguard for women's interests." Other messages received came from the Halifax Local Council, which thinks Toronto, more than the new alderwoman, is to be congratulated; from heads of Canadian Clubs, from Vancouver's Women's Forum, from Mrs. W. E. Sanford, head of the National Council of Women; from the head of the Victorian Order of Nurses, from the Historic Landmarks Association, from the Salvation Army Commission, speaking on the general good-will and support of the citizens; from the president and officials of the Canadian National Exhibition, thanking her, among other things, for her support of the Arena by-law.

Among Mrs. Hamilton's guests yesterday was an interesting little group of colored women from the Home Comforts Club. Though residing in another part of the city they came to Mrs. Hamilton on her nomination and gave ardent help to her campaign.

Rolf McPherson, who was just released after serving a 60-day term in Goderich County Jail, has been rearrested and taken to Stratford to answer a similar charge.

A by-law to spend $25,000 on a soldiers' home in Stratford was defeated.

The Associated School Boards of Montreal have started a movement for a grant of at least $1,000,000 to the elementary schools of the province.

Society Brand Clothes

A manufacturer that received much business from us during the past year offered us several sample coats. We did not hesitate to purchase, you may be sure, for samples can always be bought for a great deal less than their actual value, and now we are re-sellling them at a small profit. They are made of good materials and are well finished for a maker always puts his best into sample garments.

The materials are such staunch fabrics as frieze tweeds and whitneys, and the indisputable warmth of these fabrics is backed by mohair lining throughout, and in many instances satin is used in the sleeves instead of mohair. The colors are deep browns, dark greens, lovats, heather mixtures and plain navy.

If there is a present season style or a staple number that you want, it can be found in this collection. There are ulsters, belters, plain form fits, and form fits with waist seams, and both single and double breasted models.

Increasing Interest in Week of Prayer

The meetings of the week of prayer come to a close with the services tonight, in most of the churches. In St. Paul's the services will be continued through next week, with Rev. Mr. Glassford assisting. In St. Andrew's, Mr. McConnachie will speak at the Sunday evening service. There will doubtless be the largest attendance of the week at the services tonight. Where can you spend an hour more in keeping with the real demands of life than at one or other of the churches where these services are being held?

Tonight's Program.

Park Street Baptist — The Deacons in Charge.

Knox Church — The Men of the Church in Charge.

Trinity Methodist Church. — Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, of Toronto.

St. Andrew's Church — Rev. A. H. McConnachie.

George Street Methodist Church and St. Paul's Presbyterian — Rev. R. J. M. Glassford.

Mark Street Methodist.— Rev. G. E. Ross.

Mark Street Methodist Church

The meeting last night in Mark street church was very successful and largely attended. A song service was held for fifteen minutes before the regular meeting and was enjoyed by all. The attendance was larger than on any previous evening. Mr. Quinn, the organist, again presided at the piano, and proved himself a master. The best of all is that he is in perfect sympathy with the service. The response of Mark Street people, young and old, to the call of the pastor is magnificent. The interest in the meetings is widening and there is promise of great good.

"This movement is a great backward movement—back and find your first love; back to where you left your Lord standing at the door of some dance hall or card party. He could not enter with you and so you left Him standing alone. Back and find Jesus back to the family altar that has tumbled down, back to the class meeting and prayer meeting and holy sabbaths, back to your fearless stand for truth and righteousness. This is the only solution of our every problem."

Trinity Methodist Church

In Trinity Church the Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, of Toronto, one of the ablest ministers of the Methodist Church will speak at a grand rally of the congregation. This meeting is one of exceptional interest and it is hoped that everyone who can possibly be present will do so.

St. Paul's and George Street

The interest in the services which are being held in St. Paul's Church is deepening each night. A large attendance of young people is looked for tonight. Parents and teachers are reqpested to be present and to invite the young of the "teen" age to accompany them. Mr. Glassford's address last evening was listened to with rapt attention. It was based on the words: "Wilt thou not receipe thy work, O Lord, that thy people may rejoice in thee." This is the prayer of the church universal today. Everywhere there is felt the need of revival. The prayer implies that the life of the Church is at low ebb. This is the reason why we have such a thing as a "Forward Movement." The war has revealed the spiritual poverty of the Chruch. She is not the power in the world which God wishes her to be. Hence the need for revival. And a revival can only come through prayer. There is no royal road to the promised land of a happier and more prosperous life for the Church. It can only be reached through earnest, believing prayer. Not until church members are willing to deny themselves, deny the lower things, for the sake of the higher, the good things for the sake of the better can the Church arse and shine and reveal the glory of the Lord. When the Church has complied with the conditions the revival does not wait. God is longing to pour water on the dry and parched places. But He works in harmony with well established spiritual laws. One of these laws is the law of prayer. "Ask and ye shall receive." "If you regard iniquity in your hearts the Lord will not hear your prayers."

St. Andrew's Church

'Salvation, the greatest possible good for the Greatest Possible Number to be obtained in the Simplest Possible Way," was the subject at St. Andrew's last evening, based on the text, "Look Unto Me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." Isa 45:22 To be saved once more than deliverance from the penalty of sin. That might appeal to purely selfish instincts. But Christian redemption when rightly applied, meant a righteous manhood, a more obedient life of usefulness, Therefore it brought the greatest possible good to the sincere believer. It might not be possible to prove this in so many words. The things best worth proving could not be so demonstrated. Great ideas were spiritually discerned and must be known in experience. In every social grade of life there were people who made the same testimony that in Christ they possessed the true riches the greatest good. This blessing was for the greatest number. "All the ends of the earth." rich and poor educated and uneducated, all might obtain this fulness of life. Christianity was the great missionary religion. It could be preached to all the families of mankind in the assurance that it would be received and prove a blessing. And it was to be received in the simplest possible way. "Look unto me." The upward look of faith brought light and salvation into the life. Many went through life looking downward, attending only to worldly matters. We ought not to neglect these but we should learn to look away from them to the uplifted Christ. God himself was the guarantee of all manner of blessings to the believer.

Knox Presbyterian Church

The meeting in Knox Church last evening was in charge of the women of the congregation. Mrs. McPherson presided and gave an address on "prayer." Mrs. Walter Roger spoke on the work of the Women's Missionary Society. The meeting tonight will be in charge of the men of the congregation. It is hoped there will be a large attendance of all the members of the church.

Park Street Baptist Church.

The service last night in Park St. church was conducted by the pastor. The meeting was a helpful one and is sure to result in a deeper spirit of consecration upon the part of the members of the church. The meeting tonight will be in charge of the deacons.

LINDSAY CHECKER CLUB HAS GOOD PLAYERS

DEFEAT PETERBOROUGH TEAM BADLY IN LAST NIGHT'S CONTEST.

A Peterborough checker team, composed of Sgt. A. Blade, Chief Thompson, Peter McCarther, John Edgar, James Lynch and Hugh McCulloch, journeyed to Lindsay by motor last night and went down to defeat before the representatives of the Lindsay club with a score of 6 wins, 6 losses and 24 losses.

The players report that the Lindsay club are well organized and have an excellent room at the Elmore Hotel. The most surprising feature of the contest was the great interest so many took in the games, many spectators being present.

After the match the Lindsay club treated the Peterborough players to a hot dinner and in every way gave them a royal time. Cobourg plays in Lindsay tonight.

The local players decided to organize a Peterborough Checker Club so that the city may be better represented by players in good practice. Any wishing to join in the organization of this club should signify their intentions to Chef Thompson at the police station.

Referring to Wednesday night's hockey game, the general impression in Scugogville is that the Petes had a great deal of nerve to hand out such a bumping to the Lindsay players on their own ice.

BIG FEATURE AT EMPIRE THEATRE

CONSTANCE TALMADGE IN LATEST PICTURE "A LADY'S NAME."

Constance Talmadge, presented by Lewis J. Selznick, will be seen at the Empire Theatre, Monday in her latest Select Picture. "A Lady's Name," taken from Cyril Harcourt's play of the same name, which was adapted for the screen by Julia Crawford Ivers.

Mabel Vere, a young and popular writer, is engaged to be married to Gerald Wantage, a priggish young man, with whom she is growing dissatisfied. To be relieved of the ennui caused by her very conservative fiance and also to obtain good copy for a novel she intends writing, she advertises in one of the daily papers for a husband.

Maud Bray, a suffragette of determined character, with whom Mabel lives, is thoroughly disgusted with her friend. Mauds one ambition is to "strike off the shackles that man has forged for woman."

The first applicant to Mabel's ad arrives, but proves impossible and is hurriedly ushered out by the masculine Maud. Then Gerald Wantage arrives to express his dissatisfaction of the ad which he had seen in the paper. He finally gets her to promise that she will not answer any more of the letters.

After Gerald's departure, Adams, a butler who is anxious to find a wife with a little money, arrives. He invites Mabel to tea the following afternoon at the house where he works, telling her that his master will be out. Mabel, delighted to have found an interesting character, accepts.

The third applicant is Noel Corcoran, whom she turns away. The next afternoon she keeps her engagement to have tea with Adams and his fellow servants. The cook, who is in love with Adams, objects to Mabel and finally becomes hysterical. Suddenly Adams discovers that his master is coming home to dinner with friends. The cook refuses to prepare the dinner and Mabel finally decides to cook the dinner herself. Adam's master turns out to be Noel Corcoran. He finds Mabel preparing the dinner and on hearing the story enters into the spirit of it.

Mabel finally breaks her engagement with Gerald. Adams tries to blackmail her, when he is stopped by Noel, who suddenly appears upon the scene. When Noel learns of her broken engagement he takes things into his own hands and before long Mabel is the proud possessor of her second engagaement ring, which promises to be the last.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

The opening performance of the new vaudeville policy of the Grand Opera House was given yesterday, when four splendid acts and eight reels of first-class pictures were seen. The management has spent a large sum of money in extra lighting arrangements and a new gold fibre screen replaces the old white curtain. This screen is a great improvement and the pictures are now shown with scarcely a flicker at all.

Keno and Wagner, song and dance artists, introduced some new songs and steps. Lou Elliott, in a male impersonation, scored a decided hit. Her voice is especially adapted to the parts she plays. Knight and Gail have a pretty little act and their songs were appreciated by the audience. Hamlin and Mack introduced a novelty in their act and their singing and dancing was good.

The pictures included Pictorial Life, Roscoe Arbuckle in "Joy Skidding," and Sessue Hayakawa in "The Gray Horizon." This last is a particularly good picture in which this famous Japanese film star is given a great opportunity to display his ability.

The Grand orchestra, under the able direction of Mr. G. Howarth, rendered some particularly appropriate music during the evening. This organization has lately been augmented by the addition of several instruments and [illegible] now second to none in the city.

This splendid program will be repeated today and tomorrow with matinees both days. It is the intention of the management of the Grand to devote the last three days of each week to combination vaudeville and pictures and no doubt their efforts to provide clean, high-class entertainment for the theatre-going public of Peterborough, will be apprecited by all.

FAMOUS SPORTSMAN LEAVES LARGE ESTATE

STOCK IN SEAGRAM DISTILLERY DIVIDED AMONG THREE SONS

Kitchener, Jan. 9.—Cash bequests ranging from $500 to $25,00 to old and faithful employees are features of the will of Joseph E. Seagram, widely-known horseman and distillery owner, of Waterloo, who died August 18, 1919.

His will, dated January 30, 1919, has just bee probated and an estate valued at $4,039,710 is disposed of mainly to three sons and one daughter, the latter since deceased.

Mores than half of the six-page will is concerned with the late Mr. Seagram's horses. In his time, Mr. Seagram owned many cup and trophy winners, including Queen's and King's plates. The cups and trophies are all carefully and specifically distributed among members of his family with the wish that they never be permitted to pass out of the Seagram family. The bulk of the estate consists of stocks and bonds, particularly stock in the Joseph E. Seagram & Sons' Company, Limited, which under the provisions of the will is to be passed down to three of the sons who have long been active in the business.

The stock in the Seagram distillery is divided as follows: 5,100 shares to E. F. Seagram; 2,948 to Norman, and 1,948 to Thomas.

The will directs that a fund of $250,000 be created and the income paid in half-yearly installments to Blanche Alexandrine Bowlby, widow of the late George Herbert Bowlby, M.D., during the period of her natural life. As Mrs. Bowlby, who was a daughter of the late Mr. Seagram, died last summer without leaving iss u ethroecup, issue, the corpus of $250,000, as directed by the will, reverts in equal shares to the three sons named as executors.

DOCTORS WILL HELP WITH WORK OF BABIES' WELFARE CLINIC

Medical Association so Decides Unanimously—Meeting of Ladies Interested Makes Further Arrangements

The Babies' Welfare Clinic met at Dr. Birnie's office on Tuesday evening. A letter was read from the Peterborough Medical Society, stating that at a recent meeting a resolution was passed unanimously approving of the general principles of the Child Welfare Movement as outlined in a letter sent to them by the secretary of the women's committee.

Resolutions were also passed by the Medical Society to the effect that two clinics a week should be held and that ten medical men be appointed to do the medical work of the clinic and that they be an advisory committee to the ladies in the arrangement of matters of detail.

The president of the Medical Society was empowered to interview the members of the profession to secure volunteers for this work, convene the committee and allot the work to be done.

The response by the medical men has been practically unanimous this being another of the many services rendered the public by the medical profession. It is hoped that this offer will be properly appreciated and taken advantage of.

In order to get ahead with the work as soon as possible the women's committee has arranged the following sub-committees:

Registration Committee, in charge of Mrs. R. Harstone and Mrs. J. Kendry. The work of this committee will be to secure workers to make a survey of the city and secure names, addresses, etc., of all children under four years of age.

Nurses Committee, in charge of Mrs. D. Carmichael and Mrs. Jamieson. This committee will secure nurses for each clinic and arrange all details of this part of the work.

Buying Committee, Dr. J. Birnie and Mrs. A. E. Coulthard and Mrs. J. C. Davidson, will have charge of this department, viz: the buying of all necessary supplies.

Social Committee. This part of the work has been kindly undertaken by the King's Daughters, which is sufficient guarantee that all will be done which is possible to make the clinic hours pleasant.

The date of the first clinic will be announced as soon as the arrangements for it can be completed and it is hoped that the Provincial health nurse from the Provincial Department of Health can be secured early in the season to give an interesting demonstration.

Mrs. Frank C. Neal has been appointed secretary-treasurer of the Babies' Welfare Committee.

ELECTION NEXT FALL?

WHEN YOU SEE A TESTIMONIAL

from a person you do not know, pay no attention to it. When you see a testimonial from people in your own locality and whom you do know, if you have any doubt, go and ask them. This should convince you

We cannot impress too strongly upon the people of Canada that there are no Cure-a-Cold Tablets just like Dr. Norvall's. There are no Tablets just as good as Dr. Norvall's. Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets are in a class by themselves

In order to convince you of this we have interviewed the druggists of the City of Peterborough, and as they are all selling patent medicines and preparations of known value, they are in a position to judge the merits of Dr. Novall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets.

DR. NORVALL'S CURE-A-COLD TABLETS

are recommended to relieve Colds, Attacks of Lagrippe, and Constipation.

THE FOLLOWING PETERBOROUGH DRUGGISTS TESTIFY:

The Nugent Drug Co. states;—"We recommend Dr. Norvall's preparations because we are firmly convinced they are the best on the Canadian market"

Mr. William Madill, Druggist, says;—"We have a steady and increasing sale for Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, and we are pleased to state that our customers are pleased with the results.

James Lynch, Druggist,:—"We recommend Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets because we get better results from them than any others we keep in stock."

The Warne Drug Co. :—"We have a large sale of Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, and we have no hesitation in recommending them to our customers."

Mr. E. Payne, Druggist, says:—"Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets are one of the best preparations we keep in stock, and our customers speak highly of them."

Mr. Vincent Sullivan, Druggist, says:—"We sell a large number of Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, and a customer who once tries them will have no other kind in future

Mr. W. J. Kent, Druggist, states;—We recommend Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets, because we consider it our duty to recommend what will give the best results.

Mr. C. M. Moncur, Druggist, says:—"In colds and lagrippe I think they have no equal.

Messrs. McDermid & Jury, Druggist, says:—"A customer who once tries Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-cold Tablets is a satisfied customer.

Tanner Drug Co., Lakefield, says:—they have sold Dr. Norvall's Cure-a-Cold Tablets for some time and know their customers are well satisfied with the results.

We might fill a page with testimonials from individuals in this city. but we consider the Druggists, who are in a position to advise the public, sufficient

All dealers are authorized to refund the money to their customers if they fail to do what we claim for them.

TWO INTERESTING GAMES FOR THE OPENING OF THE CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

A Large Crowd Will be at Hand Tonight to See the Clashes Between C. G. E. and Business College and the Canadian Woollen and Belmont Club.

The City Hockey League opens this evening at 7.45 with the promise of good ice and a fast double-header of games. In the opening fixture the C.G.E. tool room take on the Business College. The former practiced last evening and are very confident of taking the Business boys into camp. The veterans from the college, for every member of the team saw service in France, are equally as confident and have been just itching to get on the ice for the past couple of days. It is safe to promise that this will be a battle royal from start to finish.

And the other end of the double-header will also be a strenuous checking affair with Auburn going in the favorites over the Belmont Club. The former squad, who have been training under the direction of Jerry Coughlin, have a couple of former stars on their line-up. Fred Graham, who made such a sensation in Junior O.H.A. ranks, will be there as full of "pep" as ever. "Mucker" Legrow will guard the net and the former O.H.A. guardian will prove hard to beat for the opposing City League players. Besides this they have a speedy bunch of youngsters on their line-up that will never quit until the final gong is sounded.

The Belmont Club aggregation are more or less of an unknown quantity but promsie to have a strong line-up on hand that will give the speedy Auburn squad a chase for their money.

It is a long time since such an interesting double-header was staged for local hockey enthusiasts.

McNEILL-SHEPPARD CUP GOES TO ORILLIA

CURLERS FROM THAT TOWN WON, HOME AND ABROAD YESTERDAY

Two interesting contests in curling were staged yesterday between Peterborough and Orillia for the McNeill-Sheppard Cup, in which Peterborough went down to defeat, both in Orillia where four rinks played curled, and at home where four more tried conclusions. There were various opinions as to why they lost but to Peterborough's credit the main one seemed to be that Orillia had the better team. One member was overheard to say: ::Thank fate, we didn't play ten minutes longer."

The score in Orillia was as follows:

Peterboro.		Orillia.
Wightman	6	Jamieson	17
Skinner	8	Farewell	23
Giroux	7	Carruthers	23
Foote	5	Hinds	21
	26		84

This shows a win for Orillia by 58 points.

In the games played in Peterborough the score was a little more even, being 68-56 in favor Orillia. Peterborough won on two rinks and lost on two rinks. The teams lined up as follows:

Orillia.	Peterboro.
A. Payne	J. Penrose
Dr. Carson	F. Downey
A. Thompson	A. Mooro
Dr. Harvie, s..14	E. Bowes, s. ..16
W. A. Tudhope	Geo. Hall
Dr. W. E. Brown	H. Hain
B. W. Hatley	W. J. Thompson
B. F. Stewart, s..........12	W. J. McDermid, s..........14
W. Weatherwax	W. G. Montgomery
A. Morton	W. C. McKeenan
E. George	A. C. Kay
B. Calins, s...22	W. R. Lang, s...11
C. McKonkey	G. Webb
J. A. Duncan	H. Martin
C. Kirkpatrick	R. G. Sturgeon
J. C. Curran, s..........20	J. Connell, s..........14

The total score was, Orillia 152, Peterborough 82. The cup was all crated up and ready to be shipped to Orillia.

OBITUARY

JAMES BALDWIN

The death occurred last night at 699 Harvey street, of James Baldwin in his 58th. year. The deceased was born in Napanee and had spent his life in different parts of Ontario. He has resided in this city for four years. He is survived by his wife. The funeral will take place from the residence at two o'clock, Saturday afternoon, the Rev. R. Pogue, officiating. Interrment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

PERCY D. FITZGERALD.

The death occurred this morning at 10:45 o'clock of Mr. Percy D. Fitzgerald, 300 Aylmer street, at the age of 39 years, after an illness of one week.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his wife, three brothers, Clarence, of Moose Ridge, Sask., Alex. and Walter, of this city, and four sisters, Mrs. M. Nelson, Saskatchewan, Mrs. H. McConkey, Smith, Mrs. H. Sisson and Mrs. Ernie Hanna, of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place from the residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in Little Lake Cemetery.

MR. & MRS. R. J. DEVEY ENTERTAIN CHOIR

WARM WELCOME FOR CHOIR-MUSTER AFTER TWO MONTHS' ABSENCE

At the conclusion of choir practice last night Mr. and Mrs. Devey invited the choristers to Coleman Bros.' restaurant to partake of an impromptu lunch. Mr. H. W. Morphet said that the hearty welcome they extended to Mr. and Mrs. Devey was shown in a very practical way, when every chorister who could do so was on hand. They hoped Mr. Devey would soon be restored to his usual health, and be spared for many years to continue his splendid work in St. John's.

Mr. Devey heartily thanked the choristers for their hearty welcome after two months' absence, and looking back over the forty-four years he had spent in Cassock and Surplice, he could recall no occasion which afforded greater pleasure than the present one.

The splendid attendance that night was another instance of the valuable service so unselfishly and faithfully maintained, which was an outstanding feature of St. John's choir.

Their earnest sympathy went out to their sick members, to whom all wished speedy restoration to health.

The singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and the National Anthem concluded a pleasant and memorable evening.

A FINE INSTRUMENT

MAGNIFICENT C MELODY SAXOPHONE ON VIEW IN WINDOW OF GREENE MUSIC STORE

There is now on view in the window of the Greene Music Store, Charlotte street, something unusual in the musical instrument line. The store has procured for a local customer a very fine C Melody True-Tone Saxaphone. It is made in satin finish silver, the bell being gold plated, and has pearl inlaid finger tips. It is enclosed in leather bound, plush-lined case, and has a very handsome appearance. It is to be used in orchestra work, and is the third of these instruments sold by the Greene Music Store in the last three weeks. Its value is in the neighborhood of $165.00.

Annual Ball Of The Knights Of Columbus

The Knights of Columbus held one of the biggest and best balls of the year in the G. W. V. A. Hall last night. Over two hundred people were present. The music was supplied by the Manley Orchestra from Toronto. This eight-piece orchestra, including Mrs. Bert Caldwell, the noted violinist, whose great song feature, "My Baby's Arms," made the hit of the season. They are undoubtedly the finest orchestra that has played at any of Peterborough's dances for a long time. There was no waiting between dances, and encores were rendered for nearly every dance.

Cards were played upstairs in the card rooms. Prizes were given to the highest scorers, lady and gentleman. The lady's prize was won by Mrs. H. Donovan, and the gentleman's by Mr. Frank Fairen.

The catering of refreshments was done by Hooper & Co., who served the large crowd in little more than half an hour, starting at 11:30 and finishing shortly after 12 o'clock.

The affair was undoubtedly one of the biggest of the season, and a very enjoyable time was voted by all.

METHODIST LAYMEN MEET AT BELLEVILLE

GATHERING YESTERDAY ADDRESSED BY MANY PROMINENT MINISTERS.

(Special to The Review.)

Belleville, Jan. 9.—Mr. H. W. Ackerman, of this city, presided Thursday over an important meeting of laymen of the Bay of Quinte Conference. After luncheon at Hotel Quinte Dr. J. W. Graham, of Toronto, spoke pointedly of the need and opportunity of the hour and of the work in the Methodist National Campaign. Rev. R. A. Whattam, formerly of Mark Street Church, Peterborough, conference organizer, followed with a clear account of the work in the Bay of Quinte Conference, after which Rev. S. F. Dixon, of Lakefield, spoke for the Publicity Bureau.

Messrs. F. W. Galbraith, Port Hope; W. B. Deacon, Belleville; Wilbur Gordon, Tweed, and T. G. Bell, Belleville, gave rousing address, and by unanimous resolution, the meeting pledged itself to make every endeavor to reach the Bay of Quinte Conference share of the $4000,000 thank-offering of the Forward Movement. Warm words of appreciation were spoken of Mr. Ackerman's splendid leadership. A few ministers attended, including Revs. S. C. Moore, B.A., B.D., Bowmanville; W. B. Tucker, B.A., B.D., Whitby; H. B. Kenny, Campbellford; J. S. L. Wilson, B.A., B.D., Cobourg; C. W. Barrett, Fenelon Falls, and among laymen were Messrs. A. C. Denike, Havelock; C. J. Burr and C. Massey, Bloomfield; A. W. Abbott, Selby; Prof. G. F. Stewart, Belleville.

MANY ATTEND ANNUAL BANQUET GIVEN BY FAIR PRESIDENT, ROLAND DENNE

Long List of Speakers All Refer to Great Possibilities of Peterborough Industrial Exhibition in the Future if Citizens of City and County Will Stand Behind It.

"Was 'Rolly' Denne's Banquet a success?"

"I should say it was.'

That was question and answer heard last night, as about midnight a large band of determined men, determined to make Peterborough Industrial Exhibition a Provincial and even Dominion Exhibition, wended their way homeward from the bountiful banquet so generously given by the president of the Industrial Board, Mr. Roland Denne.

Mr. Denne appealed to all to get behind the Board and boost the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition so that it might become even a greater asset to the city.

He thanked the City and County Councils and all others who had assisted in improving the grounds and buildings in the last couple of years.

After the toast to the King had been proposed by the Chairman, His Honor Judge Huycke was called on to propose the toast to the City and County Councils.

He stated that at the present time there was too little gratitude shown toward the work of councillors. The people owe a deep debt of gratitude to the faithful and usually efficient services of the reeves, mayor and councillors of both city and county.

The people vote for men to public office because they have confidence in their brain power, common sense and honesty. The councillors should be ruled by this and be prepared to oppose public opinion on some questions to follow the dictates of their conscience. People should appreciate this attitude rather than oppose it.

The Judge appealed to all neighboring councils to co-operate to make the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition greater and greater and add to the prosperity of both city and county.

In responding to this toast, Mayor Duncan said that he was proud to see the city had elected such good men to the council, to carry on its work during the next year. Industries could not locate in a better place than Peterborough and every citizen should co-operate to bring some very large industries, which are in view to this city.

Ald. Turner commenced his reply with the statement that Peterorough has everything to make the city great All it needs now is vision and faith of its citizens. Now that the city was about to control the Athletic Park, Mr. Turner suggests an honorary Athletic Commission be appointed to control and encourage amateur sport in the city.

Ald. Gainey referred to his past experience in the Council as an education in civic administration. He suggested to the employers that to boost the exhibition they grant a half-holiday to their employees with full pay to enable them to visit it.

Reeve Nichols of Smith, speaking in the absence of Warden McIntosh, assured the Industrial Board of the support of the County Council.

To the Parliaments

In moving the toast to the Provincial and Dominion parliaments, Mr. S. O. Cameron said that the people were legislated nigh unto death. He hoped that the new representatives when they get there, will not devote their time and energy to passing more laws, but will do their utmost toward developing a prosperous and contented people. High prices and high wages have not brought contentment and the only thing that will abolish the discontent is community interest and community spirit.

In the past Peterborough nearly succeeded in getting the government experimental farm. Now, with firm representatives on all sides of us, we should get something like one nearly got before. He hoped the governments would assist the exhibition and he hoped to see a real school fair of its own, next fall.

Mr. J. Sexsmith, M.P., drew attention to the fact that if Peterborough City is prosperous, Peterborough County will be prosperous. All that is needed is the united effort of the people from the city and from the county and the Industrial Exhibition is promoting that unity.

The Parliaments can accomplish just what the people assist them to acomplish, he stated, and all should put their shoulder behind the wheel and help President Denne and his Board of Directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Mr. T. Tooms, M. P. P., assured the gentlemen assembled that altho' he was representing the Labor party, the interests of Peterborough would be paramount in all his actions.

He referred to the Industrial Exhibition as a true indicator of Peterboroughs prosperity, and appealed to city and county to work together for its improvement.

Mr. S. Staples, M. P. P. for Durham, known as "Sammy the Kid," as he stated, appealed to all to rally to make the exhibition great and benefit of the surrounding district.

Deserves Patronage

Mr. R. R. Hall, in proposing the toast to the Industrial Exhibition, declared that such an excellent exposition deserved the patronage of all the citizens. It does a great deal more good than appears on the surface, he stated, Friendly competition increases the quality of the livestock of the district and does something toward developing the resources of this county that may solve the terrible problems on the continent of Europe.

In responding to this toast Mr. W. R. Breyfogle made the pleasing announcement that 26 manufactories were prepared to make representative exhibits at next year's exhibition. He stated that the community spirit was strongly evidenced on Exhibi-

PROF. ROBERTSON TO ADDRESS CANADIAN CLUB

James Wilson Robertson, L.L.D., C.M.G., one of the most prominent of the public men in Canada today, will be the speaker at a luncheon of the Canadian Club at the Empress Hotel next Thursday. As it is impossible to secure the hotel for the evening of that date it has been decided by the directors of the club to hold the luncheon at 12.20 p.m. It is believed that the change in the hour will lead to improve the attendance as the business men of the city will be able to avail themselves of this opportunity to hear one of the most distinguished speakers in the Dominion. The address will not be long enough to detain the guests of the club from their business affairs beyond the time usually taken by them every day for luncheon. At 3.30 on the same day Dr Robertson will address a meeting of the Women's Canadian Club.

Dr. Robertson is a graduate of the farm and the cheese factory and early in his public career was professor of dairying at the Guelph Agricultural College. In 1909 he was called to the Federal field by appointment to the Commission of Conservation. He has represented Canada on important missions in Europe on various occasions. He is a personal friend of the King of Italy and other royal personages.

During the war Dr. Robertson's services to the Empire were valuable. He has held the position of chairman of the Ottawa and Ottawa Valley Church of the Red Cross since 1915, a head director of production for Eastern Canada, and was chairman of the Dominion Executive Committee of the Agricultural Relief of the Allies' Fund.

Dr. Robertson is an authority on all educational matters, including technical training, a live topic in Peterborough today, and his address here cannot fail in interest to all those who have made a study of such problems. The directors of the club hope for one of the most successful functions in the history of the organization. In the meantime citizens are urged to help on the good work by becoming members of the organization.

TORONTO ROBBED BY PROVINCE

City Claims To Be Overtaxed For Public Institutions

Toronto, Jan. 10.— Mayor Church, who claims that the city has to bear a large share of the upkeep of institutions such as jails, asylums, technical schools, that ought to be boren by the Province, has received replies to his enquiries from the other Provinces of the Dominion. In British Columbia, the province pays all expenses and fifty cents a head extra for all free patients in the hospitals. In Manitoba and Nova Scotia the jails and court houses are maintained equally by the municipalities and the Provincial Government. In Alberta, Saskatchewan and New Brunswick, the court houses, jails and registry offices are maintained solely by the Provincial Governments, the Government making contribution to the hospitals of the last-mentioned Province. Mayor Mederic Martin, of Montreal, says that the cost of erection and maintenance of the court houses, the jails and asylums is financed by the Government of Quebec the city contributing only a small amount.

GERMANS STILL HOLD GRUDGE

NO ARRANGEMENTS MADE TO RESUME PEACE RELATIONS WITH FRANCE

REPRESENTATIVE NOT APPOINTED

REGRET EXPRESSED THAT UNITED STATES IS OUT OF NEGOTIATIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 10.—Although the exchange of the ratifications of the Versailles Treaty to this afternoon is the final act that restores before-the-war relations between France and Germany, no arrangements have been made by Germany, as far as can be ascertained here, to resume peace relations with this country.

Reports having been circulated unchallenged for some time to the effect that Baron Kurt von Lersner would be designated as the first German Charge d'Affaires, it had become accepted as a fact.

Von Lersner, however, told the Associated Press this morning that he had not been named for the post and was in ignorance of the intentions of his government.

Regret over America's abstention from participating in the ratification of the Treaty of Versailles is again expressed in editorials in this morning's newspapers.

IRISH PARTY MAKE ATTACK ON POLICE BARRACKS IN THE COUNTY OF GALWAY

Doors and Windows Riddled With Rifle Bullets and One Police Sergeant is Slightly Wounded.

Dublin, Jan. 10.—The police barracks, six miles from the village of Tuam, Galway county, was attacked Thursday evening by a large party of men, according to reports reaching this city. The attacking party, said to number about one hundred men, besieged the barracks, firing repeated rifle volleys which riddled the doors and smashed nearly all the windows. During the fight two or three bombs were thrown, one wall being demolished and one police sergeant slightly wounded. The occupants of the barracks returned the fire of the assailants.

Two bold mail robberies, one near Limerick, and the other near Mullinger, were reported Friday. About fifty pounds sterling in transit to recipients of old age pensions, was secured

MICHAEL BAHRI CONSIDERS IT AN INJUSTICE THAT HE MUST HANG

Declares His Position is no Different From That of Three Men Whose Sentences Were Commuted

Thomas Kornek and Michael Bahri must pay the supreme penalty Wednesday morning for the murder of Philip Yanoff at the stone quarry in the neighborhood of Havelock last June.

Their accomplices in the crime, Alexander Martinuk, Philip Rotinski and Sam Ziluski, leave this afternoon in custody of Sergt. Blade and Constable Boyd, for Kingston Penitentiary, where they will be forced to abide for the rest of their days.

Official word was received last night by Mr. G. N. Gorodn, solicitor for Bahri and Martinuk, and by officials of the Jail, to this effect. Canon Davidson visited the condemned men this morning after the word had been given them that they must hang on Wednesday, without any hope of the sentence being commuted. "It is too terrible to talk about," said the canon, when questioned as to how the men took the news.

Mr. Davidson cannot understand the attitude of Kornek, the actual murderer, who takes his punishment like a stoic of the old Roman empire. He speaks little: in fact he can talk little English and accepted the final word of his doom as no surprise.

The condition of Bahri is quite different. He is very temperamental and insists that he is suffering an injustice. He denies that he concocted the plot and, as was previously stated, he had no gun on his person at the time of the robbery. In fact, he asserts that he was last up the stairs into the sleeping room of the bunkhouse.

Bahri admits he did wrong, but fails to see where he did anything to merit death. He claims his position is exactly the same as that of the other three men who will be allowed to live.

Mr. Gordon and Mr. Emery, who appeared for the men, have done all in their power to have the sentences commuted, and are to be congratulated on their success in the case of three of the men. They took advantage of the plea for mercy the jury brought in in each case, and made an appointment with the Minister of Justice, which they kept on the 23rd of December. They presented their plea to the Department, and returned hopeful of saving three, and perhaps four, of the men.

"I guess there is no more hope for those two," remarked Mr. Gordon this morning.

Father Ltotosky of Toronto, priest of the Russian Orthodox Church, will be in the city at the beginning of the week to give spiritual comfort and to administer the rites of the church to the two men before their execution.

PLUMBERS ASK INCREASE

Hamilton Workers Also Demand 44 Hour Week.

Hamilton, Jan. 10.— The plumbers' union served notice on employers that, beginning at once, a forty-four hour week will go into effect and that any work done Saturday morning must be paid for at the rate of time and a half. The plumbers have been working forty-four hours a week and receiving seventy cents an hour. Beginning in March they are demanding ninety cents an hour.

LAVA FROM MEXICO VOLCANO SPREADS RUIN AND DEATH FOR TWENTY MILES

GERMANY SIGNS PEACE TREATY WITH ALLIES

AGREEMENT RATIFIED AND TAKES EFFECT AT 4:15 P.M. TODAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 10.— German Peace Treaty Protocol was signed by Germany's representative here today, preliminary to the ceremony of exchanging ratifications putting the treaty into effect. The Versailles treaty making peace between Germany and the ratifying Allied Powers, was put into effect at 4:15 this p.m. by the exchange of ratifications.

RECOUNT HAS COMMENCED

The recount of the ballots for Mayor commenced this morning at 10 o'clock and at the time of going to press was in progress.

Those present are His Honor Judge Huycke, City Clerk Armstrong, W. H. Taylor and his agent, R. R. Hall, A. A. McIntyre and his agent, G. W. Hatton.

CONSTABLES WATCH POINTS OF ENTRY

NO UNVACCINATED TRAVELLERS FROM ONTARIO ARE ALLOWED IN QUEBEC

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 10.—More drastic steps have been taken by the Provincial Board of Health for the protection of Quebec's population against any possible spread of small-pox from Ontario. Commencing last night, Provincial constables have been placed at all points of entry into the Province—Hull, Rigaud, Dalhousie Mill and Grenville—where all passengers on incoming trains who do not meet the requirements of the medical inspectors are compelled to land and are either vaccinated or sent back to Ontario by the next train.

TORONTO'S DEBT $103,000,000

Must Go Slow With General Improvements This Year.

Toronto, Jan. 10.— Toronto's debt at the beginning of 1920 is $104,000,000—almost exactly what it was a year ago. The maturing of debentures has been offset by new issues. Debentures not sold at the year's end were practically confined to $450,000 of which $150,000 is for parks.

There are, however, considerable debts already incurred for which debentures will have to be issued during 1920. These include $3,000,000 for local improvements (such as roadways) authorized, and $1,000,000 for the Hydro, besides the cost of Royce Avenue park, which has to be settled by arbitration, and of Scarboro Beach park, if the city finally decides to purchase. These sums, with the unnegotiated debentures, will run the total up towards $5,000,000.

THOUSANDS FROZEN TO DEATH IN BLIZZARD

BODIES OF THREE HUNDRED REFUGEES ARE FOUND IN FOREST

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Reval, Jan. 10—Thousands were frozen to death in a blizzard which swept across Esthonia on New Year's Day. Reports recived here state that 300 bodies of refugees were found in the forest between this city and Narva, and the American Red Cross workers say there were instances of babies being frozen to death at their mothers' breasts. Many fugitives from the collapsed army led by Gen. Yudenitch in his recent offensive against Petrograd have perished in the drifting snow.

Every Village Within That Radius Has Been Wiped Out and Floods of Contaminated Water Follow Earthquake Survivors Are in Panic Fearing Another Disaster

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mexico City, Jan. 10.— Flames are still being emitted by a new volcano at San Miguel in the western part of the state of Vera Cruz, according to advices received here last night. It is stated that volcanic dust has floated as far as Coscomate Pec, about twenty miles east of the new crater. Every village in that vicinity has been destroyed, while lava and floods of contaminated water from the sources, opened by the recent earthquakes are flooding the district near the crater. Refugees from San Miguel confirm the earlier reports telling of numerous deaths from falling buildings and poisonous gas. Rebels, who had their quarters in that region have suffered severely, both from casualties and from loss of supplies it is stated. Reports from Teocelo, by way of Vera Cruz state a panic prevails there from fear that an old volcano near Cofrede Perote, will become active since cracks have appeared on the sides of the mountain. Dr. Garcia Lunak, who had just returned from Couztlan, stated he had counted 72 dead and 100 injured in that village, and asserted the roads between Souztlan and Quimixtlan were completely destroyed. Jalapa reports that other travellers arriving there say the village of Barronza, near Couztlan, was almost destroyed with numerous victims. In Jalapa itself 95 per cent of the buildings were damaged. The water service there is limited to two hours daily. Vera Cruz authorities hope to maintain the present supply for eight days, by which time, it is hoped the water of the Jomapa, which supplies the city, will be fit to drink. The recent volcanic disturbance has rendered it unfit for use. Relief measures for quake sufferers are progressing rapidly, two hundred thousand pesos being subscribed by the employees of the national railways and more than five hundred thousand from the army.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS TO MEET JANUARY 16

FINAL ORGANIZATION WILL FOLLOW RATIFICATION OF THE TREATY OF PEACE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 10.—The putting of the League of Nations into being, which will be one of the immediate consequences of the exchange of ratifications of the Peace Treaty, will occur in Paris on the Morning of January 16, the Supreme Council decided today. This decision was cabled to President Wilson by Ambassador Wallace, so that he might issue a formal notice of the meeting of the council of the League. The first meeting will be presided over by Leon Bourgeois, representative of France in the council. Earl Curzon, British representative at the meeting, will also speak.

FIRE-FIGHTERS MAY QUIT

Because Sydney Ratepayers Won't Purchase Equipment.

Sydney, N. S., Jan. 10.— Members of the volunteer fire fighting department are considering resigning in protest against the recent action of a meeting of ratepayers in refusing to endorse the borrowing of $14,000 for additional fire-fighting equipment.

MEN WITH SHOTGUNS GUARDING GIRL BRIDE FROM HER YOUTHFUL HUSBAND

Romance of Girl of 13 and Youth Only Five Years Older Broken Up by Fath r of the Former.

Detroit, Jan. 10.—About the little farm home near Richtown, Ont., where live the brothers of Francis Baker, 465 Puritan avenue, men are pacing with shotguns handy; in the farmhouse itself sits a little girl bride of less than amonth, half fearful, half thrilled with the romance of the thing; while about the outskirts of the village lurks her husband, torn between a desire to claim his wife and a desire to avoid the business end of those same shotguns.

It is the climax of a wedding that took place Dec. 23 between two children, Beulah Baker, 13 years old, and Guy Harcourt, 18 years old, in a farm house near Ypsilanti. As an anti-climax there has been filled a bill asking annulment.

Father Tells Story

The story was told by the girl's father, Francis Baker, in a corner drug store amid the pills and powders and sundries and soda things, as the father waited a long distance call, sitting hunched on a foolish little metal chair that scarce could hold his great bulk, made greater by the ulster and overshoes he wore.

"Beulah is 13 years old," he said with a sigh. "I've got the physician's papers to prove it. My wife died about a year ago and I was left with five little ones. I sent them all to our old home in Canada, and there they stayed until last month, when Beulah came here. She wanted to visit her uncle and aunt at Denton and I let her go. She had been gone about two weeks and I was sitting at my gate—I'm a watchman at Ford's — when I saw her coming and along with her was a young fellow and another couple. 'Meet my intended, says she, pointing at the young fellow.

"'What sort of talk is that?' I says laughing like, seeing that she is just a kid, and thinking it was a joke. 'Your intended, eh? Well, you can intend to go to school next week,' I says. Why, she hadn't known that kid two weeks. The young fellow with them was Dewey, his brother, and he was to be married to the other girl. That's what put it in their heads, I suppose.

Hears Beulah's Married.

"I didn't hear nothing more until a man I know came back from Ypsilanti last week. 'How's Beulah?' I asks. 'She's maried,' he says. 'My dear Lord.' I says. I quit my job right there and went out to find my little girl. I found her."

He paused to choke and softly tap his knuckles together and to scrape his feet on the floor.

"They had let that baby get married,' he continued. "They got a license here in Wayne County and they were married at the same time the other couple was. Her own uncle and aunt were there and let them do it. She hasn't stopped playing with dolls and her skirts are close to knee high. That's the way I have looked after the trust her mother left me when she went beyond.

"'I'm sorry, daddy, I'm sorry,' she says to me.

"'I'm sorry, too, little girl,' I says. 'But it's going to be all right.'

The Telephone Call.

"So I took my baby girl and I brought her here and I sent her over home. And now they telephone me that he's there in the village, and growling around trying to get my little girl again. I'm waiting a telephone call from there."

He bent his head over the marble top table with his hands clasped and in the drug store was silence except for the clink of a bottle as the druggist, humming softly, mixed a prescription. The telephone bell whirred in the booth and the father jumped nervously. He shouted into the transmitter and came out with perspiration glistening on his brow.

"She's safe," he said. "She's safe and they're watching."

SAVING MEN FROM THE GALLOWS.

CYNICS to the contrary, there are still altruistic men on this earth with whom professional seal is stronger than the commercial instinct. The true physician never abandons his efforts to save the life of his patient so long as one spark of vitality remains, and with such practitioners the thought of financial reward is a secondary consideration. The triumph of achievement is the real incentive to persevere.

The faithful attorney never deserts his client when he is satisfied that in his heart that client does not really deserve the fate to which cold-bloooded justice has doomed him. Five men in Toronto made a trip to Havelock for the purpose of robbing their fellow countrymen employed there in a quarry. There was one ringleader and at least three dupes. While the robbery was being carried out, one of the men from Toronto shot down one of the victims, who showed some disposition to offer resistance. All five men were arrested, tried in Peterborough court, and condemned to death, all suffering the same fate, despite the skilful defence put up by Mr. G. N. Gordon of this city and a legal associate from Toronto.

For four months or more the black shadow of death has hung over the jail in this city. Five men under constant guard awaited their doom. That sentence of death would beyond all question have been carried out on all five next Wednesday had Mr. Gordon regarded his duty discharged to his clients when the Judge had pronounced sentence. But he carried the case before the Minister of Justice and saved three of the men from the gallows. And these were not men of means or of influence. They were foreigners, but they were at least human beings. Not every man, no matter what the law may presume to the contrary, would commit murder even if he does not hesitate at burglary, one of the most elemental crimes in the calendar. Everybody who knows Mr. Gordon will believe that in his efforts to secure a commutation of sentence for these men, his controlling motive was fidelity to his clients. They were fortunate in their legal defender. It seems rather a stricture on human justice that these men would have been hanged next week had they been without the services of such a man as Mr. Gordon. Common justice should assure the life of every accused person, even though he may be unable to find an attorney big hearted enough to plead his case to the very last.

Saving human life has always been regarded as the highest achievement, whether it be accomplished by the doctor or the attorney. The spirit of the age is unquestionably opposed to capital punishment. This is a sentiment which is growing daily. It was shown when the jurors that convicted the five men recommended every one of them to mercy. Mr. Gordon did not preserve the three foreigners from the consequences of their crime. The life sentence which they will serve in the penitentiary will be heavy punishment in all conscience. What he did accomplish was to save the State from the folly of wreaking upon three men vengeance for the blood guilt crime of another.

HOW TO OWN YOUR HOME.

THE WORKINGMEN of Canada are staunch supporters of the idea of State paternalism. That principle is enunciated in all of their platforms. They believe in public ownerschip and all that that idea implies. They advocate municpal control of all public utilities, and that all civic works be performed under the direct supervision of the city rather than by private contract.

In the housing commission plan, which is to be given effect in Peterborough, one of highest ideals of the workingmen is to be exemplified. The wage earner now has the opportunity of doing business with the city directly instead of with a private contractor in the most vital of all human problems, the providing of a home for himself and his dependents. The plan appears to be perfect in every detail, so that the most captious critic cannot find a single weak spot in it anywhere.

Suppose a man is anxious to buy a home on the installment plan. All the capital which he requires to make a start is a clear title to a lot costing not less than $250. Suppose further that he elects to own a dwelling to cost $2500, the price of the lot included. He can apply to the housing commission, state his wishes, and turn over to them the lot as security for the loan which he seeks. At the outset he finds himself in debt to the tune of $2250, that sum representing the actual cash which he will have to borrow to complete the building. This he can pay back in twenty years, interest included, in equal annual installments, but there is nothing to prevent him from discharging the entire debt at any time he may feel himself able to do so.

One outstanding advantage of the housing commission idea over the old system of doing such business is that the customer receives the money in sums as actually required, and interest payments do not start until the various amounts are really paid over on his behalf. Let that man deal with a private contractor, and the chances are that before the latter would make a move he would have to see the color of the entire amount of money at the beginning. Interest charges would begin before a start was made in the work of building. Borrowing from a private person or from a bank would mean interest at the rate of seven per cent.

The Provincial Legislature furnishes the money at five per cent. interest. The city borrows it directly from the Province and becomes security for it, simply acting in the capacity of trustee without any profit whatever. The two housing commissioners recently appointed by the City Council are the accredited representatives of the municipality in all these transactions.

It is all but impossible for the man who goes into such an investment to lose anything. He is required to observe certain conditions as to keeping the property in repair after the dwelling has been turned over to him, but this is a pure business proposition to which no reasonable man could offer the slightest objection. In the event of anything happening to him to prevent his carrying on the payments, the commission stands ready to take over his equity in the property and find another purchaser. This offer holds good if the original owner finds it necessary to leave town.

That is in brief an outline of the terms under which any resident may begin the task of acquiring his own home. It is the best offer of the kind ever made to the people of moderate means. Any citizen who avails himself of the proposition can accept the assurance that he will be given a square deal. The city has nothing of a direct financial nature to gain. Its incentive to become a party to such a contract is the advancement of the prosperity of the municipality, and the building up of a happy and permanent citizenry. Workingmen have always placed their confidence in the State rather than in the individual. Now is the time to give a practical demonstration of this avowed faith.

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

A LETTER in The Review yesterday once more calls attention to the Health Association, one of the most praiseworthy philanthropic organizations among the many such societies in Peterborough. The aim of the association is well known, the stamping out of that dread enemy of the human race, the white plague. It is unfortunate that an organization with such a purpose in view, aside from a small yearly grant from the Council, has to depend upon public charity to carry on its work.

A large percentage of the cases of tuberculosis are the result of ignorance of proper living conditions, and for that reason are preventible. The association employs a nurse, whose mission it is to enlighten those who are the victims of their own lack of knowledge, to detect the disease in its incipient stages, and by prompt action effect a cure, for if taken in time the disease, dreaded as it is, can be thwarted.

The records for the year convey only a faint idea of what has really been accomplished by the professional nurse employed by the association. They fail, however, to give any adequate conception of what has been done in saving the people of the city on the first signs of danger and of bettering the sanitary conditions of a number of homes, where improper food and unsanitary surroundings were gradually sapping the energies of the inmates. In a word, the work of the association is such as to commend itself to the practical consideration of every man and woman who has the advancement of the human race at heart.

The association members are alive to the responsibility which they have assumed. As the work progresses they see more and more the necessity for extension. There must be some practical means devised for taking care of the local cases of the disease that, in spite of philanthropic vigilance, have progressed beyond the first stages. There are sanatoriums in Ontario for the care of victims of tuberculosis, but these places are remote from Peterborough.

Some time ago it was announced that the association had in mind the construction of a local sanatorium for consumptives, for which there are situations in the district eminently fitted for the purpose. State aid for such a project could be secured if the citizens raised a certain amount to assure the success of the proposition. This is a matter which is likely to be taken up in the near future. Tuberculosis is now classed with the infectious diseases. Every victim allowed at large is a menace to the health of the community, and at present there is no place in which to isolate them. The work of stamping out the white plague may constitute a gigantic task for the charitable, but it is possible of attainment by co-operative effort.

PREMIER DRURY AND E. M. ELLIOTT.

PREMIER DRURY has announced his policy with regard to the construction of highways. He says that twenty per cent. of the auto licenses should be returned to every county for the building of good roads. In this there is a matter of difference of eighty per cent. between him and E. M. Elliott, who has from the beginning been regarded as the champion of the anti-government highway policy and whose influence has been credited with the keeping of Peterborough County all these years in a class by itself. It seems now that Mr. Elliott has the organized farmers of Ontario behind him in his contention that the auto license money should be expended in every county in which it is raised. Premier Drury's support on this point is still a matter of conjecture.

The U. F. O. have, it seems, united in a request to the new Legislature that the auto licenses be returned to the various counties, just as Mr. Elliott has for so long contended. This would mean an annual income of $20,000 or more for Peterborough County. The county, according to the proposed schedule, would augment this amount by a levy of three mills for highway purposes $27,750 in all. The Government is asked to make a special grant equal to this amount. The county would then have every year a highway fund of $75,500 to be used in the improvement of the main highways in the various municipalities leading to the centres of population. It is argued that the city would under such a system derive as much actual benefit as the various rural sections.

That is the situation as it stands today. Peterborough County, with the exception of a few townships, has held out to the end for the very policy which has now been endorsed by the organized farmers all over the Province. It may transpire that Mr. Elliott and his associates in this attitude have been nearer the majority sentiment than was generally supposed.

FROM THE REVIEW of 1930—"Financial experts explain the present stringency by asserting that all the loose money in the country is tied up in athletics and the plutocratic professionals insist upon spending their royal earnings in Europe."

Reminiscences of an Editor

(By A. McG.)

There are plenty of people in this world who, either for effect or from conviction, make the uncharitable assertion that all newspaper men are by nature to be listed in the class to which David in his haste consigned humanity without exception, and that as a result of such authorship newspapers are unreliable if not standing works of fiction. People will talk, and every man is entitled to his own opinion, even though his assurance on any given subject is in proportion to his lack of personal knowledge of the matter.

There are not in the world today a more conscientious body of men than the active newspaper workers, whether those men be owners or those working for wages. I can look back and recall the memebrs of the former class as men of the highest honor themselves and who insisted on the same upright principles on the part of the men in their service. The superiors, it is true, always looked for results, but those results had to be attained by honorable means. Short shrift was made of the man who attempted to compromise any matter with the party likely to be injured by its disclosure when disclosure became a matter of public duty. The one who accepted or sought a bribe, and in this connection temptations were numerous, if once detected was run out of the profession.

Newspaper men are only mortal—very much so as a rule—and liable to make mistakes. They have six daily opportunities every week—seven, if they are connected with a company that publishes a Sunday edition—to make errors that are impossible of concealment but are known of all men. They are not lovers of the sensational, either, as a class, not men who take any delight in human frailty. There is not a newspaper man in the business today, seasoned in his profession, and worthy of his responsible calling, who would not glory more in a sensation of virtues than in a sensation in which vice predominates, or who, expert in both arts though he may be, would rather praise than censure.

There is not a calling on earth in which men work with the same unselfish devotion as they do in the newspaper business. I am not making this assertion as my own opinion alone, but may be permitted to cite an illustrious authority to support the statement. When the late Benjamin Harrison was President of the United States, in the course of the daily grind I was deputed to interview him on the question of a proposed increase of pensions to the veterans of the Civil War. I must say that in his august presence, for some mysterios reason, I felt less trepidation than I have in later years experienced when I have asked some employer why his men walked out, or besought a candidate for office to declare himself on a certain issue. President Harrison was kind enough to say that if he could surround himself with counsellors as devoted, as disinterested and as loyal as the majority of the members of the newspaper profession, subsequent elections would give him no concern and the public service would verge on the ideal.

There is no trade or profession, so far as my observation warrants the assertion, in which men work with the same keen rivalry as do the newspaper writers. These are the men who spend their own money in the interests of their firms, who will deny themselves sleep and forego meals, in order to succeed. Every man works on the assumption that his own department of the business is all important, and in spite of a spirit of fraternity that prevails among the different classes, the members of one are inclined to belittle the value of the others in the general economy. For example, the special writer holds himself as of greater account than the man who grinds out the editorials, and with some justification, as on all the large papers it is the former who really gives his journal standing and adds to its circulation.

In all my career I have never been asked by a newspaper publisher to do anything shady except once. That was away back in the early nineties, when the cables carried unconfirmed rumors to the effect that somewhere in the Orient, the exact location of which I cannot at the moment recall, a manuscript had been discovered which was supposed to be a gospel by St. Peter. The document, it was said, was to be submitted to eminent scholars for translation. If such a find had actually been made, that manuscript would have been one of the greatest treasures in sacred or profane literature that the world had ever produced, and enterprising American newspaper men were planning to be the first to give the translation to the reading public.

The publisher of a weekly magazine that featured the sensational and the bizarre, sent for me, and proposed that I prepare a few chapters purporting to be a translation of the supposed Bible story, dealing especially with the denial of his Master by Peter at the trial of the former, with an explanation of the motives that induced him to take such a course, at variance, as it were, with his former devotion and his fearless and devoted nature. By way of compensation the enterprising publisher mentioned a sum, the possession of which would have removed all worry as to the problem of existence for some months to come.

I must say I was taken down in my own estimation to think that a man who knew me by reputation could for a moment imagine me capable of committing a forgery at once foolish and blasphemous. It is needless to say that the offer failed to tempt a man whose earliest literary ideas were formed from a study, under parental guidance, of the Scripture and the Shorter Catechism of the Presbyterian Church. The ensuing discussion did not lack for rather bitter and personal recrimination. Disinterested spectators who heard it have since spread the story that the language mutually employed on that occasion was hardly consonant with the discussion of what was meant to be a purely religious topic. Anyway, the forgery was never committed, so far as I was concerned or ever heard.

Mainly About People

The charming young woman who, with her father and mother made Government House, Ottawa, her home for four years, will always be remembered in Canada as Princess Patricia. The high place she held in the affections of the people was shown when the first regiment raised in Canada by voluntary enlistment after the outbreak of the war with Germany was named after her. The "Pats" these brave men came to be called, and they made the name glorious by deeds of valor that will ever shine on the pages of British history.

Some time ago Princess Patricia became Lady Ramsay, wife of Commander Alexander Robert Maule Ramsay, D. S. O., of the Royal Navy, brother of the Earl of Dalhousie. Lady Ramsay is now a mother, having recently given birth to a son.

Lady Ramsay, or Princess Patricia, as Canadians will persist in calling her, has enjoyed popularity from childhood. Some may remember the report that went around some years ago, of Princess Patricias' refusal to agree to the proposal to marry her to the King of Spain. She is said to have expressed her preference for her freedom and her own faith. In their thoughts at least, many Canadians extend to the young mother and her child wishes for many happy years.

Statistics gathered in five states show that out of 19,696 children between 14 and 16, more than one-fourth could not read or write their names legibly.

Something Missing.

"This catalogue is no good," said a man visiting the Art Museum. "There aren't any prices in it."

"What," said his wife. "You weren't thinking of buying any?"

"Certainly not," replied the complainer. "But how can you be expected to appreciate pictures if you don't know the prices of them?"

Descended From 'Arry.

"Yes," said Hawkins, who had purchased some old silver at auction, "this is the old Hawkins family plate."

"Indeed," said his guest, "but surely this is an 'A' engraved on it."

"Is it? Oh—er—yes, of course. The original Hawkinses were English, you know."

"The other man carried him off," she replied.

"The other man?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, "the one I aimed at."

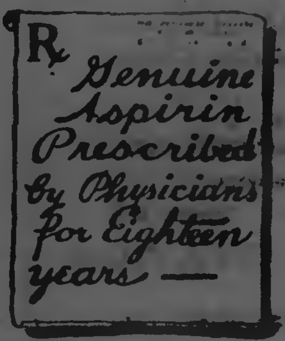
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



Genuine Aspirin Prescribed by Physicians for Eighteen years

BAYER
BAYER

The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin,—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

LURING THE PROUD FATHER MEANS SALES FOR STRAUSS

The Strauss Toy Shops, in New York, with branches in the large railroad stations, selected the most unlikely location, apparently, of any the metropolis might afford.

Just across the street was a famous shop devoted exclusively to the sale of toys—"Schwartz's." Here was competition of the most hazardous sort.

However, the Strauss people did not look at it from that angle. They reasoned that the presence of the big toy store in the neighborhood would really be an asset, since it brought thousands of people there from every part of the world.

But quickly to establish itself, the Strauss shop began a newspaper campaign of unique character. First came a trademark, which appears in all advertising matter, on wrapping paper, letter heads, catalogues, etc. It did more than anything else to introduce the shop to busy New York.

And here is how that trademark happened to be born: In its other two shops, in the Pennsylvania Station and the Hudson Terminal Concourse, the company discovered that fathers, uncles, grandfathers and brothers were all very sentimental creatures when the full truth was told. It was only necessary for a big toy-shop window to smile welcome at them and they hungered to take toys home to the children. For the grown-up who brings a toy is a hero in youth's eyes.

That was sufficient inspiration for the big shop. A pretty little bobbed-hair girl was photographed, talking into a telephone, and this, in turn, rendered in crisp pen and ink for newspaper production. A hand-written slogan read:

"Hello, Daddy—Don't Forget Your Kiddie."

This trademark panel is part of every advertisement in a long list of newspapers, and, as a consequence, dad is more than apt to bump into the little picture sooner or later.

The remainder of the space is given over the text and illustrations, descriptive of toys of various kinds. It is the trademark, however, that has made the Strauss toy shops famous almost over-night. Clerks declare that since the device was adopted the average store conversation runs something like this:

Enter, father.

(Commences to rummage over counters and squint up at shelves),

Father—I thought I'd take a toy of some kind home to the youngster. It's a little boy. Two years old. What would you suggest?

Clerk (trained to the psychology of toy salesmanship)—I think I know exactly what you want — a novelty. Here is the very latest thing in waddling ducks. Looks like a real duck, walks like one. The child simply drags it along the floor and the mechanical legs do the rest

Demonstrates, while father breaks into childish grin of pleasure.

And the startling feature of it is that fathers fall into the habit of taking home a new toy, not once a week, but every night or so.

THE GOOD SHIP "SPRAY"

Every morning the good ship Spray makes the harbor in the window of the grocery of Bernhard Baer, Baker, Ore. She is loaded to the gunwales with green vegetables.

This six-deck boat is equipped with a perforated tube at the top from which water is sprayed down over the vegetables below, keeping them fresh—and looking fresh. The decks are made of wire screen, and thus the water runs from one to another, finally draining off through the hull. Mr. Bernhard says that this plan speeds up sales and slows up losses.

CUTS OUT CHARGES TO LOWER STORE PRICES

In order to reduce the prices of shoes, steadily mounting for the last few months, the F. E. Ballou Ballou Co., of Providence, R. I., recently changed from a credit to a strictly cash basis, and by cutting off the expenses of charge account records, losses, interest charges etc., the firm has made reductions ranging from 5 to 10 per cent. and over.

The firm also took advantage of this move to advertise its business in general, and the action was explained to thousands of persons throughout the state by a big newspaper advertising campaign.

The announcement of the change was accompanied by the following statement signed by F. E. Ballou head of the firm:

"A man fusses with his little garden more for the fun of helping things grow than for the produce he'll get out of it.

"Forty years ago I started this store. A high quality standard has been my fundamental policy. I believe its quality and good service you want. The growth of the store justifies my belief.

"Today with shoe prices where they are I wanted to be of some assistance in cutting your shoe expenses. This announcement tells what I've done.

"I take a lot of pleasure in putting my shoe prices on a lower level, and I know you'll find satisfaction in accepting the opportunity offered."

A "FOOT BALL TEAM" THAT SCORES PROFITS

The football season is over, but almost everybody is interested in the pigskin and matters appertaining thereto.

This knowledge prompted the Highland Paint and Wall Paper Co., of Springfield, Mass., to prepare a very novel display advertisement. The town is talking about it and the style has been copied by other merchants in other cities. It only goes to prove that advertising should break over the bounds of the conventional occasionally and "do something different."

Here is the advertisement:

All Highland Champions Line-Up.

Right end—Wall papers that greet you like a friend.

Right tackle—Picture and room molding.

Right guard—Varnish that won't turn white.

Centre—Big stock, widely varied.

FUGITIVES CAPTURED PRIZE.

Escaping from Turkish Camp, Sighted Enemy Craft, Seized It.

One of the cases just brought before the prize court tells how a group of British officers, weakened by hunger and unarmed, captured the Turkish steam tug Hertha and her cargo and delivered both safely to the British authorities in the harbor of Cyprus. In presenting the case, J. O'Connor, counsel for the crown, said it disclosed the most gallant exploit that had been brought to the notice of the court.

On the night of August 7, 1918, Commander Archibald Cochrane and other officers escaped from the Turkish camp of Yozgad by means they had been developing for eleven months. They had only scant rations with them and they set out to make their way to the coast through an unfriendly land. On the route they had to whip brigands who beset them, and on at least two occasions they barely escaped death from cutthroats they encountered. After suffering many privations from hunger and cold they got to the Aantolian coast, west of Korgos Island. They were too exhausted to proceed and had to rest in hiding for seven days to regain some of their strength.

On September 8, Commander Cochrane saw the Hertha off the island, towing a barge filled with Government stores. When the tug came to anchor Cochrane's party slipped down to the beach and swam out under cover of darkness. The distance to the boats was 300 yards. Unnoticed, the swimmers reached the dinghy attached to the barge and climbed into it. Cutting it loose, they quietly rowed it to the tug, about thirty yards away, boarded it and overcame the crew. Then they hoisted anchor and paddled the Hertha seaward gently, under the noses of sentries stationed all along the shore. After doing this for a mile or so, until they were clear of observation, they started up the Hertha's engines and finally landed their prize at Cyprus.

The president of the court asked how Cochrane had contrived to navigate the craft when he had only army officers to assist him. The commander replied that he had a compass and knew the general direction of Cyprus. The high mountains of Cyprus, he said, were visible for forty miles, and he had no difficulty in making the harbor.

In condemning the Hertha and cargo, the court expressed admiration for the adventure which had been so boldly and successfully carried through.

Commander Cochrane's companions in the feat were Capt. A. B. Haig, of the 24th Punjabs; Capt. R. A. P. Grant, of the 112th Infantry; Capt. V. S. Clarke, of the 2nd Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment; Capt. M. A. B. Johnson, of the Royal Garrison Artillery; Capt. J. H. Harris, of the Hampshire Regiment; Capt. K. D. Yeasby, of the Royal Engineers, and Capt. F. R. Ellis, of the 4th Battalion, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.

Big Game Hunters Protest.

A proposal that Canada increase its meat supply by using airplanes to drive the great herds of caribou from the barrens of the northern provinces into corrals on the shore of Hudson bay for slaughter has called forth loud protests from the big game hunters of Africa. They foresee an extension of the practice to the wholesale slaughter of elephants, lions, zebras, giraffes, and various kinds of deer which abound in the no-longer dark continent.—Oregonian

AN IDEAL TONIC FOR WEAK PEOPLE

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS ACT DIRECTLY ON THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

Food is as important to the sick person as medicine, more so in most cases. A badly chosen diet may retard recovery. In health the natural appetite is the best guide to follow; in sickness the appetite is often fickle and depraved.

Proper food and a good tonic will keep most people in good health. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the most popular tonic medicine in the world, harmless and certain in their action, which is to build up the blood and restore the vitality to the run-down system. For growing girls who become thin and pale, for pale, tired women, and for old people who fail in strength Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic. Thousands of people have testified to the health-giving qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in many homes they are the only medicine used. Among the homes in which the benefit of this medicine has been proved is that of Mr. E. A. Underwood, Kingston, Ont., who says:—"I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most beneficial results. As the result of hard work I was very much run down, and my appetite was very poor. I got a supply of the pills which I used regularly for some weeks with the result that they restored me to my old time strength. They also proved a blessing to my daughter, who was in a very anaemic condition, and who seemed not to get more than temporary relief from any medicine until she took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She took the pills for about three months, and is now enjoying the best of health. For these reasons I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

At the first sign that the blood is out of order take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and note the speedy improvement they make in the appetite, health and spirits. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HAD RHEUMATISM FOR FIVE YEARS

No Return of the Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. JOHN E. GUILDERSON

P. O. Box 123, Parrsboro, N. S.

"I suffered with Rheumatism for five years, having it so badly at times I was unable to get up without assistance.

I tried different medicines I saw advertised and was treated by doctors in Amherst, also in my home town, but the Rheumatism came back.

In 1916, I saw in an advertisement that 'Fruit-a-tives' would stop Rheumatism, and took one box and got relief; then I took them right along for about six months and the Rheumatism was all gone and I have never felt it since.

Anyone who would care to write me as regards 'Fruit-a-tives' I would be glad to tell them what 'Fruit-a-tives' did for me."

F. C. Biggs, of Wentworth
Big Man in His County
Enters Drury's Cabinet

It cannot be said the Hon. Frank Campbell Biggs, Minister of Public Works, has jumped from obscurity to his exalted post. It is true that many persons may not have heard of him until the election but to the people of Wentworth County he is far from being a stranger. Hon. Mr. Biggs is Warden of the county, and that in itself tells more forcibly of his popularity than any other medium, except perhaps, his prodigious majority over his opponent. Mr. Biggs fitted himself, though unconsciously, for his new task both wisely and well.

A farmer through and through, he has stuck to his first love and made a first-class job of it, as any Beverley resident will tell you. Yet he has not neglected the side lines, if the expression may be used in this connection. He has always been strong on education from his boyhood days at the Ontario Agricultural College, and the Hydro and good roads have been two of his hobbies. As a Hydro enthusiast he will be a real help to the commission. He will not be behind in pushing its interests along, for he knows full well its benefits to the farmers. As good roads will come under his jurisdiction, his fellow tillers of the soil naturally look for improvements on the highways of the province.

HON F. C. BIGGS.

As a practical farmer Hon. Mr. Biggs is strong on economy, and can be expected to see there is no frittering of the funds in his charge. As his fellow-councillors in Wentworth know, wastefulness will find no place in his policy.

The honorable gentleman is a father of boys, who seem determined to uphold the family traditions for A1 work. At a recent match in Beverley Township the youngest ploughman was Stanley Biggs, the twelve-year-old son of the Minister, and Stanley had to his credit the best crown in his class on the field and at his home. Another son, Dick, also won honors.

The Minister of Public Works is one of the youngest members of the Cabinet, being under forty years. Given good health, and with the worthy ambition and spirit of determination evidenced in his public work so far, he should prove one of the best pickings of Premier Drury.

Domestic Life in France

France no doubt has its weaknesses. The immorality of women, however, in that great country has been shamefully exaggerated. Because, before the war, the foreigners seeking sin found it on certain Paris boulevards they concluded that this frank sexual advertising was characteristic of France, whereas the average French girl is as zealously shielded from temptation as was ever the daughter of the Pilgrim father. But to love intensely and passionately is the French girl's hope and desire; and why should it not be?

The French have long been a shrewd, calculating people who have watched closely every sou. They may seem romantic to foreigners; their passionate protestations of love may seem too frank to us of Puritan descent; but not only in financial affairs, but even in their pleasures, they minutely calculate all items.

Probably there is not in the world the equal of the French housewife in economy and efficiency. Before the war wages were astonishingly low in France, and there must have been continual squeezing of each franc; and it was easy to tell from outside evidence that there was unusual stinting in the average home?

To see a French woman bargain at the market is to learn much in economics, mathematics and oratory. She simply refuses to pay the first price quoted; her genius for "getting what you can" is admirable.

With such women, is it any marvel that the French home is so admirably united. The family is the primal social fact in France, and the parents are the fundamental fact without which the organism (the family) could never have come into being. Hence there is a reverence for parents equalled probably only by the ancestral worship of China. Indeed, it is very doubtful whether the love between husband and wife equals that existing between parent and child. There is constant consultation with parents and relatives by sons and daughters of advanced years.

If a Frenchman of thirty or thirty-five proposes changing his profession, he may consult not only his father and his mother, but the entire family group; the proposed marriage of a daughter or a son is often an occasion for a council of the entire clan, including distant relatives that in Canada would hardly be included in our family tree.

The world has been fond of pointing out that the French language has no word for "home." It has a word possibly even more tender. What a meaning is in the sound of "foyer." It includes the concept of hearthstone and much more. It brings to the French mind and heart all the ideals, activities, and dreams of a close inner circle where obedience is a joy, respect a willing observance, and love an ever-present radiance.

The foyer is not for the outside world; only behind the locked doors does it really live and flourish. The father may deal with the outside world of business, but here in the foyer the mother generally rules supreme, and her influence is everywhere seen in it.

Is it any wonder that when one parent dies the other is immediately taken into the home of the married son or daughter, there to rule as a sort of benevolent, enlightened despot?

How can there be any courtship in so private a home, where everybody within the charmed circle is consulted about all the affairs connected with that circle? As a preparatory step toward such a beautiful home life one would think that there should first be a most romantic love affair, with moonlight walks and whispered words of adoration and all the other pretty things found in the sentimental novel.

"Unfortunately or fortunately—as you may view it—these accompaniments of Canadian match-making are frequently totally absent from French courtship. Indeed, in the middle and higher classes of French society there is often very little possibility of love-making before marriage.

Owing to the family regulations and the fact that there are few coeducational schools in the country, the French girl seldom makes with boys those confident, personal friendships so common in Canada.

In the main the French mother prefers not to trust her daughter alone with a man; if there is to be any courtship, it is better that it be where she can keep an observant eye on them. Hence a remarkably docility in the matter of the choice of a husband. Some one has said that the French women marries, not of love, but with the hope of love afterwards.

In the better-class families a dowry accompanying the wife will practically be demanded. What does she bring with her? is the not uncommon question of the young man's parents. Extremely prudential it all may seem but one should remember that this dowry is not to be employed by the husband for his personal use, but as a trust fund for the maintenance of the expected children. If the wife dies childless the dowry will, in all probability, revert to her family; the theory of the affair is that such property belongs not to the individual—either husband or wife—but to the family as an institution.

The New Raisin.

A process has been discovered by which wine-grapes can be turned into a kind of raisin which has not been produced before but which is finding a ready market, both on this continent and abroad. The demand for it we are told will be large enough to absorb the entire wine-grape crop of California, amounting to about 400,000 tons, which will probably not be needed for wine, under temperance legislation.

FACTS ABOUT CANADA

The revenue of the Dominion last year amounted to $312,946,747, of which $147,169,187 were derived from customs.

If the customs tariff were abolished at least 44 per cent of the federal revenue would have to be raised in some other way, because the revenue now is none too large to meet the ordinary charges of government, soldiers' pensions, and interest on war bonds.

The revenue derived from war taxes amounted to $56,177,508, of which the sum of $32,970,061 was derived from tax on business profits and $9, 349,719 from tax on incomes. The balance was made up of special taxes on banks, trust and loan companies, and insurance companies.

The British North America Act, based on the resolutions of the Quebec Conference, was drafted by the Canadian delegates, who held their sittings in the Westminster Palace Hotel, London, and completed their labors 53 years ago this month.

Ottawa became the capital of old United Canada and Parliament met there for the first time in 1866, in the building destroyed by fire three years ago. At Confederation it was retained as the federal capital.

The name Ottawa was the name of an Algonquin tribe living in what is now Northern Ontario. They visited early Canada by coming down the river that bears their name. The word Ottawa meant "to trade," "to buy and sell," because the Indians who bore the name were noted traders.

The word Timiskaming, the name of the long lake that separates western Ontario from the Cobalt silver district of Northern Ontario, is taken from the language of the Nipissing Indians, and means 'in the deep water," referring to the great depth of parts of the lake.

During the last fiscal year, which ended on March 31, Canada exported goods to the value of $1,268,765,285, and imported for home consumption goods to the value of $916,429,335, making a total of $2,185,194,620, being only a little less than the total for 1916, when the export of war munitions was at its height.

Canada's best customer was Great Britain, our exports to that country having a value of $560,839,116. The United States came second with $477,745,659, and France third with $102,360,853. Australia bought Canadian goods to the value of $14,172,000.

The establishing of government-owned experimental farms was authorised by Act of Parliament passed in 1886 under the direction or the date Hon. Sir John Carling, who was Minister of Agriculture from September, 1885, to December, 1892. The Central Experimental Farm is situated a mile west of Ottawa.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Roumania Is Now a Power.

The war has humbled some great nations and exalted several small ones. Chief among the latter is Roumania. Only to those who have studied the peace terms carefully have the facts with reference to this Balkan power been apparent. Roumania has benefited largely, as Frank H. Simonds points out in the Review of Reviews.

The truth is, of course, that Roumania is neither a little state nor is she acting off her own bat. As a consequence of the changes in her frontiers, incident to Austro-Hungarian defeat and Russian collapse, Roumania has become a nation with an area as great as Italy, with a population to-day of 16,000,000, living on a territory capable of sustaining a much larger population than Italy, and her population is increasing with great rapidity. In less than half a century, therefore, Roumania will, in all human probability, be a great power. Moreover she must be reckoned with henceforth as a very potent factor in all combinations that may be made.

She has an excellent army, organized by the French General Staff, battle-trained, an army which despite opening disasters due to Russian treachery and later surrender due to Russian collapse, displayed admirable courage and skill and remains one of the considerable military forces in Europe, actually taking rank after the armies of the five great powers. In addition, by her position Roumania controls the Lower Danube, and, as recent events have shown, Hungary is completely at her mercy.

What I am trying to make clear is that Roumania is herself henceforth a nation whose military and economic resources, whose army, whose grain, whose oil, whose minerals, give her a position quite unlike that which she occupied when she was only the largest of the minor Balkan states. Actually she is greater to-day and infinitely more powerful than were all the Balkan states together at the outbreak of war.

Sugar Crop Reducers.

It is estimated that rats destroy every year at least a twentieth part of the sugar canes in Jamaica, amounting in value to little short of two hundred thousand pounds. The sugar cane is their favorite food; but they also enjoy Indian corn, all the fruits that are accessible to them, and many of the roots. Some idea can be formed of the immense swarms of these destructive animals that infest this island from the fact that on a single plantation thirty thousand were destroyed in one year. Traps of various kinds are set to catch them, poison is resorted to, and terriers and sometimes ferrets are employed. They are of a much larger size than the European rat.—Family Herald.

A horse, harness and wagon were sold separately at auction in Pittsburg. The wagon brought $13, the harness $9.50 and the horse $9.

VALUES IT MORE THAN A FORTUNE

POWER GAINS EIGHTEEN LBS. —RHEUMATISM DISAPPEARS AFTER TAKING TANLAC.

"I consider what Tanlac has done for me to be worth more than a fortune," said George Power, of Halifax, N.S., while talking to the Tanlac representative a few days ago. Mr. Power lives at 20½ Rottenberg St., Halifax, has lived in Nova Scotia all his life and is a well-known employe of the Nova Scota Tram and Power Co.

"I've actually gained eighteen pounds since taking Tanlac, and I feel better in every way than I have in twenty-eight long years, and what's more I have spent hundreds and hundreds of dollars on medicines and never got a particle of good until I found Tanlac," continued Mr. Power.

"I had rheumatism in both my legs from the knees down, and in damp weather I just had to stay at home from work. My ankles bothered me too, and I don't believe anybody in the world ever suffered from rheumatism as bad as I did for it was just a sharp shooting pain that would go through my knees, down my legs and into my ankles like somebody was sticking a knife through me, and I would be in such agony that I would turn as white as a sheet. When these attacks came on me I wouldn't be able to sleep a wink but would roll and tumble all night long, and my joints would swell and my knees would be as stiff as a board and I couldn't walk a step for two or three days at a time and would be laid up at home flat of my back with my knees so stiff I couldn't bend them at all.

"I noticed where Tanlac was being highly recommended by people right here in Halifax, so I decided to try it. And I wouldn't take anything in the world for the good it has done me. If anybody don't believe that I am a well man, and that the rheumatism has left me entirely and that I never feel even a trace of it, just tell them to see me. My appetite has picked up and I have gained in weight, and feel better in every way and can sleep fine at night. Tanlac is the greatest thing I have ever seen, and I want you to publish this statement for I want everybody to know what this medicine will do."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

AN ORIENTAL GARDEN.

Persian City of Shiras Retains Much of Beauty.

In the midst of a broad expanse of barren ground lies the flat-topped Persian city of Shiras, which was once so wonderful a sight as to cause the visitor to cry, "God is great!" and by the fascination and beauty to make him forget forever his native land.

The Shiras of the present is still fascinating, though its power over the traveller's memory has waned. The stranger may hurry through the narrow streets lined with square houses, but on the outskirts of the city he must linger and dream awhile in the Persian gardens celebrated in many songs by the poets of the land.

Shiras is proudest of being the home of two of Persia's noblest poets, Hafiz and Sadi, both of whom were enthusiastic over the charms of their native city. The city has changed greatly since their day, succeeding generations still view it through the rose-and-gold light of poet's fancy and still boast of its wonders.

The citizens of Shiras honor most the man who can quote most fluently and extensively from the poems of Hafiz; yet his grave, in the garden beyond the city, is neglected and desolate. A high brick wall encircles the garden. Within, the tomb of the poet is marked by a pavilion and a marble slab, on which is carved one of his verses. All about the beloved singer lie his followers and admirers, their graves headed by stones which peep through rank grass.

The gardens of Shiras have such names of "Garden of Heart's Desire," "Garden of the Envy of Heaven," and "Garden that Displays the World"—names which they do not always live up to in appearance, because of their owners' dreamy contentment in letting well enough alone. Yet even the uncared-for gardens are deliberately beautiful. Tiny streams wind through them, cypress and elms trees shade them pleasantly, roses clamber riotously over old walls and a shabbily ornate summer house peeps from among the trees.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Table a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headache, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure: makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Putting an Egg in a Bottle.

An egg may be put into a bottle which has a mouth much smaller than the egg, says Popular Mechanics. First soak the egg in vinegar until the shell becomes soft and pliable. It will then be easy to force the egg into the bottle. Pour cold water into the bottle and allow it to remain until the shell becames hard again. The bottle can then be shown to friends, who are certain to be greatly mystified by the sight of an egg in such a place.

Booming Poetry.

One thing is certain to come out of the Fiume coup, says Life. Gabriele d'Annunzio should be able to sell his poetry anywhere.

The National Union of Railwaymen, with its 4,000,000 members, is the largest single trade union in Great Britain.

Too much prosperity is the reason given by a New York woman for her unhappy married life in seeking a separation. When she married her husband was a workingman making sweaters. Now he owns his own plant.

BOOKS WERE BANISHED.

Chinese Emperor Was Jealous of Collection of Wisdom.

More than two thousand years ago there was in China a splendid royal library—thousands of volumes of history, of geography, of poetry, of philosophy and of works on the arts and sciences.

There came to the throne the Emperor Shih Hungti, who conceived himself to be the greatest man who had ever lived. But when he looked about and saw the great collection of wisdom in this library and in 120 other libraries owned by feudal princes, he despaired of ever mastering it all.

So Shih Hungti ordered that all the books in the royal library be burned, except the "Yi Chang," or "Book of Changes, and works on agriculture, medicine and divination. It was then ordered by the Emperor that the literati be exterminated, and wherever one was reputed to possess the wisdom of the ancients, him the emperor's vassals slew. And so in the provinces and principalities, as far as the authority of Shih Hungti was recognised, there was a burning of books and a slaying of wise men. And when he had come to the end of these and found there were still dukes and princes who held their lands and their libraries as independent of the emperor, upon those he made war until he had conquered their provinces or they yielded to his authority, and their libraries he also burned and had their literati put to the sword.

Thus it came to pass that in the Celestial Empire there was none acclaimed so wise as the great Emperor Shih Hungti. And they called the empire which he thus founded China, or the Empire of Ch'in, that being the name he took, signifying his greatness and his wisdom.

Now there was in that time in China a man named Liu Pan. He was a soldier and unlearned in books, but it was to him a great scandal that wisdom should be possessed by one man. To the Emperor Ch'in he refused to yield his sword, but made war upon him, and in forty-three years he had conquered all the provinces of the Celestial Empire, and him the princes and the dukes acclaimed as emperor in place of Shih Hungti. And he called himself Han, signifying one who conquers, and to him came the wise men, for not all had fallen under the sword of Shih Hungti. They asked the emperor to restore the royal library, for many books had been hidden away.

"I won my empire on horseback and not by books," replied Liu Pan.

"Yes, but you cannot rule it on horseback," responded the wise men. So Liu Pan, who knew he was not the greatest and did not desire to be the wisest man who ever lived, restored the libraries. And the dynasty of Han lasted 400 years and wisdom and poetry flourished in all that time.

FIFTY-EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY OF TRINITY CHURCH WILL BE CELEBRATED TOMORROW

Rev. Professor Alfred J. Johnstone, of Victoria College. One of the Best Speakers in the Denomination, Will Preach at Both Services.

In 1872 a new Methodist church was begun in Peterborough to be known as the Charlotte Street Church. For twelve years this congregation was ministered to by the associate pastor of the George St. Church. In 1884 Charlotte Street Church became independent. In time the old edifice became too small for the growing congregation and plans were made for a new church, which in time, was built a block to the north of the old church. This new building was dedicated in 1916 as Trinity Church.

The forty-eight years of the history of this congregation have been a period of steady growth and continuous prosperity. The present church is one of the leading churches of the conference. The beautiful building, erected four years ago, is perhaps the finest ecclesiastical structure within the bounds of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Tomorrow the anniversary services of Trinity Church will be held. The speaker for the day will be the Rev. Professor Alfred J. Johnstone, B.A., of Victoria University, Toronto. Professor Johnstone is regarded in Toronto as one of the ablest preachers in the city. A treat is in store for all who hear him tomorrow.

The choir will give special music at both services. A new year's thank-offering of $600 is being asked from the congregation by the Quarterly Board. Visiters will be cordially welcome at these services.

The following is a list of the ministers who have been stationed at Charlotte Street and Trinity Church since 1884:

1884-86—Rev. Francis Huston Wallace, M.A., D.D.

1886-87—Rev. Isaac Tovell, D.D.

1887-90—Rev. Sydney J. Shorey, D.D.

1890-93—Rev. George Edwards.

1893-97—Rev. J. J. Rae.

1897-02—Rev. D. O. Crossley.

1902-06—Rev. Wm. J. Jolliffe, L. L. B.

1906-08—Rev. Henry M. Manning.

1908-12—Rev. George W. Henderson, D.D.

1912-14—Rev. Thos. J. Mansell.

1914-18—Rev. James P. Wilson, B.A., D.D.

1918- —Rev. Frederick E. Malott, B.A., B.D.

During the present pastorate 160 new members have been received already. All the departments of the church are well organized and good work is being done. Trinity Church is well to the front in the Forward Movement Campaign.

REPORTED SOCIALISTS SUCCEED IN GERMANY

SAID THAT A GENERAL STRIKE HAS BEEN CALLED OVER WHOLE COUNTRY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brussels, Jan. 10.—Travellers from Germany reaching here today brought unconfirmed reports that the German Government had been overthrown. It was reported that the Socialists were masters of the situation and that a general strike had been declared throughout the territory not under allied occupation.

CLEMENCEAU PLANS CAMPAIGN

Temple to Confucius in Shan-Tung.

In the little town of Chufu, in Shan-Tung, on the spot where Confucius lived and taught his disciples, in the happy outdoor fashion of other ancient philosophers, under a plum tree, stands his temple, a great pink and garnet pavilion bordered with blue and green and violet and gold, its yellow roofs, the yellow sacred to Confucius and royalty, resting on the handsomest dragon carved pillars in the empire.

The temple stands on a great terrace bordered by triple balustrades carved into vases of marble flowers, ascended by triple staircases emblazoned with phoenixes and more dragons, and before it stretches a vast courtyard planted with cedars and enclosed by pink walls. The temple is the pattern of Confucian temples throughout all China in which incense has been burned to the sage by 73 generations.

The Reason.

At a recent reception a pretty girl was introduced to a matron who had just arrived. The girl said to the matron with an impatient laugh: "I can't make out what has come over that tall, blond, distinguished-looking man over there in the white spats. He was so attentive a little while ago, but he won't look at me now." "Perhaps," said the matron with a smile, "he saw me come in. He's my husband."

CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE STAGED FIRST GAMES OF THE SEASON LAST NIGHT

C. G. E. Tool Room Team Defeated Bunch From Business College—Canadian Woolens Win From Belmonts.

The first two games of the City Hockey League were played off last night in the Brock street rink. The first two teams to clash were the Business College and the C. G. E. tool room and the contest resulted in a win for the C.G.E. boys by the score 14-2. The referee was Geo. Evans. The line-ups were as follows:

Business Collegiate—Goal, J. Daynard; l. defence, Campbell; r. defense, Rootes; centre, Doughty; rover, LaPlante; l. wing, Anderson; r. wing, H. H. Fields.

C.G.E. Tool Room—Goal, G. Butcher; l. defence, Dugan; r. defence, Helson; centre, Butcher; rover, Barrie; l. wing, Bartley; r. wing, Primeau.

The subs. for the Business College were Dormer and Anderson. The C.G.E. subs. were Rew and Murray.

It was a good clean game all through, good sportsmanship being shown by both sides, but the Business College were sadly out of practice. It seemed impossible for them to get away together. It was no combination and all individual work. Anderson and Fields did the best work for the Business College, Daynard stopping some hot shots in goal very cleverly.

The C.G.E. forward line did some fair stick work but they will require a lot more practice before they can do much execution against the fast Can. Wollens boys. The fact must also be taken into consideration that the Business College boys are all returned men, some of them casualties and all with service in France to their credit, and they have been away from the game for three or four years. Given more practice and their chances will be good to be in at the finish.

Canadian Woollens Win.

The second game was between the Belmont Club and the Canadian Woollens, which resulted in the score of 9-3 to the Can. Woollens. The line-ups were as follows:

Belmonts—Goal, Darling; l. defence, Perry; r. defence, Head; l. wing, Gillespie; r. wing, Stewart; centre, Thurnbeck; rover, Herbison.

Can. Woollens—Goal, Legraw; l. defence, McMurton; r. defence, Tuthope; l. wing, Rutherford; r. wing, H. Graham; centre, R. Graham; rover, Williams

Belmont subs.—Murray, Rutherford.

Can. Woollens subs.—Jackson, Smith.

Practice and still more practice is what the Belmonts need. They have the material but it needs to be whipped into shape. The fast Can. Woollens' forward line broke through and scored time after time. They were much the lighter of the two teams.

Judging by the hockey put up last night there is no reason why the City League should not be a big success this year. Practice is certainly required by all of these teams, but for the first games, and taking into consideration the small amount of practice done, the results were encouraging.

21ST BATTALION ARE ORGANIZING A CLUB

WILL HOLD BANQUET TO CELEBRATE ONE OF THEIR GREATEST VICTORIES

On Jan. 17th, 1917, the following communique went to 4th Brigade headquarters, 2nd Canadian Division, from 21st Canadian Infantry Battalion:

"In co-operation with the 20th Canadian Infantry Battalion, at 7.45 a.m. successfully raided enemy defences at cite Colonne."

This communique was all that was given of what was probably the greatest raid ever pulled off on the British front in France. These two battalions, the 20th and 21st, with the 18th and 19th Battalions in support, succeeded in capturing and holding the enemy front line trench, penetrating to the supports and bringing back a large number of prisoners, machine guns and ammunition after successfully overcoming a stiff, stubborn resistance. After establishing communications, the former enemy front line was held and fierce counter-attacks shattered.

Such is the event that the members of the 21st Battalion in Peterborough will commemorate on Jan. 16 by a banquet in the Empress Hotel. An important meeting will be held on Jan. 12th for one-half hour, commencing at 7.30 p.m. in the G.W.V.A. rooms.

This meeting will be in connection with the above-mentioned banquet and all members of the C.E.F. who have at any time been members of the 21st Battalion are urged to attend and help the formation of a 21st Battalion Club.

A gas-inflated rubber balloon 36 inches in diameter, sent up by a boy at Cambridge, Mass., with a note attached, was found two days later 1,000 miles away at Pownal, Vt.

HEALTH FOR THE BABY

The baby of to-day is the man or woman of to-morrow. Thus the success of the future man or woman depends upon the baby's present welfare. If the baby is sickly and ill nourished it is not to be expected that he will grow into a strong, active man who will hold his own in the business world a few years hence. Mothers it is a duty you owe the future to keep your little ones well now. This can be easily done if Baby's Own Tablets are kept in the house. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus make baby healthy and strong. Concerning them Mrs. W. Orser, Elginburg, Ont., writes:—"I have a fine healthy boy three years and have used Baby's Own Tablets for him ever since he was a small baby. I certainly think them a splendid medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LINDSAY TEAM ROUGH IT AT CANNINGTON

WIN ON THE "PILL BOX" RINK BY A SCORE OF 13 TO 7.

Cannington, Jan. 10.—The fourth O. H. A. game of Group III., played here last night between Lindsay and Cannington, resulted in Lindsay defeating Cannington by 13 to 7. The game was rather rough, with several of the Lindsay players being penalized. The line-up was:

Lindsay—O'Loughlin, goal; Flavelle and McPhee, defence; Coombs, right wing; Carew, left wing; McIlroy, centre, Ligett and Miles, substitutes.

MOVIE STAR IS OUT TO DRIVE BLUES OFF THE EARTH

Bessie Love enjoys making other people happy. She has such a sunny disposition herself that she cannot bear to see gloom on the face of any human being. Her youth and spirit and sunny smile brighten thousands every day as they watch the antics screen.

In "Pegeen," which will be shown at the Empire Theatre on Monday, Miss Love has a role after her own heart. "Pegeen," is a character who is always trying to bring joy into the lives of other people. So engrossed did Miss Love become in her work, while taking this picture, that she actually forgot that she was acting.

The spirit of "Pegeen" got into Miss Love's soul and for weeks afterwards she went around trying to make everybody happy. She admitted that she got a great deal of enjoyment out of making other people happy; and expressed the opinion that in order to know what real happiness is one must do his or her share towards making others happy.

Miss Love made the role "Pegeen" so much a part of herself that it is impossible to think of one without the other. The "Pegeen" smile becomes the Bessie Love smile, and Bessie Love, the bringer of happiness, is no other than "Pegeen."

Bessie Love has given to "Pegeen" a personality, a touch, that words fail to express. She brings the little screen character into the lives of the spectators and wins their love. If one goes to the theatre feeling blue and discouraged, "Pegeen" gives that person a new view of life and sends him away with a smile on his face.

Synopsis No. 2.

Another delightful comedy for admirers of Constance Talmadge may be viewed this week at the Empire Theatre on Monday when Lewis J. Selznick will present Constance Talmadge in her latest Select Picture, "A Lady's Name."

A succession of amusing and exciting events showing the adventures of an enterprising and whimsical young woman who advertises for a husband is the theme of the story. She is Mabel Vere, a writer, whose reason for the advertisement is to secure materiel for a new novel. She is engaged to a somewhat priggish young man who naturally objects to her methods. After breaking her engagement with her fiance, being blackmailed by a butler, and changing her role from writer to cook she becomes engaged to Noel Corcoran, the third and last applicant to her ad.

Many British Ex-Officers Appear Anxious to Live As Soldiers of Fortune

HUNDREDS of British ex-officers are seeking new fields in which to fight. British soldiers of fortune promise to be as common on the continent as they were in the days of the Thirty Years' War.

Russia at the present holds out the greatest attractions for the adventurers. After north Russia come Esthonia, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. All foreign Governments engaged in small wars or in licking their armies into shape are offering posts to demobilised British officers.

On the books of the Russian Embassy are the names of more than 100 officers who have volunteered to serve. The demand is for those with technical knowledge who can act as instructors. At the moment the only front to which the Russian Government is sending officers is to north Russian, so recently evacuated by British forces.

Shipping facilities are surrounded with difficulties, but they are being obtained. On that northern front, before the British left, the Bolshevists sought to lure British officers to their service. A pamphlet was issued offering them large salaries.

Russian authorities are still considering the matter of pay. As the matter is arranged at present British officers, excepting in case of flying officers, will receive the Russian pay of their rank, which in most cases is hardly more than $50 a month. The Esthonian Government has engaged several officers to conduct aerial operations and their pay is even higher than that in the British air forces.

The drawback is that the adventurer is paid in the currency of the country for which he fights, and it may or may not be redeemable in future years. North Russian Government rubles, until the British forces left, were guaranteed by Great Britain. The currency of Gen. Yudenitch and of the southern armies in Russia was hardly in the same category, but chances of redeeming their money are not deterring the seekers after war.

Poland is newly arrived in the field of competition for foreign officers and positions as instructors are being offered to demobilised British officers. The monthly pay is at the rate of 800 marks for a captain and 600 marks for a lieutenant. Thirty days' leave in England a year and assurance of medical care and assistance are included in the conditions. The Polish War Office has opened a special department at Warsaw to deal with the affairs of foreign officers.

A visit to the Czecho-Slavok Legation in London reveals that twenty ex-officers of the British army have applied to Prague for service in the Czech army. The trouble with all foreign Government at this moment is their lack of ready funds, but that is an old story. Soldiers of fortune were continuously impecunious. South America may provide a better field for the adventurers. Mexican armies have had and still have many British officers fighting for them.

Clogs In England.

The clatter of the clogs is now a familiar sound in the Garden City, Hampstead, London, England. The wearers of the wooden shoes are the children of the well-to-do families of this select little literary circle. If the rule does not prove the exception, the new fashion in footgear will soon spread to the more aristocratic circles of the west end.

Time and time again it has been proved that what the garden suburbs do to-day in the way of physical adornment Mayfair and the rest of London will do to-morrow. The onetime popular boudoir and drawing-room sandal fashion and the more recent bobbed-hair craze both had their origin in Golder's Green and Hampstead, and it is common knowledge that the pioneer of the bare-head cult in England resided in the same superstanitary and enlightened neighborhood.

In spite of the comment on the innovation by the local critics there is a deal to say for it. The British shoe, especially those made for children's use, is still being made of low-grade leather of slight waterproof quality, and the garden city stands on the outcrop of London clay, which in wet weather holds a great amount of water, and clogs are perhaps the best remedy for the local conditions.

THE LUCK OF JEWELS.

Opal Was Once Credited With Power for Good.

Almost from time immemorial there have been superstitions concerning precious stones. Opals, in particular, have been credited with malignant powers, and brave indeed is the woman who, even in these enlightened days, will wear one of these gems — unless she was born in October.

The most famous opal of recent times, says a writer in John o' London's Weekly, was owned by the Empress Josephine. This stone was called "The Burning of Troy," on account of a red, fiery light which flickered over its surface, and it has been said that it was the finest specimen of its kind ever seen. We all know the sad fate which befell the unhappy Josephine; but perhaps it was not all due to the opal.

The royal family of Spain was at one time possessed of an opal which was supposed to have brought them bad luck, and in consequence this stone was eventually given away. The story goes that King Alfonso XII. presented an opal ring to his queen, Mercedes, on their wedding day, and her death occurred shortly afterwards. He then gave it to his sister-in-law, the Infanta Christina, and she, too, died very soon after her acceptance of the gift. The King then wore the ring himself, and before very long he also was in his grave.

Strange to relate, there was a time when the much-maligned opal was credited with possessing occult powers for good! Its name—opal—was said to be only another name for the opthalmius (eye-stone), and the possession of an opal was supposed to preserve the sight and brightness of the eyes. It was also once believed that the wearer of an opal was rendered invisible if he so desired.

The onyx was another precious stone once credited with evil powers, the superstitious folk of the Middle ages asserting that any wearer of the onyx would be visited by demons and evil visions at night, and worried by lawsuits and quarrels by day. The remedy for this, however, was to wear a sard at the same time, which would neutralize the evil influence of the onyx.

Among the Brahmins the ruby was a favorite jewel, as it was supposed to possess the power of attracting all other precious stones. If any number of jewels was dropped into the sea, they said, and a ruby let down below the surface of the waves attached to a string, the other stones, no matter how widely dispersed, would soon be drawn to it. The Brahmins also imagined that the ruby acted as a charm against fire.

Amber was the first precious stone made use of for the purposes of personal adornments. Homer mentions "the gold necklace hung with bits of amber" which was offered by the Phoenician trader to the Queen of Syra, and Nero, in one of his badly-composed verses to Poppaea's hair, described it as of an "amber" shade. The Romans valued amber highly, not alone for its beauty, but also for the medicinal qualities which they believed it to contain. In their opinion, an amulet of amber, worn round the neck, was an infallible cure for ague or chills; ground up with honey and rose-oil, amber was a specific for deafness, and ground with honey a remedy for defective sight.

The carnelian—or, as it was called in ancient times, sard—was, according to Pliny, so named after the place Sardis, where it was discovered. This theory is probably incorrect, however, as it is far more likely that its name is derived from the Persian word "sered," which means yellow-red. The modern name, carnelian, is supposed to be derived from "caro," meaning raw flesh. Many years ago this stone was credited with the power of curing tumors, and all wounds made by iron. It was also imagined to be an unfailing remedy for the staunching of hemmorhages, and to this day, in some parts of Italy, rings cut from the carnelian are used to cure bleeding of the nose.

The ancient Hebrews held that the possession of an emerald invariably brought bad luck to its owner, while another of their quaint superstitions concerning it was that if a serpent fixed its eyes upon an emerald it became blind. Both jade and the amethyst were considered by the ancients to be lucky, the old Greeks and Romans believing that wine drunk out of an amethyst cup would not intoxicate.

As regards pearls, there is a superstition even to-day to the effect that their color varies according to the physical condition of the wearer. A necklace of pearls worn around the throat of a woman in good health will, it is said, always retain its purity of coloring, but if once the wearer fails in health the pearls immediately become dull and lose all their milky whiteness and lustre. Curiously enough, there is much the same superstition concerning the turquoise, and among the ancient Macedonians the belief prevailed that, if anyone wearing a turquoise at any time had a fall, the stone itself cracked, and, by some strange magical power, warded off any injury that be might otherwise have sustained.

A Russian Fortress.

In 1714 Peter the First sent a commission to the Omsk region to erect a small fortress on the bank of the River Om, from which the city later took its name. In 1765 began the construction of a new and more solid fortress. It was the form of a polygion with five bastions. Beside it was erected later the wooden prison, surrounded by a high palisade, which served to imprison Russian political exiles, and in which Dostoievsky spent his four years for having been in the Pougatchof riots. This was the "Dead House" which he later described to the world in protest of the horrors of Siberian banishment.

Efficient Treatment.

"Do you guarantee results in your nerve treatment?" asked the caller.

"You bet I do," replied the specialist. "Why, last week a man came to me for nerve treatment, and when I got through with him he tried to borrow $500 from me."

An ordinance adopted last spring by the New York Board of Aldermen to curb ticket speculators has been declared unconstitutional.

Have Railways Fight Swindlers

DISCUSSING the recent arrests of sleeping car conductors charged with accepting money from passengers for fares and not turning this money over to the companies, a well-known western railway official made the following statement:

"Frequent arrests of sleeping car and train conductors by railway companies in which fraud against company is exposed always brings a certain amount of adverse criticism, the generally expressed opinion being that 'it is not fair to the employes to expose them to the temptation of detectives,' generally known as spotters, who are popularly supposed to board the trains and offer the conductor an amount smaller than the regular fare to be carried between certain points.

'Recently telegraphic despatches appeared in Milwaukee and Chicago papers to the effect that 'further arrests and disclosures were promised for to-day in an alleged $75,000 swindle whereby the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee electric road was the victim.'

"One of the men arrested is the manager of a film agency, another a film salesman and the third a conductor. The mode by which this swindle was conducted is an old one; the conductor simply neglected to punch the tickets collected by him and turned them over to a syndicate of his friends who in turn resold them to friends at reduced rates.

"Only a short time ago a conductor on a Canadian railway was dismissed from the service for a swindle of the same kind. It took no spotters nor experienced detectives to catch this man. A clerk in one of the departments of the company applied to his principal for a reduced rate to a point about one hundred miles distant. As the clerk had been in the employ of the company only four months he was not entitled, under the rules, to a reduced rate and was told this by the head of the department. He (the clerk) remarked, 'Oh, that's all right; I can get it through my aunt.' Naturally the head of the department began to think. He wondered who was this aunt that she could break down the rules of the company and with apparent ease. He reported the circumstances to his superior officer who in turn made a report to the ticket auditing department. It was easily found out that the clerk borded with his aunt as did also the train conductor on the run between those two points. The aunt was asked to come to the office of the auditor and at once confessed that she had been the broker between the conductor and friends of hers whom she could trust. It took no spotters nor detectives for that job.

"The fare between stations A and B is five dollars. A man who frequently travelled between those two stations one day said to the conductor, 'Why not make a split on this fare.' I go over the road every week and you might as well have it as the company.'

"Half fare was agreed on and the traveller paid the conductor two-fifty. This went for two weeks and one day the man said, 'I don't intend to pay you two-fifty any more. Here is one-fifty.' The conductor demurred but the man told him he could either take that or nothing. He took it. That price was paid for two trips, then one dollar, then fifty cents and then the crowning of it all came when a cigar was tendered. The conductor said, 'This has gone too far now. You can pay full fare or get off.'

"'Get off, will I. You put me off and see what will happen to you.'

"The result. The man rode for nothing. Not only that, he would send his card to this conductor with 'Jim, this man is all right.' Finally Jim got to the breaking point, went to the auditor and confessed and asked to have the man prosecuted for offering bribes.

"A short time ago a hotel in Montreal was raided under a search warrant on suspicion of being the headquarters of illegal ticket selling. Officers found a curtained-off place in one of the rooms where the ticket buyer was accosted on entry. If he produced a card which said 'All right,' and signed 'X.Y.' he was given a ticket. These tickets were furnished by conductors who neglected to punch them and were resold.

"Stories of the scheming of the travelling public to beat railway fares might be carried into columns, but they all lead to one end — the conductor being caught and the briber going free. Many a story could be told of the heart-broken wife who has pleaded with her husband to stop the practice of taking fares, knowing that most of the pickings are going into illegitimate channels. Nearly all the cases of such steelings can be traced to bad habits, either drink, gambling or dissolute women and the consequent attempt to live beyond his means.

"Railway companies are gigantic organizations and even the most humble clerk is bound to be detected if he is spending more money than his income.

"Only a few months ago a train conductor was heard to say by a person not in any way connected with the company that he had bought a moving picture house. 'Why,' said his friend, 'has that place not been losing money? How can you afford to buy into a losing venture?'

"The conductor answered, 'It won't be me that is losing; it will be the railroad company.'

"This was said in a joke, but the friend repeated it to an officer of the company and the man was soon in the tangle all such end in."

SCOTTY MONTIETH, DUNDEE'S FORMER MANAGER PICKS HIM TO BEAT LEONARD

Italian Has Had More Experience Over 20 Round Route Than Champion—Public Thinks "Benny" Can Stop Opponent in Any Round He Chooses.

Scotty Monteith, former manager of Johnny Dundee, although he no longer is on speaking terms with the little Italian, thinks very well of Dundee's chances to beat Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard when the two face each other in the ring at New Haven for 20 rounds on January 16.

Monteith thinks that Dundee, having had plenty of experience in 20 round fighting, will have a big advantage on that account. That may or may not be a fact. The interesting point is that Monteith still takes Dundee's many bouts with Leonard seriously and does not conform to the general belief that Leonard can stop the Italian in any round he cares to name.

That Monteith really believes in Dundee was shown by the way Scotty handled Mel Coogan. When Coogan gladdened Scotty's heart by outpointing Dundee, Monteith promptly matched Coogan n with Leonard. Monteith figured that if Dundee could hold Leonard even Coogan could do the same. Monteith's figuring was all wrong, for Leonard spilled Coogan in two rounds, thereby ruining Coogan as a card just when he was established.

That incident is good evidence that Monteith does not believe that all the Dundee-Leonard bouts were framed, and Scotty certainly ought to know, as he was the manager of the Italian.

Dundee's Remarkable Stamina.

That Dundee may have an advantage because of the length of the bout is a point worth considering. Although Dundee is a veteran, he seems to be just as full of endurance as ever and he always has been one of the marvels of the ring in that respect.

Dundee's wonderful stamina never was more apparent than in his recent affair with Mel Coogan. In that bout Dundee lost his temper when he saw his old manager in the opposite corner. He tried so hard to knock Coogan for a goal that he could not hit him at all.

All boxers know that missing a swing takes more out of a man than landing a dozen. Dundee missed scores of swings, every one of which had his last ounce of strength behind it, and yet at the end of the bout he was ripping and tearing away harder than ever, while Coogan, the winner, was a badly tired boxer.

The amount of energy Dundee burnt up in that bout was simply astonishing, and yet he appeared to be just getting well warmed up when the final gong rang. If Dundee has gone back, he certainly does not show it.

Dundee's last twenty round bout was in 1917, when he won a decision over Jimmy Hanlon at New Orleans. The year before that he beat Stanley Yoakum and lost a decision to Joe Mandot. Although the decision favored the local idol, all the New Orleans papers roasted it to a turn.

In 1915 Dundee fought a twenty round draw with Mandot, while in 1914 he beat Grover Hayes and Joe Rivers, and boxed a draw with Willie Beecher in bouts over the long route. In 1913 he held Johnny Kilbane, the newly crowned featherweight champion, to a draw in twenty rounds, and beat Jack White over the same distance. In 1912 he knocked out Frankie Coney in the nineteenth round of a bout that was scheduled to go twenty.

Leonard Should Go Far.

If it comes to a matter of endurance Leonard ought to show up well. He still is only a youngster, and he is in the full tide of his health and strength. Unlike Dundee, who is never still, Leonard does not use up his strength by making unnecessary motions. He has a smooth, easy style and there is no reason why he should not be able to fight forty rounds at his usual rate of speed without tiring.

However, the general impression is that he will not have to go the full twenty rounds to beat Dundee. That impression is not based on anything that happened in any of their numerous engagements, for Dundee always managed to take good care of himself. If this were going to be another eight or ten round, no decision bout, few would back Leonard to stop his sturdy little opponent; but it is figured that Leonard must be perfectly confident of his ability to win before the limit, or he never would have consented to risk his title in a contest in which a referee will be allowed to name the winner.

Still boxing fans are prone to overrate a champion's ability. They always think a title holder can do better than his performance indicate. "He's just saving that fellow up for another match," always in the verdict when a champion is outpointed in a no-decision bout.

Ring followers never did get on to the fact that Abe Attell was at the end of his rope until he was actually beaten for the title. For years before that Attell often had the time of his life stalling off the assaults of young and sturdy second raters, but Attell always received credit for holding something back, even when he was doing his best. Even the local boxing commission was fooled on one occasion and suspended Abe on a charge of faking because he could not beat Knockout Brown.

At the present time Johnny Kilbane is almost through, but every time he is outpointed the fans think Johnny is merely stalling in order to make a return match profitable. Leonard is not going back, but it may be that he has not stalled with Dundee as much as boxing followers think.

One thing is sure: Dundee always has fought his hardest every time he has faced Leonard in the ring. If there was any stalling he was not a party to it. However, if boxing followers are wise they will not back Dundee to win or even to last the limit. It is in the air that Leonard is going to win decisively this time.

A measure requiring a person seeking a license to drive a motor vehicle in New Jersey to pass a psychological test is being considered.

A COUPLE OF JOHNSON'S PITCHING FEATS

FANNED SEVEN OF DETROIT'S BEST BATTERS IN A ROW

By Billy Evans.

They can talk all they want about pitching feats, but any time a twirler comes through with something out of the ordinary, it is usually possible to revert to the records of Walter Johnson and find some performance that will compare favorably with the feat under consideration, if not outshine it.

When Hod Eller struck out six of the Chicago players in a row, he performed a remarkable feat. The fact that the work was done in a world's series game makes the performance stand out even a bit more than in a regular contest. Incidentally, it was made against the strong part of the Chicago batting order. Naturally such a whiffing stunt got all kinds of publicity. Nothing like it has ever been pulled in a world's series, but I was fortunate enough to umpire a game at Washington six or seven years ago, in which Walter Johnson showed one of the most remarkable bits of pitching I have ever seen. The Detroit club was a hard hitting aggregation, having in its line-up four or five players noted for their ability to keep from whiffing. It was a dark day, and Johnson had terrific speed. Starting with the top of the batting order, he got seven in a row. If I remember correctly, Oscar Stanage, then batting eighth in the line-up, finaly broke the spell.

Last summer I looked them over for Johnson in a game against the Philadelphia Athletics, in which he pulled a stunt out of the ordinary. perhaps you will say nothing out of the ordinary could happen in a game in which the Athletics were the contesting club, but there was a lot of batting strength on the Philadelphia club last year, despite its low position in the race. It is not out of the ordinary for a pitcher to get a team on strikes in an inning, although there is much merit to such a feat. In the game to which I refer Johnson struck out the side in one inning, but in a manner somewhat different. Kopp, Thomas and Walker faced Johnson. He threw just nine balls to those three batters, four of them were called strikes, while at the other five deliveries the batters took a swing and missed. There was not one bad ball in the nine, every one of them would have been called a strike had the batter let it go by. Incidentally they were all fast balls, not a curve was used by Walter to mow down the three batters.

ROTH LOOKS GOOD ONLY IN AVERAGES

OUTFIELDER FIZZLES WITH EVERY CLUB THAT SIGNS HIM.

Connie Mack's swap of Outfielder Bobby Roth and Second Baseman Maurice Shannon the Red Sox, has been vindicated, for after less than a season's trial, Boston has passed the pair on to Washington.

Roth looks impressive in the averages, but for some reason he never lasts long with a club. He started with the White Sox and then after a short time he was traded to Cleveland.

Cleveland in turn swapped him to the Athletics and after less than a seasons' work he was switched to Boston. He finished .9.9 with the Red Sox and now he has been shoved to Washington.

But that is not all. A dispatch from New York asserts that the Yanks will shortly receive Roth from Washington. What's the reason why a hard-hitting outfielder like Roth never lasts long with a club?

Shannon is a bright young man, but totally impossible as an outfielder because he hasn't the nack of handling ground balls. He is very apt to put an infield and pitcher and even the whole team up in the air by slovenly defence around the keystone. He might do better in the outfield, but as a second baseman he is totally deficient. Nobody knows this better than those who saw him perform in his tenantcy at Shibe Park.

RUTH REFUSES TO PLAY WITH YANKEES

FORMER INMATE OF CHARITABLE SCHOOL REFUSES TO BE TRADED.

Boston, Jan. 9.—Opinions voiced here today that George "Babe" Ruth, of the Boston American League baseball club, champion home-run hitter, would protest his transfer to the New York Americans were strengthened by the following telegram from him received by John Igoe, his business manager here:

"Will not play anywhere but Boston. Will leave for the east Monday."

Igoe, upon learning of the transaction between Harry H. Frazee, owner of the Boston club, and Miller Huggins, manager of the New York club, yesterday, telegraphed the information to Ruth of Los Angeles. He gave as a reason for Ruth's reply that the "home-run" king had invested his money in the cigar business here and naturally would desire to be here as much as possible.

Ruth's baseball career has been an interesting one. As an orphan inmate of a Baltimore charitable school he played on it nine and his pitching attracted the notice of Manager Dunn, of the Baltimore Eastern league club. The latter adopted him through courts in order to obtain his release from school, and Ruth rushed to the front of Eastern league pitchers. The Boston Americans purchased Ruth and his pitching teammate, Shore, from Baltimore in 1914. Shore quickly developed as a star, while Ruth's wildness caused him to be sent to the Providence club for development. But in 1915 the big fellow's pitching skill was controlled and he won 18 games, losing seven. In subsequent seasons Ruth's ability to crack out long hits caused him to be called upon frequently in the pinches, and from star pitcher he became the team's most dependable and the league's heaviest hitter, alternating between outfield, pitching box and first base, in an exhibition of versatility seldom equalled in the big leagues. Last year he played the outfield most of the time, but was called to pitchin fourteen games, of which he won eight and lost five.

When a Cleveland man stooped to get a record his forehead struck a sharp edge of his phonograph. He died from a fractured skull.

SPECIAL MEETINGS TO CONTINUE AT ST. PAUL'S

REV. R. J. M. GLASSFORD WILL CONDUCT SERVICES ALL NEXT WEEK.

The Rev. R. J. M. Glassford, who has assisted in the services in connection with the Week of Prayer in St. Paul's Church, will preach in the church at both services tomorrow. The meetings will also be continued during the week under his leadership. His messages have been greatly appreciated by those who have attended. He preaches the old truth of the gospel with freshness and power. His message last night dealt with three great words as they relate themselves to the beginning of the Christian life, the words, fact, faith and feeling. The great facts which lie back of faith and feeling are man's need of a saviour, his fallen and helpless condition, the fact that he is under condemnation on account of his sin, and then the fact that Jesus Christ died for his sin. Faith was to forsake all and to take Christ as Saviour, Master and Friend. It implied the repose of one's soul in the love of God as it is revealed in Christ. He is saved from sin's condemnation and shall never come into judgment on account of it. "There is, therefore, now no judgment to them who are in Christ Jesus." The one who believes this has peace and joy. "Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." It is only after one has believed and has gone along in the way of Christ that the feeling of safety and security comes, and hence the full joy of believing.

The messages of Mr. Glassford have been helped by the singing of a gospel solo on Thursday night by Mrs. R. W. F. Davidson, and last night by Mrs. Frank Ellis.

FARMERS' STORE OPENS

Farmers' New Venture in Commerce in Cimmission Today.

Under the exert managership of Mr. W. G. Cobourn, the Farmers' Co-operative Stores are now in full swing. A fine line of groceries and all products required by farmer and citizen alike, are in stock. The store, which is on Simcoe Street, has been redecorated inside, being finished in white paint which gives the place a very clean, spick and span appearance. Mr. Cobuorn has three assistants with him and is confident of the success of the enterprise.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

McGROARTY—THOMPSON

A very pretty wedding was solemnised at St. Andrew's manse on Wednesday, Jan. 7th, when Miss Elizabeth S. Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Thompson, 165 Stewart street, was united in marriage to Mr. Ed. P. McGroarty, of this city, the Rev. Jas. Rollins officiating.

The young couple were attended by the brother and sister of the bride. They will reside in Peterborough.

Mr. Charles Conley, of Toronto, has returned home after a few days visit with friends in Peterborough and vicinity.

Miss Ethel McGinnis has been visiting friends in Hastings.

Miss Edna Marchand has been visiting Hastings friends.

Miss Irene Whyte, of Toronto, was a visitor to the city yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Richardson, Port Hope, are visiting in the city the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allen.

Mr. Dominic Curtin, of Lindsay, was in the city for the K. of C. "At Home" on Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Baker, of Lindsay, were guests at the K. of C. "At Home" on Thursday night.

Mr. Robert S. Todd, of Montreal, is the guest of his mother, Mrs. R. J. Todd, for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Clark are visiting with friends in Tweed.

Mrs. Dickson Davidson left yesterday to visit friends in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cummings, of Montreal, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Homewood avenue.

Mr. Wm. Fletcher of Keene spent the past few days with friends in the city.

Miss Evelyn Jay has returned to Toronto to resume her studies at the Church of England Deaconess House.

Miss Gladys Jay returned to Toronto after spending the holidays with her parents, at Cameron street, North Monaghan.

Miss Hazel Jones, of the Normal School has been visiting friends in Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Sheppard and famil have returned to their home in London, Ont., after an extended visit with friends in the cit.

The regular weekly dance of the G. W. V. A. was held last night and was a decided success. The music was supplied by Leonard's G. W. V. A. orchestra of Campbellford and was all that could be desired. This is the first time this orchestra has been heard in Peterborough, but it is safe to say that it will not be the last. These social evenings of the G. W. V. A. are rapidly gaining favor among the members and their friends and the committee in charge are doing everything in their power to make them a success.

tion Board by the assistance rendered by the friends from the country.

H. G. Webber also maintained that a spirit of good will, good cheer and unity always prevailed and he stated that anything that seals the unity of city and county folks, deserved support.

Father C. J. Phelan spoke of the history of the fall fair, which was organized in 1845, and which had never lost its identity in all those years and that it is not now going to lose its identity, but with the united effort of the people, will grow and prosper to the betterment of Peterborough.

V. Eastwood declared that in the city and county of Peterborough there was opportunity for a greater future. The Peterborough Agricultural Fair is a great benefit to the vast flouting capital of livestock in Peterborough County.

Ladies Assist.

In moving the toast to the ladies, Mr. F. L. Roy, referred to the excellent service they had rendered in doing the essential work that could not be done by the men.

The toast was replied to by Mr. John Gillespie.

Mr. Denne thanked the County and City Councils, the Board of Trade and all those who had assisted the Board in making the County Fair a great provincial exhibition.

After the singing of "God Save the King," and three hearty cheers had been given for the host, the meeting dispersed.

The Guests.

Some of those present were His Honor, Judge Huycke, Ald. F. Whitehouse, C. R. Widdifield, Ald. H. Phelan, S. R. Armstrong, E. A. Peck, T. Tooms, M. P. P., Canon Davidson, R. R. Hall, Ald. J. J. Excellent music was furnished by Messrs. Gliddon and Buck, and vocal selections from Mr. Geo. Chandler, Robert Hendry and Mr. Caldwell, of Toronto, were greatly appreciated.

PREDICTS EARLY END OF STREET CARS

General Manager of Auto Manufacturing Company Says Motor Buses Will Soon Supplant Vehicles on Rails.

The early passing of the street car to make way for the automobile as the principal vehicle of travel in cities is forecast by J. J. Hunt, general manager of the Reo Motor Co., of New York. Mr. Hunt says:

"In 10 years rails and street vehicles that run on rails will be obsolete.

"The clumbersome, noisy, inflexible rail car will soon be—in fact, is now being— supplanted by the silent, supple pneumatic tired motor bus.

Examples Given.

"The change is rather in the nature of evolution than revolution, hence less noticeable, but alerady the pneumatic tired car is the established mode of transportation in sections where street rail franchises have expired or where the trolleys have evacuated of their own accord because of insufficient revenue. Newark and Brooklyn are good examples of this and many other cities furnish additional ones. As the superiority of the new type of street car becomes more apparent its adoption will be more rapid.

"I said in 10 years the rail car will be a thing of the past. In making it a full decade I am giving my prophecy plenty of leeway, for, I believe, five years will see the conquest of the new over the old almost complete.

"The motor bus, confined to no set route, is the logical and the inevitable solution both of the traffic congestion and the conservation of pedestrian life. Its patrons wait in safety on the sidewalk, where the bus picks them up, and then, instead of contending with all other vehicles for the right of way, hugs the curb and permits free flow of traffic in the space that otherwise would be occupied by tracks and trolley cars. Authorities agree that the chief cause of our traffic congestion is the frequent stops of trolley cars, with the necessity of stopping all other vehicles, also, lest the persons in the 'safety zones' be run down.

Rail Cars Excluded.

"In some of our narrowed streets the rail sars, with their 'safety zones,' take up two-thirds of the space, while even in our busiest thoroughfares like Broadwy, they occupy almost as much.

"An excellent example of the opposite condition is Fifth avenue, New York. Here the greatest vehicular traffic on any thoroughfare in America is handled most expeditiously and with a high degree of safety and comfort to all concerned. Rail cars never have been permitted to invade this avenue.

"Instead motor-buses unobtrusively take on and discharge their passengers at every corner and direct from the sidewalk, while four streams of motor cars—two going in each direction—speed past in that part of the street that otherwise would be glutted with trolley cars.

"I predict that another device will come into general use coincident with the adoption of the motor van—that is the overhead street crossing for pedestrians.

Escalators Predicted.

"Not that it will be needed any more or even as much as now, but that experience proves that when we do begin to correct abuses we are likely to go all the way. In our principal shoppings districts these crossings will be largely in the nature of moving sidewalks with escalator attachments. One decided advantage of the motor-bus over the rail car is its greater mobility or flexibility. By that I mean that on special occasions at certain hours of the day the pneumatic-tired buses can be diverted from the regular runs and routed over any other streets that best serve the needs.

"Even the difference in fare which is necessary to pay for the more comfortable ride, and the absence of nerve-racking noise is being taken care off by the trolley companies themselves, for the are everwheyre demanding a higher than a five-cent fare and striving to eliminate the thansfer.

"As motor-bus lines become established we find they are always willing to arrange for transfers from one line to another, since this form of reciprocity pays both.

"Yes, the street railway is a thing of the past, just as much as its predecessor, the horsecar. It has lived its little day and performed its part in the scheme of progress by furnishing one stride in advance. It must now give way in turn to the newer and better—the street car that runs, not on rails but on air."

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Rev. A. H. McConnache Will Preach Tomorrow Evening.

After a week of most helpful services, in which the pastor has been assisted by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, M.A., the evening service on Sunday will be one of great interest. Mr. McConnachie's addresses have made a deep impression on all who have heard them. This service will be bright with the hope and cheer of the new year and old and young will find themselves in an atmosphere of optimism and good-will. The biggest thing that any of us have to invest is life itself. Come and hear about it.

OBITUARY

VERONICA GRAVELLE

The death occurred at the Isolation Hospital of Miss Veronica Gravelle, aged sixteen years, Friday morning about ten o'clock.

The deceased was born in Bridgenorth and had been employed at the Quaker Oats in the Packing Department for over two years. She was the second of a family of seven children, four boys and three girls. Besides these brothers and sisters she leaves to mourn her loss, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gravelle, 28 Weir street.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, privately, tomorrow morning. Interment will take place in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Because his wet mittens froze to the edge of an air hole in the ice of Lake Erie at Sandusky, O., a 12-year-old boy who fell in, was able to keep afloat until rescued.

NEW CITY COUNCIL HOLD INAUGURAL MEETING AND STRIKE COMMITTEES

Ald. Phelan Retains Chairmanship of Board of Works But New Special Bridge Committee is Appointed Under Ald. Hamilton—Ald. Morrison Again for Fire, Water and Light

The inaugural meeting of the 1920 city Council opened at 11 o'clock this morning with Mayor McIntyre in the chair. The old aldermen occupied the same desks as last year with Ald. Copping occupying the place along side of Ald. Phelan, formerly filled by ex-Ald. Taylor. Ald. Whitehouse and Jones are deskmates where ex-Ald. Edgar and McIntyre formerly sat and Ald. Gordon is stationed in ex-Ald. Garside's seat along side of the Labor members.

Ex-Mayor's Valedictory

Before Mayor McIntyre delivered his address he called upon ex-Mayor Duncan to speak. Mr. Duncan said he was pleased that the mayorality contest, which was so trying for the candidates, had at last been concluded. He stated the new Council was one to be proud of. It is one that ought to make progress and deal with the large problems that are left over from last year to the best interests of the people of the city. The success of the Mayor, he said, depended upon the support he received from the Council and he felt optimistic for the success of the city for the coming year.

New Mayor Pleased.

Mayor McIntyre stated that he was greatly pleased with the Board of Aldermen and considered it the best that could be obtained from the city. He asked the aldermen to support him and any advice they could give him would be gratefully received.

The Committees for 1920.

After the Mayor's address, which appears in another portion of this issue, had been delivered, the Council went into the committee of the whole and struck the following committees:

Board of Works (and Joint with County)—Ald. Phelan (chairman), Ald. Hamilton, Morrison, Gainey, Turner and Copping.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. Morrison (chairman), Ald. Crowe, Whitehouse, Turner and Jones.

Manufacturers (Franchises and Power)—Ald. Gordon (chairman), Ald. Phelan, Copping, Whitehouse, Jones and Turner.

Finance (Printing and Licenses)—Ald. Turner (chairman), Ald. Phelan, Hamilton, Morrison and Gainey.

Property (Market, Building and Health) — Ald. Jones (chairman), Ald. Hamilton, Whitehouse and Crowe.

Legal (Reception and Legislation)—Ald. Crowe (chairman), Ald. Copping, Gordon, Phelan and Turner.

Railways (Parks and Boulevards)—Ald. Gainey (chairman), Ald. Copping, Gordon, Whitehouse and Crowe.

Special Bridge Committee—Ald. Hamilton (chairman), Ald. Phelan, Jones, Gainey, Morrison and Gordon.

The committee also recommends that the Mayor be authorized to send deputations to other places on city business when he deems it advisable and that the expenses of such deputations be paid on the certificate of the Mayor.

EX-ALD. McINTYRE ELECTED MAYOR BY CASTING VOTE OF CITY CLERK ARMSTRONG

Recount Gives Each Candidate 1483 Votes and Clerk Follows the Long-Established Rule of Voting For the More Experienced Candidate Ex-Ald. Taylor Congratulates His Successful Opponent.

Ex-Old. McIntyre and Mr. W. H. Taylor have each had the unique experience of being defeated and elected mayor in the same election. The final result in the casting vote of City Clerk S. R. Armstrong this morning—elected ex-Ald. McIntyre to the chief magistrate of the city.

The recount commenced Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and continued with short adjournments for noon and evening meals until about midnight. Several mistakes were found in the returns of some of the deputy returning officers and disputes arose as to the acceptance of several of the ballots.

Judgment was reserved on eighteen ballots which were not initialed by the deputy returning officer. The vote stood over Sunday 1478 for McIntyre and 1475 for Taylor with 10 of the disputed ballots favoring McIntyre and 8 for Taylor.

In giving his judgment this morning His Honor Judge Huycke congratulated both candidates for the fair, manly, gentlemanly way they had conducted themselves during the recount.

The conduct of the election generally was good, he said. Most ballots were carefully and correctly marked and most deputy returning officers were careful. Some of the deputies were, he said, not careful and although they do not receive a great deal for their services they should accept the responsibility and perform their duties carefully and correctly.

One or two things had given him great difficulty, stated the judge. One vote cast for Mr. McIntyre had the word mayor written on the back of it. This was the cause of serious consideration, but was finally allowed.

One vote for Mr. Taylor was marked in red and after careful consideration was allowed.

Two ballots were disallowed. They were marked with a large X, which extended from the top of the ballot to the bottom. They both crossed slightly above the line in Mr. McIntyre's space and Mr. Hatton urged that both be counted. The judge ruled, however, that the party that cast those ballots intended to spoil them or the cross would not have extended to the bottom edge of the paper.

In the matter of the non-initialled ballots the fault was entirely with the deputy returning officers and the voters did not deserve to be disfranchised. One half of these ballots were from one polling subdivision and five from another

The judge stated that be could not find, nor did he think, there was any attempt at fraud or criminal intent, careless as the officials apparently were.

He stated that he regretted very much the position in which Mr. Armstrong was placed, but using his knowledge of the law and his own commdn sense he could not but come to the conclusion that the vote was a tie. He considered both candidates acted very fairly and would make no order as to costs.

Casting Vote.

Then the city clerk was called on to cast his vote and he did so in favor of Mr. McIntyre, setting forth his reasons as follows:

"The two candidates for the office of Mayor, having an equal number of votes, it becomes my duty, under the Municipal Act, to give a vote for one of the candidates so as to decide the election."

"This is a duty that a municipal clerk does not often have to perform The last time that it occurred in Peterborough was, I believe, about forty years ago, for the office of councillor. In that case the clerk voted for the oldest councillor, or the one who had held the position before. This custom, of giving the casting vote for the one who had been longest in the Council, or who had held the position previously, has been followed in Ontario and in England. The latest case that I recall was in London, Ontario, where there was a tie for the mayoralty a couple of years ago. There, as here, the tie was upon a recount, and the city clerk referred to this custom and voted in accordance with it.

"In fact this custom has become a well defined and established one, which I must go against or follow. I follow it and vote for Mr. A. A. McIntyre, who is the older member of the Council by several years, and declare him elected Mayor."

Immediately upon the declaration that Mr. McIntyre had been elected, Mr. Taylor rose and offered his congratulations, stating that he would give any assistance to the city or his successful opponent at any time it should be desired.

Some Carelessness.

The judge stated, afterwards, that there had been several mistakes in the count of the ballots, a few of the returning officers displaying considerable carelessness. He accepted all the votes allowed by the deputy returning officers and rejected all they had disallowed. The only mistakes were in the matter of counting, which balanced between the polls on many occasions.

The official count of the election was McIntyre 1480, Taylor 1481, and the recount gave McIntyre and Taylor 1483 each.

FRENCH PREMIER IS OUT OF PARLIAMENT

FIRST TIME THIS HAS OCCURRED IN HISTORY OF THE NATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 12.—For the first time in the history of France the nation's Premier is a member of neither the Senate nor the Chamber of Deputies. This was the result of M. Clemenceau's refusal to be a candidate in Var constituency, Rene Renoult being elected to fill the Premier's place in the Upper House of Parliament. M. Clemenceau will thus be unable to take part in the election of the president of the Republic.

Paris, Jan. 12.—Three Premiers, M. Clemenceau of France Mr. Lloyd George of Great Britain and Signor Nitti of Italy, met this morning to consider the Adriatic question. The Supreme Council did not sit today. Its next meeting will be held tomorrow. The Peace Conference committee on the verification of credentials today examined those of the Hungarian peace delegates and found them satisfactory.

MAYOR McINTYRE OUTLINES WORK THAT MUST BE TAKEN UP BY COUNCIL FOR 1920

Hunter Street Bridge to be Finished and Building of Sewage Disposal Plant Can No Longer Be Delayed—Comprehensive Review of Situation

Mayor McIntyre's first official act upon taking office was to read the following message at this morning's session of the new City Council, the inaugural meeting of the Board:

Gentlemen:—I am pleased to welcome you to the City Council. Under our system of Government five of last year's aldermen remain this year without further election, and we will have the benefit of their experience. I am glad to welcome back Ald. Phelan, who was also a member last year and who has had many years experience in the Council. Ald. Gordon and Ald. Jones, who have been out of the Council for a time, we are glad to see here again and know that they can be counted on to the fullest extent, and it is pleasure to welcome Ald. Copping and Ald. Whitehouse upon upon their first appearance as aldermen of the City.

Work for the Council.

The Council this year will have several important matters to look after from the beginning. The construction of the overhead bridge on Hunter Street was begun and the work carried on vigorously last year. This great work will be completed this year and will call for our careful attention as its construction progresses.

The construction of sewage disposal works must be pressed forward as speedily as possible. The Board of Works had plans prepared for their works in which it was proposed to use Imhoff tanks, but the Provincial Board of Health authorities refused to sanction them and new plans are being prepared on the activated sludge principle in accordance with the request of the Provincial authorities. As soon as the plans are completed, and the necessary approval of the Provincial Board of Health is secured the work of construction must be proceeded with. In this the Council has no alternative, because the law requires the work to be done, and the plans must be approved of by the Provincial Health authority.

The by-law authorizing the purchase of land for a public park on the east side of the river having been sanctioned by the electors, the proper committee will take this matter up at once. The prices procured in December have a limited time for acceptance and no time should be lost in dealing with the matter.

Debentures Authorized.

Debentures for a large sum in the aggregate have been authorized, but not disposed of. These are the Public School debentures for 240,000.00, the bridges debentures for $280,000.00 the debentures for the purchase and improvement of the buildings for the Nashua Gummed & Coated Paper Co., $57,000.00 and the park debentures for $33,000.00. These amount to $610,000.00. and there will be small amounts for the local improvements constructed last year. Careful attention will need to be given to the marketing of these debentures so as to secure the best possible result.

Street Railway Matter.

During the past couple of years applications have been made to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission for extensions of the street railway. There are portions of city that should be provided with this service, and while the Council has not control of this matter, renewed applications should be pressed upon the Commission for needed extensions.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission may desire the consideration of street railway extensions laid over until the larger question of the power situation in this district is dealt with. In this district the power and transmission lines, and in some towns the distributing systems as well, are owned by the Province and operated by the Commission, while in the Niagara district the power and transmission lines are owned by the municipalities and operated by the Commission for them. The municipalities in this district are to be called together, I understand, to consider this situation, and this Council should have delegates appointed to attend, and instructed upon the subject. But in the meantime this City should not have to wait for necessary extensions to the street railway, because it will make no difference whether they are made now by the Commission or by the City after the railway is taken over by the municipality, if it should be so taken over. So long as the services asked for are required and are such as should be made, the people should not

ELLIS, THE HANGMAN, IS ERECTING THE SCAFFOLD AT THE COUNTY JAILYARD

Structure is Being Put Up in Women's Yard; Most Secluded Portion of the Premises.

Hangman Ellis, who slipped quietly into the city on Saturday, is busy today erecting the scaffold upon which the condemned Russians will be executed on Wednesday morning. He is assisted in his work by a carpenter and several of the jail officials. The weather beaten timbers that have done duty on so many occasions, the last time at the execution of Robert Henderson six years ago, were resurrected from the store room of the jail this morning. The death structure is being put up in the women's yard, the most isolated section of the premises, instead of the back yard, as formerly. The condemned men occupy cells on the south side of the jail as far as possible from the spot where the scaffold is being erected. The unfortunate criminals will be mercifully spared the sight of the building of the gallows and cannot even hear the sound of hammering which the work requires. The procession of death from the cells of the condemned will be a long one. The cross beam of the scaffold shows above the high wall of the jail, and the gruesome spectacle attracted a number of the morbidly curious today.

Ellis, the Hangman, Gets Shaved.

It was during the Saturday evening rush in a down town barber shop. In the hands of one of the most expert workmen was a stranger in the city, a man about forty years of age, of fairly presentable appearance, well dressed, and evidently satisfied with himself and his condition in life.

In the next chair was a local man who discoursed on the pending execution to the customers in waiting. Naturally he spoke of the hangman, whom he denounced as unworthy to mingle with Christians. His eloquent protestation against capital punishment appeared to meet with general approval.

The stranger in the next chair was amused and specially interested. Nudging the barber who was performing on his florid countenance, he confided to him that he was no other than Ellis, the hangman, subject of the discussion then in progress. The secret was kept until the stranger had left the shop, when a general shudder passed over the men in the chairs and those waiting their turn

Ellis, the hangman, naturally enough, regards himself as a Government official in good standing, in receipt of a regular salary, and a bonus for every criminal whom he executes. He is not oversensitive, so that the free expression of opinion which he heard Saturday simply tickled his sense of humor.

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT

ALD. HANNIGAN RESIGNS HIS POSITION AFTER CHOICE HAD BEEN MADE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Guelph, Jan. 12.—Alderman H. O Westoby was today elected mayor of Guelph by the City Council after it had deadlocked for some time between Ald. Burgess and Ald. Frank Howard. Immediately after Westoby's election Ald. J. T. Hannigan, a prominent Hydro man, handed in his resignation.

RATIFICATION OF TREATY CREATES NO ENTHUSIASM AMONG THE BRITISH

London Telegraph Says Attitude of United States Has Dimmed the Prospects For the League of Nations.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 12.—The ratification of the Treaty of Versailles, fails to elicit an expression of joy from the London press. Editorials in this morning's newspapers, express at best qualified satisfaction, while some journals strike a distinctly doleful not.

"It is no time of triumph or soaring hopes," says the Telegraph, which, giving some reasons for its troubled view, adds: "the ommission of America's signature to the ratifying document stands for bitter disappointment of the hope that glowed with promise for humanity a year ago It is true the League of Nations exists by terms of the treaty but the world knows, unless and until the United States adheres to the League and participates in its actions, not one tithe of the usefulness and moral authority it should possess will belong to it."

ITALIAN VILLAGE IS BURIED BY AVALANCHE

MANY PERSONS ARE REPORTED KILLED — HEAVY SNOW STORMS BLOCK TRAFFIC

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berne, Jan. 12.— Porrachia village in the Italian Alps has been buried by an avalanche and many persons are reported killed. Five children were killed at midnight in their home, which was burned by an avalanche near Galtauer in the Vorarlberg mountain. The remainder of the family, although injured, was rescued by neighbors. Heavy snowstorms in the Alps have blocked the railroads and highways, many villages being isolated.

BOLSHEVIK FORCE REPORT MORE DECISIVE MILITARY OPERATIONS IN RUSSIA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 12.—The capture of 25,400 prisoners is claimed in a statement issued today by the Soviet Government at Moscow, giving details of the results of the Bolshevik operations on the southern front between December 21 and January 9. The statement says 650 cannon, 50 bomb throwers, 11 tanks, 650 machine guns and enormous quantities of military supplies were also taken.

PEACE PROCLAIMED WITHIN A FEW DAYS

WAR TIME ORDERS IN COUNCIL TO BE DEALT WITH BY PARLIAMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—It is expected that the proclamation of peace will be published within a few days, and there will then arise the question of several orders-in-Cluncil still in existence under hte War Measures Act. It is probable they will be entirely disposed of when Parliament meets.

GOVERNMENT ISSUES MANIFESTO TO MEN

PRESIDENT SUSPENDS FREEDOM OF PRESS AND RIGHT TO STRIKE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The government has issued a manifesto urging all striking railwaymen to resume work immediately. Freedom of the press, the right of assembly and the right to strike have been suspended by the order of the president in the districts where the railway strike is in progress. The railwaymen's strike is actively in progress in the entire Rhenish Westphalian region, and numerous upper Silesian towns.

TORONTO WILL ADOPT DAYLIGHT SAVING

NO MATTER WHAT REST OF COUNTRY DOES, SAYS, MAYOR CHURCH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 12.—No matter what the rest of the country does about daylight saving this coming summer, it will be proclaimed locally in Toronto according to the inaugural address of Mayor Thomas Church to the Toronto city council this morning. Mayor Church assumed the chair for his sixth consecutive term. Continued co-operation with Sir Adam Beck in the development of public owned radials and other hydro propositions was a feature of the recommendations the mayor made to council as the proper courses for Toronto to pursue.

ALD. GORDON UPHOLDS CLERK'S DECISION

DECLARES HE FOLLOWED THE GENERAL CUSTOM IN CASTINGG HIS VOTE

Referring to the election of Mayor McIntyre by the city clerk's casting vote, Ald. G. N. Gordon stated this afternoon that in discussing the practice with city solicitors he learned that it is the plan generally adopted and more strictly adhered to of late that when a casting vote is given by a city clerk or chairman of a shareholders' meeting it is usually given to the candidate of longest experience and service.

He refused to give any opinion as to the judge's ruling in accepting the uninitialled ballots.

MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO AVOID A RUPTURE

STRIKING RAILWAYMEN WILL AWAIT RETURN OF MINISTER TO LONDON.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 12.— No move in the wage dispute between railwaymen and the Government is expected until the return from Paris of Sir Robert Horne, Minister of Labor and Eric Geddes, Minister of Transportation, who were summoned by Premier Lloyd George yesterday, to consult with him in the French capital, and are expected back in London by Tuesday. In any event, however, it is considered that precipitate action is improbable. J. H. Thomas, the railway men's leader, declared this morning: "there will be every effort to avoid a rupture."

In accordance with the provisions of the Peace Treaty the German fort of Istein, a few miles from Basel, has been destroyed.

LORD KILMARNOCK GOES TO GERMANY

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH THE COUNTRY TO BE RESTORED AT ONCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 12.—Lord Kilmarnock left London for Berlin this morning to assume the duties of British diplomatic representative at the German capital. The departure is an important step in the re-establishment of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Germany which will be effected almost immediately. Consuls and consuls-general will be appointed shortly by the two governments.

A Soviet Republic envoy, charged with a special mission to the Italian Government has reached Naples, according to a despatch received from Rome.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, JANUARY 12, 1920.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

THE PETERBOROUGH Exhibition is one of the city's best assets, and it is especially fortunate in being officered by some of the most progressive and enterprising young business men of the city, men whose watchword is always "Forward," and who, in anything which they undertake, recognize no such thing as failure. The Exhibition, expanded as it should be, and carried out along the lines laid down by President Denne and his associates on the board of directors, cannot fail to draw the city and country districts closer together and to develop the community spirit, without which substantial advancement is impossible. The Fair has always been a success in the past, in spite of the obstacles that always make hard sledding for such enterprises, but now the future looks bright.

At President Denne's banquet the other night, one of the finest affairs of the kind ever staged in Peterborough, the keynote of all the speeches was co-operation. Every citizen, whether he reside in city or county should feel that he has a personal interest in the Exhibition. No one is in it for the purpose of making money. Its success is impossible without bringing prosperity, directly or indirectly, to every resident in the entire district. As a stock raising county, Peterborough has unbounded opportunities, and nothing will so encourage the raising of first-class live stock as the chance to enter them every Fall in competition for the prizes which the Fair Board offer. Every visitor induced to come to the city with the Exhibition as an attraction adds to the wealth of the tcommunity. Then support the Fair. Every paid admission helps the directors to increased effort, and is of no less assistance to the city as a whole. Some one has suggested that on one day during the Fair a general holiday be declared to give all workers in the city an opportunity to attend. This practical idea is certainly worthy of every consideration.

"LABOR and the Farmers must get together," is a stock phrase with the modern reformer, but in one particular at least the two classes have already something in common, calloused hands that have not been made so by excessive speech.

THE CHANCES FOR PERPETUAL PEACE.

AFTER FOUR YEARS of the bloodiest war in the history of the world, peace has finally been signed between the belligerents, agreement having been reached only after a discussion of conditions that lasted for more than a year. The delay was to a great extent caused by the failure of the Germans to observe in their integrity the conditions of the Armistice by which hostilities were ended. The sinking of the German ships at Scapa Flow to prevent them falling into the hands of the conquerors created fresh complications that deferred a final settlement.

Unlike all former treaties of this kind, an attempt has been made to assure the peace of the world for all time by making war impossible. Anyone who understands the spirit of the German race believes that, if left to themselves, they would devote all their natural energies to the restoration of their army and navy, and, fifty years or so hence, be in a position to repeat the attempt which recently ended in disaster. With such a force at work, with so unholy an ambition unchecked, there could be no security for civilization. A written treaty of peace, no matter how solemn the obligations, could not hold such a power as the Germans, judging from their record in the late war.

The League of Nations, designed to prevent all war in the future may be a rainbow-tinted dream, but it is at least a step in the right direction. The nations that made common cause to break down the menace of Prussianism are to remain in an alliance with the same object in view.

The task which the members of the League have set themselves is gigantic, but their hands are likely to be upheld by the masses of the people in the various countries they represent. The world has had its lesson in four years of bloodshed. Such a menace to civilization is not likely to grow up again. Canada is still mourning for her sixty thousand sons resting in the military cemeteries of Europe. There are hundreds of cripples, of physical and mental wrecks, the brightest and best of the country's young manhood, in Canada today. The soldier who spent years or even months in the hell of war is likely to be a practical pacifist for the rest of his days, and behind him are the friends who suffered with him. The enormous debts that the war created will always remain as a reminder of human folly. If there are no great wars in the future, perpetual peace may be safeguarded by the people themselves rather than by the League of Nations. If the masses refuse to fight without such a righteous cause as the Allies upheld for four years, there can be no more of international strife. Paranoiac kings must be shorn of their power to delude their subjects. War is madness, and the eyes of the people have been opened.

The League of Nations will not be materially weakened even if the United States refuses to become a party to it. The work of the League lies among the powers of Europe. But the League will not be denied the moral support of the American nation, convinced now as the people of that country must be, that such a cataclysm as that which rocked the civilized world to its foundation threatened their own national peace and safety.

WHERE CAPITAL PUNISHMENT PREVAILS.

THE ADVOCATES of that relic of barbarism, capital punishment, never fail to cite, by way of argument, the case of the United States, where the crime of murder is said to prevail to a greater degree than in Canada, and where, in some States at least, this method of dealing with homicides has been abolished.

This argument defeats itself, especially if it can be shown that the percentage of murders in the American republic is abnormally high, which is by no means conceded.

There are forty-eight States in the American Union, and in only four of these is there no death penalty. Under the Federal law, offenders are put to death for treason against the United States and for both piracy and murder within the Federal jurisdiction. For example, if a man were killed on a post office property, in a customs house, or at a military fort, the slayer would be liable to the death penalty unless such crime were committed on Federal property in some State which had abolished capital punishment. In that event the Federal authority, as a matter of courtesy, would waive its right to send the offender to his death.

Forty-four of the States have capital punishment laws, and in the majority of these the enactment is more drastic than in Canada. Treason, arson and criminal assault are included in the list of crimes for which the guilty party may be condemned to death. If it is true, as the advocates of capital punishment claim, that capital punishment acts as a deterrent to the commission of crime, and the list of murders in the United States is excessive, then the force of this favorite contention is lost.

The death penalty was abolished in Michigan in 1846, except for treason. The percentage of murders in that State is no higher than it is in Canada. In 1853 the State of Wisconsin abolished this form of punishment, either for murder or for treason. In Maine it was abolished in 1876, was restored in 1883, and again abolished four years later when it was found that the object claimed for it, the prevention of murder, had not been attained. In Rhode Island it was abolished in 1852, but thirty years afterward it was restored in a measure so that the death penalty could be carried out in the case of murder committed by a man under life sentence for homicide.

That is the situation in the United States today, and it is certainly not fair to cite it as a country in which the abolition of the death penalty has proved a failure.

The agitation against capital punishment is still in progress in every civilized country where it is yet the law. Those who favor its abolition say that society has no right, any more than has the individual, to take the life of one of its members on any ground. They also urge that capital punishment may deny the criminal of the chance to repent, and that homicide is usually evidence of a mental disease. It is also shown by figures that capital punishment does not act as a deterrent that there is always the possibility that an innocent man may be sent to the gallows and his innocence established when it is too late, and that in any case the object of punishment, the reformation of the offender to whom it is applied, is not attained.

The man who deliberately commits murder usually lays his plans so as to evade detection, if possible. He is always buoyed up with the hope that he will be able to avoid the gallows, and the same hope would animate him if he were faced with nothing more serious than life imprisonment.

The man who in the heat of passion takes the life of another, never thinks of the consequences of his act. The condemned man now awaiting execution in the local jail who fired the fatal shot in the boarding house at Havelock, did so without considering the fate that is meted out to murderers. The fear of death on the gallows is no help to a man to control an ungovernable temper. In the case in point, the incentive to shoot was really the instinct of self-preservation.

HOW WORLD WILL FEEL EFFECTS OF THE PEACE TREATY WITH GERMANY

History of the Progress of Negotiations Carried on Since Signing of the Armistice.

Peaceful relations between Germany and the greater number of the nations engaged in the World War against her are re-established by the ceremony in Paris. The Peace Treaty now goes into effect as between Germany and those powers that have finally ratified it — Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Guatemala, Peru, Poland, Siam, Czecho-Slovakia, and Uruguay.

Panama has ratified, but the document has not reached Paris.

Great Britain was the first of the Five Great Powers represented in the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference to take such action, being followed in succession by France, Italy and Japan. The United States alone of the Big Five has not ratified the treaty. As the list shows, formal ratifications have been given by most of the smaller powers signatory to the treaty. China did not sign the document because of her objections to the Shan-Tung provisions, but she proclaimed a state of peace with Germany.

By Berlin, July 9, 1919.

The all important ratification, by Germany, was July 9, 1919, the day after President Wilson submitted the treaty to the United States Senate for its "advice and consent," as provided in the Constitution.

The making of the peace which now becomes effective, was begun shortly after the conclusion of the armistice of November 11th, 1918, which ended the World War. The treaty was signed in the historic Versailles Palace June 28, 1919.

The long interval between the assembling of the Peace Conference at Versailles on January 18, 1919, and the signing of the treaty, was occupied with almost daily secret conferences on its provisions between the representatives of the nations which had been at war with Germany or had broken relations with her, the principal parts being taken by delegates of France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan and the United States. There were remarkably few sessions of the Peace Conference proper.

The first important work completed was the drawing up of the covenant of the League of Nations, announced publicly February 14. The German representatives were invited to Versailles in April, after the draft of the terms of peace had been completed. They received the treaty on May 7.

15 Parts; Many Annexes.

The treaty not only defines the terms of peace with Germany, but contains the League of Nations covenant and the provisions for an international labor organization.

The document is in fifteen parts with numerous annexes. It provides that as soon as it had been ratified by Germany and three of the principal Allied and Association Powers, a process-verbal of the deposit of ratifications should be drawn up, from the date of which the treaty would come into force as between the powers who had ratified it.

The treaty will enter into force for each other power at the date of the deposit of its ratification.

Last October a sufficient number of powers had ratified the treaty to comply with the requirements for its effectiveness. But because of the sinking of the interned German warships by their officers and crews at Scapa Flow, and the failure of the Germans to live up to some of the Armistice terms, the Allies on November 1 demanded that before the treaty was put into effect Germany should sign a protocol providing for repartion for the destruction of the warships and guaranteeing the carrying out of the Armistice terms.

Since that time the question of the protocol, and particularly the reparation provisions in it have been under negotiation between the Allied Supreme Council and the Berlin government. It was only in the past fortnight that the situation began to clear, an adjustment of the tonnage demands on Germany being reached.

League Will Meet.

With the taking effect of the treaty a number of commissions created by it sprung into existence, the League of Nations will begin to function by the calling of the first meeting of its council, and preparations will be hastened for the taking of plebistion is to have the opportunity of tion is to have the opportuniay of determining whether their territory shall separate from Germany and take on another allegiance.

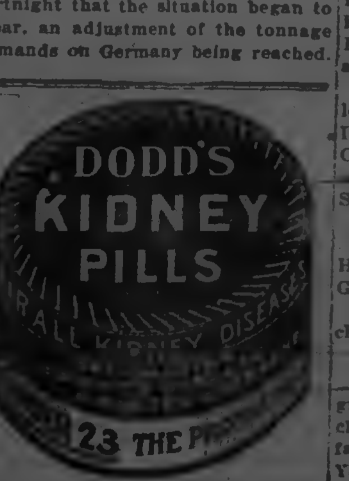
Of the commissions now beginning their work, probably the most important is that on reparations, which has the big job incident to the execution of the treaty, its special duty being to regulate Germany's payment of indemnification in the next thirty years.

Important also will be the commissions dealing with the Saar Valley, Rhenish territories, Upper Silesia, Teschen and Schleswig. Boundary commissions which are to fix on the spot the new boundaries of Germany with Belgium, the Saar Basin, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, are to be appointed in fifteen days.

To Try War-Accused.

A speedy development is expected to be the presentation to Germany of the list of war criminals to be demanded by the Allies for trial.

The treaty itself arraigns former Emperor William "for a supreme offence against international morality and the sanctity of treaties" and provides for a special tribunal to try him after his surrender has been asked from Holland.



TO-DAY'S STORY

(By Mrs. J. E. Leslie.)

She sat with wide eyes before the grate fire. She was 16 that day. She was dreaming as all 16-year-old girls do. They were fluttering, half fearful, half-ashamed dreams. She would tell them only to some one very dear at a very confidential time and in a very confidential mood. It would be an honor to be her confidante—and a great breach of all that was fine and loyal to betray that confidence. The girlish dreams were a part of the innermost sanctum of her soul.

She dreamed of womanly things there by the fire. She was grown up now—and because she was grown up she let herself shape the dreams that had been only vague, occasional thoughts before.

There was a dear little white cottage in her dream picture in the fire Pink roses grew over the porch. A green lawn was all round. A big tree shaded it. Some one came up the walk—a big dear some one who had been working in the busy, noisy, city all day. Some one was waiting on the porch for him—some one with a sweet pink bundle in her arms.

And then, because the dreamer by the fire was still half-child, she saw the fairies peeping out from under the green leaves of the big elm and swinging on the pink roses of the porch. She told the little bundle in her arms about them while they were waiting for "Him." And the little bundle blinked understanding eyes at the story teller and talked a language unintelligible only to them and the fairies. She knew all about it. It had not been very long since she had come from the land of the wee folks.

And then there was a soft lullaby and the little bundle dreamed, too And the girl by the fire woke up and smiled and flushed and ran away to dress for the "Him" of her dreams.

CIVIC PATRIOTISM.

Editor of Review.—Capt. McGillivray, recently speaking on the subject of Municipal Patriotism, said: "To my mind there is no more urgent duty before the Church today than that of creating a more sensitive civic conscience and of elevating the standard of civic honor and righteousness, by showing that patriotism is an integral part of religion and that civic obligations and Christian obligations are one."

Personaly I would like to see a municipal skating rink, where the boys and girls of our town, who cannot afford to patronize a privately owned rink, irrespective of class or creed, could meet on a common sheet of ice in fellowship and play together with one of our town officers as supervisors.

Socrates once said: "if it was in his power he would climb to the highest pinacle in Athens and cry with all his enregy, 'what mean you fellow-citizens to strain every point to scrape wealth together and pay so little attention to the children.'"

This is also applicable in the present day.

Care is measured by "ought". What a man can do for the uplift of his community he ought to do. To do less is to fail in one's duty. Duty is never optional, and its neglect is never harmless. It is not the Council that saves a few mills on the dollar. That is more economical, but the one that gets the most results from the money expended.

Thanking you, I remain,
Yours, etc.

Mainly About People

Not many days ago all indications pointed to the early retirement from public life of Georges Clemenceau, the Premier of France in the last years of the war. Born in 1841 Clemenceau had had a more than ordinary share of the activities of public life. He had served in the municipal affairs of Paris in the troubled times that followed the Franco-German war of 1870, had been at various times member of the Senate and member of the Chamber of Deputies, winning prominence as a Radical leader, had been Premier for a short period in 1907-8 and had been an active political journalist when no longer in office. He was out when the war came on and at some stages his criticisms of the Governments of the day were sharp. He had, however, long been noted for his advocacy of vigorous military organization for defence against Germany, feeling that a conflict was inevitable. When, in the midst of the war, there occurred one of the political crises that had been common in France, Clemenceau came to the front again as Premier, and on him fell the responsibility and in a large degree the glory of France's part in the war.

It was hardly surprising that, at the advanced age of 78 years, Clemenceau declared his intention of retiring from political life. There is no reason to doubt that in making that announcement he was quite sincere. But the part he has had in recent events has made the French people desirous of retaining his services. The Presidency being about to be vacated by Mr. Poincaire, members of both the legislative bodies are uniting in a call to Clemenceau to take the higher position, and there is every probability that he will be elected by acclamation. The President of France is elected, for a term of seven years, by the members of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, sitting together at a National Assembly.

SCHOOL TEACHERS' SALARIES

School teachers' salaries are to be increased in West Australia. The Government has approved of the following increases: Minimum pay for unclassified schools to be raised to $780, including $65 house allowance; minimum salary of male assistants of 21 years of age to be raised to $750. Increases of other salaries under $1,500 are under consideration.

A cloth jacket is warmer than a furlined coat because there is less temptation to leave it open.

When a young man is intoxicated with love he has his own ideas as to what makes the world go round.

It has been decided by the French Senate to organize a big interallied colonial exhibition in 1925.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

"FREE VERSE" MAKES 'EM READ HIS SMALL ADS

Free verse is not a bad idea when it comes to advertising, at least that's what Mockett's Store, of Toledo, O., has discovered.

It worried the advertising manager when he discovered that there were so many illustrations and such a bewildering array of advertising that his little single-column displays were lost in the shuffle.

Then it occurred to him that sometimes an original form of type will so put pep into the physical appearance of a small-space advertisement that people are attracted to it. Now the store uses "free verse" altogether, as shown by this unique example:

He could sit down
"He came in,
All fussed up
Like a debutante
At her first party
Or a new voter,
Afraid to ask
What to do.
And the clerk smiled.
And showed him where
And see the stuff
He wanted to see,
And the clerk discovered
He wanted shirts,
And that was enough
And the clerk got 'em.
And the man finally Settled down
And got his nerve
And wanted to buy
A shirt of tan,
But the clerk told him
Tan wasn't good
For his kind of complexion
Or something like that:
And the man discovered
The clerk knew better
What he wanted
Than he knew himself
And after awhile
The man came out
Of his speechless state
And got real chummy;
And when he left
He said that Mockett's
Knew what to do
For fellows who want
The thing they want,
But don't know just
What in heck it is."

TYING UP THE GOODS AND THE ADVERTISING

Mr. Parkhurst, who handles the window displays for Ingersoll's, Cheyenne, Wyo., maintains his own "clipping bureau." He receives many of the national publications with their attractive cover designs and color illustrations in their advertisements. When he sees a design that looks good he clips it and puts it in the rack above the bench on which he turns out his show cards. Later, when he needs something, say a card for baby week, he refers to the collection and usually finds some illustration that improves the appearance of his card.

Incidentally, the store hooks up with national baby week. In order to stimulate new shoppers in that department the store offers a discount of 10 per cent. during baby week. The store does not maintain a large infant's wear department, but it finds that it pays to make the department distinct, small as it is. Since doing so the business has grown greatly.

$30,000 IN PHONOGRAPHS SOLD THROUGH BARBER SHOP

A year ago the Lundstrom Furniture Store, of Logan, Utah, started carrying graphophones and to get them before all possible customers, the firm put a machine in the leading barber shop of the city and has kept it there ever since well supplied with new records.

As a result the company has since then sold 140 machines at an average of $250 each. This means a business of nearly $30,000 in one year brought in mainly by the simple and inexpensive device of having a sample machine on exhibition in a place where every one has the time to listen to it, discuss its qualities and enjoy its music.

The bootblack of the barber's shop enjoys tending to the records as the machine is placed beside his stand. Polishing shoes is as keen a joy as crap-shooting when you can do it in time to jazz music. The barbers in their moments of leisure put on their favorite records and never have a bolshevistic thought. The customers, while taking off their collars, call for a favorite, and then stretch out in the chair for ten minutes of that peace of mind which invariably comes to a man when he is being manipulated by a skillful barber—a peace of mind that no mere woman can understand and that is greatly enhanced by Hawaiian music, serenades or foxtrots.

Every time a graphophone customer comes into the Lundstrom store, nine cases out of ten the barber shop impulse is at the bottom of it. If it is a woman customer, she says: "I want to look at that machine my husband talks about so much;" or if it is a man he explains that he is there to look into that machine he heard at the barber's shop. For the shop takes no responsibility for the machine, neither as to giving price nor record information. It simply gives it house room and a boot-black attendant, but every worker in the shop is a devoted graphophone fan. The shop has become a clubhouse as well as a news exchange and is thus doubly attractive.

METHUSELAH SHOULD HAVE BEEN BRITISH!

Men who are conversant with the clothing situation in England are wondering why Mark Sullivan and Ogden Armour are getting so much publicity in the States merely because they mentioned that they wore their clothes for five years or so. Articles of apparel only five years old are in the infant class over there—in fact, one of the London papers has dug up a man who has been wearing the same overcoat for some forty-eight years.

"The coat," adds the correspondent, "still looks newer and fresher than many coats of comparatively recent date. It was made in 1851 by the master tailor of the Carbineer Regiment for an officer, who bequeathed it to his valet some ten years later.

"What's more, the present owner is also wearing a pair of shooting boots given him some fifty years ago!"

The publication of this item immediately caused a number of other readers to write in concerning the antiquity of their wearing apparel. One of them claimed that he has a straw hat which he has worn for twenty-seven years, but this was capped by a man with a beaver that has seen service for more than a half century.

"The hat," stated the owner, "is a beaver which was made for my grandfather sixty-eight years ago. I'll admit that it is inclined to look its age, but it has stood the test of time as no modern hat could, and I am still wearing it every day."

Several Times in World's History Baubles Have Been Rejected.

There are in Europe to-day thrones without occupants, but there is no lack of applicants for the post, says Pearson's Weekly. Several times in the world's history, however, crowns have been as promptly rejected as though they were very damaged and worthless articles indeed.

Early in the last century the crown of Greece was offered to Lord Byron, who died before he had a chance to accept it. Later on Queen Victoria's second son, the late Duke of Edinburgh, was invited to become King of the Hellenes, but the jealousy of foreign powers decided his refusal. Then it was offered in turn to Mr. William Gladstone and Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, but neither was attracted by the honor.

Napoleon anticipated the patriotic Hungarians by wishing to separate Hungary from Austria in 1809, when he offered the separate crown to the great Hungarian, Count Esterhazy. But the count refused and went into temporary exile.

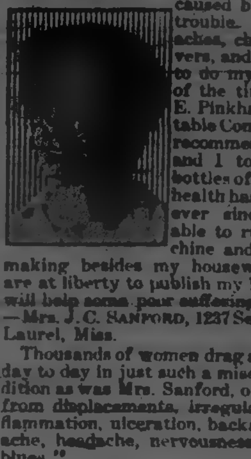
Early in the history of Russia when it was scarcely acknowledged as a part of civilised Europe, the imperial throne was offered first to Prince Mstislavski, and then to Prince Pozharski, but they feared to undertake such a difficult task.

Finally a youth of 16, Michael, was elected on condition that he swore that he and his descendants should reign as constitutional sovereigns. He was the first Romanoff—and now once again there is no tsar reigning in Russia.

Later on, when Tsar Alexander I. died in 1825, his brother Constantine was the heir, but he preferred the security of private life, and handed it to his young brother, Nicholas I.

The Useful Bamboo.

Many are the uses of bamboo in China, says a traveller in that land of ancient history, long quiescent, and, as economic development now looks forward, of tremendous future importance. To the western world bamboo is chiefly associated with the fishing pole, and perhaps, in the minds of an older generation, with school discipline conducted on the Solomonic plan. But China has been growing and utilising bamboo since the dawn of Chinese history; one of the earliest uses may have been to intertwine the young stems and grow an impenetrable fence; and one of the latest may have been to make gas pipe. The young growth serves for food. The stems chosen at various stages are used for fans, scaffolding, wheels, pipes, handles for brooms, sedan chairs and the poles to carry them, flutes, umbrellas, bird cages, lanterns, foot rules, chop sticks, buckets, flower vases, cash boxes, chairs, tables and other furniture. It is carved, painted, and lacquered, and the Chinese scholar, sitting on a bamboo chair at a bamboo table may do his writing with a bamboo penholder. For that matter, the paper on which he writes may have been made of bamboo, which is also used in Chinese textiles.



MRS. SANFORD'S MESSAGE TO WORKING WOMEN

Laurel, Miss. — "Eight years ago I was suffering with pains and weakness caused by a female trouble. I had headaches, chills and fevers, and was unable to do my work part of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me and I took twelve bottles of it, and my health has been good ever since. I am able to run the machine and do dressmaking besides my housework. You are at liberty to publish my letter if it will help some poor suffering woman." —Mrs. J. C. SANFORD, 1237 Second Ave., Laurel, Miss.

Thousands of women drag along from day to day in just such a miserable condition as was Mrs. Sanford, or suffering from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, sideache, headache, nervousness, or "the blues."

Such women should profit by Mrs. Sanford's experience and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and find relief from their sufferings as she did.

For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their long experience is at your service.

CANNOT LOSE TOAD

Little Amphibian Has Strong Homing Instinct.

Like the Proverbial Cat, He Will Come Back to His Fixed Abode if There Is Any Possibility of His Doing It.

When I was a boy down on Cape Cod, writes a friend of the Companion, I remember my mother scraping the side of a toad with her hoe while working in the garden. The next day mother noticed there was a large scab in the toad's side. It made her nervous to look at it, and she asked me to put the toad in a box and carry it away. I carried the toad a distance of three miles into the woods and dropped him. He was back in our garden the very next day; and although I repeated the performance three times, it hopped back every time. Finally mother said not to bother him, for the scab was healing.

I never gave that a second thought until I happened to be studying under Professor Sharp at Boston university, when, to illustrate a point to the class, he said that toads, like carrier pigeons, possessed the homing instinct; then I thought of the toad that mother had asked me to carry away from our garden at Provincetown, 30 years before.

It happened next morning after Professor Sharp made the remark about the homing instinct of hop-toads that a freight conductor came into the signal tower where I am employed and showed me a hop-toad he had picked up on the lawn at the Saugus station and brought to Boston in his caboose; he said he intended to put the toad in his garden at Somerville to eat the bugs.

I told the conductor about the experience I had with a toad down on Cape Cod and that Professor Sharp had said that toads did really possess the homing instinct. Finally, we decided to tie a small tag to the toad's hind leg with the conductor's name and address written on it; and he was to turn the toad loose in his garden at Somerville that afternoon. When the conductor's train arrived at Saugus the next noon the toad with a tag on which his name was written was hopping round on the lawn at the Saugus station.

In order to prove still further that toads do really possess the homing instinct I took a toad from my garden at Wakefield, ten miles from Boston. Putting the toad in a box, I walked to the Wakefield station and took a train for Boston at half-past ten in the evening. When I arrived in Boston I transferred to the Elevated and rode to Charlestown, and at the corner of Perkins and Haverhill streets, Charlestown, one mile from Boston, near the signal tower where I work, I released the toad. The toad was tagged with my name and address.

As I walked into my driveway in Wakefield at half-past eight the next morning a dusty-looking toad with a small tag tied to his hind leg hopped across the lawn from the direction of the Metropolitan park reservation and placed himself under the sill cock, where the water dripped on him and bathed his dusty back.

Danzig Mourns and Rejoices.

When the stranger in Danzig, taking the ancient town in its turn in a reportorial tour of central European cities, came out of his hotel the day after his arrival he noticed not far away the tent of a circus. But the usual activities of a circus were lacking: if it were really a circus, as a large placard proclaimed it, it was a circus asleep in the heart of a populous city. Nor did anybody pay any attention to it; it stayed there somnolent, and the citizens went about their business with hardly a glance at it. The sight aroused the stranger. He asked his hotel porter about it, and the hotel porter replied that that city was in mourning, and no amusements were permitted. The visitor asked why. "Because of the peace terms," said the porter. "We don't want to be separated from Germany. Everybody in Danzig is German." And so for a week the old city mourned. The circus remained closed; the theatres also, and even the motion-picture houses.

MAYFAIR.

Aristocratic District Was Mecca of All London.

Few probably of the fashionable denizens of Mayfair are aware of the origin of the name or the doings that formerly attracted the populace to their now aristocratic quarter of the Metropolis. Known by the designation of Brookfield, the ground lying between Park Lane and Berkley Square became by the grant from James II. the scene of a fair which commenced on May 1, and continued for fifteen days.

It was not, we are told, for the purpose of trade or merchandise; but for "muskick, showes, drinking, gaming drolls," says Tit-Bits. This variety of amusement drew thither all the nobility in town, and doubtless presented a gay and lively scene while it lasted. The district acquired by degrees the name of Mayfair, and the rendezvous remained popular for many years.

In 1708 it was suppressed. Later, when we learn that it contained "booth for jugglers, prize-fighters, boxing matches, and wild beasts," while the outside sports included mountebanks, fire-eaters, donkey-racing, dice tables, ups and downs, merry-go-rounds, bull-baiting, grinning for a hat, running for a shift, hasty pudding eaters, and sundry other entertainments.

The sites of Hertford street and Curzon street formed the centre of the fair, and the old wooden public house, the Dog and Duck, had beyond question many patrons, more particularly as at Fair-time the second story of the Market House close by was let for the plays to be performed, and duck-hunting took place in the pond shaded by willows behind the inn itself.

The fair was finally suppressed in the reign of George III., and the later chronicles of the district that remain are concerned with the celebrated Mayfair marriages, for at "the Reverend Alexander Keith's Chapel," the entrance to which was by a country-looking church porch, the ceremony was performed at a minute's notice, the fee being one guinea and the license five shillings, and among the marriages so celebrated and recorded in one of the three volumes kept with the parish books of St. George's Hanover Square, is that of the Duke of Kingston, to Miss Chudleigh, and of James, fourth Duke of Hamilton, in 1752, to one of the beautiful Miss Gunnings.

Fossil Elephant of England.

Several nearly complete skeletons of fossil elephants had already been found in the clay and brick-earth of the old banks of rivers in the south of England, but until 1913 there had been no opportunity for recovering more than fragments of them. In that year, however, Mr. Sydney Turner, of Luton, Chatham, reported to the British Museum that a fine skeleton had been exposed by the digging of a trench at Frindsbury, in the grounds of the Chatham School of Military Engineering; and as soon as the discovery had been confirmed the commandant of the school took every precaution to preserve the specimen until a dry season permitted its removal. The early summer of 1915 proved to be a favorable time, and the bones were then skilfully disinterred by Mr. L. E. Parsons, under the direction of Dr. C. W. Andrews, who afterward sent them in a special barge to London.

The removal of such a fossil skeleton is by no means an easy task, for the bones have lost the animal matter which originally gave them consistency, and under the circumstances they are little more than a loose mosaic of chips. Each bone must be carefully uncovered separately, hardened with weak glue, and with the large bones there was considerable part of a skeleton of a cave hyena (an extinct kind of spotted hyena), besides fragments of a wild boar and a stag. All these remains are now in the British Museum (Natural History) at South Kensington, and some of them are exhibited in the gallery of fossil mammals.

Browning's Walks.

In his early years Browning had always a great liking for walking in the dark. At Camberwell he was wont to carry this love to the point of losing many a night's repose. There was, in particular, a wood near Dulwich, whither he was wont to go. There he would walk swiftly and eagerly along the solitary and lightless byways, finding a potent stimulus to imaginative thought in the happy isolation thus enjoyed, with all the concurrent delights of natural things, the wind moving through the tree branches, the drifting of poignant fragrances, even in winter-tide, from herb and sappy bark, imperceptible almost even by the alertest sense in the day's manifold detachments. At this time, too, he composed much in the open air. This he rarely, if ever, did in later life. Not only many portions of "Paracelsus," but several scenes in "Stafford," were enacted first in these midnight silences of the Dulwich woodland. Here, too, as the poet once declared, he came to know the serene beauty of dawn; for every now and again, after having read late, or written long, he would steal quietly from the house, and walk till the morning twilight graded to the pearl and amber of the new day.—William Sharp, in "Life of Robert Browning."

A Ready Quotation.

The following story is told of Admiral Sir Montague E. Browning when he was commanding one of our battleships, says the London Chronicle. A "hard bargain" was brought before Capt. Browning, charged with having broken his leave for more than 100 hours. The evidence being heard, the captain asked the defaulter: "Have you anything to say in your defence?" "Nothing, sir," came the reply, "except that to err is human, to forgive divine — Shakespeare." "Ninety days' detention without the option of a fine—Browning," was the ready if unpleasant rejoinder.

The most advanced elements of the French unified Socialists have formed a committee to re-organise the Socialist International.

Had Romantic Flight.

Capt. Ross Smith's story of his great flight from England to Australia as published in the Sydney Sun, reads like a tale from the Arabian nights.

For absolutely new adventure his tour of the countries of Asia and Oceanica is unsurpassed. Landings made by the party, especially in Java, were dangerous. At two landings in the Malay Siam Archipelago, the natives would have nothing to do with them, believing that the airmen were spirits of the dead who could come back to the world, but could not rest, so kept on flying from place to place. In farther India and Siam, the natives were simply frightened out of their lives when the airmen appeared.

When two hundred miles north of Port Darwin, on the day of which their voyage was completed, they passed the cruiser Sydney, the famous warship which destroyed the Emden. They dropped a message in a bottle attached to a small parachute, which they had made while flying. This was picked up by a boat from the cruiser.

The entire story of the flight is one of dauntless courage, bull-dog tenacity and initiative. Several times they were nearly beaten down to the ground or the sea by torrential rains, and while flying over Malaysia, ran into a storm so terrible that definite steering was practically out of the question, and they merely circled aimlessly until better weather was encountered.

Is That It?

Bix—I wonder why a Scotchman always says "hae" for "have"?

Dix—Possibly it's on account of his thrift. He saves a "v" every time he does it.

Has He a Flat Voice.

"Why do you spell it 'Home, Suite Home'?"

"You see, I was born and brought up in an apartment."

HOW U. S. AIMS TO STAMP OUT SEDITION

Opposition in the United States Senate to provisions in the sedition legislation giving the Postmaster-General wide powers over admitting publications to the mails threatened to delay action in Congress.

In the House the measure thus far seems to have clear sailing. Representative Volstead, Republican, Minnesota, chairman of the judiciary committee, said that his committee was making rapid progress with the legislation recommended by the subcommittee having it in charge, and expects to present a bill to the House for action immediately.

A group of senators have been severely attacking the bill of Senator Sterling, Republican, of South Dakota, because of the alleged arbitrary powers conferred upon the Postmaster-General, and the force of this opposition was intensified when Senator Lodge of Massachusetts joined forces with the group of senators who are fighting the section relating to the use of the mails.

Senator Lodge charged that the administration, acting under powers similar to those contained in the Sterling bill, had threatened the suppression of loyal and reputable newspapers during the war because they had criticized the conduct of the war by the government departments. To support his statement he submitted an article written by Theodore Roosevelt just before the Colonel's death, accusing the administration of using its war powers as a club to stifle legitimate criticism of the conduct of the war.

The Sterling bill gives the Postmaster-General broad authority to close the mails to any publication containing matter which he deems seditious. Under the terms of the measure he could hold that a publication was advocating the overthrow of the government and suspend its mailing privileges without a hearing. It would then become unlawful for anyone to attempt to distribute such a publication.

Senator Borah of Idaho vigorously condemned this feature of the bill and offered an amendment giving a publisher the right to appeal to the Federal courts and holding the Postmaster-General's order in suspension pending the decision of the courts.

The indications are that some such amendment will be added to the bill.

QUEER GREETINGS.

Ladies of Manila Are Not Too Coy.

Strange forms of greeting are prevalent in various parts of the world. In Manila it is customary for women to caress the face of their man caller. In Lemuria, near the Philippines, two natives on meeting take hold of each other's foot and rub their faces with it. In the Fiji Islands they tickle each other's nose with red feathers carried for this purpose. In Burnham they grovel before you while uttering the melodious words "Hibnib," whatever this means. In the South Sea Islands they swing before you their necklace of shark's teeth.

The inhabitants of Scotra, an island in the Indian ocean, kiss the person to be honored on the shoulder, while those of the Great Cyclades, in the Aegean sea, pour water on your head. A Laplander greets you by rubbing his nose against your forehead, while a negro of Cape Lopes will kneel down before you and clap thrice with his hands. The Japanese takes off his wooden shoes and the Chinese, while shaking his own hands and inclining his head, will greet you with his "Tsin-tsin," etc.

All this may seem ridiculous to a Canadian, but after all, it is not any more ridiculous than our own modern custom of almost crushing one another's fingers in shaking hands; nay, the custom of Manila women will appeal to many as the more acceptable one.

Taking off the hat by men, which for ages has been the accepted mode of greeting in the western world, was originally a sign of disarming or defenceless or destitution in the presence of a superior. Polynesian or African chiefs require more or less stripping, such as uncovering to the waist, which is the custom in Tahiti. Eastern nations, on the other hand, are apt to see disrespect in baring the head but insist on the feet being uncovered.

"Striking hands," used in the west to make the greeting more hearty, is the emphatic form of the original gesture of grasping hands, which makes its appearance in antiquity as a legal act symbolic of the parties joining in compact, peace and friendship. The Canadian variety, called "shaking hands," appears not to has become unusual until the mid-have become unusual until the mid-parties press their thumbs together.

Almost Sacrilege.

A new and interesting explanation of Col. Roosevelt's objection to the use of phrase "In God We Trust" on United States coins is afforded in an article in Scribner's by Joseph Bucklin Bishop, the former President's biographer.

A letter written by Mr. Roosevelt on November 11, 1907, to a clergyman who had differed with him about placing the motto on the coins, read:

"When the question of the new coinage came up we looked into the law and found there was no warrant therein for putting 'In God We Trust' on the coins. As the custom, although without legal warrant, had grown up, however, I might have felt at liberty to keep the inscription had I approved of its being on the coinage. But as I did not approve it I did not direct that it should again be put on. Of course the matter of the law is absolutely in the hands of Congress, and any direction of Congress in the matter will be immediately obeyed. At present, as I have said, there is no warrant in law for the inscription.

"My own feeling in the matter is due to my very firm conviction that to put such a motto on coins, or to use it in any kindred manner, not only does no good, but does positive harm, and is in effect irreverence which comes dangerously close to sacrilege.

"A beautiful and solemn sentence such as the one in question, should be treated and uttered only with that due reverence which necessarily implies a certain exaltation of spirit. Any use which tends to cheapen it, and above all, any use which tends to secure its being treated in a spirit of levity, is from every standpoint profoundly to be regretted.

"It is a motto which it is indeed well to have inscribed on our great national monuments, in our temples of justice, in our legislative halls, and in buildings such as those at West Point and Annapolis—in short, wherever it will tend to arouse and inspire a lofty emotion in those who look thereon. But it seems to me eminently unwise to cheapen such a motto by use on coins, just as it would be to cheapen it by use on postage stamps, or in advertisements.

Tea Not a Food.

Now that the Appeal Court has definitely decided that tea is not a "food," someone will have to define the word "food" a little more clearly.

Up till now we have been led to believe that any liquid or solid that has a food value is a food. In this connection some of the legal arguments were somewhat confusing.

"You do not invite your friend to eat tea leaves"—ergo, tea, which cannot be "eaten," is not a food. But then neither do you ask your friend to "eat" cocoa-essence or "drink" the thinnest of soups, both of which are usually regarded as foods.

Dietetic experts are more convincing. They refuse to recognise tea as a food simply because it contains no nourishment.—London Chronicle.

Received in Silence.

If Cinquevali, by his feats of jugglery, could make men weep, as E. V. Lucas records, he could also make them pray. And thereby hangs a tale as strange as any told of the stage.

Cinquevalli had ended his career as an acrobat in Russia by a terrible fall, and after a life and death struggle he recovered, and decided to make a new name as a juggler.

His entry on the stage had hitherto been always marked by a roar of applause but on the night of his debut as a juggler he was received in dead silence.—London Chronicle.

The strike of railway and dockmen, Cape Town, [illegible] by the Federation of Trades on December 17, has been called off because of lack of support.

Sao Paulo A Rich City

THE city of Sao Paulo is the capital of one of the richest states in the world, a state whose agricultural production amounted in value in 1917 to $115,000,000. The city lies in the shade of the Tropic of Capricorn, yet it is anything but a tropical city for it lies well up in the mountains above the seaport of Santos.

There is none of the sloth of the tropics in Sao Paulo. The climate is conducive to activity and hence to the development of industry, for the extremes of temperature such as the American and European know are here almost unknown. Snow never falls and frost rarely, yet the biggest mistake that most new arrivals make is in leaving their winter overcoats behind them. During a good half of the year overcoats are comfortable at night, and an open fireplace is a joy. On the other hand, two-thirds of the year shows days of brilliant sunshine, with nights invariably cool. Even at Christmas time, in the heart of summer, one can watch the sunset from his front verandah and then trim the Christmas tree in the freshness of the evening. Occasionally the year shows a rather pronounced rainy season, when there will be a shower every late afternoon for an entire month, but, in general, the rain falls well distributed throughout the year.

Sao Paulo is very young and therefore very modern. To-day it possesses nine times the population of thirty years ago. The importations which now amount to fifty-seven million dollars are seven times greater than they were those few years ago. The asphalt streets are fine for automobiles and the number of bath-tubs puts to shame many a district of double the number of inhabitants.

In some respects Sao Paulo is almost painfully sanitary. An inspector comes around and visits your backyard and you clean it up in a hurry or contribute a round sum to the inspector's support in the form of a fine. No rented house can be reoccupied until after the little cart with four white-robed seraphims, seated one on each corner, has visited the place and disinfected it. No new buildings can be constructed until the plans have been approved by the city department, and a proper number of white tiles and a proper quantity of oil paint have been provided for. In fact, Sao Paulo is quite sanitation mad.

Sao Paulo is a city of homes. It is widely known as the residential city par excellence of South America. No visitor comes but marvels at the splendor of the Brazilian mansions and the comfort of the foreign homes —especially of the English-speaking peoples. The climate attracts foreigners, and one-half of the population of city and state is foreign born or of foreign parentage. The Italian and Syrian and Portuguese population is now wealthy and is prepared and inclined to spend unlimited sums to make its homes attractive. It is America that can furnish every known device for home comfort and beauty sending millions of dollars in hardware and construction materials. Iron ore is not found in Brazil, and since importation from Germany ceased at least 75 per cent. of the $6,000,000 worth (1917) of iron and steel products arriving at the port of Santos came from the United States.

The rich farmers of the states of Southern Brazil—Sao Paulo, Rio Grande Do Sul, Santa Catharina, Parana and Minas Geraes—come to the city of Sao Paulo to make their homes and to spend their money. It is a commonplace to say that certain agricultural territory is rich. But when exportation exceeds importation by 100 per cent., as in 1917, or by 200 per cent., as in 1915, it is no longer a commonplace. In 1914 the state of Sao Paulo received for her exports $54,000,000 more than she paid out for imports; in 1915, 77 million; in 1916, 68 million; in 1917, 49 million, and in 1918, 39 million. These exports are exclusively agricultural and animal products.

Surely if this balance of trade continues Brazil will rob the rest of the world of a great share of its wealth.

Three brothers—Russian Jews by birth but American by adoption—went down from the States before the war and set up a plant based upon their American experience. During the last four years their profits were limited only by their conscience, for they could get what price they asked. Perhaps the consciences were a little elastic in view of the profits their competitors were also making, for one of the brothers is now building a fifty thousand dollar palace in which he is installing a modern furnace and steam radiators.

In consequence of the European war and the curtailment of importation due to decreased foreign production and lack of shipping, factories were founded with extraordinary rapidity in Sao Paulo. In the three years, 1915 to 1917, 323 new factories were put under operation in the state, with a total capitalization of 14,000 contos or $3,500,000. In this number are included twenty-one shoe factories, thirty-one printing establishments, ten furniture factories, seventeen chemical plants, twenty-four foundries and machine shops, eleven breweries and liquor factories, one large cement factory and Armour's packing house, the largest in South America.

His Only Desire.

The judge was addressing the prisoner at the bar: "Is there anything you wish to say before sentence is passed upon you?" "No, your honor, there is nothin' I care to say; but if you wi'l clear away the tables and chairs so I can thrash my lawyer, you can give me a year or two extra."

ROMANCE OF WARTIME

COL. LAWRENCE WHO COMMANDED THE HEDJAZ.

Adventurous and Strange Career of Young English Archaeologist Who Led 200,000 Arab Horsemen Against the Turks—Price of $500,000 Placed on His Head by the Enemy Who Had Cause to Dread His Genius.

ONE of the most romantic figures of the entire war was Thomas Lawrence, a young Oxford graduate who had specialized in archaeology. For seven years he had wandered about Syria and other Eastern countries, dressed in native costume and living with the various Bedouin tribes whom he encountered on his way. At the outbreak of the war with Germany he was engaged in excavation work among the ruined cities of Mesopotamia. He had lived in Arabia so long and had gained such a remarkable knowledge of the various tribes, their language, customs, and peculiarities, that when war was declared the British authorities called him to Cairo and appointed him to the map department of the British Office there, with the title of lieutenant.

He was still employed in this capacity in 1906, doing the most valuable kind of work in connection with the laying out of maps of localities which he knew far more intimately than the official topographers, when the Shereef of Mecca, King Hussein of Arabia, who had been for years a virtual prisoner of the Turks at Constantinople, gave the word for his long-prepared revolt against the Turks, oppressors of Arabia for fully 500 years. This revolt proved formidable. When it began, the British authorities at Cairo decided that Thomas Lawrence was pre-eminently fitted to be sent to Arabia as British military representative.

His achievements from that time on placed him in the list of that small band of Britishers whose romantic exploits in exotic countries have been written permanently into the pages of world history — the Raleighs, the Drakes, the Kitcheners, the Gordons, and such men as Sir Richard Burton, the first foreigner who ever penetrated within the forbidden walls of the holy city of Mecca.

The revolution that has resulted in the new Kingdom of the Hedjaz was chiefly due to the Arabo-Turkish army. The Turkish principle of government had been to fill all the responsible official posts with Turks. Especially was this the case with the Young Turks. But they enforced military conscription among the Arab population to the best of their ability, for the Balkan war had made a wide chasm in the Turkish population of military age. The result was that the so-called Turkish army in Arabia consisted very largely of Arabs, whose sympathies were wholly with their fatherland and against their oppressors. When the general rising occurred the Arab portion of the army deserted almost en masse. The Turkish army, thus depleted, was forced to take refuge in various forts, and was gradually driven to surrender, except at Medina, where a considerable number of Turks collected and succeeded in holding out until the end of the war.

The Arab deserters, with their Western drill and modern weapons, formed the nucleus of the new army of the Hedjaz. With the addition of new recruits and supplies from the allies an excellent force of regulars was formed. These were supplemented by swarms of irregulars—Bedouin horsemen and camelmen from the deserts. This was the army which was to co-operate with the British in the conquest of Syria. Its guiding spirits were Emir Faisal, third son of King Hussein—a man of strong patriotism, energy, tact, and ability to command—and Col. Thomas Lawrence.

To Col. Lawrence more than to any other man was due the efficient organization of the Hedjaz army. He worked in perfect harmony with King Hussein and Prince Faisal, to whom his wild and reckless yet continually successful exploits at the head of his Bedouin force of 200,000 horsemen were spoken of in this and other countries of the East. A small blonde young Englishman, with intensely blue eyes and a strong chin, he was adored by the fierce tribesmen whose every exploit with horse or camel he could equal, if not surpass. Fearless and resourceful, defeat to him meant simply accomplishing a given task in a different way. He wore on all occasions full Bedouin costume, and his achievements as military commander in the impetuous raids which he led against the Turks, and which drove them out of Arabia, were such that King Hussein conferred on him the title of Shereef, the first instance in history of a Westerner holding that much-prized religious rank, which entitled him to wear the agal, kuffa, and abba, distinctive of Arabic princes of the blood. He also wore a curved golden sword which Prince Faisal himself presented to his English commander.

Despite his fame and the brilliant record of his achievements, Col. Lawrence was an extremely silent and almost abnormally modest man. On more than one occasion he literally fled from the honors which the British Government wished to confer upon him. Blonde as a Viking, he walked about in the streets of Jerusalem or other cities, in full panoply of Arab royal costume, plunged in some inner dream. His leisure moments he spent in the study of archaeology. His influence over his native followers was amazing; he accomplished what had never been accomplished before—the welding of many different and often hostile tribes into one single patriotic unit. In none of his wild raids was he ever wounded, though he exposed himself in the most reckless fashion, leading cavalry charges in the style of Cromwell or Seydlitz.

It should not be forgotten, in this connection, that he had never had military training, and was noteworthy when wearing British uniform (after his capture of Akaba he had been made a colonel) for his serene disregard of all matters of military etiquette. His power over his Arabic followers was due to his knowledge of their dialects, his understanding of their religion, his tact in settling disputes, and his inborn military ability.

The Germans and Turks alike soon discovered the presence of this young Englishman among their Arabic opponents in the desert, and, realizing the menace of his mysterious and amazing successes, put a price of $500,000 upon his head. Needless to say, this blood money was never paid; the Turks were driven out of Holy Arabia forever, and Germany saw the miraged vision of the Berlin-to-Bagdad route vanish into the arid wastes across which the Bedouin forces of Col. Lawrence drove the disillusioned Turks.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66,20 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

THE CHINESE FLAG.

Old Nation Possesses a Very Young Standard.

The history of the national flag of the Republic of China (Chunghua Mingkuo) dates back, says the Christian Science Monitor, to 1912, when the five-colored, or rainbow flag, was adopted by the Republican Government as its national standard.

During the existence of the Manchu dynatsy the yellow dragon was the national ensign of the ruling empire. While this yellow ground represents the imperial color, the dragon symbolizes the personality of the emperor. Such imperialistic sign was, of course, not adaptable to republican ideas and institutions.

On October 10, 1911, the revolutionary war at Wuchang raised as its military standard a flag of blue ground and white centre, signifying a white sun in the blue sky. A flag with five horizontal stripes of five different colors was, however, used by the provisional government, which was set up at Nanking on January 1, 1912. But when the north and the south were united on February 12 at the abdication of the Manchu dynasty, the yellow dragon finally passed out of existence, and the rainbow, or five-colored flag, became the national ensign of the newly established republic, representing the unity of the five great races which live within its territory. The five colors are red, yellow, blue, white and black, representing respectively the Chinese (Hanren), the Manchus, the Mongols, the Mohammedans, and the Tibetons. The five stripes of five different colors are also interpreted to mean the five fundamentals of Confucius, namely, benevolence, righteousness, courtesy, wisdom and faith.

The unique feature of the Chinese national flag is that its five horizontal stripes of five different colors signify not only the unity but also the equality of the five great races brought under the republican regime. It proclaims to the world that the citizens of the republic are now firmly united under a democratic government, co-operating to safeguard the interests and promote the welfare of the Chinese nation.

Historic Firth of Forth.

The Firth of Forth is, of course, one of the most notable things in all Scotland. From Kincardine, where it officially begins, to that imaginary line just west of the isle of May, from the East Neuk of Fife to the mouth of the Tyne, in Haddingtonshire, where it officially ends, is a distance of 48 miles; while from shore to shore the expanse of water measures anything from one and a half miles, at Queensferry to seventeen and a half miles off the Isle of May. Within this great expanse of water whole fleets may ride at anchor in perfect safety, and, although little is known of the great scenes which must have taken place in these waters during the last four years, the story of the Firth of Forth during the great war, culminating, as it did the other day, with the surrender there of the German high seas fleet, will be not the least interesting of the many stories which still remain to be written.

Common Tendency.

"It is reported that the ex-Kaiser is trying to get back into politics."

"Seems to be human nature," replied Farmer Corntossel. "Every wood-sawyer I've managed to get sooner or later quit work with a chip on his shoulder."

An Offer.

"If women are going into politics I s'pose we'll have to give 'em some jobs."

"Yes, I gezzo. How would it do to have an inspector of knittin?"

Trains Stopped by Butterflies.

That insects should be able to stop a train seems, at first, impossible. It has, however, happened in several instances.

Just lately, a train going from Rome to Avezzano, in Italy, was stopped by a dense cloud of locusts, which settled on the wheels and on the rails in swarms. As the train advanced it squashed thousands of them to a pulp, and this made the rails so slippery that the train could not go on.

What is perhaps more extraordinary is that a train should be stopped by worms! This has happened on the Warwick-Killarney line, in Australia. A train suddenly stopped dead, and nothing could be done to restart it. The wheels slid round, but would not advance. The rails were found to be covered with worms, and, as in the former case, when quashed by the wheels they made the line too slippery for the train to go forward. This has also been known to happen in Europe, on the line from Brunn to Prague.

In Italy swarms of white butterflies have been known to settle on the railway lines, and so make transit extremely difficult.

Perhaps the most amusing case on record comes from French Guinea, where thousands of little green frogs suddenly took up their abode on a railway track.—Tit-Bits.

Decline of Gleaning.

Gleaning seems going out of fashion, for few gleaners can be seen in the harvest fields, except some village dames, or their children, who want to get gratuitous food for poultry.

The decline of Ruth's romantic industry is due to machine rakes—which leave quite as much corn as the old hand rakes, especially in fields with windmills and watermills that formerly covered the countryside.

The corn now goes to the big steam mills in the large towns, and cottagers can no longer get their gleaned wheat ground. — London Chronicle.

A Roosevelt Story.

Maurice F. Egan, the U. S. ambassador to Denmark and an admirer of Roosevelt, tells us that Roosevelt was writing an article for the Century at a time of "tremendous rows in the senate" during his presidency. "Mr. President," said Egan, "how could you find the quietness of mind to write a paper like this when you and the senate seemed to be on the verge of an open war?" "It was just the time for quiet and interesting work," replied Roosevelt. "It took my mind off that caterwauling."

Variety the Spice of Life.

It was his first day as a boot, and he was having a tough job executing orders. The sergeant, considerably exasperated, yelled:

"Say, what did you do on the outside?"

"I was a bookkeeper, sir."

"I thought so," the sergeant commented.

The next morning, after a series of fizzles, the company's commander again picked him out.

"Say, what did you do on the outside?"

"I was an electrician, sir," was the response.

"Eh?" the sergeant replied. "I thought you told me yesterday you were a bookkeeper."

"I was, sir," replied the unabashed boot. "But I got sick of that job."—Judge.

Thirteen His Lucky Number.

Private W. H. Teople of 265 West Borden avenue, New York, like President Wilson, scores the hoodoo number "Thirteen." Here's why:

He was born on Friday, the thirteenth.

He enlisted on the thirteenth.

He was sent to camp on the thirteenth.

He was assigned to regiment No. 13 in the Marine corps.

There were thirteen other men in his bunk house.

He sailed for France on the thirteenth.

There were thirteen boats in the convoy.

He was on the ocean thirteen days.

He landed in France on the 13th.

Future of Flying.

"I'd sooner fly," was a colloquial phrase of two decades ago that was often used to express the impossible. The magic carpet of the Arabian Nights seemed not less fanciful than the dreams of Langley and the Wright brothers. In the light of those days the workers on the heavier-than-air machines were looked upon as the foolish descendants of Darius Green. They were the same kind of "cranks" as Jules Verne.

Today, billions of dollars are invested in the manufacture of airplanes.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GOVERNMENT TO PROSECUTE "SECRET" FIRMS

Those Failing to Give Information in Industrial Census Are Making a Mistake.

While several Toronto and Montreal firms have already been fined or will be prosecuted in the near future for failure to comply with the provisions of the Federal Statistics Act, by neglecting to file the necessary official schedules in connection with the annual industrial census, manufacturers in other places have filled out the forms or questionnaires sent out by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

It is understood that certain manufacturers in other cities besides Toronto and Montreal, notably in Winnipeg, will be brought to time almost immediately if they persist in their disregard of the law.

The penalties for non-compliance with the Statistics Act are from $20 to $100 for each offence, or imprisonment for from 30 days to three months. Both fine and imprisonment can be imposed on the guilty parties.

Commenting on the failure of a number of manufacturing firms to comply with the law, a prominent official of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics stated that it was extremely unfortunate that the offending firms should not appreciate the value of the Census of Industry.

Oath of Secrecy.

Fear that the information gleaned from the replies to the questionnaires will not be treated confidentially is without justification, as only the officials of the Bureau of Statistics, who are under oath of secrecy, have access to the information obtained from the manufacturers.

It was pointed out that the manufacturers are doing injury to themselves by withholding the information they are required to supply. The object of the Industrial Census is to use the figures for the expansion of Canadian trade, for advertising purposes, and for investigations regarding the best markets for raw materials.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, which fully recognizes the value of the industrial census, has placed its stamp of approval upon it, and makes use of the figures to promote production and trade in general.

The industrial census is virtually a system of national bookkeeping as far as production in Canada is concerned. The value of the industrial statistics is enhanced at the present owing to the abnormal conditions confronting Canada and other countries. In thinking of its national debt, Canada can only determine its financial position by taking an account of its assets.

It is understood that a Dominion-wide campaign of prosecution will be launched shortly if the manufacturers who have so far failed to send replies to the questionnaires after repeated requests and notices, do not comply immediately with the provisions of the Statistics Act.

ELOQUENT TORONTO DIVINE PREACHES ANNIVERSARY SERMONS AT TRINITY

Rev. Prof. Johnstone Officiated at Both Services Yesterday and Fulfilled High Expectations That Had Been Held Regarding His Gifts as an Orator.

Very successful anniversary services were held in Trinity Methodist Church yesterday. The speaker for the day was the Rev. Professor Alfred J. Johnstone, B.A., of Toronto, who fulfilled the high expectations that were held regarding him. Professor Johnstone has a fine philosophic type of mind, combined with broad knowledge of and sympathy for human nature. He is scholarly and popular at the same time in his presentation of the truth. A thorough Bible student, he gives a most delightfully fresh and telling interpretation of old truths, the great truths of the gospel that are needed by the world of today. He possesses a good voice, his anunciation is clear, his language chaste and scholarly. Apt illustrations were used in sufficient number to relieve what might otherwise have been a bit too scholarly style. The large congregations that listened to Professor Johnstone both morning and evening were delighted with the services of the day.

The Morning Decourse.

Professor Johnstone's morning sermon was based on John 10:10, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly."

"All thinking men today are convinced that Jesus had a message for mankind," said the speaker. Socialists, sceptics, agnostics, men who anathematise the church, still believe that Jesus Christ had a message for the world that the world needs.

"But Jesus also had a gift for mankind," continued the speaker. He came to import something and that something was the highest thing he could give—life. With fine philosophic insight, Professor Johnstone then defined life. He spoke of the time element that is so persistent in one thought of life. But the length of life is the least important thing about it. If length of earthly existence is the most significant thing, then the oak tree of 2,000 years is superior to the man of three score years and ten. Quality is what counts. Eternal life is not merely existence spun out to infinity. Eternal life, God's gift, is God's own life in man. "This is eternal life," said Jesus, "that they may know thee, the only true and living God and Him whom thou hast sent, even Jesus Christ."

With intense earnestness and persuasive appeal, the speaker pleaded for a fuller, richer, more personal and experimental knowledge of God. "We know God when we have God. We know Jesus Christ when we are like Him," were two of the pregnant sentences that closed a masterly morning sermon.

Sin of Ingratitude.

At night Professor Johnstone discoursed most tellingly on the sin of ingratitude. He based his apeal on Psalm 100, "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord. Serve the Lord with gladness."

With apt illustration drawn from literature and life, he depicted the sin of ingratitude. The ingratitude of children toward parents; the ingratitude of young people toward their parent church; the ingratitude of man toward man; the ingratitude of men toward God; these were some of the items mentioned in specifying the wide-spread sin of the age.

Our gratitude will find expression in two ways—declaration and service. We are to make a joyful noise unto the Lord. We are to show our gratitude by worship and song and praise and personal testimony. But God expects more than lip loyalty. We are to serve the Lord. Service is the keynote of Christ's life. It is the keynote of the Christian's life.

Today the call comes to all for a great service. A free, willing, cheerful service is what God asks of us in return for all His love and goodness. Our service to be complete must be many sided, but it will be pre-eminently a service for mankind.

Excellent Musical Service.

The music at both servces was of a very high order. The choir rendered with fine effect two unaccompanied anthems. At the morning service a male quartette, consisting of Messrs. Park, Fleming Downey and Skitch sang, "Remember Me O Mighty One." At the evening service another male quartette, consisting of Messrs. Lee, Turner, Hartshorn and Baldry, sang, "When the Mists Have Rolled Away." Both of these quartettes were very pleasing indeed and called forth unqualified praise from the congregation. At the morning service Mrs. King sang "Jesus Plead for Me." At the evening service she sang, "A Voice in the Wilderness." Both of these solos were sung with that fine sympathy that is always in evidence in Mrs. King's solo work. "Wasn't Mrs. King splendid!" was the general comment of those who were present.

This forty-eighth anniversary was a great day in the history of this growing church. All its members are looking forward into the future with the thought of bigger and better service in the years that lie ahead.

FAILURE NOT FROM HARD LUCK—

Many an unsuccessful man charges his failure to hard luck, when his eyesight is mostly to blame. Poor eyesight has made him incompetent for the better positions, and he never realized it. Probably his employer could not understand his inability to improve. If you are a young man and going slower than you think you should, let Dr. Fowler examine your eyes and see if the difficulty lies there.

WILL REGISTER ALL CHILDREN IN PETERBORO UNDER FOUR YEARS

Workers in Well Babies' Clinic Met on Saturday and Arranged Further Details of Plan of Campaign.

The registration committee of the Well Babies' Clinic met on Saturday night in the palm room of Hooper's restaurant. Tea was served by Mrs. Kendry, the organizer of the registration scheme, after the completion of business.

Twenty ladies were present, and the interest evinced was most gratifying to those in charge. Mrs. R. Harstone, president of the Local Council of Women, opened the meeting with a short address, explaining the nature and value of the work to be done by the clinic.

Mrs. Kendry and Dr. Birnie both spoke on the same subject. It was further explained that the work of the registration committee will be to obtain the names of all children under four years of age by a personal visit to each home, where all questions regarding the work will be explained and the mothers invited to bring their children to the clinic. Here a record of each child will be kept and valuable advice given as to their health and care. A physician in charge, assisted by a nurse, will examine each child, and if any trouble is found the mother then puts the child under the care of her family physician.

The reason for forming these clinics all over the country in large centres is because of the alarming mortality among children. It is that rich and poor alike may have better knowledge regarding the care of the young, and, as all can plainly see, the movement is not for any one class. It is a patriotic rather than a charitable movement.

Cards are now being prepared for registration, and work will go forward at once. The committee of five chairmen are as follows:

South Ward—Mrs. Brown.
East Ward—Mrs. Hamilton.
West Ward—Mrs. Welsh.
North Ward—Mrs. Thomas.
Centre Ward—Mrs. Leader.

One might call the clinic an information bureau. It is for well babies as well as for those apparently not up to the mark. The clinic aims at better health, better moral well being, and greater happiness for the children of our city.

The work of registration is conducted by twenty-two sub-chairmen, and under this committee about two hundred and twenty ladies will be working.

LADY CURLERS IN ACTION.

Members of the Club Begin Season's Program.

The Ladies' Curling Club started their season's program this morning. Many of the prominent ladies of the city are on its rolls, and the president, Mrs. R. M. Waddell, wishes all members to turn out as soon as possible, as the season is already well under way.

The club was a big success last year, and a lot of good sport is anticipated for this season.

THEATRICAL

MILLIONS IN THEATRICAL BUSINESS

Ambrose J. Small Began at Foot of Ladder and Climbed to the Top.

From theatre clerk to theatrical magnate in receipt of $1,750,000 for his "interests" in Ontario, and rated at $5,000,000, is the measure of success attained by Ambrose J. Small in his business life in Toronto, covering 25 years or so. His mysterious disappearance a few hours after banking a cheque for $1,000,000, part payment in his deal with the Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., has naturally directed attention toward his career, which, strangely enough, began where it (for the time being) ended—at the Grand Opera House.

Ambrose Small was born at Bradford, Ont., the son of Daniel Small, now living at 97 Kendal ave. Tomorrow he will be 54 years of age. His father, coming to Toronto, began business in the Grand Opera House block. "Ambie," as he was known, attended the De La Salle Institute.

Started At 17.

When about 17 years of age he received his first "job." He became assistant treasurer in the Grand Theatre, then managed by O. B. Sheppard. He was still in his 'teens when he became treasurer of the theatre. Some two years later he went over to the Toronto Opera House to act as treasurer, when that house was run by Jacobs and Sparrow. He shortly got a chance to buy out the Jacobs interest. In 1890 he took a lease of the Grand Opera House from the Manning Estate for five years with an option to buy. The theatre came into Mr. Small's possession before the lease expired.

Fortunate in First Deal.

It is said that he bought the Grand Opera House in Toronto for $150,000, paying $50,000 down, and that he paid off the remaining $100,000 on the purchase in two years. It is said, too, that inside the two years Percy Manning offered him $250,000 to get the Grand Opera House property back again.

But "A. J." knew his business. He held on, and began to extend his activities throughout the province. And he extended his control of the theatre business in Ontario to such an extent that he got control of the "booking" of the Klaw and Erlanger attractions outside of Toronto. This control put him in a position to buy any theatre that was on the market.

Added to Holdings.

The city of Kingston had an opera house on its hands. Mr. Small was practically given the house if he would provide the city with amusement. Afterwards he took over the Russell theatre in Ottawa, and the theatre in Peterboro. In the last four years he devoted most of his time to his booking business, both for theatrical attractions and moving pictures. He had the booking rights of 62 theatres.

"His recent deal, the sale of his Ontario interests," said a well-known theatrical man, "was a tribute to his business ability."

Followed Irving's Advice.

It is narrated of him that he owed his theatrical career to no less a personage than the late Sir Henry Irving. During an engagement at the Grand, the great tragedian noticed young Small and inquired from him what he was going to do later. "Ambie" said that he was starting to study law and was going to be a lawyer. The great actor said to him: "The show business needs smart boys like you. Stay in this business. It is the only business." Small was so impressed that he went home to his mother and said that he was going to quit law and apply himself to the theatre business. He worked hard and saved up a thousand dollars and then spent it on a trip to Europe. His great hobby from that day to this was travelling.

Travelling As An Art.

Mr. Small has visited every country but Russia, and would have been there but for the war. He had in July, 1914, booked passage on the Vaterland en route to Russia, to sail August 2. A week before he was notified that the sailing had been cancelled and the war came on and the trip was off for good. With Mrs. Small he has visited Japan, Ceylon, Palestine, India and Europe, and had made three other ocean trips. He made a study of the way to travel, and could perfect arrangements for everything from his Toronto home to Honolulu and back without a break or the loss of a piece of luggage.

On these trips he has enjoyed himself immensely. He has always said that he got more rest on the ocean than anywhere else. Accompanied by Mrs. Small and members of the family, he had some wonderful tours. Mrs. Small had mastered eight languages, and was able to gather facts to permit her of lecturing to her Toronto audiences in five of these foreign tongues.

Knew His Business.

Mr. Small knew the theatre back and front, box office and stage, from the finest musical comedy right through a complete repertoire to the itinerant stock company. He knew the people of the stage, their peculiarities and their desires, as well as their merits, and he knew and studied the people down in front of the footlights, and watched their wishes and whims just the same.

This great knowledge, combined with a natural shrewdness and an everlasting energy that carried him through long hours of toil and hustle daily, brought Ambrose Small to the top of the show business in this country and helped to pile up his wealth. A. J. Small has been termed by many of his friends "lucky." But rather it was a keen mind, a quick judgment, the ability to see opportunity and money where others passed it up, and the nerve to take advantage of his chances.

This was evinced in the wonderful control that Mr. Small gathered to himself when he became established in several of the Ontario theatres. Then he was able to dictate the terms to Klaw and Erlanger as to how, when and where they would book their own shows outside Toronto.

Eighteen years ago Mr. Small was married to Miss Theresa Kormann, an accomplished musician and teacher, who had taken graduate courses at Paris and Milan. To his solicitors, Mr. Small has always given much credit for his success to the good judgment of Mrs. Small, who is probably best known in Toronto for her charitable work. Her particular interest of late years has been with the children and it was at the Children's Home, Bond street, that Mrs. Small last saw her husband a few hours before his sudden going away. Mrs. Small has been Regent of Sir Henry Pellatt chapter of the I.O.D.E. and has been indefatigable in her efforts for the poor children of Toronto, as well as lavish with her time and money.

THREE DAYS' BILL AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE

"A LADY'S NAME" WILL BE PRESENTED TONIGHT, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Mabel Vere is a young and popular writer. She shares a pretty little flat with Maud Bray, a suffragette of determined character.

Mabel is engaged to be married to Gerald Wantage, but she has become aware of growing dissatisfaction with her somewhat priggish fiance. However, she tries to ignore this discontent, working off her unrest in her own original ways.

One of her "ways" is to advertise for a husband. She hopes to obtain good copy from the applicants, and she invites three of them to call.

Adams, a butler, arrives, in whom Mabel sees prospects for a good story. She accepts his invitation to tea for the following afternoon at the house where he works, telling her that his master will be out. Noel Corcoran is the third applicant, to whom Mabel does not show the interest that she feels in him.

The next days she keeps her engagement for tea, only to find that the butler works at Noel Corcoran's house. He informs her that her fiance is making bets with the men at the club that she will not answer any more letters in reply to her ad. Mabel decides to punish him, so she answers two of the newly arrived, lurid letters. Wantage discovers it and after a quarrel they break their engagement. When Noel learns of the broken engagement he calls and succeeds in impressing Mabel with the fact that he is the right man for her.

This is the brief story of the interesting and amusing comedy, "A Lady's Name," in which Lewis J. Selznick presents Constance Talmadge, and which Select Pictures will offer to the Empire Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

THERE IS NO MORALITY.

Terrible Teaching of Reds In Russia —Corrupt the Young.

Under the rule of the Bolsheviki in Russia children are taught to renounce God, they are herded into schools, where there is no supervision, no restrain, no religion and where morals are indescribable; they are given literature which poisons their minds and turns them away from everything which is good and pure in this life. Their main recreation is dancing, and they dance and dance. Decrees have gone forth that parents have no right to keep their children at home, and boys and girls of tender years are torn from homesides of refinement and placed in institutions with immoral surroundings, where their minds are poisoned.

This message came recently from a woman missionary in Russia to Mrs. Penn-Lewis, residing in England, who has had it published.

"Hundreds of children are dying daily of hunger, neglect and infectious diseases," says the writer. "The death rate is appalling. But death is not the worst—it may even be a deliverance from the hands of those who murder souls as well as bodies. Children—masses of them—are bribed by especially good food, by flattery, over-indulgence, theatres, dancing and other attractions to renounce God, never utter his name, never pray, never go anywhere they can hear anything about Him except in blasphemy. Imagine a large group of children gathered on a fete day in front of one of the palaces, emptied of its owners, listening to the following speech: 'Dear children, we have called you together to tell you that everything now is yours. You are the masters and have a right to everything you see. You can take, use, do whatever you like, and need not at all mind stealing, for you can always leave off.'

"Former superintendents and teachers in schools established many years ago and conducted on principles of order, propriety and good solid teaching have all been replaced by tools and slaves of some uneducated youngster who is put at the head of everything, although often hardly able to sign his name. These schools are now mixed, morals indescribable.

"Robbery thrives. Educated people are being exterminated. Prisons are crowded with men and women who are guilty of no offence. Every day hundreds of people are led to the slaughter for no other reason other than to satisfy the cussedness of the Bolshevik class. Some who have money are able to pay their way out of prison. There are no private burial grounds or graves, all having become national property. Nothing can be bought, except on permit. Factories are closed, largely because competent workmen will not submit to those who are totally incapable of managing the business. Thousands are dying on every hand from starvation and sickness and no hand is held forth to relieve the misery."

The picture painted by the missionary is one of utter dedspair. She appeals to England and America to lend assistance, not by armed force, but by persuasion, by education. She says that there are still many in Russia who still have good in them and welcome any movement to bring organization out of chaos.

A Canadian In Command.

A Canadian, Maj. A. E. McIvor, of the R.A.F., has just been appointed commander of the famous Mineola airdrome at an initial salary of $10,800 a year. Maj. McIvor is a Listowel man, who had a splendid record of services with the flying corps overseas. The American Government recently asked the British Government to name an Imperial airman for the position, and the latter suggested Maj. McIvor, who has been offered and accepted it.

War Time Regulations Shall Remain in Effect in the British Isles

THE end of one year of peace finds the United Kingdom still working under many of the war-time restrictions affecting ordinary living conditions, although large numbers of the orders have been rescinded and others have been modified.

So far as food is concerned, only sugar and butter are now rationed. The regulations regarding the amount of meat which might be purchased were removed only recently, about one year after the close of the war. The consumption of liquor, however, is being kept down rigidly under the old rules. Necessities still rationed, which vitally concern the home, include coal, gas and electricity. The shortage of fuel has been causing considerable hardship both to the individual and to industry.

The Ministry of Food has found it advisable to continue the maximum prices, both wholesale and retail, which it fixed for a considerable number of necessities.

Apart from the matter of food and fuel, the Board of Trade is maintaining control of the exportation and importation of a long list of articles. The ban has been removed from some goods but this has been mainly in the case of things importation of which had been forbidden and which the country found itself short of.

Removal of restrictions on most of the food necessities has not solved the living problem of the masses, however. There is still a great shortage of many things, and moreover, prices, which went down last summer, have now mounted to about where they were at the signing of the armistice.

The increase is attributed partly to the world scarcity of necessities, partly to the augmented demand from the recently belligerent countries, and partly to inflated currency and adverse foreign exchanges. The last named have had a pronounced influence on prices and it is the belief of economic experts that food cannot become much cheaper until these are adjusted, even though there is an increase in production.

The butter ration is placed at one and one-half ounces for each person per week. This refers to the imported product only, there being no restriction on the use of home made butter. As a matter of fact, virtually no butter is being made in the United Kingdom these days, so that the consumer has to depend upon margarine and foreign butter.

The reason there is so little home produced butter on the market is that the retail price, approximately 68 cents a pound, bears no relation to the actual cost of butter to the farmer. This month farmers can sell milk at 64 cents a gallon, and it takes 2½ gallons of milk to produce a pound of butter. If English butter were selling at its true economic value it would be about $1.25 per pound.

Until recently the sugar ration was 12 ounces for each person per week, but, owing to the shortage this allowance has been decreased to eight ounces, and is expected to remain at that mark for many months.

Butchers' meat was rationed until a few days ago, each person being allowed 40 cents' worth per week. In consequence of the receipt recently of a large supply of mutton and lamb from Australia and New Zealand it was found possible to remove all rationing restrictions, and the food ministry has expressed the hope that people will relieve the food situation by eating more meat, which is welcome advice for England.

The sale of beer and spirits is still restricted in quantity, and the strength of both beer and whiskey is much below the pre-war average. As a result, it is said, there has been an increase in sobriety. Whiskey is at present about thirty per cent. under proof. Alcoholic drinks can only be purchased between noon and 2.30 p.m., and between 6 and 10 o'clock at night.

The Food Ministry still fixes wholesale prices for a number of other commodities and the Ministry is the actual purchaser and distributor of cheese, bacon, ham, lard, dried fruits, bread, butter, cocoa-powder, condensed milk and canned fish. The fixing of the maximum price, it must be noted, does not prevent the sale of goods for a sum below that amount, and in many cases foodstuffs are being vended much below the limit fixed by law.

The Ministry is believed to be the largest in the world. Its annual expenditure is about $1,000,000,000. The object of the department is not to make a profit, but in transactions of this magnitude it is impossible to make both sides of the account balance. The actual figures are not yet available but it is expected that the profit this year will not exceed $2,500,000. Last year there was a profit of about $35,000,000, the whole of which was expended during the summer in supplying certain articles of food below their cost price. Thus the profit does not enrich the Treasury but goes entirely for the benefit of the consumer.

The maximum coal ration was and still is fixed at five tons for the individual consumer for the year beginning July 1, 1919. Gas and electricity are restricted accordingly. Special permits may be issued by the Board of Trade for the use of coal, gas or electricity beyond the ration, if it is deemed an absolute necessity.

BERLIN'S DANCING ORGY.

Inhabitants Refuse to Wear Sackcloth and Ashes.

Berlin is dancing. After four bloody years of war, in the shadow of the death of millions, and of the ruin of a world-grasping ambition, in the ignominy of defeat, and in disgrace with decency and civilisation, the German capital is dancing. Admitting that it is dancing, the Germans remind the foreign correspondents whose amazement and surprise have found their way into Entente papers that Paris, London, and other capitals are likewise dancing. Annoyance is expressed at these correspondents who came into the country in the wake of the Allied High Commissions, and who (the Germans say) are not only obsessed with the notion that they must rediscover both Berlin and the Berliners, but are actually going about the task in the spirit of explorers in a strange and savage country. This in spite of the fact that many of the correspondents knew Berlin very well before the war, says the New York Times Magazine.

It appears that there is a conspiracy among them to assume a tone of pained astonishment, if not of shocked moral indignation, at any and every evidence that the inhabitants of the new republican city are not walking around in sackcloth and ashes. When these foreigners find large numbers of persons — whole circles of society — engaged in an orgy of pleasure-seeking — do not take it as a matter of course after the nervous tension, the suffering and death of war that things should run to madness for a while. Instead, they write to their home papers that Berlin is dancing and underscore the fatal words three times.

As a matter of fact, Berlin is dancing. It is dancing in little coquette exclusive places that have sprung up and done themselves over in various styles of rococo decoration. It is dancing in big halls, where the air is heavy with tobacco smoke. It is dancing behind drawn curtains till the cold gray dawn of the morning after, it is dancing in the early hours of the afternoon, with the windows wide open. Not only is there dancing everywhere, but everybody is doing it. The actors are as various as the stages and stage settings of the show. If crowds are always mixed in the places in which big cities amuse themselves—the places where only money counts — the war has brought about in Berlin a superlative state of mixedness.

According to a German observer—the same who objects to the view the allied correspondents take of the phenomena—these new Berlin temples of the dance are will worth visiting. They are frequented chiefly by sleek, slender young men from the west end of the city — the gilded youth of the metropolis — and persons of the profiteer type, men who are trying with various unsuccess and the aid of expensive tailors and bootmakers and masseurs and manicure to look as if they were used to evening clothes.

The women, who are the bait in the trap, are picturesque and alluring. In the arms of the sleek, slender young men they engage in the complicated steps, swayings and posturings of the tango and fox trot and the ragtime. The spectacle which they furnish thus employed is, according to the German observer, one that nobody but a cantankerous, pharisaical old hypocrite could find other than joyous and full of grace.

Besides the sleek, slender young men there are also the members of the profiteers' union in good standing. It may appear that their hulking shoulders are strangers to a costume which cramps and pinches the natural man, and it is plain enough that their shiny patent leather pumps are the cause of acute agony. The profiteer is by no means scorned by the picturesque and alluring young persons.

Nothing but champagne is sold after the hour set by the police for closing. After that the guests become automatically members of a closed private club—with champagne privileges only. The cheapest brand costs 60 or 70 marks the bottle, the choicest vintages cost twice as much or more. Your cheque will run up to a thousand marks before you know it. Naturally a new rich middle-class person can get what the late aristocrats have learned to do severely without. There is no place here for aristocrats as such.

The German observer goes on with the description. The violins are wailing out their song of joy, mixed with sadness, the red-coated bandmaster sways this way and that, his ambrosial head of hair keeping time to the music. Voices hum, glasses clink, agile waiters slink about with ice pails and laden trays among the whirling couples. Silks rustle, diamonds sparkle. Was it not perhaps only a dreadful dream—a nightmare —which caused good Germans to think that the might of the Fatherland and the greatness of it had been shattered in four long years of horrid war?

That shatters the phantasy. Then comes the realization that all this gayety—wine, woman, and especially the dance—serves only to deaden tortured souls, to bring forgetfulness, as cocaine and morphine do to sick bodies which have not yet got back strength enough to conquer pain and win health home again.

The patient, Germany, in other words, confesses himself sick and in temporary need of opiates. But he counts on getting very well and strong. There is not a hint that the apologist is aware of the chief element in the shocked surprise of the correspondents at a dancing Berlin.

The Lucky Magnate.

"Yes, sir," said the trust magnate, proudly, "I am the architect of my own fortune."

"Well, rejoined the friendly critic, "all I've got to say is that it's a lucky thing for you there were no building inspectors around when you were constructing it."

When you think of dairy cattle, think of pure-bred cattle.

German aviation firms, according to a despatch from Constance, Germany, have formed a trust to prevent interior competition and to fight foreign trade.

EDDIE CICOTTE DISCOVERED TY

CHICAGO PITCHING STAR TELLS HOW DETROIT ENGAGED COBB ON HIS ADVICE

(By Billy Evans.)

Who discovered Ty Cobb?

That may strike you as a strange question, since Cobb has been a major league star about 15 years.

Personally, I thought the matter had been settled years ago. It was my impression that the honors were about equally divided between Bill Armour, who managed the Detroit club in 1905, when Cobb came up and Con Strouthers, who was managing the Augusta club on which Cobb got his start.

Sitting on the Chicago bench last summer, I was discussing Cobb with Eddie Cicotte, star pitcher of the White Sox. The day previous Cobb had put on one of his copyrighted on the field, at the bat, on the bases exhibitions, which means he starred and just about single-handed made a Tiger victory possible.

Eddie Never Loafs.

"He surely is a tough fellow to pitch to," said Cicotte. "I never loaf when he is up. You must put a lot of thought back of every ball. Better not get careless when he is up. When I think how all the pitchers work on Cobb his batting ercord is all the more remarkable to me. I dont' believe there is a pitcher in the American League who doesn't try to go at top speed when Cobb steps into the box. He gets the best the pitchers have; no cripples, nothing soft, yet he keeps leading the league year after year, despite efforts of all pitchers to keep him from hitting. And in a way I am to blame for all the worries Cobb has given American League pitchers.'

That statement by Cicotte aroused my curiosity. I never knew he played any particular role in the career of Cobb, is I sought further information. I will relate the story of Cobb and Cicotte, as Eddie unfolded it to me:

Tipped Off Dertoit.

"I did the Detroit club a great turn back in 1905, but it wasn't appreciated as far as I was concerned. The Detroit Club trained in Augusta that year, and as I understand it, I was turned over to the Augusta club as payment for ground rent for the spring training season. I won 15 out of 24 that year, so I don't think Augusta got cheated on that end. On the Augusta Club with me was Ty Cobb, just breaking in as a "bush leaguer." He looked like a comer to me. He was as fast as lightning, and while not a finished fielder, could go a long way to get a ball. While not a great hitter then he had a slashing style that impressed me. However, the thing that made the biggest hit with me was his restless ambition. He was always on his toes, always taking wild chances that no other player would have thought of doing, always trying to outguess the opposition. He has retained that characteristic through his career. I had seen enough of major league baseball to believe Cobb had a great chance to make good. I wrote the Detroit Club several letters praising Cobb and before the close of the season an option was taken on his services and he shortly afterwards became a big leaguer.

"Cobb made good from the start and I figured my good hope on him might win me a chance with the Tigers. I weighed only 135 pounds at the time and was considered too light. Major league managers frown on the lightweight pitcher. Detroit farmed me out three times and then Boston took a chance. Yes, every time Cobb makes a base hit, whether I am the victim or not, I swell up a bit, as I feel I first recommended the world's greatest ball player."

PERMIT FOR BOUT HAS BEEN REVOKED

NEW HAVEN CHIEF OF POLICE WAS MISINFORMED OF NATURE OF THE BOUT

New Haven, Conn. Jan. 12.— A permit for a 20-round boxing match between Benny Leonard and Johnny Dundee, January 16, has been revoked by Chief of Police Smith today on the ground that the arrangements made outside Connecticut indicated that it was intended to be a decision, or "prize fight," which would be in violation of state law.

He said that when he gave the permit he understood distinctly from the promoters and their counsel that the event was to be a boxing exhibition purely.

The proposed bout was entirely arranged by New York men. Telegrams for tickets and hotel reservations for it have been coming in the past few days from various parts of the country.

Thursday—Left Overs v. Clerks.

Friday—Post Office v. Lawn Bowlers.

This week in the Ten Pin League the Grocers and the De Laval will meet tonight, and on Wednesday the High Rollers and the Business Men will come together.

Last week's prize in five pins was won by Thos. Barrette with 780 in three games.

MITCHELL GOES TO THE COAST

Cincinnati, Jan. 12.— Pitcher Roy Mitchell has been sold by the Cincinnti Nationals to the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast league. The purchase price was not disclosed.

A NOTABLE DISCOVERY.

Prof. Rutherford Was Formerly Connected With McGill.

Sir Ernest Rutherford, since 1907 Langworthy professor and director of physical laboratories at the University of Manchester, England, and former professor at McGill University, Montreal, has solved the riddle of transmutation of matter, the secret sought by ancient alchemists, according to the Matin.

Sir Ernest Rutherford is one of the best known physicists in the world, holding degrees from upwards of a dozen universities in the Old and New Worlds, and having received medals of honor from a number of institutions of higher learning. Sir Ernest has devoted much attention in recent years to radio activity and has written a number of books on the phenomena of radio active substances and their radiations.

Prof. J. C. McLennan, Canada's chief authority on the subject, doubts the information appearing in the Matin. "The discovery," he says, "probably refers to some recent work of Sir Ernest Rutherford, Cavendish professor of physics in Cambridge, in which he found that the alpha rays or helium nuclei ejected from radium atoms are capable, on bombarding nitrogen atoms, of disrupting the latter, and ejecting from them hydrogen nuclei. This would indicate the probability of hydrogen being a constituent of nitrogen."

It was only a few weeks ago that Prof. Rutherford wrote to Prof. McLennan, saying that he had been unable to go on with his research work on account of his moving from Manchester to Cambridge. It is natural for Prof. McLennan to doubt that Prof. Rutherford could have gone through all the necessary work in research since then.

The process by which experiments hitherto conducted by Prof. Rutherford have been carried out, Prof. McLennan states, is the very opposite of what would be necessary to change other metals into gold. Like all scientists, however, Prof. McLennan hesitates to make positive statements of what may or may not be discovered. Possibly, he says, Prof. Rutherford may have done what the despatch states. Great discoveries in radio activity will be made in the next few years, Prof. McLennan thinks. If disrupted atoms are ever re-combined into gold it will be by this same power of helium, of which there are rich supplies in Canada. Prof. McLennan has a factory manufacturing it at the present time.

Through the ages there has been no more intense or constant dream than this power to change baser metals into gold.

Ireland's Increased Exports.

The report on Irish trade issued for the year 1917 shows that imports rose from £74,467,283 in 1913 to £120,621,682 in 1917, the corresponding figures for exports being £73,877,389 and £134,562,448. It is pointed out that this great increase is due entirely to increased prices. It also emphasizes the fact that Ireland, an agricultural country, is largely dependent on other countries for her farm produce and food stuffs. In the years 1914 to 1917 the export of horses exclusive of army horses totaled 61,238.

A New Propellor.

A propellor has been invented by a Massachusetts man for motor boats has a single blade that oscillates like a fish's tail or the motion of an oar in sculling.

BARCELONA.

Facts About Chameleon City of Spain.

"Barcelona is the chameleon city of Spain. In some quarters streets are narrower and more crooked than those of old London; in others are avenues, boulevards, shops and cafes, which vie with those of Paris. The city has an aristocracy which lives so far in the past that its scions still deplore the discovery of America. These gentle patricians are undisturbed by the agitators for all sorts of political and economic novelties," says a bulletin issued by the United States National Geographic Society.

"Until 1492 Barcelona was the New York of the Mediterranean. Its position in the northeastern coast of Spain, actually at about the same latitude as New York City, relatively is to the Mediterranean world what the western city is to Atlantic trade routes. Columbus' voyage was considered a bit of impertinence on the part of the Castilian Government to upset the balance of trade in favor of cities in Western and Southern Spain.

"Soon a movement swept the Catalan provinces, of which Barcelona is the centre, for annexation to France. In 1616 Catalona did rebel against Philip IV., gave itself over to French protection, but its old allegiance was renewed in 1652, and cemented by the peace of Ryswick before the close of the seventh century.

"In four centuries this resentment had ameliorated enough to permit the placing of a statue of Christopher Columbus in the Rambla, the most prominent street in Barcelona. After the Spanish-American war mobs of Barcelona citizens stoned and egged the explorer's statue as punishment for his having ventured to find so troublesome a new world for Spain."

"Despite its commercial subsidence when the Atlantic replaced the Mediterranean as the major water route of civilization, Barcelona flourished. A year after the late war between George Dewey and Spain, as O. Henry put it, Barcelona paid more than a tenth of the kingdom's entire revenue from industrial taxation. Before the world war some two-score important shipping companies had made it a port of regular call, and to-day the city has a population exceeding five hundred thousand.

"In respect to publicity Barcelona has hardly put its best foot forward, since it is heard of most often as a centre of riots, strikes and rebellions. Though one traveller found the citizens pleasantly surprised that King Alfonso, who had just visited there, had escaped with his life, he concluded after staying a time that, 'with all her reputation for turbulence, Barcelona seemed an enlightened and thoroughly progressive city.' Havelock Ellis paid a more glowing tribute, after admitting the city's faults, by saying, 'Barcelona is a revelation of what a great commercial city may be when humanely and harmoniously organized. In a beautiful and exquisitely tempered climate, a robustly independent and clear-eyed population has here freely expanded itself, loving work and loving play, and combining these two fundamental human impulses more completely and more admirably than in any other equally great city.'

"Despite its disorders and its modernism, Barcelona retains many relics of those mellow times when Cervantes made it the setting for Don Quixote's later adventures. There still are church processions, lottery ticket sellers, policemen with red coats and helmets, flower stalls and caged bird vendors. Folk lore embellishes the story of the girlish martyr, Saint Eularia, whose ashes lie in the Barcelona Cathedral, perhaps the darkest of all great churches, and among the most beautiful in Spain. Cool fountains play in the cloister garden, among oleanders, and orange and lemon trees, and pools disclose geese, not violators of the mediaeval sanctity, but contributory to it, when one learns they are descended from the birds formerly used for augury.

"Many of Barcelona's political disturbances may be attributed to a difference of temperament between the Catalan and the southern Spaniard; a difference akin to that between the Yankee and the Dixie plantation owner before the Civil War welded our common interests so indissolubly. The Catalan more nearly resembles his thrifty, enterprising, practical French neighbor than the courtly, dreamy Castilian. Moreover, the Catalan emphasizes this difference by speaking and writing in his own dialect, called the harshest of Romance tongues."

The Military Haircut.

"We are all militarists now," said Representative Kirby of Arkansas.

"I was being shaved in a barber shop the other day when a grizzled chap in a captain's uniform came in. He saluted smartly and seated himself in the chair next to my own.

"'Hair cut,' he said in gruff tones.

"'How would you like it cut, sir?' the barber asked.

"The captain, who was baldish, answered, gruffer than ever:

"'Line up the hairs and number off to the right. Odd numbers each want a half inch off. Dress smartly with bay rum and brilliantine. Then dismiss.'"

COASTS ARE MENACED.

Steady Advance of Sand Regarded as Serious by France.

It is calculated that nine-tenths of the coasts of the world are covered with sand. What is the origin of this sand and to what circumstances is its abundance due? Men of science have explained this in part by saying that it is due to the erosive effect of the waves upon the rocks, says an exchange, but it is generally admitted that this is not suffiecient to account for the vast quantity of sand that borders our beaches. Undoubtedly a very considerable portion represents the material carried to and toward the ocean by the storms and glaciers of the ice age.

The distribution of sand on the coast depends, in the first place, on marine currents and the topographical aspects of the coasts themselves. Where there is no protection in the shape of cliffs the coasts are covered with enormous quantities of sand, but its advance is checked by plants and vegetable dragging roots serve the purpose of keeping the sand in place and giving consistency to the appearance of the average beach. Of these vegetable growths, those are calculated to serve the purpose best which are most abundant and whose resisting power is strongest. In the time of Elizabeth a law was passed prohibiting the destruction of such beach plants as they tended to keep back the sand otherwise carried by wind and rain to the detriment of crops.

It was thus early recognized that plant life had an influence not to be despised in the formation of sand hills such as one sees in such plenty in this direction and the curious spectacle is presented of the ocean receding before the advance of the coast.

A well-known building in Southport, England, was built on a beach formed in just this way. The moving dunes, although the same in origin as the stationary ones, owe their special characteristic to their great mass and the direction and constancy of the wind, which prevents their finding a base strong enough to constitute a hold on the earth. These dunes are tossed about, often advancing into the interior over cultivated ground to the despair of farmers.

On the coasts of Gascony there are points where the dunes push forward more than four yards annually. In 1780 the advance of sand upon the land of Bordeaux was the occasion of despair to horticulturists and crop growers, and the engineer, Bremontier, made himself famous by converting moveable dunes into stationary ones. The task was undertaken to form a wall against the sand invasion by making a palisade of the dunes a little more than a meter high and putting pinks between each pair. When the sand swept over the boards it had to break up its volume in the effort, and little by little a stationary dune would form with an inclination of from 7 to 12 degrees in the direction of the sea. Behind this palisade was conveniently disposed a wide zone of the hardier shrubs.

France is by no means the only country that has undertaken to contest the advance of sand. In Holland and also in Denmark the problem has been studied for centuries.

Thibet Holds Terrible Custom.

Thibet the mysterious land to the north of India has got no wheeled vehicles, and the grand Lama is carried in a sedan chair. Punishments are cruel, says an exchange. Men are cut to pieces slowly. Women suspected of adultery have their noses and lips slit and then are whipped to death.

New-born babies are plastered over with butter and then laid in the sun naked. Ears are pierced and heavy rings inserted, which often tear out the lobe of the ear.

The limbs and trunks of the dead are hacked apart and left on stones for the dogs, pigs and vultures to devour. The pigs are in turn a table delicacy with the Thibetians.

The "breakers of the dead" are also the scavengers of the country—a tribe known as Rayabus. They live in filthy huts four feet high, built of human bones and the horns of cattle.

Yet the Potala, the seat of the Thibetian ruler, is a magnificent white granite building, larger than any in Europe. It is crowned with huge domes glistening with gold. It is the home of 10,000 monks, as well as the grand Lama and his household. The building is 970 feet long, twelve stories high.

Easy Money.

"You have grown rich as a stock promoter."

"Yes," replied the man who wore a diamond scarf pin.

"How did you get into that line of business?"

"I realized early in life that it is human nature for people to count their chickens before they are hatched."

"Well?"

"That makes it easy to sell them phony eggs."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Clemenceau Story.

In a little village of La Vandee, France, there lived a young doctor who frequently drove into the nearest city. At the gates of this city was the customary customs officer who imposed the lawful duty upon all edibles entering the French town. This doctor, wishing to take some poultry with him and wishing to be honest and at the same time not to pay duty, drove into the city one day in a little cart with a pretty girl on either side of him. At the gate the guard asked: "Have you nothing to declare, doctor?" "Nothing but two chickens and a rooster," he replied. The customs officer laughingly allowed him to pass. Not long ago this same evader of customs passed through the gate, and an old retired customs officer said to him: "Ah, doctor, I am glad to see you back and to know that the rooster has returned a tiger"—and Clemenceau laughed at the memory of his smuggling.

Royal Shrine Now Neglected.

The Temple of Heaven in Pekin is a Chinese temple without idols, a temple sacred to the use of Chinese emperors; a temple that is not one building, but a park several miles in area, with wonderful pagodas and altars scattered among its groves.

The Temple of Heaven has been for centuries as it is now. There is a red tiled wall inclosing a grove, and within, a yellow tiled wall inclosing another grove, with blue-roofed temples in unexpected places. In the most secluded spot is the Altar of Heaven, the temple's holy of holies.

This Altar of Heaven is said by the Chinese to be the centre of the earth.

Since the last living representative of the dragon prayed for prosperity at the Altar of Heaven the temple has become neglected and moss grown.

A Female Henry VIII.

"Be careful in dusting those portraits, Mary," said the mistress to her new help. "They are all old masters."

A look of amazement came into the girl's face. "Gracious, ma'am!" she gasped. "Who'd ever thought you'd been married all them times."

OBITUARY

WALTER EVANS

The death occurred here on Sunday morning at 5.00 o'clock of one of Peterborough's oldest citizens in the person of Mr. Walter Evans, 304 Boswell avenue.

The deceased was 82 years old and came to live in this city when a young boy barely seven years old. He was born in Holland Landing, Ont., and was a carpenter by trade. He married Miss Alexander of this city in 1892.

The deceased had been in failing health for some time, but seemed latterly to get better. He attended two meetings in St. Andrew's Church last Thursday and Friday, being taken ill on Saturday last.

He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, three sisters, Mrs. Geo. Young and Mrs. Pennington Alexander, of this city, and Mrs. F. Adams, of Toronto, and also five brothers, Messrs. George and Harry Evans, of this city; James and Wallace Evans, of Toronto, and Dr. Russell Evans, of Cleveland, Ohio

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 304 Boswell avenue, under Masonic auspices, Rev James Rollins of St. Andrew's Church officiating. Interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

THE LATE CLIFFORD SOWDEN

The funeral of the late Clifford Sowden, who passed away on Jan. 7, 1920, took place on Jan 9 from the family residence, 11 Gladstone avenue.

After a short service at the house, the remains were conveyed to St. George's Church, Braidwood avenue, where the deceased had spent much of his time as a member of the choir and Sunday School. The pall-bearers were former associates, Messrs. H. Rew, L. Cunningham, Carl Smith, A. Rundle, H. Troop, W. Lesure, followed by the members of the Juvenile Lodge of the Sons of England, of which deceased was a valued member.

The service at the house and also at the church and grave-side was conducted by Rev. James Price. At the church a great many availed themselves of the opportunity of paying their last respects to one whom they held so dear, and never before had the church held so many people for such an occasion.

At the conclusion of the service, the organist, Miss Beatrice Blake, played the Dead March in Saul, during which the congregation remained standing, as a last tribute to one whose memory will never be forgotten.

After the service the cortege left for Little Lake cemetery where the deceased was interred.

The late Clifford Sowden, although still a young man, only in his 'teens, was an undefatigable worker in the church, being a teacher in the Sunday School and also a most faithful member of the choir and other societies. He will be remembered by a host of friends as a most abitious, and energetic boy, and was admired by all who knew him, for his bright and sunny disposition and kindly regard for all those with whom he came in contact.

The foral tributes were beautiful and comprised among others: Beautiful wreaths from the choir, Sunday School, Sons of England and Sons of England Juveniles, also a beautiful wreath from the Wire Department of the C. G. E. where Mr. Sowden, sr., is employed, also a star and anchor from the members of the choir and a wreath from the ladies of St. George's Church, together with many other floral tributes from admiring friends.

Y.W.C.A. WHATS DOING THIS WEEK

All girls and women in the city should be interested in the course offered by the Young Women's Christian Association on the laws of Ontario of special interest to women. This course, the date of which is to be announced later, is to consist of a series of lectures by Judge Huycke, and promises to be well worth attending.

Those interested in the study of French should meet at the association Tuesday night at 7.30, to make arrangements for the time of meeting each week, the kind of French to be studied, etc., and to make general plans for the course.

On Friday night, at 7.30, the Story Telling Circle will meet again, and it is hoped that every member of the group will come prepared to tell a story.

CIVIC EDUCATION FOR PETERBOROUGH

The Board of Trade Committee of Civic Education, with the hearty endorsement of the Council, begins a series of weekly meetings to discuss commerce, industry and civics as related to the character and growth of population of Peterborough.

The definite purpose of these talks is action. Each address is to be carefully prepared by a member of the Board, who will be asked to define an objective that is important to Peterborough's growth and one which the Board and city can attain backed by civic interest and support.

The first address will be by Dr. Ernest V. Frederick on trade opportunities in the British East. Dr. Frederick has had extraordinary opportunity to observe and study the situation, during his eighty thousand miles of journeying, as a staff medical officer with the British forces during the entire period of the war. The title of his address will be "Oriental Traffics and Discoveries."

January 22nd will be devoted to industrial team-work for Peterborough. Mr. George A. Gillespie, who established and has successfully built up one of Peterborough's distinctive industries, will address the Board on "The Development of Industry by Peterborough." An instructive and suggestive half hour is certain.

Mr. William H. Pretty, C.E., of the Trent Canal staff, will present a studied paper on the "Political Economy of Power," which he will graphically illustrate, so as to give the members a comprehensive grasp of a big problem that vitally effects Peterborough's development. In a 30-minute address Mr. Pretty will show the relative economic values of power for industry in Peterborough.

With one or two exceptions addresses will be by members of the Board of Trade. One of these exceptions is the visit to Peterborough of Mr. R. H. Morley, who will bring the message of the Ontario Safety League to the Board and also to the public. Prevention of accidents and disasters which result from lack of thought or foresight is the message—oral and illustrated

The Ontario Safety League is a province-wide organization of volunteer workers to safeguard the public from preventable injuries. Mr Morley has three or four reels of moving pictures that are extraordinarily interesting and helpful to the individual. One of the picture theatres may be engaged by the Board in order that the young people of the city and public generally may have an opportunity to see these remarkable life illustrations.

The Thursday evening meetings will be held in the Council room of the Board Chambers over the Dominion Bank, at eight o'clock sharp.

The attendance will be limited to members of the Board and of the Manufacturers', Mercantile, Engineers and other associations allied with the Board of Trade.

THE BRIGHT AND DARK SIDE OF PROGRESS

In a recent editorial by the editor of the British Weekly, Sir Robertson Nicol, on the "Bright and Dark Side of Progress," the writer said: "Recent events make it clearer than ever that, apart from Christianity, there is no hope for this poor world." He had in mind when he wrote those words the recent events in Russia, and indeed all the evils that have been associated with the war. He said further: "The truest striving for progress is the striving that seeks the crown for Jesus Christ, the Adorable Monarch of the future." In a nutshell he has stated here the real reason of the Forward Movement and of every effort that is made today to strengthen the life of the churches and restore Christianity to something of its primitive power.

The forces arrayed aganist the little band whom the Saviour trained and sent out into the world as sheep among wolves were no greater than the forces that are arrayed against Christianity today. And, of course, the church is infinitely stronger today than she was then. The cross triumphed then and it will triumph today. Of course, everythng depends upon the response of church members to the call of Christ.

The response during the past week to the Week of Prayer has not been all that it should have been, There were hundreds of members of the church who had time for their own pleasure but who had no time for Christ or for His church. If Gen. Foch had had the same kind of soldiers in his army as the church of Christ has members we should not today be rejoicing in the victory of the Allied cause. Someone has said that Christianity always seems decadent to its contempories. It may be that some are unduly pessimistic over conditions in the church. It is often darkest nearest the dawn, and the church may be on the threshold of the greatest revival she has ever seen.

The potentialities for such a revival are present in the Forward Movement. One wonders what will be the response upon the part of the church. The services which began in St. Paul's Church a week ago and which were conducted by Rev. R. J. M. Glassford, will continue throughout this week. Mr. Glassford delivered two powerful discourses yesterday to large congregations. He has himself come from a place which was blessed with a very wonderful revival about a year ago. It was at the beginning of the year 1919 just after the epidemic of the "flu" that the three pastors of the town decided to unite for the Week of Prayer, and for two succeeding weeks, in a series of special meetings. The first week they met in the Baptist Church, the second in the Presbyterian, and the third in the Methodist. The movement was so evidently one of the spirit of God that it seemed to be taken completely out of the control of the preachers. They had planned for three weeks. They found it impossible to close the meetings until the end of six weeks. During this time not only was the life of the whole town touched by the movement but deputations came from places distant fifty miles away. Between three and four hundred as a result of this movement confessed Christ and began the Christian life. Many who had been church members before confessed that they had never known Christ.

Mr. Glassford is still linving in the spirit of this movement and carries the atmosphere with him. All yesterday at his services felt the power and presence of the spirit of God. The public are cordially invited to the services which will be held this week. The meetings begin promptly at eight o'clock.

AT MARK STREET CHURCH

Large Congregation in Attendance at Both Services Yesterday

Very large congregations attended both services yesterday. The music by the choir was excellent, and more than 100 people remained for the after-meeting in the morning.

The revival takes hold upon the Sunday School. The pastor joined the Sunday School superintendent and staff, and 96 pupils came out for Christ and signed the following pledge:

Pupils' Pledge.

"I accept Christ as my Saviour now, and promise to serve Him faithfully." The call of the pastor to the Sunday School pupils to decide for Christ met with the most loving and enthusiastic response.

The evangelistic services will continue each evening this week. Come and bring your families if you can. "The church and the world for Christ."

PETERBORO TOURISTS WHO ARE IN FLORIDA

NUMBER FROM THIS CITY AMONG RECENT ARRIVALS AT ST. PETERSBURG

(By John Lodwick.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 12. — Extreme cold prevailing throughout the north has been the result of thousands of northerners flocking into St. Petersburg and the rest of Florida, breaking all previous standing records for the number of tourists registered here and at other resorts in the state. The heavy rush of tourist travel from the Northern States and Canada has resulted in through sleepers being added to all southbound trains out of New York, Washington, Detroit, Cincinnati and Chicago, for the "Sunshine City." There are more Canadians wintering here than ever before including a large number from Peterborough.

Recent arrivals from Peterborough are Miss Pearl Burnham, Mrs. Edgar Burnham, Miss Clara Beattie, Mrs. Pardee B. Wright and Mary Elizabeth Wright. Reservations have been made here for eight other Peterboro tourists who are due here on or before Feberuary 1. Practically half of the 300 Canadians in the city are from Toronto. Much has been done here for the entertainment of the tourists this season including free band concerts which are given twice daily by the Royal Scottish Highlanders who made such a great hit with the Canadians last season. The "Kilties." opened their fifteen week engagement here Sunday!, January 11.

The game of lawn bowling introduced here by Canadian visitors last season has taken a great hold with the states visitors and many new courts have been laid out as a result for the use of the tourists. There are also courts for horse shoe pitching, another old sport that has taken a strong hold with the older tourists. Other games enjoyed by the tourists are tennis, croquet, checkers, chess, golfing, bathing, motoring, target shooting and game shooting. Fishing is excellent this season, many large catches being reported.

Much literature descriptive of St. Petersburg and its surroundings is being mailed into Canada by the Board of Trade here at the request of writers. This is another indication that Canadians are planning a winter rest after four years of terrific strain during the world war.

Sport clothes and summer dresses such as will be worn back north during the coming Spring and summer months, are much in evidence along the boulevards and recreation pier here. The sport coats are of brilliant hues and are very attractive this season. Usually plain white silk or satin dresses are worn. There seems to be somewhat of a return to the pleated skirt. It is not known yet whether it will become as popular as it was twenty years ago.

The Canadians spending the season in the "Sunshine City," have formed into a social organization and have planned many unique picnics and excursions. One will be held this month under the towering palm trees at Passe-a-Grille island, where luncheons will be served, a decided contrast to conditions existing at this time back in the cold north.

St. Petersburg is prepared to care for 60,000 visitors this season. There are 15,000 here now. Many new hotels and apartment houses have been constructed while others are under way.

Street Paving.

Considerable street paving was authorized last year, but, too late, in the season for the work to be proceeded with. The Council should give attention to this without delay, in order that any work of this character to be done may be taken up early in the spring.

Industrial Growth.

It is not necessary for me to urge upon you the importance of the continued industrial growth of the city. I am satisfied that we all agree on the policy of securing more industrial undertakings, and we will endeavor to vigorously carry out this policy during the year.

City Planning

The continued growth of the City and its suburbs calls for systematic planning for the development of the city. It is unwise to permit the enlargement to proceed in any haphazard way, for that would be a cause be compelled to put up with the inconvenience of not having the service while the larger subject is being considered and dealt with.

of trouble in the future. A well-considered plan for the development of industries, the beautifying of the city and means of transportation will require careful study and expert assistance, and is a subject to which careful attention should be given.

Housing Commission

Housing is another important matter. There should be homes of sanitary and comfortable character for all of the inhabitants, and the Ontario Housing Act provides a method by which this may be accomplished. The Council passed a bylaw adopting this law for Peterborough and the Commission should be given every assistance to carry on its work promptly and efficiently, with the object of providing the homes required while at the same time protecting the interests of the municipality.

Economy and Efficiency.

In all our work we should keep in view the interests of the ratepayers. No necessary service should be stinted, and no unnecessary expenditure should be made. Economy and efficiency should be our watchwords for the year. The times are such that most careful administration is required. It is impossible, with the increased cost of all material and labour, to carry out work at the same cost as a few years ago, and this must be recognized, but this calls for even greater watchfulness and carefulness in order that the burden upon the ratepayers shall be as light as possible.

In the consideration of the matters I have mentioned, and of all others that will come before us, I feel sure that we will earnestly co-operate in the interest of the city. We should not expect that there fill be no differences of opinion, but we can and should recognise the sincerity of each other. and thus work together in true harmony for the benefit of the City and of all its inhabitants.

MAYOR McINTYRE WILL PRESS FOR NEW POST OFFICE AND CUSTOMS HOUSE BUILDING

Says City Men Refused Work on Bridge While Out-of-Town Men Are Employed This is News to Ald. Phelan

At the Nineteen-Twenty's first regular council meeting last night, Ald. Gainey drew Mayor A. A. McIntyre's attention to a plank in his election platform that he would press the Dominion Government to erect the new combined Post Office and Customs House Building this year. He (Ald. Gainey) hoped this matter would be taken up with the Government at once, and next spring see the work under way so that plenty of employment will be offering.

Mayor McIntyre replied that he was quite earnest in his pledge to the electorate in this regard, and he urged Council to give the question early consideration. "I want to carry out that plank in my platform to the letter and intend to do so if at all in my power," said the Mayor.

On motion of Ald. Phelan and Gainey this matter was left in the hands of His Worship.

Taxes Not Paid.

Tax Collector Green reported taxes collected and balance owing up to December 31st., 1919 as follows:

Total amount on roll....	$480,204.24
Total amount deposited..	$453,101.78
Balance	$ 27.102.46

Interim Grant

The Board of Education asked for an interim advance of $10,000, to provide funds for carrying on the work of the schools until the final estimates are struck—this request was granted.

School Skating Rink

The Board of Education also requested that the city flood the grounds of South Central School, as in former years, to provide a skating rink for the children. This went to the Board of Works.

Plenty of Wood.

Fuel Administrator H. A. Harrison wrote that the Department of Lands Forests and Mines has 15,000 cords of hardwood, which can be purchased at $7.25 the cord (four foot lengths) F.O.B., at Algonquin. Council took no action in this regard as Peterborough is not suffering for want of fuel.

Good News.

Engineer Frank Barber, in a lengthy communication re the Hunter Street bridge, concluded with his appreciation that the work has proceeded with all due speed, is quite satisfactory and his assurance that the whole structure will be finished at a cost within the estimates.

A Bad Crossing

Mr. R. R. Hall wrote that a crossing, east side of Reid Street is in a defective and dangerous condition. A hole thereon, he said, is, liable to cause the breaking of some preson's ankle at any time and involve the city in heavy damanges. Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, will give this matter immediate attention

Have Taken Possession

City Solicitor Widdifield notified Council that the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company have assumed possession of their Peterborough premises. (the old Cordage Building,) and are responsible for all expenses connected therewith, from January first. Representatives of this company will be here on the 15th of this month.

Sewage Disposal

The City Solicitor reported that the Railway Board have not agreed to the City's plans for an Imhof tanks sewage disposal system, the Provincial Board of Health having declined to endorse any other system than the activated sludge method of treating sewage. The Board has ruled that the city must submit plans for an activated sludge system by March first next.

Ald. Hamilton: "The Provincial Board of Health is not a supreme body in Canada. If Council wants an Imhof system, then resist the Board of Helath's order to the contrary."

Ald. Gordon: "It might be worth considering that by complying with the Provincial Board of Health's order, the City Council is relieved of all responsibility of deciding on a sewage disposal system.

Ald. Phelan explained that City Engineer Parsons had recommended to Council the Imhof tanks system, contending that the activated sludge prin

Little Prospect For Federal Building

Following out a pre-election pledge, called to his attention by Ald. Gainey, Mayor McIntyre last night urged the city Council to take up the matter of a new Federal building for Peterborough. The status of this question is as follows: The Government some time ago appropriated $200,000 for this purpose and a lot was secured. Then the war broke out and in common with such public improvements all over the county it was found necessary to postpone this work.

Nothing can be obtained without an effort and it may be just as well for the aldermen to act on Mayor McIntyre's suggestion. Still it must be said that there is no immediate prospect of success, certainly not the attainment of the object Ald. Gainey has in mind when he speaks of work being started on the proposed building next spring.

Finance Minister Drayton has recently explained in detail the present financial condition of Canada. The enormous debt, due chiefly to the war, calls for an annual interest payment of $105,000,000. The highest possible amount that can be raised in Canada in any one year is set at $300,000,000. To exceed that would be to impose an unheard of burden upon the people. Even if that amount of revenue be raised when the sum required to meet interest charges is disposed of, there is only $185,000,000 left upon which public affairs may be carried on.

The Federal building is a necessity in Peterborough but it is by no means indispensible when the present financial situation is considered. The man who is hard up can wear his old clothes a little longer or for the same reason continue to live in his residence even though it may not be modern in all its appointments. The same spirit of economy should inspire municipalities.

Which would the local city Council prefer, a new Federal building or Government ownership of the two lines of railway recently acquired. The taking over of these roads has entailed new and heavy responsibilities and the operating expenses will create fresh demands until the system can be brought into working order under the new management.

The Government, as everyone knows, would be willing to grant the request of the city Council, but the ability to do so would appear to be lacking. But the Government, financially burdened as it is, and that owing to circumstances over which it really had no control, has already made a special grant of $50,000 to the city toward the construction of the Hunter street bridge. It must be admitted, too, that the Government has in other ways been liberal in its dealings with Peterborough.

A civic deputation to Ottawa on such a mission would appear to be so much wasted effort.

Col. Orosco declares that others implicated in the tragedy have been located and will be apprehended shortly. The report says— the American consul at Tampico has expressed satisfaction over the decision to punish the offenders there

TAKING NO CHANCES WITH THE GERMANS

LATTER MUST GIVE SECURITY UNTIL AMOUNT OF REPARATION IS FIXED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 13.—With the opening on Saturday of the period, during which Germany must pay her debts to the Allies, it is announced that the Commission on Reparation must fix the amount due by Germany before May 1, 1921. In the meantime the Commission will see that Germany carries out her obligations. Until the amount of the reparation payments has been fixed Germany will have to deposit 20,000,000,000 marks in gold, or its equivalent in material, ships, securities and coal.

MAJOR-GEN. TOWNSHEND GIVES UP HIS OFFICE

BRITISH COMMANDER WHOM THE TURKS FORCED TO SURRENDER AT KUT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Lodnon, Jan. 13.—Major-General Chas. V. F. Townshend, defender of Kut-el-Amara, has tendered his resignation to the War Office. Townshend was forced to surrender to the Turks at Kut in 1916. At the time of the armistice he was released and took a message from the Turks to the British admiral in the Aegean Sea applying for a cessation of hostilities. He returned shortly afterward to London.

AMBASSADORS ARE GIVEN NEW DUTIES

WILL BE REQUIRED TO LOOK AFTER ENFORCEMENT OF PEACE TREATIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 13.—Serious consideration was given by the Supreme Council this morning to a plan for the appointment of a committee of ambassadors to complete the details for the presentation and signing of the Hungarian peace treaty and to carry through other unfinished business of the Peace Conference. The decision, however, was left to the heads of, the governments of the principal powers. The necessity for the return home of the Italian and British members of the Council was advanced as a reason that another organization should be created. It is thought that the Premiers now taking part in the conferences here will approve of the idea of creating a committee of ambassadors, as numerous questions, likely to arise in the future in connection with the execution of the various peace treaties, will be diplomatic questions as well as peace problems

POLISH JEWS DREAD BOLSHEVIKI FORCES

FIFTEEN THOUSAND REFUGEES ARE IN PITIABLE CONDITION AT ZMERINKA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 13.—Polish Russian Jews are fleeing at the approach of the Bolshevik bands between Kiev and Woloozys, according to reports from Warsaw. At Zmeainka there are some fifteen thousand of these refugees who are in a pitiable condition. The same state of affairs exists at Oskirow where the inhabitants and officers of Polish army are doing their best to care for the sufferers.

ALD. CROWE COMPLAINS RATEPAYERS ARE BEING DISCRIMINATED AGAINST

Assures Ald. Gainey He Will Keep All Pledges to the Electorate—First Regular Meeting of This Year's City Council —$27,102 Uncollected Taxes—New Bridge Will Be Built Within Estimates Says Engineer Barber—E. H. D. Hall Re-Appointed Member of Library Board.

Ald. Crowe reported to city Council last night that a number of citizens had complained to him that they could not get work on the new bridge, while outsiders are holding jobs. This, he said, is contrary to resolution of Council, that city men should have preference to all others, and he hoped the new special bridge committee would see that that policy is carried out this year. Ald. Crowe at this juncture said he would move that a list of all men employed on the new bridge, with their place of residence, be furnished the Council.

Ald. Hamilton, chairman of the Special Bridge Committee, at once responded by placing in Ald. Crowe's hands the pay roll to date. In doing so Ald. Hamilton remarked that Ald. Crowe was asking something altogether not necessary.

Ald. Crowe promised to look into his pay roll, and he declared that good Peterborough ratepayers are walking around unemployed while men from Indian River are working on the bridge.

Ald. Phelan: "I have never heard of any complaints in that connection."

Ald. Crowe: "Then you must have been in the cellar."

Ald. Phelan replied that he was neither a cellar or furnace man, but had been on his job as chairman of the Board of Works and Special Bridge Committee all the time.

Mayor McIntyre said men had complained to him [illegible] able to get employment on the bridge, and that outsiders.

Ald. Hamilton here replied that if the aldermen would gives names of citizens discriminated against in this respect, his committee would be in a position to take the matter up intelligently, and act at once.

This whole question went to the Special Bridge Committee.

Work Stopped.

Ald. Hamilton here reported that the contractors have now excavated two feet below where they expected to get rock bottom for the east pier of the centre bridge span, and have run into soft stuff with no hard foundation in sight. They are afraid to proceed farther, have stopped work, and so notified Engineer Barber. It seems, continued Ald. Hamilton, that the deeper the contractors go, the further eastward will have to be carried, the curve of the centre arch.

Ald. Hamilton asked that Engineer Barber be informed of the appointment of a Special Bridge Committee and their duties. This was not done last year, and consequently Mr. Barber failed to connect with the committee when he should have done so.

The city clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Barber of this committee's appointment, and their duties. Also that he (Mr. Barber) furnish committee with a list of whatever further materials is needed for the bridge, together with an estimated cost of same.

Ald. Crowe here remarked that up to date the new bridge has cost $131,038.

CITY COUNCIL TAKES TIME BY THE FORELOCK ON PARK QUESTIONS

City Trust Has $30,000 Surplus, Which Ald. Turner Contends Council Should Have Use Of.

At last night's meeting of the City Fathers, Ald. Turner raised the question of action in the options secured for purchase of the properties across the river for park purposes.

Ald. Gordon and Turner moved that Council's Park Committee ascertain from the Registrar's office the extent of these properties and their purchase price. And, if necessary, the chairman of the Parks Committee can have a surveyor's sketch of the properties in question made and submitted to Council. This carried.

Ald. Hamilton's suggestion that the clerk write Mr. Robert Stuart for a deed of the old raceway, east of the bridge, in accordance with his promise to ex-Mayor Duncan, was approved of.

Talking of the new park, endorsed by the ratepayers, Ald. Gordon said the Dominion Government requires to do considerable dredging of the Otonabee River from Hunter street up and he thought they might agree to dump the material dredged along the water front of Riverside Park. A retaining wall could be built and valuable park land thus made. Heretofore, dredgings have been dumped in Little Lake, and, perhaps, Ald. Gordon suggested, the Government might pay for the privilege of a dumping ground, close at hand. He thought this matter might go to the Parks Committee, to confer with the Department of Railways and Canals.

Ald. Turner suggested that the Civic Development Commission handle this question on general lines. The first thing this Commission has in mind is securing a bird's eye view of the city, taken from an airplane. They will then with Town Planner Thomas Adams, present to the city a comprehensive scheme for parks, boulevards, etc.

Ald. Gordon hoped there would not be much delay in preparing the plans, and he was assured by Ald. Turner that expedition would be used.

Ald. Phelan: "Leave this scheme with the Civic Development Commission and the Parks Committee."

Ald. Gordon was satisfied so long as Ald. Gainey, chairman of the latter committee, stood guard over expenditures.

Ald. Turner replied that the Civic Development Commission have spending powers; they can wire plan and submit schemes to the City Council.

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Gainey, the matter of dredging and filling in for Riverside Park went to the Civic Development to confer with the Department of Railways and Canals Commission.

Ald. Gordon: "We can't tell what will transpire these next few months. Should there be a Federal election there will be all kinds of dredging.

A Big Surplus

Ald. Turner pointed out that through wise investment of the sinking funds for city debentures, the City Trust has an accrued surplus of some $30,000. He could not see why Council should not have the use of that money for either current or special purposes, notwithstanding Mr. Eastwood's contention to the contrary. Ald. Turner voted that the City of Saskatoon is empowered to apply such money to Council's current account. Peterborough should seek legislation to this end, he asserted. This question will receive further attention.

JAPANESE WAR SCARE HAD NO FOUNDATION

NO CONNECTION BETWEEN ARRIVAL OF MUNITIONS AND A CRUISER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 13.—The War Department, after investigation, is satisfied that the arrival at Manzanillo, Mexico, of a steamer [illegible] arms and munitions from Japan and [illegible] Japanese cruiser, had no connection. The cruiser is a training ship and couldn't have protected a munitions ship had there been occasion for the effort.

APPLICATIONS FOR STAY OF EXECUTION HAVE BEEN MADE

Reverend Father Lechinsky, of the Russian Orthodox Church Held Communion Services With Two Condemned Men Rev. Canon Davidson Will Represent Greek Priest at Execution.

The Reverend Father Sechinsky, a priest of the Russian Orthodox Church, of Toronto, is here today and received the confession and administered communion to Thomas Kornheck and Michael Bahri, who are to be executed tomorrow morning. The Reverend Canon Davidson has assisted throughout in the matter as he is the representative of the Orthodox Greek Church, in Peterborough.

Mr. B. W. Essery, of Toronto, who defended Kornheck and Mr. Gordon had a consultation with Rev. Father Sechinsky and Rev. Canon Davidson and made applications for stay of execution of the two unfortunate men, and invoked the aid of the Russian consul at Ottawa.

Kornheck, who bore up wonderfully, finally accepted the rites of the church as did Barhi, who was very tempermental, and has been very much depressed throughout. The Greek priest will not be able to be present at the execution on account of the 14th of January being a holy day in the Greek church, and he must be present at Toronto to officiate in the religious services of his congregation.

The Rev. Canon Davidson, who has given much attention and care to the condemned men, has been appointed by the Greek priest to act in his stead and will be present at the execution.

Both Mr. Essery and Mr. Gordon felt that there was not much hope in making an application for stay of execution at this late date, but as there was a possibility that something might be done, they felt it was in the interests of their clients that a last effort should be made.

Both counsel for the prisoners feel that the Minister of Justice might consider further facts which they emphasized and upon which they relied for further consideration of the cases of the prisoners.

Impressive Religious Ceremony.

Canon Davidson stated this morning that the confession of the men followed by the communion service of the Russian church conducted by Father Lechinsky this morning was a very impressive ceremony. The two condemned men, he said, were greatly influenced by the service and were much quieter upon its conclusion

The Canon, who himself has taken a deep interest in the Russians, was warm in his praise for Mr. Gordon for the remarkable personal interest he had taken in the men. He stated that Mr. Gordon had paid out of his own private means the expenses of the priests who have come from Toronto to administer the rites of their church. "He has done everything a man could have done for them," stated Canon Davidson.

The Canon feels very sympathetic toward young Barhi and is hopeful that the application for stay of his execution may be allowed. Barhi still thinks it is an injustice that he should pay the supreme penalty for his crime.

VISCOUNT GREY IN ENGLAND

ATTORNEY-GENERAL TO RESIGN

Hon. W. E. Raney Wearied With Effort to Find Seat.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The Journal this morning says that Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney-General of Ontario, will shortly resign because no seat in the Legislature can be found for him. There has been a marked indisposition on the part of Labor and Farmer candidates to make way for Raney.

MICHAEL BAHRI IN CONFESSING TO HIS PRIEST DECLARES HIS INNOCENCE

Young Man of 22 Lead Into Crime by Evil Companions, Heart-Broken Awaits Sentence of Death—Father Sechinsky of Toronto Will Fight Bolshevism.

Referring to the sentence of death to be imposed upon Michael Bahri tomorrow, Reverend Father Sechimsky, high priest of the Russian Orthodox Church of Toronto, stated this afternoon, that judging fairly from the condemned man's confession he was quite innocent of the crime of murder.

"He is a young man," stated Father Lechinsky, only 22 years of age, and fell into the hands of evil people, who led him astray.

Bahri, a man condemned to die and confessing to his religeous adviser, insists that he did not concoct the plot or scheme. Zilimski, who had his sentence reduced to life imprisonment, is the man who started the affair in the opinion of Father Sechimsky. Bahri states that it was Zilimsky who gave him $10 for railway fair to go to Havelock.

After talking very intimately to the man, the priest believes firmly that Bahri is not the man who should suffer the extreme penalty.

"The case of Kornchek is different," admits the Father. "He looks bad in the eye," he stated in broken English. "I would not try to save him although I feel awfully sorry for him."

Kornchek admits he fired the shot but declares he did not intend to kill. He has quite broken down now and cried considerably this morning, while the priest was with him.

Kornchek is prepared now to meet his fate, but declares emphatically that Bahri is innocent. Kornchek states that he did not know Bahri until they met on the train and this appears to the friends of the men a proof that the young man did not lay the plans and lead the others into it.

"I hope very much to get Bahri off" stated the Father, "because I feel from the bottom of my soul that he is innocent of murder.

Bahri promised this priest that if he should be allowed to live he will reform.

Bolsheviki Spirit.

"You know my people are in a bad way now, continued Father Sechinski "the Bolsheviki spirit is poisoning them. It is terrible, even over here. In my congregation of 500 or 600, in [illegible] there are 70 or 80 Bolsheviki anarchists, who hold meetings," he said. "I will work with all my mind and soul to defeat the terrible Bolsheviki, who are destroying my people," he declared defiantly, as his challenge flashed forth from his dark piercing eyes.

Father Sechinsky may return to the city some time in the near future to speak to those of the Greek Church here.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1920.

PETERBOROUGH'S NEW MAYOR.

A. A. McINTYRE, after a somewhat strenuous election experience, has finally attained the goal aimed at probably by every man who has ever occupied a seat in the Council. His creditable ambition has been realized in his election to the mayoralty, the highest office in the gift of his fellow citizens. He has attained that position, too, after a campaign that was mutually clean, not one word of recrimination ebing heard throughout the entire contest. Mayor McIntyre is to be congratulated on his success and on the manner in which it has been achieved. It was his public record, extending over a period of ten years, that has really placed him where he is today. Following out the long-established precedents in such cases, City Clerk Armstrong had no alternative but to take the course which he did and give the casting vote in Mayor McIntyre's favor. This decision appears to be accepted by the general public as deciding the result as satisfactorily as though Mayor McIntyre had been returned by a substantial majority.

Ex-Ald. Taylor has come through the contest with flying colors. He had beyond all question a substantial following behind him. He has served only three years in the Council, a short time in which to establish such a reputation as he appears to have earned or to win the confidence of the public as he has done. He missed the mayoralty by a narrow margin, but the showing that he made was remarkable, all things considered. And, best of all, he has shown himself a game loser, being the first man, when the final result was announced, to congratulate his successful competitor.

In his inaugural message to the City Council Mayor McIntyre shows that he has a comprehensive grasp of civic affairs. He realizes his own responsibilities and those of his colleagues in the Council. He is a safe man in a position of influence and trust. Having large personal interests in the city, the prosperity of Peterborough means business success for himself. He sees the left-over tasks that must be carried on again this year, and makes suggestions that are worthy of every consideration.

The Council of 1920 have heavy responsibilities and boundless opportunities. Keeping down the tax rate is one of their chief duties, but does not represent everything that is expected of them. Bringing new industries to the city is all important, but there is a still higher service due the people of Peterborough. This city must not only be made materially prosperous, a field for industrial expansion and the earning of money by employer and workingman alike, but it should be made a better place in which to live. The life of every man is more than meat and his body than raiment. Peterborough has a school system second to none in the Dominion. As an indnstrial centre its reputation is established, and in this regard the best days lie ahead. It can, from its very natural advantages and ideal location, be made one of the model cities in Ontario. To attain this position should be the object of every resident. Public spirit and community interest must be developed. This year Peterborough has a Council from the members of which, individually and collectively great things are expected. Self interests must and, unless all signs fail, will be suppressed. The greatest good for the majority should be the slogan. No member of the Council should use his high office with an eye on future personal preferment, and no member of that Council is likely to do so unless the public estimate is astray.

Mayor McIntyre, in his inaugural address, puts the situation in a nutshell when he says: "No necessary service should be shirked, and no unnecessary expenditure should e made. Economy and efficiency should be our watchword for the year."

Economy and efficiency are by no means incompatible In fact, the one invariably goes with the other.

Mayor McIntyre recommends the building of houses sanitary and comfortable, for the workingmen of the city, through the agency of the housing commission that has already been provided for. This is an improvement that can be made with no, or at least a nominal, expense to the city. All it requires is a little civic energy in getting the details of the plan before the people for whose benefit it is designed. Activity in this line must precede all extensive future efforts to increase the industrial expansion of Peterborough.

Let the watchword for 1920 be, "For a Greater Peterborough," greater in the highest sense of the term. With such a City Council and such a Board of Trade progress through the year is easily possible.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES FOR 1920.

ALD. PHELAN during the past year, as chairman of the joint committee on the Hunter street bridge and public works, held a position second only in importance to that of Mayor Duncan himself, served the city, too, without compensation. He was an indefatjgale worker and all credit is due his administration. The public realised this when he was returned as alderman at the last election. He made his appeal for a renewal of popular confidence, chiefly on his record in the construction of the Hunter street bridge. To get that enterprise started was no easy task, and he worked to that end day and night. The preliminary stages of the work have been succesfully carried out.

It will occasion some surprise that Ald. Phelan, whose heart and energies were in this work, who proposed when he faced re-election to stand or fall by this particular part of his record, and whose administration was endorsed, should be set aside now that the joint committee has been dissolved and a special body appointed to carry on the work of constructing the bridge, when the important task of erecting the span must soon be taken up. But the joint chairmanship was really too much for any one man. Ald. Phelan still retains the confidence of his colleagues as shown in his re-appointment as chairman of the committee on public works, a position always regarded as the most important post under the mayoralty.

With Ald. Hamilton as chairman of the special bridge committee, the city has nothing to fear, especially as that committee still has the experience of Ald. Phelan to assist it, the former chairman being retained as a private member. Ald. Hamilton is a business man with mechanical skill, and his year's record in the Council has established his value as an administrator of the city's affairs. His associates on that committee are men of experience. One of the greatest problems that faces the municipality is in safe hands.

The appointment of Ald. Turner to the chairmanship of the finance committee will meet with general approval. By instinct and training he is well equipped for that important position, and the ratepayers can rest assured that their financial interests will be given the closest attention during the year 1920.

The other chairmanships have been awarded in a manner which should go a long way toward stamping out anything like class rivalry. There should be accord in the proceedings of the City Council for the next twelve months.

THE BALLOT WITHOUT THE INITIALS.

JUDGE HUYCKE cited the highest possible legal precedent as his authority for counting the uninitialled ballots cast in the mayoralty contest and which really decided the election when they were allowed on the recount. There are, however, more recent cass than the one quoted by the Judge. In the election of 1914 for the Provincial Legislature a parallel case to the one in point arose in a Western Ontario constituency, and a number of ballots that lacked the official initials, and sufficient to turn the election, were thrown out. It was held that these should be counted, as the electors had voted in good faith and that they should not be disfranchised either by the carelessness or the criminality of an election official.

What other ruling in such cases could be regarded as reasonable? A deputy returning officer, if disposed to be unscrupulous, could easily disfranchise any man whose political allegiance he considered at variance with his own by simply handing him a ballot that lacked the official initials. The law, even if it makes no specific reference to such cases, most certainly never intended to allow an election official so much latitude.

This is a brand of official carelessness which seems utterly inexcusable. Any deputy returning officer has two chances as reminders of his duty. Any man in the hurry of an election might hand an elector a ballot to which he had forgotten to attach his initials. When that ballot is returned to him, however, he is supposed to look at the initials to assure himself that it is the one he handed to the elector. If he fails to do this he is neglecting one of the most important of his duties as the object of this provision of the law is to prevent fraudulent voting. It may be said that the elector, too, should be vigilant. On New Year's Day more than one voter refused to accept a ballot until it had been initialled when the deputy returning officer had overlooked this formality. The elector, too, is supposed to follow instructions and fold his ballot so that the initials show. But it is the deputy, rather than the voter, who is responsible for such oversights. If the former carries out instructions to the letter and gives each voter the information which he is supposed to impart, it is difficult to imagine how such irregularities can arise. Of course the deputy does not receive much for his important services, but that fact does not excuse carelessness. Even if he worked for nothing he should be willing to perform his duties according to the legal requirements. Judge Huycke's decision with regard to these uninitialled ballots will tend to increase public confidence in the electoral machinery. No voter can be disfranchised by the carelessness—or worse—of a deputy returning officer.

SAYS THAT FARMERS ARE DISAPPOINTED

(Rob Roy in Toronto Sunday World.)

The farmer-labor government of Ontario has many difficulties to face. Many farmers in districts not adapted to farming voted for the U.F.O. candidates, blindly hoping that a farmer government could make them prosperous at once. When they find out that no very radical legislation is contemplated, and that any benefit received from the new order will be extremely slow, many will be bitterly disappointed. They gloried in the thought of scrapping the Government House, but Toronto's "four hundred" are now disporting themselves there as of yore.

Then when the old parties were defeated it was said that righteousness should flourish in public places. Such affairs as the Stratton-Gamey episode would be unknown. But before the new government got started, it was charged with trying by improper means to wrest seats from both old parties. Because the electors believed in the Gamey charges, the government was hurled from power. Mr. Drury cannot sidestep this matter. He must clean it up, or the electors will.

Then there is the matter of patronage. For over a quarter of a century farmers have been denouncing it as the great source of corruption. But at the government caucus, following the Massey Hall meeting last week, the U.F.O. members faltered at the brink and could not decide to let this slip out of their fingers.

Now what about Middlesex? There during the sickness of the registrar, his deputy, a capable young woman, efficiently did the work. After his death a largely-signed petition by citizens asked for her appointment as registrar. It was made. Now what a howl was made by certain U. F. O. members, and notably by one of their county directors. Just like the old parties, they claimed the right to name the person to be appointed. The government claims to be the people's government, but the Middlesex U.F.O. claimed that when offices are to be filled all but the elect must keep out of the running.

Strong for Economy.

But the farmers were strong on economy. The orgy of roadbuilding was to cease. Inoffensive and useful market roads were to be built and paved. National highways were to be stopped. But in counties where these highways are to pass through the people want them, as they are to be paid for by Dominion and provincial funds. The local farmers' organisations dare not oppose the expenditure of large sums which the ratepayers do not have to pay themselves.

Here is a case in point. Dundas street, passing through Halton, is a provincial county road. At Tansley this year a high level bridge was built at a cost of $110,000, the province paying $66,000. The U.F.O. memeber, J. F. Ford, M.L.A., recently waited on the minister of public works. With him were members of the county council, asking for a high-level bridge over the Sixteen-Mile creek, three miles from Tansley, at a cost estimated at $110,000, the provincial government to pay $66,000. The contract was let on Monday last.

Four miles from this another bridge was built, costing $70,000, the government at that time paying 60 per cent. These bridges cannot be justified as market roads. They are essentially motor roads. If at distances of three miles the new government pays $66,000 as its shares for bridges, the finances of the province will soon be in a most serions condition. This orgy must be moderated at least, or the province will be bankrupt. Great things were expected from Mr. Drury. People thought his government would be an extraordinary government, but so far it seems to be an extraordinarily ordinary government.

PREDICTS HICCOUGH EPIDEMIC

Winnipeg Doctor Says It Will Soon Sweep Canada.

Winnipeg, Jan. 13.—An epidemic of hiccoughs soon will sweep the continent, Dr. Gordon Bell, chairman of the Manitoba Board of Health, declared in an address before the Sanitary Inspectors' Association. He said the disease, which is believed to be a slight form of sleepng sickness, already has appeared in Manitoba. Attacks usually last from two to six days. He expressed the belief that sleeping sickness was dying out in Manitoba.

Sydney, N.S., Jan. 13.—A demand upon the Nova Scotia censors to compel moving picture theatres to show the lurid serial film upon some other days than Friday and Saturday has been formulated by the Sydney branch of the National Council of Women. It asks for the change because children largely attend the theatres on the last two days of the week.

WOULD UPSET ELECTION

Runner-up in Brantford Stars Action Against Mayor.

Brantford, Jan. 13.—Ex.-Ald. English, runner-up for the Brantford Mayoralty, instructed his solicitors to proceed with the protest against the election of Mayor MacBride. The ground on which the protest is based is alleged failure to pay the municipal income tax for the last three years. It is stated that a written statement was secured from the city tax collector to that effect. Mayor MacBride issued a statement from the I. L. P. that if an effort was made to unseat him proceedings would be taken to upset the entire municipal election.

Mainly About People

It is not surprising that in the holy of holies of the administration camp Mr. Bryan's activity in respect to the treaty controversy should be branded treachery. Nor is it surprising to find at the national capital and elsewhere throughout the country shrewd political observers who profess to see in the Nebraskan's attitude evidence of an effort to wrest from the President's hands the control of the Democratic party. Indeed, it is clearly among the possibilities that Mr. Bryan will plead guilty to the charge of aspiring to another lease upon the dominating position over party affairs which he held from 1896 until, through Bryan's own influence, Woodrow Wilson's star rose at Baltimore in 1912, but any such admission on Mary Bryan's part would be accompanied by protestations that he comes not as kidnapper, but as rescuer. For Mr. Bryan is accredited with the prediction, made in 1913, that after a few years of Wilson in the White House the Democratic party would be supplanted by a Wilson party.

Mr. Bryans' chief interest at this time seems to be in rescuing the Democratic party. He always has his ear to the ground and fully realizes the damage that is being done to the Democratic party by the President's stubborn opposition to such reservations to the peace treaty and its covenant as are supported by a majority of the Senate and are essential if the treaty is to be ratified. Observing that there is no backbone to the movement among Democratic Senators to defy the White House, he has set out to furnish them with that anatomical need. Senators of his political faith have developed among themselves no leadership; he is there to give it.

As a matter of policy Mr. Bryan is talking "compromise." Broadly speaking his compromise is a surrender of the recalcitrant position in which the Democrats have been put by the undotted "i" and uncrossed "t" threats of the President. While the reservation programme advanced in Mr. Bryan's name by Senators Kendrick and McKellar represents a weakening in some respects of the action taken by the Senate, this programme admittedly is advanced for trading purposes, and there is little likelihood of an agreement upon anything that does not measure up in essentials to the Senate's reservation programme as this has been put on the record. For the most part the Kendrick-McKellar-Bryan programme consists merely of a juggling of the words of the original reservations.

If Mr. Bryan's activity results in giving Democratic Senators the backbone they need he will have performed a service to the country no less than to his party. The country is not particularly interested in the effect that the present impasse is having upon one political party or the other, but it is greatly interested in getting some decisive action at Washington. It is clear that such action is impossible under Mr. Wilson's dictatorship over Senate Democrats; if it comes as the result of Mr. Bryan's efforts to him will be due the credit—even if his primary purpose is to rescue the Democratic party.

Teach the Children to Save

Habits are acquired early in life. Children, who are taught the value of money and the habit of saving, grow up into good business men and capable women.

The easiest way to teach children to save, is to start a Savings Account for each child ($1.00 each is sufficient). After a child has saved another dollar to make an additional deposit, he or she will have a better appreciation of just what a dollar stands for, and how much work and self-denial it represents.

IN WOMAN'S WORLD

The following interesting facts are presented by the Duluth News Tribune, showing what women were doing some 50 years ago:

Harriet Hosmer was practicing sculpture in Paris.

Four prominent English magazines were edited by women.

Julia Ward Howe was speaking on "Rich Women and Poor Women."

Maria Mitchell was lecturing on astronomy to the girls at Vassar.

The University at Michigan had just voted to admit women as students.

Mrs. Lydia Saxton was appointed chaplain of the Leavenworth penitentiary.

"Lotta" was investing $20,000 earned in a seven weeks' engagement in New York.

REVERSIBLE TROUSERS MAY BE THE FASHION

CLOTHING DESIGNERS PLAN TO SAVE COST OF MATERIAL IN ALL GARMENTS

Reversible trousers, so constructed as to make it possible to turn them inside out when the one side becomes "slick" from wear, pocketless suits to save material and waistcoats just large enough to admit of watch pockets and pencil flaps were some of the models of garments discussed by members of the International Association of Clothing Designers in convention at New York.

It was the opinion of most of the designers that radical alterations in the manner of making clothing were necessary to keep the prices within the reach of the people, and besides these suggestions expressed by them there were proposals that a countrywide campaign be carried on urging families to refrain from buying "long clothes" for the youngsters until it was absolutely necessary.

That a postponement of buying long trousers for the boy would mean a saving of thousands of yards of clothing material, throughout the United States in a year was explained, and although no action was taken on the matter it was said such a move probably would be made.

Evening clothes will replace the "dinner jacket," or Tuxedo, so generally worn since the war began, for dinner parties and dances, and, according to the delegates, there is an unusualy large demand for these garments.

Dickens' Day in London His Granddaughter Weds And "Bleak House" Filmed

TURNING in from the roar and bustle of Fleet Street through the time old wooden gateway, creaking on its rusty hinges, suddenly the surroundings jumped a hundred years—back to the days of Dickens' London.

Pale and haggard, clutching his rags to his poor starved chest, a tall man tottered heavily across the cobbles, grasping at the wall to steady himself.

Slowly and painfully he moved, and at every step a groan of anguish came from him, until beneath a little window he stopped.

"Snagsby, Law Stationers, documents copied," said the legend on the window, and the pitiful outcast gazed long at it. Then, with a sudden effort, he staggered to the doorway.

It was quite a Dickens' day in London. That morning Miss Elaine Dickens, the famous novelist's granddaughter, was married at the Brompton Oratory to Major Alec Waley. There had been a great gathering of Dickens' descendants at the ceremony, and no fewer than eight of his great-grandchildren were present, strewing flower petals before the bride as she left the church.

Further east a scene in a new photographic version of "Bleak House" was to have been photographed by the fountain in the Temple. However, it was too wet and dull and too miserable generally for the cameras in the morning; and though Dickens made that historic spot the background of episodes in several of his novels, he did not confine his scenes entirely to that locality. The country of "Bleak House" lies further north, and the afternoon proving more suitable than before lunch the scene switched back again to Staple's Inn, hidden away in that quiet square behind noisy Fleet Street.

"A bit more wobbly in the legs please," shouted a man with a big cigar. "And grab the railings as you fall." So the pitiful outcast wobbled his legs as instructed and collapsed beautifully on to Mr. Snagsby's doorstep.

"Good," said the man with the cigar. "Where's Tulkinghorn and Jarndyce?"

They were having a chat on the seat beneath the plane tree and as they rose the pitiful outcast picked himself up briskly, put a trench coat over his rags and lit a cigarette.

"By Jove," said the pitiful outcast, "it's cold in these clothes. What time's lunch?"

This was Mr. Nemo, otherwise Capt. Hawdon and Lady Dedlock's former lover.

Her ladyship, by the way was waiting in the corner, arranging her plaid shawl and chatting to Esther Summerson and Mr. Snagsby's maid, Guster.

Straight from "Bleak House" these old ghosts had come to do it all over again for the benefit of the Ideal Film Company, whose battery of cameras was ranged across the square.

"Places for Kenge and Carboys," said the gentleman with the cigar; and the stage carpenter went into the office opposite with a board. In two seconds the name was in the window.

Mr. Nemo whipped off his trench coat and became the pitiful outcast once more.

"Slowly!" shouted the producer, and the bedraggled figure crept along the wall again, weak and trembling, and obviously in the last stages of consumption. Out of the doorway comes Esther in a lilac bonnet and crinoline, leaning on the arm of Mr. Jarndyce, complete with side whiskers and shaggy brown hat. Enter Mr. Tulkinghorn in dingy black, his white hair hanging lank below a faded old hat.

"Now Lady Dedlock." And Miss Constance Collier arranges her torn clothes and composes her classic features into an expression of hunger and misery.

"All ready," from the director. Guster, in print frock and white stockings, came out of Mr. Snagsby's office to clean the steps.

But who is this tragic woman dragging herself along the wall? She cries out, clutches at the air, and with a moan drops to the ground, miserable and woebegone.

Guster stares and stares, then runs for water. The camera clicks, the director rubs his hands, and Miss Collier registers a very successful dead faint. And—up trots a sympathetic fox terrier, right in the middle of the picture, to sniff at the prostrate woman.

Alarums and excursions! Also language! Mr. Tulkinghorn was fine. So was Mr. Snagsby. And Miss Collier looked like Lady Macbeth.

The Home of Elliott Henderson, in Wainfleet Township, Welland County, was destroyed by fire during the family's absence.

MAKE FOR BETTER SPELLING

Indiana Newspaper Pleads for a Revival of the Old-Time "Matches," Once Popular.

The winter evenings are long and there are a few people who do not care for the movies. Some of them play checkers and others tat. A few improve each shining hour by reading something worth while. Occasionally some one thinks of a letter, long past due. He starts to write, and then he stops to nibble his pencil, because the word he has in mind seems so hard to spell. That reminds him of spelling. In the old days of "loud schools," when recitations brought out the vocal powers of children and when they studied aloud more attention was paid to spelling, observes the Indianapolis News.

Since then the schools have taken a long step forward, but the oldtimers insist that the modern boy and girl do not spell as well as father and grandfather did. Of course, the modern school system is more complex. Grandfather never dreamed of learning how to make furniture in school, and grandmother had no domestic science course wherein she learned to concoct Thousand Island dressing. When reading, writing and arithmetic were considered essentials, spelling claimed almost as much attention as the three R's.

A few years ago considerable rivalry arose in Indiana, and there were debates between the new school and the old. The elderly people insisted that the modern youth cannot spell in the same class with those who went to school 30, 40 and 50 years ago. To settle the dispute spelling matches were held. The contagion for accurate spelling spread throughout the state. Elimination contests finally established a county champion, and he in turn challenged the champion of the neighboring county. The state superintendent of public instruction approved the spelling matches and school authorities generally were interested. At that time the school officials declared that the unusual attention directed to the subject resulted in better spelling in the schools. The winter evenings are long and some people do not care for the movies. Another epidemic of spelling matches will not cost anything, and it might produce a great deal of good.

Why He Wanted Arm Straight.

A Canadian officer, wounded early in the war, was sent to one of the institutions to have his left arm made over. The elbow had been so badly shattered that surgery, wonderful as its skill and resources are, could not entirely reconstruct the joint. So the officer was given a choice of two things—either to have a weak, movable elbow, or a strong stiff one. Without hesitation the Canadian chose the stiff elbow, and he astonished the surgeons by asking that the arm be made perfectly straight.

They pointed out to him that the arm would be far more useful if the elbow was set at an angle. If set straight he wouldn't be able even to put his hand in the pocket of his trousers. But the Canadian had anticipated that argument by arranging with his tailor to have the pocket so low that by hunching his shoulder he could get his hand into it. The reason he wanted the arm made rigidly straight was to be able to use a hunting rifle and a billiard cue.

"Honor" or "Honour"?

The Oxford Dictionary authorizes both spellings, and says that "honor" and "honour" continued to be equally frequent spellings from the Middle English period "down to the 17th century. In the Shakespeare Folio of 1623, 'honor' is about twice as frequent as 'honour.' The two forms appear indiscriminately in the early 17th century dictionaries, but 'honor' was favored by Phillips, Kersey, Bailey, and Johnson. Ash, 1775, adopted 'honor' (a modern but correct spelling), and this is said to have been fashionable at the time. Nevertheless, 'honour' carried the majority of English suffrages eventually, while 'honor' was (under the lead of Noah Webster) generally accepted in the United States." One of the lexicographers tells us that "honour," "labour," etc., became established in England when courtiers, imitating the broken English of the court, pronounced these words as if spelled "onoor," "laboor," etc., with the accent on the second syllable. In Ontario the spelling in the official publications is "honour," but in one of the Australian States the official spelling is "honor."

Handwriting.

Thackeray's handwriting was a marvel of neatness. He is said to have stated that if all other means of earning his own living failed, he would be able to write the Lord's Prayer on his thumbnail. His usual writing was so small that only eyes of microscopic power could with ease decipher it. Charles Dickens wrote a much less beautiful hand, but equally minute. He had a habit, too, of writing with blue ink on blue paper, a propensity which caused many a compositor to hurl invective at his head.

Carlyle wrote a patient, crabbed, biting hand, sufficiently expressive of the character of the "dour" philosopher. A friend thus aptly describes it:—

"Eccentric and spiteful little flourishes dart about his manuscript in various odd ways, sometimes evidently intended as a cross to a 't,' but constantly recoiling in an absurd fashion, as if attempting a calligraphical somersault, and destroying the entire word from which they sprung. Some letters slope one way and some another, some are halt, maimed, and crippled, and all are blind." Carlyle used to enjoy a story told him by his London publishers. A Scotch compositor had just been added to the printing-house staff, on the strength of a recommendation from the Edinburgh Review. His first copy was some of Carlyle's manuscript. "What," he fairly shouted, "have you got that man here? I fled from Scotland to get away from him."

UNSELFISH NEIGHBORS!

How Canadian Coins Are Being Used In the United States.

The high prices which bar silver has been commanding in the metal markets of the world may necessitate a reduction of the fineness of the alloy from which Canadian silver coins are struck, it is authoritatively stated here. With bullion prices at the present level, there is too great a tendency to withdraw coins from circulation and melt them for commercial uses. Indeed, such has been the demand for silver coinage of late that the belief is strong among officials of the Finance Department that a considerable quantity of it is being converted into bullion.

Bar silver has sold recently as high as $1.39 an ounce on the New York market. More recently it has sold at $1.32½ an ounce in New York, and at 74 pence in London. In years gone by the value of Canadian silver coins as bullion was in the neighborhood of one-half their face value. It is calculated that with silver worth $1.33 and $1.34 an ounce the intrinsic value of Canadian coins and their value as money are about equal. At present the rate of exchange between Canada and the United States also enters into the situation. With Canadian funds at a discount of five per cent., or thereabouts, it must be remembered that a dollar's worth of Canadian silver coins can be purchased for about 95 cents in United States money. This circumstance tends to make it profitable to withdraw Canadian coins for circulation for sale in the United States as bullion, even if the price of bar silver does not greatly exceed $1.34 an ounce. Indeed, it is believed here that a good deal of Canadian coin has been exported to be melted and sold. At any rate, the Mint at Ottawa has been kept busy of late to meet the demand for silver coinage in the country, and minting is not a profitable business with bar silver so expensive.

Canadian coins, like those in use in Great Britain, are struck from silver alloy of .925 fineness, that is to say, containing 92½ per cent. of pure silver. The silver coinage of the United States is of fineness .900, or contains 90 per cent. pure silver. The silver coins of Scandinavian countries and of other places, such as the Straits Settlement and Hong Kong, are .800 in fineness, or contain 80 per cent. of pure silver. To lessen the temptation to withdraw Canadian coins from circulation to be melted and sold for bullion it is now proposed to reduce the percentage of pure silver in them. Just what standard may be adopted has not been indicated.

Women In Geography.

Many women have lived whose memory is honored for all time in the pages of geography. And yet the names of cities, rivers, islands, which should stand as living memorials, have too often lost their significance through common usage. How many know that the famous island of St. Helena was named after the mother of Constantine the Great, who also gave name to her birthplace, Helenopolis, and to points in the region of the Louisiana Purchase? The rugged island, with its lofty, barren hills, and deep gorges, was named by a Portuguese navigator returning from India in 1502. The French were especially prone to honor the holy women of their race, and the Sault Sainte Marie and other points remain to trace their progress through the North American wilderness, up the St. Lawrence to the Great Lakes, and down the Mississippi to the Gulf. But one is far more apt to remember that the "Soo" through its vast system of canals passes more freight each year than to recall its naming in deference to the Virgin Mary.

The English have been particularly generous in the conferring of women's names upon their cities and states. In far-away Australia the name of Victoria is honored in two states, Queensland and Victoria, while the most beautiful city in that country is Adelaide, named in memory of the queen of William IV. of England.

In Canada there is the Province of Alberta, named for Princess Louise Alberta, daughter of Queen Victoria and wife of the Marquis of Lorne, who was Governor-General of Canada in 1882. Queen Victoria has undoubtedly a larger number of geographical names to her credit than any other woman in history. The largest lake in Africa is the Victoria Nyanza, and Victoria Falls were named for the Queen, as was also the capital of British Columbia.

In a catalogue of geographical feminine names there should also be place given to the Aleutian Islands, marked on all old charts as Catharine Archipelago in honor of Catharine the Great of Russia—and the Jungfrau, meaning maiden or virgin, most beautiful of the Swiss Alps, should not be overlooked.

Japan and China have started negotiations on the question of the restoration or Shauntung to China.

FRENCH IN ONTARIO.

Prof. Leacock Offers Criticism of Schools.

"It requires no little hardihood in these days to lift up one's voice in criticism of the sinless province of Ontario," says Prof. Stephen Leacock, of McGill University, in commencing an article in the Canadian Bookman on "Un-Teaching French in Ontario." The article, he says, "has no other purpose than to discuss why it is that the people in Ontario cannot talk French. The essential aspect of the problem is this: In Ontario most educated people have tried to learn French. None of them have succeeded. There are in the province some 150 High Schools and collegiate institutes all busily engaged in teaching French. Not a single pupil in any of them learns a single word of it—in any real sense.

"The University of Toronto examined at its last matriculation some 1,000 students in what was called an examination in French and declared that they had passed the examination. In reality not a single one of these matriculants knew anything about French whatever—in the real sense. The matriculant could, that is to say, if one gave him time, mechanically translate with a pen and ink some written English words into some written French words. But this has but little connection with knowing French. On the contrary—it is a first-class way and method of making certain never to know it.

"No criticism is here offered against the efficiency and the industry of the many hundred people who teach French in the schools of Ontario. They do what they are compelled to do to meet the strange and disastrous kind of test applied to their pupils.

"And the most amazing thing about the situation is that if Anatole France and Monsieur Poincare were sent up to write an Ontario matriculation examination in French there is not the slightest chance that either of them would head the list—they would be beaten right and left by girls from Seaforth High School who never saw the red wings of the Moulin Rouge, and by boys from the Hamilton Collegiate Institute who wouldn't know enough real French to buy a cup of tea in the Cafe de la Paix. Indeed, it is doubtful if Anatole France and Poincare would pass at all. The whole examination being a test in English, they would probably be ploughed and have to be put under the care of an Ontario special teacher for six months.

"The point that I am endeavoring to make and reinforce with all the emphasis of which I am capable is this: The ability to translate into English in writing is not a knowledge of French. More than this, it is the very opposite of it. It involves, if exercised persistently and industriously, a complete inability ever to have a knowledge of French. The English gets in the way. The French words are forever prevented from acquiring a real meaning in connection with the objects and actions indicated because the mind has been trained always and forever and hopelessly to associate them with English words instead of with things. The process is fatal. And the whole system is not only worthless, but it is a fraud and an imposition practiced upon all those who learn French in the schools of the Province of Ontario.

"But of what use is criticism or protest?" concludes Prof. Leacock. "The immaculate Province of Ontario is so encased in the conviction of its own righteousness that if it fails to learn French, it will merely pass a law prohibiting the use of French by those who are fortunate enough to appreciate it."

JUST PART OF DAILY GRIND

Wounds and Death Mere Incidents to American Soldiers When Duty Sounds Its Call.

There were four of them, and their mission was to transport a machine gun to a wooded hilltop commanding the enemy lines. It was not very far to look at. But they had to crawl the entire distance under fire. All night long they crawled, except when they froze into stillness under the light of the star shells. Before they were halfway there, two of them were wounded and had to work their way back to the lines over the same perilous ground. The other two kept on. The danger increased as they approached the top of the hill. Both of them were bleeding from flesh wounds. Both were spent with the exertion of the long ascent dragging their gun. But their only thought was to do what they had come to do. Just at dawn they rounded the top of the hill. The first thing they saw were two German officers standing with binoculars sweeping the American lines. Quick as thought, without waiting to place their gun, one "Yank held it while the other fired. The officers went down, and the enemy guns woke up. The two boys made cover with their gun and answered the fire. Before the day had fairly broken, they had "cleaned out" the nest of enemy guns and had their own gun advantageously placed.

Aerial Postal Service.

Negotiations for aerial postal service have been completed between the British and Dutch governments, and Holland is very busy making final arrangements. The journey from Amsterdam to London would take but one and one-half or two hours. The Dutch military airmen, who have been in training since the beginning of the war, are to act as pilots and the ministry of war is lending full co-operation to the scheme. On the same lines an air service between Amsterdam and Groigen is also being arranged. Ground for large airdromes is being prepared near the Dutch metropolis.—Scientific American.

ACCEPT MEN WHO ARE NEXT IN LINE

WHEN MAKING CIVIL SERVICE APPOINTMENTS—QUALIFICATION A CONSIDERATION

Ald. Frank Whitehouse expressed his opinion to Council last night that this is an opportune time, when so many young men are preparing for civil service examinations, for recommending that the Civil Service Commission appoints to office those capable and qualified candidates next in line or positions. In the past, Ald. Whitehouse contended, political preference prevailed to a considerable extent. He moved in this direction.

Ald. Gordon was willing to second this resolution providing it was amended to allow of fair consideration of applicants who had seen war service.

This was acquiesced in, and the following motion carried:

Moved by Ald. White and Gordon, that this Council strongly recommend the Civil Service Commission to follow their rules and regulations and make appointments to office of properly qualified candidates next in line for consideration, including war service men qualified for and capable of accepting civil service positions.

COAL SITUATION IN BRITAIN SERIOUS

HOUSEHOLDERS DEPRIVED OF FUEL TO FOSTER HIGH-PRICED EXPORTATION

London, Jan. 13.—Distress over the shortage of household coal is rapidly increasing in London, and many country towns, where stocks virtually have become exhausted. The news of the arrival of a carload of coal at any depot brings a rush of the poor inhabitants from miles around, and queues of people desiring fuel form as in the critical days of 1917.

Hundreds of people daily seek coal, pushing perambulators or wheelbarrows or carrying sacks. Their ambition is to obtain sufficient for the day's needs.

The Dockers' Union is asking the members of the Transport Federation to refuse to load coal for shipment abroad, so that children at home may be kept warm and their mothers maintained in comfort.

"We have the power in our hands to say that the children shall not go to bed cold," says the Dockers' appeal.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

LONG AIRPLANE FLIGHT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Jan. 13.— Everything is in readiness for the proposed Rome-Tokio airplane flight and it should be completely under way by January 20. A delay beyond this date would carry the effort into the monsoon season.

CAPTAIN ADAMS WAS TAKEN BY SURPRISE

IMPROVEMENT SO REMARKABLE AFTER TAKING TANLAC HE HARDLY KNOWS HIMSELF.

"For one whole year before I took Tanlac there was hardly a day that I didn't have a severe headache and hardly a night that I got over an hour or two of sleep," said S. S. Adams, when he called at the Owl Drug Store in Vancouver, B.C. Mr. Adams served as Captain in the English Army, and at the time he made this statement he was registered at the St. Frances Hotel, 600 Cordova, West, Vancouver. Mr. Adams further stated that he would leave for the Orient in a few days to accept a managing position with an English Farm in Japan.

"For the past year," continued Mr. Adams, "I had gastritis in its very worst form, and gas would press against my heart and make it palpitate so bad that I would get dizzy and sometimes while I was eating I would get to feeling so dizzy that I would have to get up and leave the table without finishing. My appetite was almost completely gone and even the smell of food would sometimes turn my stomach, and I had to be extremely careful about what I ate so as not to suffer from gas. My nerves were shattered and the least little noise out of the ordinary would upset me completely.

"I tried medicine after medicine but nothing would do me any good, and I was about to give up trying to find anything else when my attention was called to a testimonial in the paper about Tanlac. I decided to try it, and I want to say right here that it took me by surprise and that it is simply remarkable how I have been restored to health. I have a splendid appetite and no matter what or how much I eat I never suffer from stomach trouble in any form. My nerves are quiet and steady, and I can sleep all night long. I am not troubled with headaches or dizzy spells any longer, and I feel so different in every way that I hardly know myself. I am leaving for the Orient in a few days and before I go I feel that it is my duty to make this statement and let the people know that Tanlac is a great thing and that it will do every bit of what they say it will."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

LLOYD GEORGE MAY SOON MAKE BOLD BID

BRITISH GENERAL ELECTION NEXT SPRING LONG WAY FROM IMPROBABLE

London, Jan. 13.—An article in The Observer, edited by J. L. Garvin, who is considered to be a shrewd critic of political tendencies of the moment, declares that a general election in the spring would not be held utterly impossible, for Lloyd George, says The Observer, would certainly not allow by-elections to continue to go against him without making a bold bid to gain another mandate.

The Westminster Gazette sees force in this argument, and is of the opinion that the present Government would accept another railway strike as an excuse for a general election.

The Gazette thinks that Sir Eric Geddes will refuse further concessions and will be able to show the Prime Minister a strong case for supporting such refusal.

SELECTING MEN FOR THE BISLEY TEAM

EACH PROVINCIAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION ENTITLED TO NAME CANDIDATE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—Arangements now are under way for the selection of the representative Canadian team to attend the National Rifle Association's competitions at Bisley this year. Each Provncial Rifle Association will be asked to select one or more men, but the final decision as to the composition of the team will be left to the Dominion Rifle Association. The annual meeting of the association will be held at Ottawa February 27. The association resumes the annual competition at Rockcliffe.

MINE OWNERS AGREE TO ACCEPT TERMS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 13.—Mine operators in the central competitive field today told the commission they would accept without a single reservation any award of the commission of miners. Representatives yesterday agreed to accept without reservation the findings of the commission appointed by the government to settle the dispute that caused the prolonged strike in the bituminous coal mines of the United States.

MR. KING OPPOSES CLASS GOVERNMENT

CLAIMS UNION ADMINISTRATION A FAILURE— WOULD APPEAL TO PEOPLE

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 13. — Hon. Mackenzie King, successor to Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Leader of the Liberal party, last night first brought his personal message to the people of Nova Scotia at a mass meeting at the Orpheus Theatre. The audience of over 2,000 which greeted him might have been composed of natives of Missouri, and was patiently waiting to be shown, greeting Mr. King with more or less mechanical applause. He had not spoken long, however, before he had carried away his audience.

A telegram from Premier Murray was read by Mr. J. Douglas, the Mayor, announcing the former's regret at his absence through illness, and cordially Mr. Douglas welcomed Mr. King to Nova Scotia.

Must Represent All Classes.

Mr. King spoke of the three great groups, the Farmers, Labor and the War Veterans, and said that beneath the aspirations of each was the great underlying principle of Liberalism. He claimed that a true Parliament must be like a mirror and represent all these groups; a united Canada. He expressed his complete opposition to monopoly of government by any one class.

He spoke much of unity of command in an endeavor to show wherein Union Government had utterly failed. He feared that it had been formed to win the war and nothing else. And now that the war was ended, it was seizing a pretext for holding on. Regarding Sir Robert Borden, he said that the agreement had been that the nominal Premier was to go as far away that no one would be able to communicate with him.

To See Reciprocity.

With regard to reciprocity, he prophesied that Mr. Fielding, to whom he paid a glowing tribute as a noble Canadian statesman, would live to see the victory for which he had fought.

He branded as false the rumor that neither of the old parties desired an election. The Liberals had only one attitude: they wanted a fair and equitable Franchise Act, then an appeal to the people.

NEW IDEA SUDDENLY SPRING UPON THE BUSINESS MEN OF PETERBOROUGH

Receive Circular Today Asking Them to Become Members of a New Organization.

A considerable stir was occasioned among the merchants on George street this morning regarding a circular which had been mailed to the merchants announcing a new business or protective association. The executive committee of the Mercantile Association were busy answering questions about the enterprise.

The whole object of the formation of the Mercantile Association is to concentrate within the merchants themselves every proposition that has direct relation to the promotion and protection of trade and to do it within their own association.

A special committee has been appointed by the Mercantile Asociation to investigate this new association, and no support should be given to it by the members of the Mercantile Association or Board of Trade without this investigation and a favorable recommendation from that body.

Copy of Circular.

The following is a copy of the circular referred to:

We want you to become a member of the Business Men's Protective Association, a national organization composed of the best business men in all lines, actively promoting and protecting the business interests of its members. The Business Men. As a member you are entitled to the following service:

Members are given the best legal advice and consultation upon all matters, either business, personal or private without charge, by our barristers and solicitors.

Our barristers and solicitors, retained by us, will defend all civil or criminal actions brought against you in the police courts and the justice of the peace courts, of this city, without cost to you.

Our barristers and solicitors, who practice in all courts, will give prompt and careful attention to your collections, of bad bills, bad cheques, notes and accounts, will adjust all claims, and turn over to you direct all money so collected.

We are not a collection agency, attention given to collections of members only.

The cost of one year's membership is less than 3 cents a day. There are no dues—no assessments. The low cost is made possible by our large membership.

If you are progressive business men, consider what this service gives you. This is a special offer, made but once each year, to secure new members. Join us now.

NO DECISION GIVEN OUT UNTIL TOMORROW

BRITISH GOVERNMENT WILL TAKE NEW ATTITUDE WITH REGARD TO STRIKE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 13.—The Government today decided not to make known to the railwaymen till tomorrow its decision with regard to the men's wage demands, developed in recent conferences after the men's representatives had rejected the original proposals of the Government. Sir Eric Geddes, minister of transport, saw a delegation of the men today and informed them of the postponement. Meanwhile the minister is submitting the question to the full Cabinet for its decision. He returned last night from Paris together with Sir Robert Horne, minister of labor, where conferences were held with Premier Lloyd George over the situation.

BALKAN STATES WILL FORM AN ALLIANCE

FOR DEFENSE AGAINST THE GERMAN NATION AND THE BOLSHEVIKI

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 13.—Representatives of the Balkan States, who are about to hold a conference at Helsingfors, are expected to discuss the question of a defensive alliance against Germany as well as against the Bolsheviki, according to a despatch to the State Department today from Riga. Finland will not participate in the discussion of an alliance against Germany, the despatch said, while the Esthonian delegates will insist that the other states conclude peace with the Bolsheviki.

STOP BUILDING DREADNOUGHTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 13.—The cabinet today ordered the stopping of the construction of vessels of the dreadnought class and will build several vessels of the Scout cruiser class instead.

GROUP INSURANCE FOR ALL CIVIL SERVANTS

MANITOBA GOVERNMENT TO TAKE NEW METHOD OF RAISING WAGES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Jan. 13.— The Provincial Government declines to grant the three hundred thousand dollar bonus asked by the Manitoba Civil Service Association. The Association, however, learns that a recommendation has been made to the Cabinet to adopt group insurance covering all employees.

CANADIANS ARE URGED TO HELP THE STARVING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 13.— "Canada is invited to join in giving relief to the starving millions of Central Europe, particularly Austria. The British Government invites Canada along two lines; first in view to immediate relief, Canada could send a cargo of wheat or flour; secondly, with a view to placing assistance on a more permanent basis, Canada, with the United States, can co-operate in a scheme of credits. Both requests are now under consideration by the Cabinet. No will co-operate with Great Britain to the fullest extent of her power. The Dominion Government appeals to Canadian people to assist with private subscriptions.

BOLSHEVIKI TAKE ODESSA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 13.—It is stated in despatches from Asia Minor that Odessa has already been evacuated by Gen. Denekine's army in the face of the Bolsheviki, who have occupied the city. Thousands of inhabitants have fled.

RETAIL MERCHANTS PROTEST.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The Dominion Board of Retail Merchants' Association met here today to present to the Government resolutions arising out of the restrictions recently made by the Dominion Board of Commerce.

PLACES WHERE CROP WAS PARTIAL OR WHOLE FAILURE WILL BE ATTENDED TO.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Consideration is being given by the Dominion Trades Commissioner to the problem of supplying seed oats to farmers in districts where that crop was last season a partial or total failure. Possibly 400,000 bushels of seed oats may be required in Ontario and Quebec, and a much larger quantity in Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan. Alberta and Saskatchewan requirements will be given first consideration from the seed oats produced in these Provinces, while the shortage in Prince Edward Island and Eastern Ontario and Quebec it is believed may quite easily be met from Nova Scotia.

Paris restaurants and houses of entertainment are ordered again to observe the 11.30 p.m. closing regulation.

FAILURE NOT FROM HARD LUCK—

Many an unsuccessful man charges his failure to hard luck, when his eyesight is mostly to blame. Poor eyesight has made him incompetent for the better positions, and he never realized it. Probably his employer could not understand his inability to improve. If you are a young man and going slower than you think you should, let Dr. Fowler examine your eyes and see if the difficulty lies there.

EXTRA GOOD BUSINESS.

Receives Orders for "Wet Goods" and Fails to Deliver.

Sarnia, Jan. 12.—Hundreds of citizens in Lambton county are seeking a young man from Toledo, O., who, it is alleged, in this county alone, in one night has made over $5000 in taking whiskey orders via the mail order route and then failed to deliver the "wet goods." According to the authorities this man's game found him doing a thriving business over the whole of Western Ontario.

KIDNEYS NEVER CAUSE BACKACHE

Rub pain, soreness and stiffness right out with old "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Kidneys cause backache? No! They have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain. Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment." Rub it right on the ache or tender spot, and instantly the pain, soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Liniment" from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache, sciatica or lumbago pain. "St. Jacobs Liniment" stops any pain at once. It is harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

It's the only application to rub on a weak, lame or painful back, or for lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, sprains or a strain.

IS INFLUENZA BACK?

Indications that the influenza, which ravaged Toronto a year ago last fall, may be back, is shown in the death of William Farr, aged 11, of 3 Bellwoods place, who died in the Hospital for Sick Children Saturday. The boy started with influenza, but succumbed to broncho-pneumonia.

Fire destroyed the Richmond Paper Company's warehouses at Halifax, with a loss of $175,000.

LARGEST IN DOMINION.

Windsor's $500,000 Public School Completed This Fall.

Windsor, Jan. 12. — Excavation work for Windsor's $50,000 Public school, to be built at Langlois avenue and Giles boulevard, will be completed by fall. The school will be the largest in the Dominion and will have 21 classrooms. In addition there will be an auditorium and gymnasium, new features in school construction here.

TO DEMAND KAISER SOON

Allied Premiers in Complete Agreement, Says Paris Matin.

Paris, Jan. 13.—Surrender of the former German Emperor will be requested of Holland in the near future, Le Matin says. On this point the allied Premiers are in complete agreement, the newspaper adds.

MONTREAL LABOR VEXED

Hints of a General Strike in Contemplation Appear.

Montreal, Jan. 13.—Indications of a tense feeling in labor circles as a result of the discharge of the employees of the civic waterworks plant who struck for higher wages were manifested at a meetig of the Trades and Labor Council. An appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the situation is suggested, and a resolution places favors of the consideration of a complete cessation of work of all the organized labor in Montreal.

POINCARE CHOSEN

Though Not a Candidate For Senatorship, He was Elected.

Paris, Jan. 13.— President Poincare has written a letter to the electors of the Department of the Meuse accepting the senatorship to which he was elected by that department yesterday. The President was not a candidate, but received a few votes on the first ballot and was chosen almost unanimously on the second ballot.

MAYOR McINTYRE

ciple was as yet in an experimental stage.

On motion of Ald. Hamilton and Phelan this matter went to the Board of Works.

G.T.R. Surprised.

Superintendent Davidson of the G. T. R. in a letter, expressed surprise at a resolution of Council recommending a union station. His company, he wrote, had no intention of enlarging their station in Peterborough, as it was able to take care of all traffic for some years to come. Received.

Police Commissioners.

Thomas Tooms, M. L. A., notified Council that he would do all in his power to secure legislation that members of the Police Commission be elected by popular vote.

In this connection other City Councils in Ontario were communicated with and asked to co-operate with Peterborough in seeking such legislation. The following replies were to hand:

From Hamilton, suggesting an amendment providing for the election of one member only by vote of the people. Kitchener agreed with Peterborough's stand.

Badly Injured.

H. Blain, 537 Sherbrooke street, complained by letter that on December 6th, while walking up Aylmer st. east side, north of McDonnel street, he fell on the sidewalk, a section of which at this point was raised above the level. As a result of his fall he broke two ribs, lost his job, which netted him $4 a day, and has to seek other employment. Blain stated that he could not see the defected sidewalk, as it was snowing at the time and the snow blowing in his face He asked to be reimbursed for his loss of time and money. This went to the Legal Court.

Member Library Board.

A by-law re-appointing Mr. E.H. D. Hall, member of the Library Board, passed its several readings.

Mr. Hall's re-appointment was on motion of Ald. Turner and Hamilton

Ald. Jones' and Copping's amendment that the appointment go to Mr. Frank H. Dawson was lost on the following division with Ald. Phelan in the chair."

Ceas— Ald. Crowe, Morrison, Jones Copping, Gainey.

Nays—Mayor McIntyre, Turner, Hamilton, Whitehouse, Gordon.

This tied the vote and Ald. Phelan voted for Mr. E. H. D. Hall.

The Board of Health.

Council made a pretty clean sweep of the Board of Health in appointing ex-mayor Duncan, James Lynch and David Spence.

Ald. Crowe in moving these appointments, contended that honors should pass around and thus assure new blood on this board annually. He was seconded by Ald. Morrison.

Charity Executive

Sheriff Hall was reappointed a member of the trust for distribution of charitable funds, under the will of the late Elmira Grover Foley.

Union Station.

Mr. H. J. Humphries of the C. P. R. wrote that the engineers of this railway are going into the question of a union station for this city.

A Loss of Business

Messrs. Gordon & O'Brien notified Council thaht in consequence of Mr. Gordon's election they have transferred the following cases of litigation to Mr. J. F. Strickland: O'Brien vs City, Dainton vs. City, Hiscox vs City.

Would Use Bathing House

Ald. Copping said it had been represented to him by many citizens that the bathing house at the foot of Lake street might be used by skaters on Little Lake where there is a good open air rink.

Ald. Gordon replied that were that privilege conceded the young folk would seriously cut up the soft pine flooring with their skates, and next summer the city fould be faced with damages for injuries to bare feet from splinters.

This proposition was dropped.

Who Were Present

There were in attendance Mayor A. A. McIntyre, Alderman Morrison, Crowe, Gordon, Hamilton, Jones, Turner, Whitehouse, Copping, Phelan, Gainey.

Nathan Katsman, a Niagara Falls shoemaker, in whose house a large still was found, is held by the police on $1,000 bail.

ALD. CROWE QUESTIONS PRICE OF BREAD HERE

COUNCIL WILL TAKE UP RECENT INCREASE WITH COMMERCE BOARD

Ald. Crowe questions the need for a raise of four cents per large loaf in Peterborough in consequence of the advance in price of flour. He quoted the Toronto Globe to Council last night as declaring that it will be several months before Toronto bakers generally will increase the price of their bread.

Ald. Hamilton said the only increase in the price of flour was for that from Manitoba hard wheat, and consequently Ontario farmers are not affected.

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Crowe, the Board of Commerce will be asked if the recent increase in price of bread in Peterborough is warranted by an increase in flour or other costs.

Ald. Morrison wondered how U. F. O. members could get their coal $3 cheaper than Peterborough citizens generally.

Ald. Hamilton replied that they buy wholesale for their own consumption and the U.F.O. organization does not deliver.

The Grand presented an unusually attractive picture bill last night, when Peggy Hyland appeared in the principal role of the feature picture. This dainty little actress has been seen in several film stories at the local houses, but never was she seen to better advantage than in George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel, "Cowardice Court." Miss Hyland has a manner particularly her own which never fails to reach her audiences, and in last night's picture she was splendid. A strong supporting company helps considerably in making "Cowardice Court" the film success which it is.

A most amusing comedy film, "Roaring Lions on the Midnight Express,' produces many laughs, and a few thrills as well. It is not every day that one sees real lions stalking through a Pullman car and making things lively for the passengers.

An illustrated weekly and a Mutt and Jeff cartoon complete a most interesting program, which will be repeated tonight.

ALLENS OPEN ANOTHER THEATRE IN TORONTO

OWNER OF PETERBORO' PLAYHOUSE ADD ANOTHER TO THEIR STRING

Seventh of the Allen Theatres in the city of Toronto opened doors last evening when Allen's St. Clair made its first appeal for photoplay patronage. Messrs. Jule and Jay J. Allen, who own the Allen Theatre in Peterborough, announce that in many ways this theatre is the handsomest that they have opened in Toronto and the advance inquiries they have received indicate that the amusement place will receive a warm welcome from the people of the St. Clair section generally and Toronto folk as a whole.

The Allens now have in operation in Toronto the Allen on Richmond street, the Beach, Beaver, Bloed, Danforth and Royal. When these houses are finished there will be an Allen Theatre appealing to every portion of the city.

The St. Clair is located at the corner of St. Clair and Westmount, just one block east of Dufferin. The building, which occupies a plot 82 feet by 132, and will seat approximately 1,800 people. About 500 of these are cared for in the balcony and the remainder on the spacious lower floor. There are neither box seats nor lodges in the new house.

Adam style architecture has been followed in the front of the house, the lines being simple and dignified yet highly attractive. The construction itself is of brick, stone and steel and, of course, entirely fireproof. In front of the house there is a huge electric sign attracting attention for blocks and immediately under this a large marquee which extends to the street line, affording protection in inclement weather.

A feature of the new house that will be appreciated is that the two box offices are located inside of the lobby where one is not subject to the cold while purchasing tickets or waiting for friends. This lobby is finished in marble, a material which is used for all the stairways and liberally throughout the theatre. From this one enters the spacious foyer and there one finds an attractive convenience in a rendezvous which is separated from the remainder of the house by a boxwood hedge. This contains a fireplace and easy chairs where patrons may wait for their friends. Ladies' retiring rooms and gentlemen's smoking rooms are to the left.

"LASCA" AT EMPIRE THURSDAY NEXT

A PICTURE STORY OF REAL LOVE THAT ARRESTS AND CHARMS

"Was that thunder? I grasped the cord
Of my swift mustang without a word.
I sprang to the saddle and she clung behind.
Away! on a hot chase down the wind!
But never was fox hunt half so hard,
And never was steed so little spared.
For we rode tor our lives. You shall hear how we fared
In Texas, down by the Rio Grande."

This is one of the stanzas from "Lasca," the famous poem by Frank Desprez, which has at last been transcribed to the screen through an adaptation by Percy Heath, and produced by Universal.

"Lasca" will be shown at the Empire Theatre on Thursday. If half the people who know the poem by heart will attend the show there will not be room enough in the theatre. "Lasca" is a poem which we recited in the school room, which stirred our youthful imagination as no other epic of the great southwest had done. We thrilled to the wild ride of Lasca and her lover and our hearts stopped beating when the onrushing herd of cattle, driven in their wild stampede by the fierce Texas norther, overtook the gallant pair.

The pictured story shows the love of Anthony Moreland for the wild girl from below the Rio Grande; how his fashionable friends from the east came to visit the wealthy young ranchman, and how little Lasca's heart was stirred by jealousy. And then her opportunity to make the sacrifice for the man she loved.

Norma Dawn was selected to film "Lasca," with Edith Roberts in the title role; Frank Mayo, as her lover, Arthur Jasmine as her brother, Veola Harty as the girl from the North, and Lloyd Whitlock in the heavy role. The big scene in the play is the mad stampede of the cattle.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL IS BROUGHT TO TIME

MUST ACCEPT CANADIAN MONEY ON ITS TRAINS IN CANADA

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—After receiving complaints from the Federated Boards of Trade of Ontario that the Michigan Central Railway has been refusing Canadian money on its sleeping and dining cars in Western Ontario, Hon. F. B. Carvell, Chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, ordered the company by telegraph to accept Canadian money at par.

He asked as well for an immediate reply by telegraph as to what the company proposed to do.

To this energetic action the company has replied that it was not intended that the order should apply to the portions of the company's line in Canada, and that in future Canadian currency will be accepted at par.

IS CHARGED WITH COUNTERFEITING.

Ottawa Moulder Alleged To Have Made Bogus Quarters.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—Alfred Blake, a moulder, appeared in police court this morning on a charge of counterfeiting silver quarters, and was remanded pending a thorough investigation, which may have sensational results. A large amount of counterfeit silver has been in circulation in Canada recently.

Common Forgery Helped To Launch the Great War Count Berchtold's Guilt

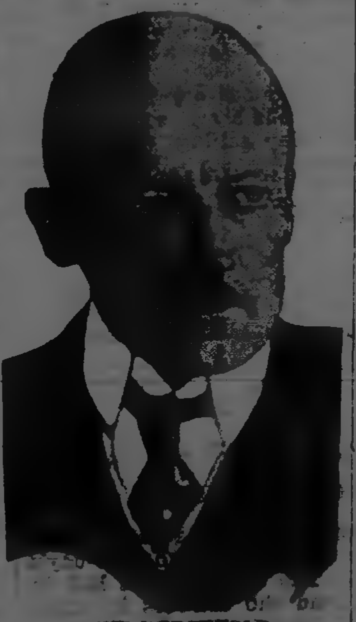
WAS the world war precipitated by a common forgery? If the testimony of the Red Book recently issued by the Government of the German-Austrian Republic can be accepted as the truth, and the whole truth, it was.

This Red Book, entitled "The Vienna Cabinet and the Origin of the World War," publishes the state papers on file in the Austrian state archives—first drafts, notes, memoranda, reports, despatches—covering the events between the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand on June 28, 1914, and the declaration of war by Germany on Russia on August 1 of the same year.

The outstanding document of the collection is the draft of the Austro-Hungarian note declaring war on Serbia, and submitted for approval to the old Emperor Francis Joseph by his Foreign Minister, Count Leopold Berchtold.

This draft was accompanied by an explanatory note, in which Count Berchtold told the Emperor that he thought an attempt by the Triple Entente at a peace settlemen of the conflict to be still possible. He then proceeded:

"According to a report of the Fourth Army Corps command, Serbian troops, aboard Danube steamers, yesterday opened fire on our troops at Temes-Kubin. The fire was returned and a lively engagement ensued. Hostilities, therefore, have begun in fact, and it appears all the more imperative to secure to the army that freedom of movement which, according to international law, it possesses only from the moment the state of war has actually set in."



COUNT BERCHTOLD.

The memorandum was signed: "With the deepest respect, Berchtold."

The draft of the declaration of war, to which the above memorandum was attached, runs as follows:

"The royal Serbian Government not having replied in a satisfactory manner to the note submitted to it by the Austro-Hungarian Minister at Belgrade on July 23, 1914, the imperial and royal Government finds it necessary to provide for itself the safeguards of its rights and interests and to take recourse for this end to the force of arms, and this so much the more as the Serbian troops have already attacked near Temes-Kubin a detachment of the imperial and royal army. Austria-Hungary thus considers itself from this moment as being in a state of war with Serbia.

"The Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs,

"Count Berchtold."

He got what he wanted. On the same day Francis Joseph, then sojourning at his favorite resort, Ischl, appended the following lines to Count Berchtold's memorandum:

"I approve of the attached draft of a despatch to the Serbian Foreign Office, containing the declaration of war, and issue to you the requested authorization.

"Francis Joseph."

Now, the point about the above note, submitted for approval to and approved by the old emperor, is that it was never sent off to the Serbian Government.

That is, it was never sent in full. The final draft, as despatched to Belgrade by wire, via Czernowitz and Bucharest (for the staff of the Austro-Hungarian Legation had left Belgrade three days before), contained no mention whatever of the attack by Serbian troops at Temes-Kubin. The passage "and this so much the more as the Serbian troops have already attacked near Temes-Kubin a detachment of the imperial and royal army" was missing.

Rather mysterious, isn't it?

Not at all. The passage was missing because Count Berchtold, after obtaining Francis Joseph's O.K. for the original draft, simply took a pencil and struck out the lines telling about the Temes-Kubin fighting. He struck it out for the perfectly good reason that the Temes-Kubin fighting never occurred.

In other words, Count Berchtold induced his eighty-four-year-old sovereign to sign the declaration of war by the lie that hostilities had already set in. But it must be admitted that he did so "with the deepest respect," as his signature testifies.

It is announced in Sweden that M. Karlfeldt, the Swedish poet, refused to accept the Nobel prize for literature.

MANY NOTABLE GUESTS

LITERARY PEOPLE ARE PAYING VISITS TO CANADA.

Other Men Who Have Won Fame in Politics, War and by Arts of Darling Like Ben Tillett, Col. Lynch and Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, Have Been Making Tours of the Dominion and Lecturing on Their Experiences.

CANADA during this winter will not lack lectures. Already the invasion has begun and it will continue until the robins nest again. Famous men and women writers, dramatists, scientists and what not are here or coming here, each with a mission, a tale to tell or a moral to impart.

Maurice Maeterlinck, the mystic poet of devastated Belgium, is coming to attend the premiere of his opera, "The Bluebird," under the auspices of the Metropolitan Opera House, for the benefit of the devastated regions of Belgium and France. Mr. Maeterlinck will lecture throughout the continent, his subject to be "The Unknown Shore."

Siegfried Sassoon is among the many brilliant poets whose stars have risen during the last five years, until now he has achieved an enviable reputation as one of England's newest poets. Previous to the war Mr. Sassoon was not interested in world affairs, but after several years' experiences in the front lines he soon felt vastly different about these problems, and the change in his viewpoint became evident in his two volumes, published since 1918. "The Old Huntsman" and "Counter-Attack" and other poems. He visits Canada on a lecture tour in February.

Lieut. Coningsby Dawson won his fame with "The Garden Without Walls," which placed him in the front rank of modern fiction writers. At the outbreak of the war he obtained a commission in the Canadian Field Artillery, and throughout the war served in France except when home recovering from wounds. He returns to this country from Germany, which country he has revisited, and in his lecture on "Re-making the World" he will give the first thrilling, vibrant account of the whole torn era through which we have passed. His war books, "Out to Win," "The Glory of the Trenches," and "Carry On," have won for him a new place in literature.

Hugh Walpole is fast making for himself an abiding place among the British novelists of the twentieth century. His latest novel, "The Secret City," is one of the best books of the year and a subject of conversation among men of letters. Among the best works which be has produced are "Maradick at Forty," "Fortitude," "Mr. Perrin and Mr. Traill," "The Prelude to Adventure," "The Duchess of Wrexe," "The Green Mirror," "The Dark Forest" and "The Secret City." He will reach Canada shortly.

St. John Ervine has written many plays for the Irish Players. His plays have been ranked with those of Synge, Yeats and Lady Gregory. His recent work, "Changing Winds," proves him to be a novelist as well as dramatist. After service in the war, in which he was badly wounded, he comes soon to speak on literary topics and the Irish question, his subjects to include "My Own Works," "Solving the Irish Problem" and "Impressions of My Elders."

Ben Tillett, M.P., as a Labor member of the British Parliament and secretary of Dock Workers' Union, is one of England's great labor leaders, attacking existing conditions where they needed correction and standing by the Government in its time of need. Mr. Tillett came to Canada to attend the British Trades' Union Conference, and delivered several addresses here. He is a personal friend of Samuel Gompers.

Vicente Blasco Ibanez is well known as the author of the most brilliant novel of the war, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." His visit here will be the first trip which this distinguished Spanish novelist has made to Canada. He will make a lecture tour, his subjects being "The Spirit of the Four Horsemen" and "How I Write My Novels." Some of his most brilliant works are "Mare Nostrum," "Blood and Sand" and "The Shadow of the Cathedral."

Lord Dunsany, who has established for himself a definite place in the world of drama, will come with Lady Dunsany for a two months' lecture tour. To the reading world Dunsany is the third of that trilogy of dramatists of the Irish Renaissance, the other two being W. B. Yeats and J. M. Synge. Lord Dunsany is one of the oldest titles in Ireland and in Great Britain, being the eighteenth holder of the baronetcy, created in 1439.

Col. Arthur Lynch, one of the most versatile men in England, came here last October, to acquaint us with the intricacies of the Irish problem. He studied medicine in various hospitals in Europe and then became an electrical engineer. He was a colonel in the Boer army and in 1918 was made a colonel in the British army. He was active in recruiting work in Ireland and is well equipped to speak on "The Irish Question."

William Butler Yeats, a leader in the Irish literary revival, has contributed much to Irish literature. Mr. Yeats already has made one tour, and on this second visit here in February he will travel as far as the Pacific coast.

Lieut. Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, who made the transatlantic flight with Alcock, has already been in Canada with Lady Brown, whom he married soon after his successful flight. Lieut. Brown is telling his audiences of his epoch-making flight, which won for the two young airmen the $50,000 prize offered by the London Daily Mail.

The repatriation of sick or seriously wounded Turkish and Bulgarian war prisoners will commence in the near future.

LOOKS TO SIBERIA.

Other Great Gold Fields of World Have Passed On.

The golden sands of the Pactolus, in Asia Minor, have made that little river famous for all time. From that source Croesus, King of Lydia, is said to have obtained much of his wealth.

But the stream was worked until it became barren—just as always happens wherever gravels rich in the yellow metal was found. The alluvial placers of California had their day, and, more recently, those of the Klondike likewise — though in the latter district dredges, washing great quantities of material, still are producing much gold, while apparatus of the same kind in California literally devours the pebbly banks of streams, contributing 40 per cent. of the present gold output of that state.

Modern methods—particularly the "cyanide process," which makes possible the cheap extraction of gold from low-grade ores—have enormously increased the world's annual production of one of progressive exhaustion, and it seems manifest that at no very distant day there will remain no great deposits of the metal to be discovered.

Even the wonderful mines of the Witwatersand, in the Transvaal, which now contribute two-fifths of the world's total output of gold, have not an indefinite "life" before them. It is reckoned that their resources will be exhausted within fifty years.

With this prospect in view, eyes are being turned in the direction of northern Siberia, where in streams tributary to the Lena river, which empties into the Arctic Ocean), there are extraordinarily rich gold-bearing gravels—the richest, indeed, ever known. One small stream, Bodaibo Creek, has yielded nearly two hundred million dollars.

It is predicted that the gold output of that region will eventually equal or perhaps exceed the present production of the Transvaal. But up to now the mining methods adopted have been so primitive as to suggest the prehistoric, and not even a beginning has been made in attacking the gold-bearing rocks.

The problem is one that will engage the attention of experienced gold mining engineers from America, South Africa and Australia, as soon as political conditions in Russia render practicable the development of this great source of future wealth.

Accurate Shooting.

In France a German plane, swooping around a farmhouse, was startled and soon driven away by very accurate rifle fire. At least the firing was accurate enough to convince Fritz that he was in no safe neighborhood.

But he didn't know that the rifle was being handled by a lieutenant colonel in the American army, who, enraged at the audacity of the hostile birdman, grabbed the weapon and soon had the "supremacy of the air" in that particular locality well under control.

STORY OF MILO, MIGHTY WRESTLER

WAS NEVER DEFEATED IN FORTY YEARS THAT HE WAS WORLD'S CHAMPION

Jim Londos, who defeated Demetral in one of the best wrestling bouts ever seen in New York, is now recognized as the champion of Greece. Londos is a mighty good little man—he weighs only 180 pounds—and will be matched with Stecher or Craddock in the immediate future.

The Greeks were the first to develop the art of wrestling, which probably is as old as mankind. The ancients even went as far as to breed wrestlers. Naturally many great men were produced during the era of the Olympiads.

The greatest of these was Milo, of Crotone, the greatest wrestler that ever lived.

Milo would be a match for the Stechers, Zbyszkos, and the Gotches and Hackenschmidts. Milo was the hero of all the Olympiads—and they lasted almost continuously for six hundred years! He ruled all of his life—unbeaten for 40 years against the strongest adversaries of his time.

Old boy Milo emerged victor from the tournaments of six Olympiads, seven Pythian games, 10 Isthmians, and nine Neamian games. When you note that the Olympic games were held every four years, you see that Milo was invincible over a period of 25 years in that particular set of games alone—the greatest event in the life of the Hellenic peoples.

Milo was not only the greatest athlete of antiquity, but he was a war hero as well. He was a general of the victorious Greeks against the Sybarites and won the great battle of Crathis, 511 B. C.

Many tales are handed down concerning Milo's ability and tremendous strength.

He once carried a four-year-old bull around the arena before the assembly, and then dispatched it with a blow of his fist—and, as the old boy had some appetite, ate the whole of it before nightfall.

He often carried enormous stones aloft on his shoulders—such heavy rocks that no one else could even budge them.

The strength and firmness of his hands were so great that he could hold a pomegranate in his hand and no one could either succeed in opening the hand which held it, or in injuring the fruit within by squeezing it.

Binding his forehead with a cord he was able, by holding his breath and pressing his lips together, to break the cord in two through force of the swollen veins on his head.

He could stand on an oiled disc in such a firm and steady manner that no one could push him from it.

When a herd of cattle stampeded he merely reached out and grasped the most savage bull by the hind left hoof and held so fast that the crazed animal only succeeded in escaping by leaving the hoof behind in our hero's hand.

He broke hundreds of arms, legs, and fingers of his opponents, by the way.

On one occasion, when he was attending the lectures of Pythagoras, to whom he was a follower, the building began to fall; but what did Milo do but reach up and hold the pillars of the doorway in place until Pythagoras and his people escaped.

We can tell you some more—history is full of him if the foregoing does not convince you.

However, Milo met his death by the folly of his own strength.

He was walking in the woods one day, when he came upon a tree that some woodmen had attempted to split with wedges. Not realising that old age had sapped his strength to a degree, Milo attempted to pry the tree asunder with his bare hands, when his mighty arm failed him and both hands were caught fast. Wolves came with the night and devoured him.

Milo the Mighty was recreated in marble by the genius of Phidias and the statue placed in the Altis of Olympia—revered by ages.

M. AND O. LEAGUE OPENS MAY 11

IN SPITE OF RUMORS, LEAGUE WILL REMAIN INTACT THIS SEASON

London, Ont., Jan. 13.— The Michigan-Ontario Baseball League will remain intact for 1920 as it was constituted last year.

The annual meeting disposed of a big budget of business. The 1919 campaign was cleaned up and the pennant was awarded to the Saginaw champions. Honorary President G. H. Maines, of Flint, was elected president for 1920, while Secretary-Treasurer Fred Wilson, of Toronto, is considering the acceptance of office for another year. President J. S. Jackson of Detroit, declined to stand for re-election, owing to ill-health, though he presided at the annual meeting. He was elected honorary president.

The silver trophy for the best opening day attendance was awarded to the Kitchener Club, while the Miss O'Neill was awarded to Harry Shriver of the Saginaw club as leading pitcher. Miss O'Neill is a movie star of Los Angeles, Cal.

While the past season was a success in part, it was thought that the coming season, with the league an established fact, and business in both countries readjusted, there is no reason why the league should not be a huge success.

To Open About May 11

It was decided that the season open in the four Ontario cities on or about May 11. The daily guarantee for visiting clubs, was raised and the individual club's salary limit was increased $5550 per month. The fact that there is little chance of railway fares being reduced during the next season undobtedly will mean a slight increase in admission prices throughout the circuit.

The salary for umpires was deemed necessary in order to secure competent officials. Each club will post a cash bond of $500 to guarantee its finishing the season, to be used as an emergency fund should such occasion arise as one of the clubs forfeiting its franchise. This money is to be posted not later than April 15 with President Maines. Strict adherence to the salary limit will be enforced and any violation means the forfeiture of the club's franchise.

FRANK TRUESDALE IS DECLARED FREE AGENT

DOES NOT SUCCEED IN HIS CLAIM FOR TWO MONTHS' SALARY

Cincinnati, Jan. 13.— The National Baseball Commission disallowed the salary claim of Player Charles Pick against the Chicago National League Club for $660. Pick contended that that sum was due him as additional salary last season by reason of a verbal agreement he stated he had made with Manager Mitchell.

Player Frank Truesdale was declared a free agent, but his claim for two months' salary for the season of 1918 from the Boston Americans was disallowed.

Pitcher Wheeler Fuller was declared to be a free agent when he negotiated his services with Washington Americans during the season of 1919. Secretary Farrell of the National Association claimed Fuller was the property of the Waterbury Club, and requested the Commission to award him to that club.

Thomas McGeachie, a Welland lumberman is dead, following a paralytic seizure in the street.

W. J. Black, a nineteen-year old veteran was arrested at Gananoque charged with passing bogus checks.

Ingersoll ratepayers have endorsed a by-law for the construction of a 16-roomed school at a cost of $120,000.

CRESCENTS TAKE THREE FROM SEPARATORS

GOOD BOWLING SCORES IN DE LAVAL LEAGUE

In a De Laval League fixture Saturday night at the Water street alleys, the Crescents took all three games from the Separators.

Capt. Murray's team rolled up the good total of 2415. Barrette, for the Separators, had high single with 237, also high 3 games with 563. Garrow, Weese, H. Allen and Murray all went over the 500 mark.

The scores are as follows:

U. S. SOLDIERS FAVOR FRENCH CHAMPION

CLAIM DEMPSEY SKULKED TO AVOID DRAFT IN RECENT WAR

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 13. — Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, was charged with having "apparently skulked in hiding from the draft board" during the late war, and Georges Carpentier, his French rival for championship honors, was made a life honorary member of the post, at a meeting of the El Paso Post of the American Legion. The local post also appropriated $25, to be wagered on Carpentier in his coming fight with Dempsey.

Rock Dust to Save Lives.

Perhaps the oddest, yet one of the most effective means of preventing—or, at all events, minimizing—disasters in coal mines is the use of rock dust, says an exchange.

A lot of it is packed on boards hung by chains from the roofs of mine tunnels. Obviously in case of an explosion the boards will swing and the dust will be thrown off.

Following an explosion a roaring flame let us say is coming through the tunnel. The air is filled with coal dust or possibly with inflammable gas) to feed it. But it meets a curtain of non-inflammable rock dust (discharged from the board shelves) and is thereby stopped. Rock dust will not burn under any provocation. Suspended thickly in the air, it acts like an asbestos curtain. The flames cannot get through it.

Germany's Year of Peace.

Results of the first year of the revolution in Germany are summarized by the Socialist Monthly as comprising a decline in the value of the mark, increase in the cost of living, decreased production of coal and steadily mounting public debts. The paper casts a balance for the year in a bitter and sarcastic vein.

It points out that the mark has declined in value within the year from 72 Swiss francs to 20.25 francs. It gives a long list of articles of food showing increases ranging up to 100 per cent. for butter, and nearly 200 per cent. for eggs. The paper states that the cost of transportation has increased.

The production of coal is asserted to have declined from 190,000,000 tons a year before the war to 70,000,000 tons in the first year of the revolution. This is notwithstanding an increase in the number of persons employed in the mining industry exclusive of war prisoners who now have been sent back to France and Belgium.

Debts and taxes are declared to be steadily growing into an unbearable burden for the taxpayers. The paper asserts that Germany's debts will aggregate on April 1, 1920, 212,000,000,000 marks, exclusive of debt to the Entente. The deficit of the Prussian railroads for the year of the revolution is declared to total at least 3,963,000,000 marks.

In conclusion the paper warns the people of Germany that they must pay for those "achievements" of the revolution."

DIED HERO'S DEATH

American's Tribute to Soldier of the Legion.

Victor Pronounced Typical Member of That Wonderful Body of Men Which Has Made French Military History Glorious.

I have just seen a legionnaire. He happened to be of my company, the Seventh. "Do you know that Victor is dead?" he asked. It seemed to me almost impossible. The legion without Victor! I asked how he had died. "He was killed, but he gave them ——," was the answer. Of course be did; that was his habit. "I am one of the five who are left," continued my informant.

In April we were 120 strong. There may be more now, but they must be recruits. Victor a short time ago captured ten Germans and received the military medal. Now he is dead, at his post, writes Algernon Sartoris in Chicago Daily News.

Sergeant Bouligny, an American legionnaire, has a snapshot of Victor. Underneath is written: "A typical legionnaire." Victor was a Breton, born in Morlaix. He was tattooed all over. There was nothing in his military notebook save records of his numerous campaigns. He was a soldier, pure and simple. As Bouligny says, he was typical of all that was best in the legion—courage, honesty, bravery. His history was written in his heart. He wore the medals of Morocco, Tonkin, the war cross with several palms and finally the military medal—a glorious record. Victor acted always as a stimulant; he was always gay and always kind.

On one of our long marches he saw that I was suffering. He came to me and offered to carry my haversack in addition to his own. I declined his offer, but his courage and kindness went to my heart, and in spite of sore feet I arrived in Mount Meton with my company, thanks to Victor.

Among the soldiers Victor's name was proverbial for gallantry. On the banks of the fetid rivers of Annam, on the burning sands of Morocco, Victor was there. In the mud and mire of the trenches of France he was also there. Always kind, always thoughtful of others! Simple and unaffected, be related deeds of valor that would move a stone; deeds that would enrich the already glorious military history of France.

I asked his comrade bow many Boches Victor got. He answered: "When I last saw him he was whirling his gun about his head. There were about a dozen dead Boches around him. I think an officer killed him with a revolver; I couldn't swear to it, but I think so."

When I last saw Victor in Paris a little while ago I asked him how he had won his military medal. "In a fit of bravery," he answered. Victor was always having those fits of bravery; they are common in the legion.

Now he is dead on some lonely battlefield, but his is the death that he would have asked. In the words of Gen. de Castelnau: "It is the best possible death," the only possible death for such as he.

Wrong Kind of Animal.

This is the latest Paris boulevard story.

Hindenburg died, and since he was a marshal he went to heaven. But the German functionary at the door said to him:

"Marshal, you must enter on a horse."

Hindenburg descended to hunt for a horse and encountered the German crown prince.

"So you're dead, too?" he said.

"Yes," responded the kaiser's son. "I ate too much Holland cheese. But show me the door to heaven, where, naturally, I go."

Hindenburg took the crown prince by the arm and they got in line behind the other heaven-bound pilgrims. The line moved up and finally they reached the door where the German functionary again blocked Hindenburg.

"Marshal," he said, "I told you to get a horse, not an ass."

Preparedness.

"By the way, Mary, did you put my cooking outfit in that basket? I'll want to fry some fish for lunch?"

"Yes, dear, and you'll find a tin of sardines in there, too."—Life.

Says Uncle Eben.

"Dat kaiser man," said Uncle Eben, "would have been tried an' sentenced long ago for shootin' craps or flourishin' a razor."

EUGENIE STILL LIVES.

Wife of Napoleon III. walks in the Tuileries Gardens.

A very old woman walking in the Tuileries Gardens stoops to pick an autumn flower from a fading clump. The passersby look at her again. She is even older than they had thought her; certainly over eighty, possibly ninety; the eyes are sad, as if they had seen too many tragic decades. It is against the law to pick flowers in the gardens of the Tuileries, yet the police look on calmly and say nothing. She passed with her one maid, and a bystander asks who she may be. "The ex-Empress Eugenie," answers the policeman, "wife of Napoleon III. Ninety-three if she's a day. Comes here once in a while."

Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III., to whom Metz meant approaching disaster and Sedan the end of the world; Napoleon III., whose mother taught him in banishment that he must re-establish the Bonapartes as a dynasty, who became President and finally Emperor of France by one of the strangest shifts of history, and who lost his crown by precipitating the war that created modern Germany and started the controversy over Alsace and Lorraine; Bismarck and King William of Prussia, organizers of the German empire and arch-enemies of France in 1870—these are memories and shadows to the rest of us. But to the shadow of a queen, walking in the garden that was once the garden of her palace and plucking flowers absently, as was her privilege long ago, these are the only realities. What has Liege or Verdun or the Marne meant to her as she sat in her seclusion at the end of a long century? Has she known, or did it matter to her, which side was winning in the ancient struggle for the left bank of the Rhine? Has she any inkling that it was Napoleon III. as much as Bismarck, perhaps more than Bismarck, who set the forces in motion for the world war? Perhaps the world war itself, which has beat our nerves into agonized pulp, did not penetrate her solitude, or annoy her with the noise of bombs and long range cannon, or the sight of wounded men. She has escaped from our generation into the past, taking with her all sense of responsibility, all moods of the present tense. And the dead of her generation escape with her. What does it matter to them if we blame them for a war of our day? We might have avoided it, they would tell us, if we had wanted to badly enough. "We learn from history," says Hegel, "that men never learn anything from history."

Meanwhile the former Empress Eugenie walks through the gardens of the Tuileries in the flesh, and the dreams of her youth have been dead so long that she herself hardly knows now what they were. Why should we try to lengthen our lives when the body so often continues on futilely beyond the life of the spirit, like an arrow shot past the target? To Eugenie, the old and forgetful woman, it must seem that she has lived quite long enough.

Doing Him a Favor.

When my cousin, newly commissioned, was sent to Camp Grant he found himself in command of a lot of draft men drawn mainly from our slum district. One in particular took quite a fancy to him and never lost a chance of doing him a favor.

One day after the man had been in camp only a week or so he ran breathlessly up to my cousin, who was in the far end of a trench. He remembered to salute after a fashion then stood plainly trying to think what to do next. Finally he burst out "Beat it, mister, while de goin's good. De boss is after youse, and gosh, he's sore!"

The colonel was at the other end of the trench calling for the officer in charge.—Chicago Tribune.

Paid a War Bet.

War bets are now being paid by the people who were wont to say, "You can't beat Germany." Morgan J. O'Brien, former judge of the Supreme court of New York, recently gave "the best dinner that money could buy" to Gen. Coleman Dupont and 25 of the latter's friends, because of a difference of opinion as to German prowess. The justice thought the allies could not get into Soissons last year by a certain date; the general was sure they could. They did; and the outcome for which Judge O'Brien paid a heavy bill, was called the "Soissons dinner."—The Outlook.

Chicago's Oldest Saloon.

When the dry law went into effect and Chicago's 6,000 saloons went out of business, it ended the career of Chicago's oldest saloon which was established in 1837, the same year Chicago was incorporated as a city. Since that time the business has passed through the hands of a family of four generations. Indian camps were a common sight in Chicago in those days. The city had about 5,000 inhabitants; to-day there are nearly 3,000,000 persons.

POST OFFICE WIN FIRST SERIES OF BOWLING

WON FROM PASTIMES BY CLOSE MARGIN OF 34 PINS

Last night at the Water street alleys in the Business Men's League the Post Office defeated the Pastimes two out of three in the play-off for first place in the first round. The Post Office won the first game, the Pastimes the second and the third game was won by the Post Office by 34 pins. The game was a close one all the way. "A PRIME MINISTER'S READING" IS THE SUBJECT OF DISCOURSE AT ST. PAUL'S

Rev. R. J. M. Glassford Preaches Another of His Forceful Sermons at Special Services.

A London journal has an article with the attractive title, "What Lloyd George Reads." The article is an interesting one and revealing the intellectual pabulum of the great English statesman. Of course he reads the newspapers, and takes a special interest in the conduct of law cases, being himself a lawyer. He also finds public speeches attractive. He reads novels, especially novels of action. He reads history, politics, speeches, travel, poetry and biography. His extraordinary memory stands him in good stead. He remembers what he reads as it is his habit to think over what he reads.

The Etheopian's Reading.

In St. Paul's Church last evening Rev. R. J. M. Glassford spoke on "The Reading of the Prime Minister of Queen Candace of the Ethopians." This great man reads as he journeyed, the prophesy of Isaiah. He was taken as a typical inquirer after truth, and as such he was spoken of last night as an honest seeker. He was evidently a thoughtful man and so he came to realize the inability of his own religion to meet his needs. He was honest enough with himself and with his God to acknowledge his ignorance of divine things, and he was willing to seek after God in a different faith than that in which he had been brought up When men are earnest with God they are willing to run the risk of losing anything rather than lose eternal life.

Then he was a sincere as well as earnest seeker after truth. His earnestness sent him out upon a journey of 1200 miles to worship God in Jerusalem. A man must be tremendously in earnest to do that. A man's earnestness will not save him but he will not be saved without it. His earnestness led him to investigate the scriptures. No man is justified in rejecting Christianity until he has earnestly and reverently read the word of God. The truths of Christianity cannot be dismissed with a wave of the hand.

And then he was an obedient seeker. He was swift to hear but he was just as prompt to obey. When Philip showed him the truth and urged him to accept it he immediately did so. At once he desired to confess Christ and he enrolled with the people of God. And what followed his confession of the Christian faith: This: "He went on his way rejoicing." That is always what follows. The world became a new world to this man when he had believed. It was a new heaven and a new earth he looked upon. The sky was the bluer and the fields were the greener just because the change that had taken place in his own soul. He was happy because he was saved.

A special feature of the meeting last night was the service of song lead by Rev. A. J. Thomas, and the solo which was sung by Mr. R. W. F. E. Davidson at the close of the address. It was a very helpful and inspiring service. The public are cordially invited to the meeting tonight.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CALEDONIAN CLUB

NOMINATION OF OFFICERS CALLED FOR WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The Caladonian Club will hold their annual meeting for the nomination of officers Wednesday, Jan. 14, at 8 o'clock, in the Woodmen of the World Hall.

This club reorganized a few months ago when their members had gradually all returned from overseas. Since then they have held many old-fashioned Scottish entertainments, including dances, socials and tournaments at carpet bowls.

A large attendance is expected at Wednesday night's meeting to transact much business of importance.

SHERWOOD FOREST INSTALL OFFICERS

SOV. HASKILL, FOURTEEN YEARS IN OFFICE, IS REELECTED CLERK

There was a large attendance of the Sherwood Forest Lodge No. 05, Woodmen of the World, last night, at which the annual installation of officers took place. Past C. C. G. Cinnamon, of Lindsay, assisted by District Organiser J. W. Plowman, of Toronto, was the installing officer.

Those placed in office were:

P.C.C.—E. LeBarr.

C.C.—A. Graham.

Advisor Lieutenant—Com. Dummitt

Clerk—A. A. Haskill.

Escort—A. Murray.

Watchman—Carrol Graham.

Sentry—W. J. Gower.

Managers—W. H. Telford, C. S. Cummer, W. Timms.

Camp Physician—Dr. J. A. Morgan.

Delegate to H. C.—A. Graham.

After making the installations Mr. Cinnamon gave a short address, in which he spoke of the high esteem in which the Peterborough camp was held. He said that Peterborough was holding fourth place in this province and he hoped that this year they would take the lead. He also made a reference to the large amount of insurance written up in the past year and urged all members to help in this branch to the utmost of their ability.

Mr. Plowman then stated that 9 new applications had been received for insurance and that last year's business was the greatest in the history of the lodge.

A dainty banquet was then served by the ladies.

It is an interesting fact to note that Soo. Haskill, who was re-elected as clerk, has held this position for fourteen years.

Mr. W. I. Chisholm, formerly member of the Normal School staff, and now assistant chief inspector of schools for Ontario, will be in the city Friday and on the evening of that day will address a meeting at Warsaw in the interests of Consolidate Schools. He will be accompanied by County Inspector R. Lees, who will give lantern slide views of Consolidated Schools in others places and who will thoroughly explain the system. The meeting at Warsaw is held under the auspices of the Women's Institute and a hearty invitation is extended to the public.

OTTAWA HAS CASES OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

ONE DEATH REPORTED AND ANOTHER SUSPECTED DUE TO SAME CAUSE

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—With one known death in this city from sleeping sickness, and another suspected, the health authorities of Ottawa and the Dominion are carefully watching the whole situation and the provincial health authorities have forwarded a circular to all the doctors in Ontario asking them to immediately report all suspected cases.

Of the deaths from sleeping sickness in Ottawa one, a Government employe at the Experimental Farm, died in a local hospital, while the suspected case, an elderly lady, died at her residence. A third case, which was treated in hospital, recovered.

The disease, which physicians have not yet solved, first came to public notice in the west and at present Winnipeg has several cases. Several people throughout Ontario have died from sleeping sickness during the past few months but so far the scourge has not severely affected Ottawa or district.

Rumors of other cases besides those reported are in circulation.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES FOR UNITED FARMERS

PRESIDENT R. G. ROGERS TELLS OF IMPRESSIONS FROM U. F. O. CONVENTION

At last night's meeting of the local branch of the United Farmers of Ontario, President R. B. Rogers spoke of the impressions he had gained from the huge U.F.O. convention held in Toronto some time ago. That convention must have impressed the whole country, he said. If there were any who had doubts of the force and power of the U.F.O. Co-operative Company they were all dispelled by that convention. During last year $7,000,000 was handled by the company for live stock alone. This year it is estimated the company will do business amounting to from 12 to 15 million dollars.

But the company is asking for more subscriptions for their stock. If the farmers want the local store to carry a large stock of goods they must supply 50 per cent. of the money stock. This bears 7 per cent. interest and with the very best security which the U.F.O. Co-operative Company affords—this is surely a good investment.

The magnitude of the movement, he said, was shown by the fact that 2,500 delegates filled Massey Hall day after day during the convention in Toronto. Mr. Rogers appealed to all the farmers to hold together and place their club and their store on a strong financial basis.

21ST BATTALION TO ASSEMBLE TO-NIGHT

ANXIOUS TO HAVE LIST OF MEMBERS COMPLETED IMMEDIATELY

At 7.30 p.m. sharp, in the G.W.V.A. rooms, all who at any time served with the 21st Battalion will assemble for the space of half an hour only.

Be sure and bring your pal along with you; we want to see him and renew our acquaintance.

If you can not induce him to come tonight, get his name and address. In this way you can help us to get into touch with him.

We have been asked on more than one occasion for a list of members for the information of other branches, but have to confess our list of those in the vicinity of Peterborough as yet far from complete. We earnestly ask for your co-operation in bringing these up to date as early as possible. It is the only way we can obtain it.

OVER FOUR HUNDRED LOSE THEIR LIVES IN WRECK OF STMR. AFRIQUE

Over Fifty-Seven Survivors Known to Have Lande I—Passengers Feared to Jump Into Boats.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

La Rochelle, France, Jan. 14. — More than four hundred persons are believed to have lost their lives in the wreck of the steamer Afrique in the Bay of Biscay on Sunday.

Only fifty-seven survivors are known to have been landed, and sailors and French colonial soldiers are the only ones from the ship known to have been rescued. Hope for the rest of the passengers and crew faded during the past night, as hours passed without any cheering tidings being received. Seventy-two hours after the vessel foundered many feared that one of the greatest marine tragedies of modern times had been enacted.

Attempts at Rescue.

"It was impossible to reach the Afrique," said Capt. Jouan of the Ceylon, which was summoned to the wreck by wireless on Saturday, and which attempted to rescue those on board the doomed vessel. "I remained in wireless communication with the ship, however, and received the following message: 'I am drifting, and fear my ship will go ashore.' The final message came: 'We are sinking,' and that is all I know of the loss of the Afrique."

Afraid to Jump.

Some of the rescued sailors declared that with great difficulty boats were swung out; passengers were afraid to jump for them, seeing they were half full of water.

GERMANY APPOINTS TWO AMBASSADORS

REPRESENTATIVE OF PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION LEAVES WORK TO FORMER BODY

Berlin, Jan. 14.—Dr. St. Hamar, senator from Hamburg, and Baron von Lucius will be Germany's temporary diplomatic representatives respectively in London and Rome. No appointment has been made for the Paris post. The Associated Press correspondent learns that Baron von Lersner, head of the German peace delegation, is not being considered in this respect.

The appointment of a representative to Washington is being held in abeyance, pending the clarification of the relations between Germany and the United States.

TROUBLE IN BERLIN RIOTING YESTERDAY

TWO POLICEMEN KILLED, TWO WOUNDED—TEN OTHERS MISSING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 14.—Despatches from Berne say that during a demonstration yesterday in Berlin two policemen were killed and two are missing. Ten others are wounded. Twenty of the crowd which attempted to rush into a building were killed, and forty wounded.

MR. T. TOOMS, M.L.A. TELLS INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY OF HIS WORK AS MEMBER

Visited all the Factories and Will Advocote Revision of the Factory Act—Has Devoted Whole Time to His New Duties.

The first regular meeting of the Independent Labor party since the Provincial election was held last night, and was addressed by Mr. T. Tooms, M.L.A.

Mr. Peter McArthur occupied the chair and spoke of the active part the party would play in the Dominion elections, which might possibly be held in the new future. It is a splendid opportunity for an enterprising young man, he said.

In opening his address Mr. Tooms referred to the wonderful success the Independent Labor party had met with during its brief term of existence. He spoke of the formation of the local branch and the promptness with which it took active measures to benefit the condition of the working man by appealing to the Dominion Government for more public works.

He spoke of the support they had received from Mr. Burnham, M.P., who had brought before the Dominion House the question of a minimum wage, which was saddled on the Provincial Government.

He reviewed the various meetings held by the Independent Labor party up to the time of the nomination for the election for the Provincial House, and praised the work of the officers of the party who had taken such an active interest in getting their candidate elected.

Mr. Tooms suggested that in future the Independent Labor party should choose candidates for municipal elections to avoid the appearance of a class organization.

He spoke of the meeting of the I. L. P. at Hamilton, where the U.F.O.-Labor coalition was organized. Also of the meeting at Toronto, one week later, where the coalition was strengthened by the support of all the members of the two parties.

Mr. Tooms told of the meeting where Mr. Rollo was elected Minister of Labor and leader of the party in the House. Referring to the action of Mayor McBride and Mr. J. Simpson, he thought they were both looking for a little advertising.

The Premier.

Mr. Drury has shown his faculty for looking ahead and that he is sincere in his promises, declared the member.

Since his election to the assembly Mr. Tooms has devoted his whole time to studying industrial conditions, and attending to his duties as member. He has visited all the factories in the city and sent many recommendations for amendments to the Factory Act, which are receiving the attention of the Government. He has advocated changes in the game and fishing laws which would increase the efficiency of the work attempted by the Government in those matters. He is advocating a living wage for Government inspectors, so that their work may be efficiently done.

Elected Police Commissioners.

Referring to Ald. Crowe's resolution for an elected police commission, the member stated that he had spoken of this matter to most of the members of the Cabinet, and that many of them were much in favor of the resolution. "At any rate," stated Mr. Tooms, "you can feel assured that this movement will receive the support of the House.

The Government is endeavoring to conscienteously abolish the system of patronage, and will establish a definite policy of promotion that will be adhered to.

Referring to the much talked of election of Mr. Rainey, Mr. Doherty and other members of the Cabinet, without seats, Mr. Tooms stated that there is not as much trouble in finding them places as might appear from rumors and reports.

Referring to himself, Mr. Tooms stated that he was known as "Tommy Tooms" in Toronto and was glad of it, for it made him feel more at home. He knew all the members of the Cabinet personally, and had discussed many questions with them.

After reveal other members had spoken on Labor topics the meeting adjourned for two weeks, when the organization holds its annual meeting for the election of officers.

BRITISH COALITION GOVERNMENT CAN AT LAST SEE "HANDWRITING ON THE WALL"

Rapidly Losing Seats in Parliament, but Cannot be Turned Out Because There is no Strong Organization to Replace It--Great Progressive Party of Labo ites and Liberals Looked for—Government Makes Concessions to Railwaymen.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 14.—"Although the Coalition Government is losing seats in Parliament, and the handwriting on the wall is against it, nevertheless it cannot be turned out because there is nobody to take its place," declared Viscount Haldane, former Lord High Chancellor, at Glasgow yesterday. He asserted that he did not believe either the Laborites, Liberals or any other party was likely to come into power in the near future, and that a change in government could not be brought about until a strong, united opposition to the Coalition regime could be formed. Such an oppositon, he argued, could be established only by the formation of a progressive party composed of Laborites and Liberals.

Concessions to Men.

London, Jan. 14.—The Government is prepared to make concessions to the railwaymen on the wage question, but is unwilling to give way on the general principle upon which its recent offer rejected by the men's representatives was formulated.

Sir Eric Geddes, Minister of Transportation, informed a delegation of railwaymen to the above effect at a conference held this afternoon.

Delegates in Session.

J. H. Thomas, the railwaymen's leader, will lay the Government's modified propositions before the body of delegates at a meeting this evening.

25 PERCENT INCREASE FOR LOCAL TEACHERS

SUCH WILL BE RECOMMENDATION OF COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

The committee on appointments of the Board of Education have recommended to the Board that an increase in teachers' wages be granted.

This increase, as recommended by the committee, will average approximately 25 per cent., being in some cases higher and in some lower.

The Board will take the matter up for further action at an early date, and it is expected that an increase of some kind will certainly be granted.

Last night a committee of teachers from the Women Teachers' Guild, the men teachers from the Public schools, and the teachers of the Collegiate Institute, interviewed the committee on appointments. Each representative spoke for 15 minutes, advancing the claims already before the Board for a higher scale of remuneration.

The committee then went into session and reached the conclusion to recommend an average increase in wages of 25 per cent. to the Board.

PEACE WITH HUNGARY.

VILLAGE DESTROYED BY AN EARTHQUAKE

THREE THOUSAND INHABITANTS OF SAN JOAQUIN, MEXICO ARE VICTIMS

Mexico City, Jan. 14. — San Joaquin, a village of three thousand inhabitants in the Jalapa district, Vera Cruz State, was destroyed yesterday by an earthquake, according to advices given out by the Department of Agriculture, which gave no details as to casualties.

MARTIAL LAW IN ALL GERMANY

STREET PARADES, MEETINGS, DEMONSTRATIONS ARE ALL PROHIBITED NOW.

(Special Correspondence.)

Berlin, Jan. 14.—The Government last night proclaimed martial law in all sections of Germany following mob demonstrations, in which many were killed and others wounded by machine gun fire from the guards in front of the Reichstag building.

Gustav Noske, Minister of Defence, has been appointed commander-in-chief of Greater Berlin district and Brandenburg Province. Street parades, meetings and demonstrations of all kinds have been prohibited.

NEXT SESSION OF LEGISLATURE WILL SEE A RETURN TO PRE-WAR CONDITIONS

Desire for Peace Footing Once More Reflected in Drury Government

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 14.—The next session of the Legislature will see Ontario back to normal in the matter of legislation. The desire manifested by British and Dominion Governments to get away from war conditions and return so far as possible to peace conditions is being reflected in the Drury Government.

War Tax Removed.

Former Provincial Treasurer McGarry has removed the war tax of one mill on the dollar payable by all Ontario municipalities to the Provincial Government. The only other step necessary to bring Ontario's laws back to pre-war footing is the repeal of the Moralorum Act. This step will without doubt be taken during next session of Legislature, which, according to Premier Drury should assemble about the middle of March. It is possible, but not likely, that the Act may be repealed before that time by order in Council. It is understood however, that the present intention of Government is to refrain from amending the Act at next session. This would have to be done to retain it in force for another year, and in the absence of such amendment, the Act will automatically expire thirty days after the conclusion of session.

This Act was originally passed in 1915, and is designed to protect all in Ontario whose lands are mortgaged, and who, owing to war conditions, were unable to meet mortgage payment when it became due. No action can at present be taken in this Province to foreclose, sell or take possession under a mortgage or to enforce judgment by obtaining leave of court so to do.

MEMBER FOR N. NORFOLK NOT YET APPROACHED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 14.—Denial was made by G. E. Sewell, U.F.O. member for North Folk, that Premier Drury is to run in his constituency as stated in newspapers this morning. "I have not been approached in the matter of resigning my seat," he said, "and I have no intention of resigning." The Premier made no statement this morning regarding the matter.

BY-ELECTIONS IN FEBRUARY

PREMIER DRURY AND HON. MR. DOHERTY FIRST OF CABINET SEEKING ELECTION

NO SEAT YET FOR RANEY

U.F.O. EXPECT NO OPPOSITION TO ELECTION OF FIRST TWO MINISTERS

Toronto, Jan. 14.—Members of the Government and the U. F. O. "organizers" are still sitting tight in regard to the seating of Hon. Mr. Drury and his two homeless Ministers. It is understood, however, that a decision has been reached that will clear the air somewhat, although it will not spell the end of the embarrassments of the Drury Cabinet. The decision, it is stated, is to bring on without further delay by-elections in East Kent and North Norfolk. Hon Mr. Drury will run in the Norfolk seat, and Hon. Mr. Manning Doherty in Kent. The writs will be issued, it is expected, toward the end of the week, and nominations will be set probably for Monday, Feb. 9, although no date has been definitely decided upon. Not less than twenty days must elapse between the issuing of writs and nominations, so that the by-elections cannot be brought on before the first week in Feburary, even if the earliest possible date is set.

The decision to open seats for the Prime Minister and Hon. Mr. Doherty is not an admission that a seat cannot be found for Hon. Mr. Raney. So far, no Farmer member has offered a seat in which the Attorney-General could be elected, but Hon. Mr. Drury has no intention of abandoning his colleagues, unpopular though he may be with the U.F.O. following. He gave a positive denial yesterday to a report that Mr. Raney was to resign or that there was any thought of replacing him. It appears that the U. F. O., unable to solve for the moment the problem presented by Mr. Raney, is going ahead to get the Prime Minister and Mr. Doherty elected.

Opposition Doubtful

According to report there is very little likelihood of opposition to Mr Drury and the drift of political sentiment in Kent indicates that Mr Doherty may also be elected without a fight. H. Hartley Dewart, K. C., and the Central organization is said to want a contest, but there does not appear to be much local demand for it. McCoig, the Federal Liberal member for Kent, is supposed to be using his influence to prevent Liberal opposition, in the expectation of U.F.O. support when the next Dominion struggle is staged. In neither constituency is there a

REMODEL BOARD OF COMMERCE

SUCH IS REQUEST OF DELEGATES FROM RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 14.— Re-constitution of the Board of Commerce was urged on the Government today by a delegation representing the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

The delegation asked that the Board should be so remodelled as to consist of "A" Consumer, Producer, Manufacturer and a chairman of judicial experience. In this connection the delegation suggested retention of the present chairman, Judge Robson. They also asked that price fixing activities of the Board should cease

The proceedings were brief, Sir George Foster promising full consideration of all representations made

Sir George said that the appointment of a Board was an attempt to settle prevailing unrest, resulting from increased cost of living. The Board might not be a perfect organization, but he felt it was doing its best

THOMAS KORNEK AND MICHAEL BAHRI HANGED THIS MORNING

Wonderful Attitude of Calmness and Fortitude Was Maintained by Both Men as They Bid Farewell to Their Priest and Comforter Canon Davidson.

Thomas Kornek and Michael Bahri paid the supreme penalty of the law, at 8:30 o'clock this morning, for the murder of Philip Yanoff, at the stone quarry in the neighborhood of Havelock, last June.

At 8:27 this morning the men were called from their death cells into the corridor, where they were taken care of by the constables forming the guard. Kornek was first brought out. He held his head high and submitted quietly to having his hands tied behind his back.

Then came Bahri, who at first displayed signs of nervousness, but upon hearing some bracing words of encouragement from Canon Davidson, squared his shoulders and never again faltered.

The fortitude of both men was truly wonderful. They did not speak until just as the black cap was being drawn over their heads when they exclaimed almost in unison, "goodbye Canon."

At 8:30 o'clock sharp, the men were led out into the yard at the east side of the jail. The scaffold had been prepared in the northwest corner, with the platform up which the procession proceeded, slanting upward from the rear doorway. Kornek, with his two guards, led the procession, followed by the younger man with his guards and supported by Canon Davidson. The men were placed in the proper position. The Canon repeated his final prayer: "Father into Thy hands we commit their spirits," each man kissed a picture of the crucifixion of Christ, the rope and black caps were adjusted, the trap was sprung, and in less than three minutes from the time the procession started, both men met instantaneous death.

Side By Side

Both men stood side by side on the scaffold, and as Executioner Ellis pulled the lever, the trap door opened and the victims dropped eight feet out of sight of the spectators.

At this moment Turnkey Rae gave the signal and the black flag was hoisted over the jail, proclaiming to the public that two men had met death to satisfy justice.

Both Slept Well

It was learned from the death guards and officials of the jail, that both men slept quietly during the night, but this morning declined their breakfast. They were much steadier and composed at the last minute than some days ago.

Word was received last night from Ottawa that the Department of Justice declined to believe the story of Kornek, when he attempted to free Bahri of all blame in forming the murder plot. In fact, Mr. Essery stated this morning that he thought it was a last attempt of Kornek to free his companion by taking all the blame upon himself.

Last Message

The last message of Thomas Kornek delivered through his solicitor, Mr. Essery, was that he never saw the man lying in the bunk that night. Fright, nervousness and a weak gun (meaning a hair trigger) were responsible for the revolver being fired that killed Yanoff, he states, and he further hopes some of his people will believe him when he makes this last statement.

Canon Davidson's Statement.

Canon Davidson was requested this morning to tell of his experiences with the men, and consented to do so on account of the keen interest the the public had displayed toward the unfortunate men.

Looking back over the case, he said, he could not comprehend anything that had been left undone.

The visit of Father Sechinsky was a most satisfactory one. With Canon Davidson he visited his compatriots on Monday night, and both ministers were dissatisfied with the attitude of Kornek, who was very rough. On Tuesday morning another visit was made and the Russian priest put them through a searching examination in the confessional, with a satisfactory result, Kornech's attitude entirely changing. He broke down, and took a penitent stand, which increased as time went on.

The Blessed Sacrament was administered with the full rites of the Russian Orthodox Church, and the service, at which the two men were together, was very impressive. Canon Davidson is high in his praise of Father Sechinsky, who took a deep personal interest in the condemned

Yesterday morning about 11 o'clock the Reverend Father accompanied Gordon and Mr. Essery to the cells to assure Bahri that everything possible had been done in his behalf. A telegram was sent to Ottawa by Father Sechinsky, urging the reprieve of Bahri, but late last night the refusal of this request was received.

Then, last evening Canon Davidson had a long interview with each man, and even offered to remain with them all night. This offer they declined, after expressing due appreciation, because they said it was not necessary for him to do it. From his experience with Henderson, who was hanged here a few years ago, the Canon was able to give these men some comfort, telling them of the rapidity with which death came.

Resigened to Their Fate.

Both Bahri and Kornek expressed themselves as resigend to their fate, and as having no hatred or bad feelings toward anyone. The attitude of Kornek remained pronouncedly different to his former tough manner, and both men were most devout in their prayers and acts of religion.

During his attendance to the condemned men, Canon Davidson used holy pictures largely to bring the message of the gospel to them. He used especially the crucifixion and the Lord's prayer in Gethsemane.

Bahri was able to understand most of what was said, but both men used the Russian language corresponding to the English spoken by Canon Davidson, while repeating the Lord's prayer.

Quiet This Morning

This morning the men were in much the same satisfactory condition though naturally in deep dejection. The devotions suggested by the Russian priest were taken, and the men urged to keep up their courage and fortitude, which they did to the last minute.

Not in Harmony With Christianity

The Canon's comment on the execution was "Although I have the deepest respect for the laws of the land, I am convinced this means of taking the life of our fellow man is not in harmony with our Christian civilization and some other way of satisfying the law might be resorted to soon."

Referring to this morning's tragedy, he said it had been carried out with remarkable despatch, and in as merciful a way as possible, with the method of execution.

Canon Davidson feels assured that there was nothing really criminal in the nature of Bahri, who showed higher sentiments on various occasions. The most remarkable of these was this morning, when a short time before his execution he held a bouquet of flowers sent to him by the Ladies' Guild of St. John's Church, and remarked: "These are the last flowers I will ever see in my life." The Canon declares that by the very tone of his voice, one could tell he was a man of sentiment and had been a lover of flowers.

Christian Burial

An hour after the execution the jury for the inquest was empannelled. They were H. Shurter, T. Wilson, G. Duncan, G. Sawyers, G. Stenton, J. Howden, P. Alexander, T. Spratt, A. Laidlaw, C. Sneider, G. Elliott, J. Laing, F. Bartlett, A. Webb, E. Freeman, G. Stevenson and C. Roberts. After viewing the bodies they brought in the verdict that each man had met his death by the fulfillment of the law.

At 10 o'clock Canon Davidson officiated at the burial service held in the court yard, where the graves had already been prepared. The men received Christian burial as members of the Catholic Church, in full connection with the Russian Orthodox branch of the Catholic Church. The regular ritual of the Curch of England was observed and a prayer sent up for the relatives of the unfortunate men.

"RIGHT HONORABLE" VERY EXCLUSIVE.

IN BEING MADE members of "His Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council," Hon. C. J. Doherty, Hon. A L. Sifton and Sir Thomas White are brought within one of the most exclusive circles in the realm of government within the British Empire. Indeed, outside of the United Kingdom, the number of those who are members of the Privy Council, which carries with it the exclusive title of "Right Honorable," are less than two score for the whole of the rest of the British Empire. In Canada there are only three men—outside of the three recipients of the honor today—who claim the distinction: Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden, Rt. Hon. Sir George Foster, and Rt. Hon. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick. The title ranks in precedence above Chancellor of the Exchequer, Baronets and Knights.

When the Parliamentary Committee on Titles last year considered the abolition of titular distinctions, the question of wiping out the title "Right Honorable" was discussed, but decided in the negative. The Ottawa Journal maintains that the honor, however, is much more illustrious and exclusive than the mere right to the prefix "Sir." For every "Right Honorable" in the Empire there are at least five hundred "Sirs."

LABOR STRIDES IN GREAT BRITAIN.

THE TOPIC OF INTEREST at the present time in Great Britain is the great strides made by Labor in the recent elections. In the comments on the situation in the British press, majority opinion is convinced that the recent verdict at the polls was adverse to the Coalition Government. In this, without doubt, there is a great deal of truth, and in the unpopularity of this particular form of government, as it is viewed, history is only repeating itself in Great Britain in the degree these governments have been regarded during the periods in which they held rule. As most of their careers have been of short duration, and there has been no express desire for their continuation, in that they came to be regarded as having exceeded their usefulness. This may be said to be true of all coalition governments, in that a perfect one in keeping with the name has yet to be devised.

The Asquithan Daily News naturally has no use for the Coalition Government in its present form. The sedate Times, while conceding that there is no misreading the flowing tide of Labor in the constituencies, infers that in the result of the Spen Valley election may be read an indictment of the Coalition Government, in that it betrays the turning of a restless democracy towards the most positive of political programs. The Daily Express senses the situation with a great deal of perception when it sees in the Spen Valley election an orientation of the middle classes towards Labor.

OUR REVENUE FROM INCOME TAX.

THE TORONTO GLOBE is very critical of Canada's income tax. It quotes Hon. W. A. Watt, treasurer of the Australian Commonwealth, as stating that in that country a certain man drawing an income of £19,000 paid £2950 to the commonwealth and £1248 to the state, or, in all, £10,498 a year. Another man with an income of £64,000 paid in income and land tax £44,000 a year. The Globe adds: "In comparison with Australia and other countries, the income tax in Canada is a farce. The returns for taxes on incomes earned in 1917 received up to April 30, 1919, amounted to only $6,445,349. Making all allowances for belated returns, it is certain that the totla income taxes collected for 1917 will be less than $10,000,000. This inocme tax of $10,000,000 from a population of 8,000,000 amounts to $1.25 per head as compared with $12 per head in Australia. Worse than the low average is the injustice of the method by which it is collected. The man of small income or salary is generally taxed to the uttermost farthing, but it is well known in every town and city that there are wealthy men who pay the tax on only a portion of their income or evade it altogether. The returns of 1917 received up to April 30 1919, showed that only 31,810 had paid their taxes in all Canada, but at a moderate estimate there are more than that number in Montreal and Toronto alone who should be subject to it."

Up to the present Canada's income tax has been very inefficiently administered. Unquestionably with effective administration the returns would be much greater. However, when inclined to criticize the results of income taxation, we must not oerlook that the business profits tax is an income tax and has yielded since it was estalished over a hundred million dollars. If it is not continued and future taxation is based on the income tax alone, Canada's returns from income taxation should show up much better. The Minister of Finance must see, however, that the tax is made to bear most on those with large incomes. Any recognition of schemes to avoid the proper taxation of wealth would create dissatisfaction and lead to the belief that partiality was being shown to the rich.

UNION BANK HAS NOTABLE YEAR.

SIGNIFICANT PROGRESS, as one of the leading banking institutions of the country, is revealed in the fifty-fifth annual statement of the Union Bank of Canada. During the twelve month period ended November last total assets have increased from $153,000,000 a year ago to nearly $175,000,000, an increase of $22,000,000, or 14.23 per cent. So striking a gain in the bank's resources is indicative of the policy pursued in this new era of reconstruction. To this aggregate liquid assets contributed $76,000,000 compared with $73,000,000, and represented almost 50 per cent. of the bank's total liabilities to the public.

An impressive feature of the report is the addition of $2,000,000 to the Rest Account, whose total has been brought up to $5,600,000, contrasted with $3,600,000 last year. The Rest Account was added to by the application of $218,830 from current profits and by the allocation of $1,781,170 premium from the $3,000,000 new capital stock issue. With this addition the bank's reserves represent 70.28 per cent. of capital.

The year's profits were $932,256 compared with $824,174 in the previous year.

Total deposits are shown at $153,496,514 as compared with $127,242,698 a year ago. To this grand aggregate interest-bearing deposits, which actually represent the public savings, contributed $84,376,709, a gain of $15,939,219, or 23.29 per cent. But for the heavy public participation in the Victory Loan, savings probably would have stood even higher. The total shown, however, will be accepted as highly satisfactory evidence that the banking campaign for increased economy and thrift, based upon the country's necessity, is accomplishing a very full measure of design.

From the public viewpoint, interest will be found in the total of the current loans, which reaches $86,529,156, compared with $74,021,028, an increase of $12,508,127, or 16.89 per cent.

In addition to an expansion of the bank's system within the Dominion itself, to a total of 390 branches, of which 89 were opened during the year, a working partnership was entered into with the National Park Bank of New York, by which branches of the Park-Union Foreign Corporation were opened in the Orient, in the Pacific Coast States and in Europe. The arrangement will enable the Union Bank of Canada to take care of its rapidly increasing international business and to provide for Canadian exporters and others doing business abroad.

AS TO THE REFERENDUM.

THE CINCINATTI Enquirer has no sympathy with the President's suggestion of a referendum. "To defer the ratification of the Treaty until November, 1920—almost a year hence—and to incur the possibility of its rejection in a popular plebiscite, and last, but not least to make a political football of the weightiest and most solemn undertaking in which the United States ever has engaged, is repugnant to every thoughtful citizen of the Republic." The Memphis Commercial Appeal stands by the President, but admits that "his suggestion that the Treaty go before the American people is difficult to carry out." The San Francisco Bulletin thinks that "neither the Republican nor Democratic party can afford to make the League an issue of the next election." As for Mr. Bryan—he 'may have made Wilson, but having made him he cannot unmake him. It was the only good job he did and he did not intend to do it. If he had he would have failed." The Bulletin construes Mr. Bryan's attitude to be prompted by desire to 'cut the heart out of the covenant," and professes to believe that this, together with the President's "threat of a referendum," may have the effect of hastening a compromise and speeding ratification. The St Louis Post-Disatch stands by the President, but adds "We agree with Mr. Bryan that the Treaty ought to be ratified at once, and that it would be a calamity to delay it until the next election forces the issue before the people."

The Brooklyn Eagle hasn't often said "Mr. Bryan 's right," but it says that now. "Mr. Bryan," it adds "has not only sensed more accurately than Mr. Wilson the temper of the country, but he has more accurately sensed the temper of the Democratic party."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson III. January 18, 1920.

THE BOLDNESS OF PETER AND JOHN.

Golden Text—"Stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong." —1 Cor. 16:13.

Lesson Text—Acts 4:1-31.

Lesson Text Illumined.

1.—Peter and John arrested and brought before the Sanhedrin, verses 1-7.

2.—Peter's bold words, verses 8-12.—Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit. "That is the explanation of the boldness: it is Peter plus the Infinite! The word filled is a picturesque word. It was the word that was used when the net was crammed with fishes. It was the word used when a substance had been steeped and soaked in the dye, and every strand and thread in the fabric had received the requisite hue. They were filled with the Spirit like a crammed net: every tissue and fibre in mind and heart and soul was steeped in the Spirit, and dyed into one all-pervasive and heavenly hue" (Jowett). Recall the promises made by Jesus to the disciples, Lk. 12:11, 12; 21:14, 15; Mk. 13:11.

Peter said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders. Rulers and elders and scribes, Annas and Caiaphas, verses 5, 6. The rulers were the chief priests; the elders were the representatives in the Sanhedrin of the people; the scribes were the professional expounders of the law. Most of the scribes were Pharisees. If we this day are examined concerning a good deed done to an impotent man, by what means this man is made whole. They were forced like criminals to defend themselves. See verses 1-7 and compare Jesus' question in Jn. 10:32. This infirm man is the lame man of our last lesson.

Be it known unto you all that in the name of Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even in him doth this man stand here before you whole. The reason for their arrest lay in the fact that the rulers were "sore troubled because they taught the people, and proclaimed in Jesus the resurrection from the dead," verse 2, and yet Peter, after boldly accusing them of having crucified the Christ, ascribes the miracle to the Risen Christ. He is the stone which was set at nought, regarded as of no account, despised, of you the builders, which was made the head of the corner. See Ps. 118:22. Jesus quoted these same words as referring to himself, Mt. 21:42-44.

"Thou art my salvation" are the words which in the Psalm precede the words here quoted in verse 11, and Peter continues: And in none other is there salvation: for neither is there any other name under heaven —in all the earth, as we should say—that is given among men, wherein we must be saved. We in the Greek has an emphatic position at the end of the sentence, as has also Ye in verse 7. By what name have ye, ignorant men, done this? There is no other name wherein we,—you the judges and we the fishermen—must be saved. Here is the answer to those who claim that Christianity need not be offered to the followers of Buddha or Confucius or Mahomet.

3.—The Quandary of the Sanhedrin, verses 13-17. Now when they beheld the boldness (the Greek word translated boldness means literally free-speaking) of Peter and John, and had perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled. The Greek word translated unlearned means without letters; the apostles were untrained as rabbis. The word translated ignorant means private persons, not engaged in public office, common people: perhaps our word laymen would give the actual thought of the rulers here. And they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus. Some scholars interpret this to mean merely that "their wonder sharpened their recollection," as Meyer says, and now, apparently for the first time, they recognize them as disciples of Jesus. Yet recalling the words of the Jews in regard to Jesus—How knoweth this man letters, having never learned? (John 7:15)—it came rather that they recognized the fact that Peter and John had grown like their Master.

And seeing the man that was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it. They could not dispute the fact of the cure nor answer the arguments of Peter. Probably it was their practice to send away a prisoner while they held their discussions, so now Peter and John were sent aside out of the council. What must we do with these men? they questioned. As at the trial of Jesus, the Sanhedrin were concerned, not with the truth, but with what they deemed policy for themselves. They couldn't deny the miracle, but they could seek to stop the report of the miracle, "as if that healing were a plague begun, the contagion of which must be stopped," Matthew Henry observes. So they decided to threaten the apostles.

The apostles were recalled, and the Sanhedrin charged them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus. Peter did not question whether to obey the command of the Sanhedrin would be expedient for himself, but he asked, Whether it is right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather than unto God, and added, Judge ye. He was respectful to his judges, and made an appeal to their consciences. Compare Acts 5:29. For we cannot but speak the things which we saw and heard, concluded Peter. Compare 1 Cor. 9:16. "How magnificent the response! They felt their wills to be caught in the sweeping current of the Infinite!" (Jowett). "Tell the birds amidst the bursts of spring not to sing; tell the waters welling from the depths not to flow; tell the happy child not to laugh and jump; tell sun and stars not to shine; and when these have obeyed you, then tell the soul which has been baptized with the love of God that it must not speak of him, and it will laugh you to scorn. It cannot but speak what it has seen and heard" (Meyer). And they, when they had further threatened them, let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people; for all men glorified God for that which was done.

The Irish local government bill will be one of the outstandng measures before the British Parliament at its next session, and this will again bring prominently before British people the world over one of the strong men in public life—Sir Edward Carson, M.P. for Dublin University, and for many years the champion of Ulster.

Sir Edward was born in 1854, the son of a civil engineer of Dublin. He became a Q.C. of the Irish Bar in 1889, and of the English Bar in 1894, becoming a Bencher of the Middle Temple in 1900. He was appointed Solicitor-General for Ireland in 1892, and acted as Solicitor-General for England from 1900 to 1906, and has been Unionist member of Parliament for Dublin for twenty-five years.

When Mr. Asquith formed his Coalition Government, Sir Edward became Attorney-General in May, 1915, but resigned office in the following October. Later he became First Lord of the Admiralty, and in July, 1917, he became a member of the War Cabinet without portfolio, resigning in January, 1918, and returning to practise at the Bar in the following March, but retaining his seat in the House of Commons.

By the Bar he is recognized as one of the strong trial court lawyers of England. As a cross-examiner he is said to have no equal, and he possesses the power of presenting facts in the strongest manner possible. His arguments are always clear and advanced with force, and sometimes with true eloquence.

Restoration of Europe to a Productive Basis Necessary First.

New York, Jan. 13.—Restoration of Europe to a productive basis is the only way in which the knit goods and hosiery market in this country will be brought back to normal, in the opinion of Wallace Wilson of Philadelphia, who addressed the opening meeting of the annual convention of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association here. Mr. Wilson said he did not expect a price decline for at least five years.

FINDING MISSING MEN

Editor Review——During the last weeks of December there seems to have been some effort on the part of several of the colleges and universities to ascertain the whereabouts of men, who had passed through the halls of learning and located throughout the country. This to keep up the college records in regard to graduates.

Enquiries were made at Peterborough to know of the whereabouts of Peterborough men, both in professions and in general occupations as well. Information was supplied as far as possible. If those making enquiry, in future will consult with Mr. DelaFosse, at the Public Library, he no doubt will allow access to the fyles of the local papers which are conserved in the basement. Enquirers will find in the issue of The Review for July 31, 1903, and of the Examiner for July 30th, 1903, a very full list of over 400 Peterborough men who are abroad from the old home town.

It may be remarked that the date is far distant. That may be so, but there isn't anything better to consult. Of course there have been movings, and changes but even so, the clue may be folowed up, where necessary.

Respectfully.

SAYS ELECTION OF 8 MEMBERS IS ILLEGAL

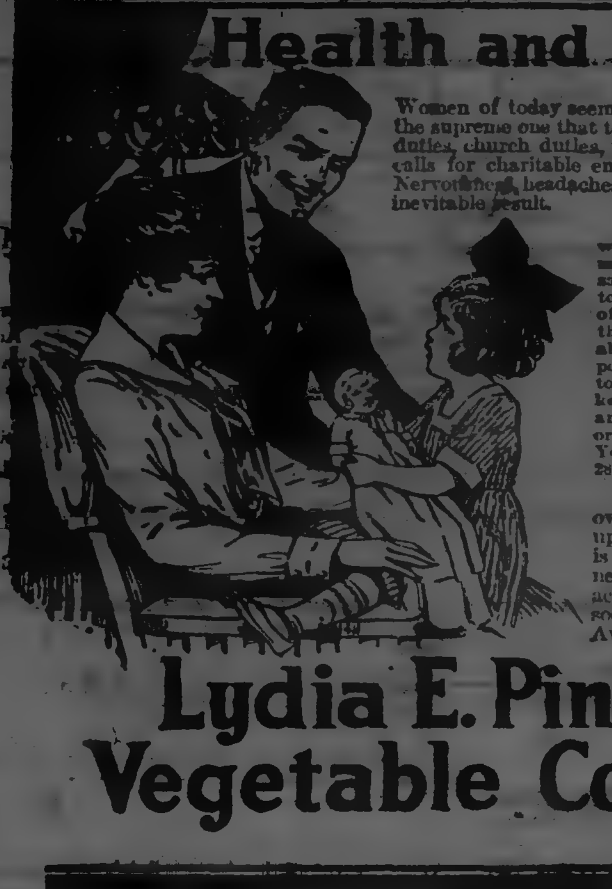
LIBERAL LEADER AND OTHERS SUBJECT TO SEVERE PENALTIES

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—— Eight members of the present House of Commons are not legally entitled to represent their constituencies, if Mr. Alexander Smith, a prominent lawyer and Liberal of Ottawa, is right in an opinion which he gave last night Mr. Smith, who has paid as much attention to election machinary and election laws as any man in Canada, gives it as his opinion that: "Anyone elected unde hte by-elections Acot of 1919 is not legally entitled to sit in Parliament and if he does so he is liable to heavy penalties."

Those elected under the act include Messrs. Gould of Assinobit, Kennedy of Glengarry-Stormont, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King of Prince Edward Island, Caldwell, of Carlton, N. B., Sir Henry Drayton of Kingston, R. H. Halbert of North Ontario, Ernest Lapointe of Kamouraska and Dr. S. F. Tolmie of Victoria.

I CONDUCTOR INJURED.

Conductor George Thompson, the popular conductor on the Lindsay-Whitby train, met with a painful accident yesterday morning at Manilla Junction when he slipped and fell, severely injuring his leg. He was taken to Lindsay on train No. 92 and removed to his home in an ambulance. The cords and muscles of his leg appeared to have been distended. It was finally decided to remove him to the Ross Hospital, when the X-ray will be used with a view to ascertaining the exact nature of his injuries.



Health and Happiness

Women of today seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. Home duties, church duties, war activities, and the hundred-and-one calls for charitable enterprises soon lead women to overdo. Nervousness, headaches, backaches and female troubles are the inevitable result.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which, added to my weak condition, kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness. Health and happiness? Yes, I have both now."—Mrs. J. Worthline, 2843 North Taylor Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of women nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. Avoid them by taking in time

Nobody's Afraid of a Chill in This Bank

The Corn Exchange National Bank of Omaha, Neb., is seeking to overcome the strange embarrassment so many people feel on entering an institution of this kind—for it is certainly true that the average individual holds a bank in awe.

He steps inside with all the reverence and solemn dignity he would show a church. Yet a bank is like a grocery store or a hardware emporium or any other public shop. It has service to sell, rather than merchandise. That's the only difference.

This Omaha bank resolved to express its feelings on the subject in a series of advertisements in local newspapers.

First came a trade-mark slogan: "There's a smile of welcome here for you."

The next step was to introduce every employe of the bank, via cabinet photographs and little personal stories beneath them, one in each advertisement.

"This," says the copy, "is Mr. E. R. glebay. He is general service man. He is the oldest teller in our institution. Known for his keen, ever-willingness to make better friends for the bank by his determination to serve best."

The remainder of the text is equally informal and chatty:

"If there is any one thing that stands out clearly to depositors of this bank it is the clean-cut spirit of co-operation, with determination to be of real help to all—and to all alike. You can bring your business problems to the Corn Exchange, whether you are a depositor or not, and receive the same helpful assistance which our training affords. Let us suggest that you become better acquainted with the bank—it is democratic in spirit—it is not hard to meet our officers—they are always on the main banking floor and always glad to serve you."

And then comes the second catch phrase, adopted for general use: "You need no introduction to be welcome."

Only 11 Per Cent. of People Ask for Credit

One in every nine persons in Binghamton, N. Y., who trade in local stores asks for credit, according to a report made public by the "Parlor City" Chamber of Commerce. This is in decided contrast to other cities, where the high cost of merchandise and unsettled industrial conditions are combining to force a majority of customers to buy "on tick."

The Binghamton Chamber has quietly installed and perfected a credit department, which today is serving practically every store in the city. Patrons who now request credit privileges in Binghamton establishments have their names telephoned to the credit department before the sale is permitted.

At the Chamber's offices the credit chief, Carl Wevat, consults a card index system. If the person has had credit dealings with any other local concern, his rating and record is given on a card. Upon the experience of other local establishments hinges the answer, favorable or unfavorable. If he has no credit rating, the Chamber department makes a personal investigation.

Jaffe Uses Cards "For Children Only"

When Morris F. Jaffe opened his store in Indianapolis, Ind., a little more than a year ago he found that one of his principal difficulties lay in the fact that parents would send children to his store with some change and instructions to purchase certain amount of goods.

Oftentimes the children would lose a nickel or a dime and return home with a story that the clerks had charged them more than the mother had expected to pay, thus creating a considerable amount of ill will toward the store. Another obstacle to handling this class of trade was that the children would forget what they had been sent for and—bang, there was another sale lost!

So Jaffe did a good deal of thinking and finally figured that it would be wise to invest a little money in having forms printed especially for the use of children sent to the store. These forms state that "in order to encourage shopping by children and prevent errors, we request that the parents or guardians fill out or sign this order when desiring small children to do their shopping."

Below this statement is a space for the number of pieces or yards of each kind of goods desired, a description of the materials and the price to be paid.

Then comes a line: "I have given my child ——— cents with which to shop for me," with a space for the signature and the phone number.

"The plan," states Mr. Jaffe, "has proved a highly successful one. Parents are glad to fill out the slips, which are supplied without charge, because they are then certain that the children will return with the goods they wish, and, from my point of view, it is constantly increasing trade and preventing unpleasant controversies and consequent loss of business."

Pictures of Homes Sell Flour in Texas

Localized advertising has long been considered the most powerful that can be produced. In other words, use as the theme of your campaign things and arguments that smack of the environment. Talk about home stunts that everybody in town knows by heart.

The Texas Star Flour Mills, Galveston, Texas, is trying out a rather unusual newspaper campaign to exploit its products in Houston.

Line drawings are made from photographs of well-known residences—the homes of Houston people who actually use the flour. (They make sure of his, of course.)

These neat and very attractive sketches of places in the residential section of Houston are placed at the tops of the advertisements and a headline reads:

"The Finest Homes in Houston Are Users of Star Brand Flour."

"Home of J. Bradshaw, 4630 McKinley avenue," runs a small line directly beneath the drawing of the residence.

There is additional copy of an instructive sort, of course, but the first thing the reader sees is a building he has doubtless passed many times and the name of the well-to-do citizen.

This is intensive advertising to be sure. The personal touch gives it an appeal all its own.

DOUBLE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

"Danderine" creates mass of thick, gleamy waves

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the "Danderine" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed.

Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor, and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

Harry's Difficulty.

Little Harry had eaten his meagre ration of bread and margarine. "Must I say grace, mamma?" Mamma—"Of course, darling." Little Harry—"Well, you said God could read our thoughts, and if I say I'm thankful He's know jolly well what a 'bominable little liar I am!"

Profitable.

"Was your daughter's musical education a profitable venture?" asked Smith.

"Rather," said Brown. "I bought the houses on either side of us at half their value."

Cost of the "Hood."

The most recently constructed British battleship, the Hood, cost the Government $25,135,000 to build, excluding the cost of guns, ammunition and stores.

One Way Out.

Two bluejackets were in the washroom washing clothes, preparatory to the weekly inspection. They were both regulars and had enlisted for four years. One of them had been in the service one year, and was rather tired of being on the station so long, and expressed his sentiments to that effect. The other, looking up at his discontented "buddie," said, "Well, if you don't like it, give three years' notice and quit the navy."

BIG EATING INDUSTRY

FAVORITE PASTIME OF THE ARGENTINOS.

People of Buenos Ayres Are Greatly Interested In Their Meals and Have a Long List of Dishes—Both the Men and Women Are Well Cushioned With Fat.

To eat his way through life would seem to be one of the main ambitions of the native Argentine, if the case is correctly stated by James H. Collins in his article in the Philadelphia Ledger, entitled "Eating: Biggest Industry in Buenos Ayres." When business in the Argentine capital interferes with eating, according to Mr. Collins, business is dispensed with. "The business day is arranged with eating first and business secondary," he says. The restaurants are full at 2 a.m. after a strenuous day beginning between 9 and 10 in the morning. The daily Buenos Ayres eating program is set out as follows:

"Breakfast consists of a roll and coffee. Then there is an hour at the office and two hours for a hearty meal, during which many business places close. The Americans and British commute home to lunch, reaching Belgrano in twenty minutes by train. From two to five the offices are open again, and then everybody goes out to tea, which is a real meal, consisting of tea, coffee or chocolate, with liberal helpings of sandwiches and cakes.

"On Sunday people gather and devote two hours to this function. It absolutely spoils the new arrival's dinner, but at eight o'clock the Argentinos sit down to the heaviest meal of the day and then go to the opera or theatre, where performances seldom begin before nine or ten o'clock. After the show the restaurants fill again, but here, rather curiously, the Argentine appetite balks. The day winds up with tea, coffee, chocolate, wine or liquors, accompanied by just a bite of delicatessen. The Argentine is then willing to call it a day."

The Yankee's well known light lunch, eaten quickly so the eater can get back to business, fills the Argentine with wonder. His idea of a lunch is the following, says Mr. Collins:

"First the 'fiambre'," or cold meat, the indispensable overture to every Buenos Ayres meal. This is strikingly like the 'kaltespeissen' of Berlin, where fifty cold dishes decorated the entrance of every restaurant, fish and lobsters frozen in blocks of ice, color effects of caviar and mayonnaise, egg and sausage, pate and cold meat, and three waiters appeared on one side and four on the other, each bearing several dishes on his arm, and heaped your plate until you said 'Alzo!' The Buenos Ayres array of fiambre is somewhat simpler, but includes delicious slices of breast meat from the juicest turkey in the world, then shavings of ham cured in the Smithfield style, tongue, roast beef, game, delicious Argentine pate in the form of castles, meat jellies, stuffed eggs, salads and relishes. The waiters bring assortment after assortment, displaying fiambre to the cold eye of the sated Argentine and heaping his plate until he says 'Bastante!' Being a Latin, he can say 'Bastante!' silently, with his left little finger or right eyebrow.

"To the Argentines fiambre is only the beginning of a meal. Then comes soup, fish, spaghetti, a hot-meat course, a vegetable course served alone, with chicken later, followed by a sweet and coffee and a cordial.

"The soup is no dish water affair, but a delicious mixture of several well-cooked vegetables or a thick cream soup. The fish is not the scrap of tasteless flounder filet served at a banquet, but one of the local fishes of the Rio Plata, cooked whole, which the waiter brings in, cutting filets on the spot. The spagetti is invariably called 'taglievini,' and is usually made fresh from Argentine wheat and perhaps colored green with spinach. The meat may be a delicious casserole dish, followed by a single vegetable as a slight interruption of the steady flow of meat, and then comes the chicken, which calls for description all by itself. Only when the sweets are reached does the bill-of-fare begin to break down, for pie and ice cream and like desserts are not common in Buenos Ayres, and the 'dulce' is often replaced with cheese or fruit.

"One of the amusing oddities of the Buenos Ayres bill-of-fare is the Latin-American struggle with steak as we know it, both in the article itself and the queer words used to designate it. Steak is distinctly a Yankee delicacy."

"Somebody is always taking the joy out of life," and so it is not surprising to learn that, while the pleasures of the table are enjoyed in Argentina as in no other spot on the planet, they are short-lived, most Argentines being said to die comparatively young from overeating.

"'Fiambre' means 'cold' in Spanish, and in Argentina is an idiomatic term for dead bodies as well as cold meats. And a street leading to one of the cemeteries is popularly known as 'Calle Fiambre,' which may be taken, for whatever it may signify. Unquestionably, both men and women of this capital eat with a heartiness unknown to us. A meal is declared satisfactory when the diner is 'les da pavo'—stuffed like a turkey. In hospitable Argentine homes the list of dishes is also long, and the guest is urged to eat them all, because each was perhaps made by some member of the family, and unless one eats it, it is assumed that he does not like the food. Both the men and women are well cushioned with fat, which is regarded even as evidence of health in men and comeliness in women. On the whole, slender women are largely an Anglo-Saxon taste, for throughout Latin America, as in the Orient, plumpness is esteemed, and were it put on a basis of world population our ideal slender woman would be in a slender majority.—Literary Digest.

The flower of the family is usually the last to rise.

Treasure Trove of Outlaws

Of the many thrilling stories that have been told of the life and marauding exploits of the James boys and the Younger brothers, none has made known the hiding-place of the large amount of treasure these bandits succeeded in gathering together. A great part of the loot of this gang is said to be hidden in the Arbuckle mountains, a short distance from Oklahoma City. Buried beneath the shifting surface of the mountainside are said to be many thousands of dollars, the fruits of the alleged bank raids by the gang in the days following the American Civil War. The intrepid Missouri bandits led their bands of border "long-raiders" through five states, robbing banks and holding up trains at will, returning after each raid to the hiding-place offered in the hills and mountains of the eastern and southern sections of the old Indian territory.

In time the ceaseless trailing of the James boys resulted in the alleged assassination of Jesse James by Bob Ford, renegade member of the gang, and the ultimate surrender of Frank James to Governor Thomas T. Crittenden, of Missouri. Accompanied by Major John N. Edwards, at that time the greatest editorial writer in the central west, Frank surrendered to Governor Crittenden and was let go on parole with Major Edwards, the governor accepting his personal word that he would appear before the Cooper County Circuit Court at its next convocation. He was there to stand trial for the Otterville and other train robberies, or, in the event of a continuance, to furnish such a bond as the court might order.

When court was convened and the first case was called against the noted defendant, the state announced "Not ready," and the bond was fixed. At this point in the trial many men in the district showed their friendship in an unstinted manner. Not one, nor two, nor a dozen, but almost a hundred wealthy Missourians, each a survivor of the "Lost Cause," each either a member of the Marmaduke Brigade, one of Donavan's men, or a wild rider with Quantrell, vied with each other to affix their names, each name representing tens of thousands of dollars, to the bond of the man who had worn the uniform of Confederate gray during the troublesome period of the Civil War, when Missouri had been a "border state," the scene of four years of bitter partisan warfare. Frank James returned to peaceful pursuits and avocations during the days which followed his surrender and while he was out upon what may be styled a "Perennial" bond, while cases of the "States of Missouri vs. Frank James," cases which never came to trial but were continued from "term to term" in the Cooper County and other Missouri courts, pended against him.

The Brookfield bank robbery caused a great stir in that locality. A large posse was formed and a vigorous hunt was started for Bob and Cole Younger and the man who rode the "Buckskin Horse." While the rider of the "Buckskin Horse" got away, the Younger Brothers were finally captured and were sentenced to long years of confinement in the Minnesota penitentiary. The two Youngers were kept for years behind the bars of the penitentiary before a pardon was at last secured, when they returned to their native state, Missouri, and settled upon farms near Lee's Summit and there spent the remainder of their lives as quiet, law-abiding citizens. It is unwritten history which tells of their many trips made to the old Indian territory and of the days and weeks and months spent in futile searching for the lost hiding place of the gold and silver buried years before in a case in the Arbuckles.

Following the Blue Cut robbery, Jesse and Frank James drifted back to the Indian territory to a rendezvous in the hills of the beautiful Turner's Falls, one of the most fascinating scenic spots in all that section. While they were in temporary retirement they buried the fruits of their raids in a natural cave, near the base of one of the mountains composing the Arbuckle chain. The mouth of the cave was walled up with masonry and dirt and bluff debris, avalanched systematically over the masonry in such a way as to conceal it from the eye of casual observation. Information gleaned from personal friends of the Missouri outlaws, says that the passing years, which had brought additional wrinkles to the faces and sprinkled with silver the heads of the former "long riders," had changed the landscape of the mountain side within which was the cave wherein the stolen gold was hidden. Avalanches of nature had carried tons and tons of earth and rock over and across the artificial avalanche of loose rock and debris with which the wall of masonry that guarded the entrance to the treasure chamber was hidden. Many expeditions were made to the locality of Turner's Falls in an endeavor to find the "lost cave," all of which proved futile and the search was at last abandoned.

A Wily Scientist.

The late Prof. Haeckel put a rather neat one over on Mr. Carnegie a decade or so ago. It happened thus. Old Andrew was a great admirer of Haeckel and he commissioned a young man who was about to become a student at Jena to get for him the professor's autograph. It arrived a few weeks later in this form: "Ernest Haeckel acknowledges the receipt from Andrew Carnegie of a Zeiss microscope for the biological laboratory of the Jena University." A microscope, needless to say, arrived with Mr. Carnegie's compliments, at Jena within a few weeks.

A close student of human nature seldom lends money to his friends.

Doomed to Disappointment.

On a train, a few evenings ago, two business men were discussing the dining car service which has been established by the railroad administration, when the negro waiter came to take their order.

"How is this dinner tonight—are you proud of it?" one of the men asked the waiter.

"Well," he said, "I ain't ashamed of it—exactly. If a gentleman is hungry enough it will taste good. If he is not very hungry, he will not like it, perhaps. And if he is very hungry so that he likes it, he will still be hungry when he eats all we bring him."

"If I'm not hungry I can't eat the stuff, and if I am, I'll not have enough?" repeated the man.

The waiter grinned.

Find Steel Ladle in Oak Tree.

A steel ladle, seven inches long, supposed to have been used by Indians in melting lead for bullets many years ago, was found imbedded in the heart of a red oak tree sawed up for fire wood at South Altoona, Pa. Rings on the tree indicate that it was more than one hundred years old. The ladle, made of the finest charcoal steel, is believed to have been driven into the tree when it was a sapling.

Hardly a Compliment.

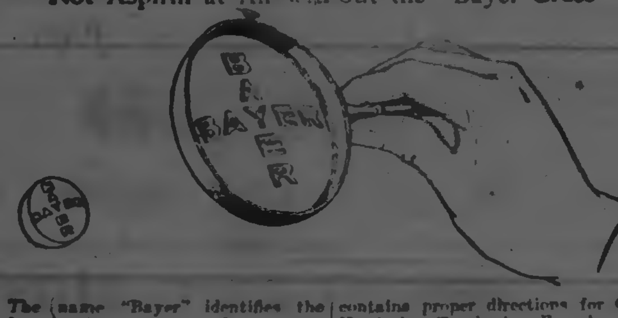
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin,—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

RETAILERS PREDICT INCREASE FOR SHOES

COST OF LEATHER AND LABOR FORCES UP COST OF PRODUCTION

Boston, Jan. 13.—"Have shoe prices reached the limit?" A committee of the Boston Retail Shoe Dealers' Association, after canvassing the situation in the trade, says "No." The question and answer are contained in a report to the public, a draft of which was given out recently.

Explaining why higher prices are to be expected the committee's report said:

"Shoes now on sale for the fall of 1919 were made from leather costing sixty cents to a dollar a foot. Shoes now being made for spring are from materials costing eighty cents to $1.25 a foot, plus higher costs for other materials and additional grants to labor.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS IS CRITICIZED

HAMILTON ANGRY OVER UNFAIR AWARDING OF CONTRACTS

Hamilton, Jan. 13. — The Herald yesterday said: "The awarding of a contract for auto trucks to a Dundas man is not the only action by Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works in the Ontario Government, that has caused criticism. The second affair is one that strikes Hamilton. Hon. Mr. Biggs awarded a contract for grading the highway near Red Hill to Toronto contractors, without giving Hamilton contractors any consideration at all, they charge. Further, the contract, it is reported, was awarded under the cost and plus system. Several local contracting firms, including the Canadian Engineering & Construction Co., are up in arms and promise to make it warm for Hon. Mr. Biggs. They not only resent the awarding of the contract to the Toronto firm but also the system of cost and plus, which they claim is not fair to the taxpayers. It means that the contractors will receive a profit based on the cost of the work.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

A gem of thought is often impaired by a bad setting.

W. J. BRYAN FAVORS PROGRESSIVE POLICY

URGES PRESSURE BE BROUGHT ON SENATE TO FORCE IT TO ADOPT TREATY

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 14.—In an address to the State Constitutional Convention, W. J. Bryan declared for equal rights for woman politically, industrially and socially, to make the American language the language of the country, for city, county and State; government ownership of utilities that tend to become monopolies; for a commission form of State government, for the recall of Judges and all elective officers, for the initiative and referendum, and for local self-government as much as possible, excepting where it interferes with the enforcement of prohibition; for good roads and state ownership of highways; advocated the construction of a great "peace highway," to be built in memory of those who died that the world might be safe for democracy.

Earlier in the day he spoke of the Peace Treaty before State University students and at a Commercial Club dinner. In these addresses he dealt with the Peace Treaty, and urged that pressure be brought to bear on senators to secure its adoption.

"SKIN THE CAT"

But if you won't exercise vigorously you must take "Cascarets."

There is nothing like bending exercises, taking long walks, or chopping wood to keep the liver and bowels active, but most folks take their exercise in an easy chair. Such folks need Cascarets, else they suffer from sick headache, sour, acid stomach, indigestion, colds and are miserable. But don't stay bilious or constipated. Feel splendid always by taking Cascarets occasionally. They act without griping or inconvenience. They never sicken you like Calomel, Salts, Oil, or nasty, harsh Pills. They cost so little too—Cascarets work while you sleep.

WINDSOR WILL BE NO OASIS FOR DETROIT

MAGISTRATE IMPOSES FINE FOR AN AGGREGATE OF $3,051.

Windsor, Jan. 13.— By way of discouraging attempts to discredit his statement that Windsor is not to be made "an oasis for Michigan, Magistrate Miers, in the Police Court today, imposed fines aggregating to $3,051 in cases of violation of the Ontario Temperance Act. This total shattered all previous records.

James Wiolski and Frederick Gegman, who were arrested Friday night, while driving two trunks loaded with liquor, contributed the major portion of the day's total fines, they being each mulcted $1,040.

Twenty-one cases of drunkenness were heard. The defendants in all of these were Detroiters. Six paid fines of 22.50 each, one was fined $425, because he had been disorderly, and four were fined $40 each for the twofold offense of being drunk and carrying bottles.

Two Windsor men who had in their possession liquor believed to have been intended for sale were fined $212.50 each.

In disposing of the cases of Miers reiterated statements concerning his determination to disillusion any who hope Windsor is to be made a "dumping ground" for Detroit.

Ottawa Winter Fair opened with the finest display of horses, hogs and sheep in its 18 years' history.

PROPOSED CHANGES FOR POLICE COURTS

NIGHT COURTS AND BETTER FACILITIES FOR BAIL DISCUSSED

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Following a number of representations on police court procedure made by J. W. Curry, K.C., M.L.A., to Hon. W. E. Raney, attorney-general, the latter conferred at the parliament buildings yesterday afternoon with Magistrates Denison, Cohen, Kingsford and Ellis, Mr. Curry also being present. Although nothing of a definite character was decided upon, the following were among the subjects discussed with a view to some action being taken in the near future:

Night courts at various police stations for the trial of petty misdemeanors.

Issuing of warrants only in serious cases, or where there is good reason to believe a summons will not be answered.

Better facilities for bail and bondsmen not being limited to freeholders.

Change in constitution of board of police commissioners.

Evidence in police court to be taken in shorthand.

Appointment of a legal practitioner to conduct all inquests in Toronto, holding of post-mortem examinations only in necessary cases, and abolition of jury system.

ADMITS FALSE PRETENCES.

J. H. Black Accused of Forging Several Cheques.

Kingston, Jan. 14.—J. H. Black, who claims to live in Kingston, coming originally from St. John, N. B., was charged before the magistrate with obtaining money under false pretences. He pleaded guilty and was remanded a week for sentence. It is alleged that he forged several cheques on merchants in the city, the cheques ranging from $10 to $25. On Saturday he passed a cheque in Gananoque and received money in exchange. However, the merchant was suspicous and soon doubted the worth of the cheque. He followed the alleged forger and the police accosted him as he was about to step on a train.

GAMBLERS FINED AT POLICE COURT

EAST CITY GAMING HOUSE PAYS A CONSIDERABLE SUM TO CITY TREASURY

At the Police Court this morning two men found by the police in an intoxicated condition pleaded guilty and were each fined by Magistrate Dumble $10.00 and $4.10 costs.

The next case to come up was that of the Ashburnham resident who was charged with keeping a gambling resort at 58 Hunter street east, and ten men charged with playing live pool in this gambling house.

Detective Cookmen gave evidence, in which he deposed that he had seen two bills and some silver handed over to one of the men charged with playing. He claimed the proprietor was there at the time. In cross-examination Mr. G. N. Gordon tried hard to prove that the witnesses' conception of the game of live pool was insufficient for his evidence to be of material value.

Detective Newhall then took the witness stand. He stated that the house in question had been under police surveillance for some time as numerous complaints had been received, both by letter and in person, of the house at 58 Hunter street east. When the police walked in a game was in progress. Newhall then called the proprietor, read the search warrant and took the names of the nine men playing and also the name of one man who was identified as playing in the previous game.

No other witnesses were called. The ten men charged with playing pleaded not guilty but were found guilty on the evidence submitted. The magistrate imposed a fine on all ten men of $10.00 each and (to cover the costs of Crown Attorney Hatton) in three cases the costs were $10.10. In the other seven cases the costs were only $4.00.

$100 for the Proprietor.

In the case of the proprietor, found guilty of keeping a common gambling resort, the magistrate has imposed a fine of $100.00 and costs of $10.10. There is a rumor to the effect that Mr. G. N. Gordon will ask for an appeal in this case, but nothing definite is yet known.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

NOBODY CAN TELL WHEN YOU DARKEN GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE TEA.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

THOMAS KORNEX

Mortimuk, Samuel Ziluski and Philip Potinski, boarded a train at Toronto for Havelock, where they hoped to plunder the men sleeping in the bunkhouse at a stonequarry in that neighborhood.

Early in the morning they reached the quarry, and Thomas Kornek, who was the first to ascend the stairway, either on purpose or by accident, fired a shot that killed Philip Yanoff.

The five men were mending their way homeward along the railway; when they were induced into a trap at the Indian River station. They were placed under arrest, and brought to Peterborough where they expressed genuine surprise on being told that a man had been killed at the bunkhouse.

They were placed on trial at the Fall Assizes before Chief Justice Mulloch, and for the first time in the history of the courts in Canada, five men were sentenced to death for one murder.

Since then, three of the men had their sentence reduced to life imprisonment. This morning, the other two were hung, in spite of the earnest appeals on behalf of Bahri, the younger of the unfortunates, who it is alleged concocted the scheme, and who guided his party to the quarry.

HON. DOHERTY THINKS BY-ELECTION LEGAL

TAKES EXCEPTION TO VIEW MAINTAINED BY ALEXANDER SMITH, K.C.

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—Hon. C. J. Doherty disagrees with the opinion expressed by Alexander Smith, barrister, of this city, as to the irregularity of election of members of Parliament returned under the Dominion By-elections Act passed last year.

"As I read it," said the Minister, "the kernel of the claim is that, while the by-elections under the War Time Elections Act would have been regular, those under the By-elections Act were irregular, the former not being repealed. It is an elementary principle that a new act automatically repeals provisions of any previous one with which it is inconsistent, and in this case Parliament decided that the By-elections Act should apply."

Mr. Smith, however, adheres to his opinion. He says the By-Elections Act is not a separate Act in itself, but rather amends the Act of 1906 without rescinding the amendments of 1917, or enacting that it was passed because the war is deemed to be over. "These acts," he said, "have no connection whatsoever with the War Measures Act, or any such Act, so an order-in-Council cannot set aside the statutory enactment of the War Time Elections Act of 1917."

FARM LAD'S DEATH

Kingsville, Jan. 14.—Yesterday, Frederick Baker, an English lad, fourteen years old, employed by Benjamin Cowell, Bridge Concession, Gosfield South, went to the barn at 10 o'clock, and did not come into dinner. Mrs. Cowell went to investigate and found the lad dead on the floor. He had been climbing a rope, hanging to a brace, in which there was a large moose tied, and had fallen, striking his chin on the noose and breaking his neck.

Report of the Auditors to the Shareholders of the Union Bank of Canada

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, we report to the Shareholders as follows:

We have audited the above Balance Sheet with the books and vouchers at Head Office and with certified returns from the Branches.

We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

In addition to our verification, at the 29th November, we have, during the year, checked the cash and verified the securities representing the investments of the Bank at its chief office and principal branches and found them to be in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion, the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank, according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

DELAVAL ENTER TEAM IN INT. TOURNAMENT

INDUSTRIAL BOWLING TEAMS FROM ALL OVER CONTINENT TO COMPETE.

Something new in the way of a bowling competition is being arranged for and will be run off in the early part of next month. This contest is an international one and the teams are restricted to those from industrial concerns exclusively located in the United States and Canada. Up to now there have been entries received from two hundred concerns, and among the teams entered is one from the De Laval Co., Ltd., of this city.

Several valuable prizes will be given and special rules and regulations have been drawn up to cover the contest. Every team entering will play on whatever alley they desire, but all games will be rolled on the same evening throughout the country. Scores will be wired to Chicago, where the headquarters are, using a code provided for that purpose.

The De Laval team has always been one of the best in the city and are expecting to be able to put Peterborough on the map in the bowling world.

The De Laval Co. have made arrangements to play three games at the Water street alleys.

CHINESE WITH THE BOLSHEVIKI

DANGER OF JAPANESE AND CHINKS CLASHING IN EASTERN SIBERIA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 14.—Russian Soviet troops, which have reached Balai station, almost 400 miles east of Taiga, will be aided by Chinese Bolsheviki, according to Moscow despatch, quoting advices from Cheliabinsk.

It is said the Chinese will operate in the "Coastal Region" where the Bolsheviki expect soon to encounter Japanese forces sent to Eastern Siberia, and a Moscow despatch states that Soviet forces will not "undertake any aggressive action calculated to provoke a collision." It says, however, "that the menace of the Japanese, and of the Entente vassals in the west, will compel Soviet authority to devote a great part of its forces to military purposes."

Poles Drive Ahead.

While Polish and Lettish forces have driven ahead along the Northwestern Russian front, and have forced the Bolsheviki to retire at a number of points, their offensive is said by Moscow to be "merely local."

DYSPEPSIA AND HOME LIFE

What a Relief When All the Family Eat the Same Foods. Avoid Dyspepsia, Sour Risings, Gas —Indigestion from Breakfast Sausage to Dinner Mince Pie.

After mother has struggled two or three hours over a hot fire to do the cooking for a hungry family, it's real enjoyment when there isn't a dyspeptic jinx among them. Of course, a case of dyspepsia or daily indigestion must be looked after. But it is far more to the point to prevent as well as to treat sour stomach, belching, water brash, etc., by such a valuable means as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Coddling the stomach with soft food and predigested stuff merely invites sluggishness.

Health and Happiness

To Be Free of Indigestion Contributes Wonderfully to the Happiness of Home Life.

Eat your little pork sausages for breakfast without fears; have a plate of beans and a piece of pie with cheese for lunch, and end the day with a real dinner, instead of a bowl of bread and milk. Follow each meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet and get right back to your natural self.

These tablets digest food and assist the stomach to prepare the content for assimilation in the intestinal tract. Thus you get the practical relief and help which induces a better appetite and a greater freedom in the selection of foods. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on sale at any drug store in the United States and Canada, as they are considered one of the stand-bys by the druggist.

NEW INVENTION FOR EXPLORING UPPER AIR

ROCKET EXPECTED TO HIT THE MOON AND IGNITE SO AS TO BE SEEN

Washington, Jan. 13;—Announcement was authorised by the Smithsonian Institution last night that Professor Robert H. Goddard of Clark College has invented and tested a new type of multiple-charge high efficiency rocket of entirely new design for exploring the unknown regions of the upper air.

The claim is made for the rocket that it will not only be possible to send this apparatus to the higher layers of the air, including those beyond the earth's atmosphere, but possibly even as far as the moon itself. The highest level so far reached with recording instruments is 197 miles out, accomplished with a free balloon. Professor Goddard believes that his new rocket can be sent through the band of atmosphere around the earth, which he says extends some 200 miles out, and that his new rocket will be of great value to the science of meteorology. He thinks this can be done with a rocket of his type weighing only 1,274 pounds initial mass. The announcement authorised last night declared that Professor Goddard is at present perfecting the reloading mechanism of his rocket under a grant from the Smithsonian Institution, and that it is hoped shortly to be able to demonstrate the practicability and value of this new type of rocket.

An interesting speculation arising from Professor Goddard's work is on the possibility of sending to the surface of the dark part of the new moon a sufficient amount of the most brilliant flash powder which, being ignited on impact, would be plainly visible in a powerful telescope. This would be the only way possible of proving that the rocket had really left the attraction of the earth, as the apparatus would never come back once it has escaped that attraction.

MERCANTILE ASS'N FOR BUSINESS MEN

REPRESENTATIVES SELECTED TO GO TO LONDON AND TO ROME

Mr. J. S. Wood, of the Business Mens' Protective Association called upon Secretary Frazer of the Mercantile Association at the Board of Trade rooms this morning to explain the character and functions of his association.

He is the general manager of this association with headquarters in Vancouver, B.C., and the functions are the co-operation of legal service and exchange service throughout the country.

Mr. Wood was assured that the Mercantile Association had no reason whatever to question his integrity or that of his association, but that it is itself organizing to induce to its members just such service.

Mr. Wood has concluded to defer the solicitation of members in Peterborough owing to the active interest the merchants are taking in their own organization.

Egg Profits That Lie Hidden In Your Hens

"The great trouble with the poultry business has always been that the laying life of a hen was too short," says Henry Trafford, International Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years, Editor of Poultry Success.

The average pullet lays 150 eggs. If kept the second year, she may lay 100 more. Then she goes to market. Yet, it has been scientifically established that every pullet is born or hatched with over one thousand minute egg germs in her system—and will lay them on a highly profitable basis over a period of four to six years time if given proper care.

How to work and get 1,000 eggs from every hen; how to get pullets laying early; how to make the old hens lay like pullets; how to keep up heavy egg production all through cold winter months when eggs are highest; triple egg production; make slacker hens hustle; $5.00 profit from every hen in six winter months. These secrets are contained in Mr. Trafford's "1,000 EGG HEN" system of poultry raising, one copy of which will be sent absolutely free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. Eggs should go to a dollar or more a dozen this winter. This means big profit to the poultry keeper who gets the eggs. Mr. Trafford tells how. If you keep chickens and want them to make money for you, cut out this ad and send it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, Suite 581D, Tyne Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and a free copy of "THE 1,000 EGG HEN" will be sent by return mail.

SIGNING OF PEACE TREATY PAVES WAY FOR LABOR LEGISLATION

Ottawa, Jan. 13;—Ratification of the Peace Treaty paves the way to the probability of Labor legislation during the coming session. Five international Labor conventions were approved by Dominion Government delegates at the International Labor Conference. They were: Eight-hour day, unemployment, prohibition of the employment of women in industrial establishments during the night, children's charter, prohibition of the employment of persons under 18 years of age in industrial establishments during the night.

FIX STOMACH RIGHT UP

"Pape's Diapepsin" at once ends Indigestion, Gases, Sourness, Acidity

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

When your meals don't fit and you feel uncomfortable, when you belch gases, acids or raise sour, undigested food. When you feel lumps of indigestion pain, heartburn or headache, from acidity, just eat a tablet of Pape's Diapepsin and the stomach distress is gone.

Millions of people know the magic of Pape's Diapepsin as an antacid They know that indigestion and disordered stomach are so needless. The relief comes quickly, no disappointment, and they cost so little too.

QUANTITIES OF LIQUOR SEIZED IN QUEBEC

COLLECTED OVER $90,000 UNDER PROVISION OF THE TEMPERANCE LAW

Quebec, Jan. 14.—Figures on the quantity of intoxicants that were seized in Quebec Province, and the amount of fines imposed on liquor sellers since the temperance law was put in force in May, 1919, were given the Legislature this afternoon by Hon. Walter Mitchell, Provincial Treasurer.

A "fair" amount of the prohibited "stuff" was seized throughout the Province—for instance, in Montreal, 12,394 bottles, 2,465 gallons, and in Quebec county, 9 barrels, one gallon and 356 bottles were seized. In Three Rivers 46 gallons and 326 bottles.

Total Exceeds $90,000.

Throughout the entire Province, from the first of May to the 1st November, 1919, the Government collected $99,262.83 under the provisions of the Temperance Law.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence)

Hastings, Jan. 14.—On Wednesday, Jan. 7th, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Clara Lynch, daughter of Mr. Thomas Lynch, town, and Mr. William Brazier, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Bretherton. Mr. and Mrs. Brazier left on the 3 p.m. train for their future home in Toronto, followed by the best wishes of their many friends here.

Dr. P. H. Huycke, of Kingston, was in the village for a few days.

Misses Emma and Lorna Hess, of Wooler, have been visiting at the home of their uncle, Dr. J. H. Hess.

Misses Ella Tate and Edna Marchand, of Peterborough, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Tate.

At the annual meeting of the I.O.D.E. held on Monday afternoon, Jan. 5th, all the officers were re-elected by acclamation:

Regent—Mrs. Howard.
1st Vice Regent—Mrs. Hill.
2nd Vice Regent—Mrs. McKim.
Treasurer—Mrs. Doxsee.
Secretary—Mrs. W. Fowlds.
Echoes Secretary—Miss I. Lynch.
Standard Bearer—Mrs. Hall.

Also a good report of the year's work was given.

The many friends of Rev. Father Bretherton will be sorry to learn of his serious illness.

Sgt. A. Anderson, recently returned from overseas, is visiting his sister, Mrs. G. Kerr.

Mr. Alex. Flemming has returned to his work in Trenton after several weeks convalescing here.

FARMERS OBJECT TO BOARD OF COMMERCE

SEND MESSAGE, INTIMATING IT HAS DISTURBED SOURCES OF FOOD

Winnipeg, Jan. 14.—The following message has been sent to Sir George Foster, Acting Prime Minister, by the Canadian Council of Agriculture:

"The Canadian Council of Agriculture, reflecting the opinion and judgment of the organized Farmers of Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, as expressed in resolutions already adopted at the annual conventions of the United Farmers of Ontario and Manitoba, and also in similar resolutions which have been submitted for consideration before the annual conventions to be held in Saskatchewan and Alberta during the next four weeks, find that the Board of Commerce, which was appointed to relieve high costs of living in Canada, has, instead, by reason of its actions, disturbed and injured sources of food production, especially in the live stock industry, and thereby has created a countrywide distrust in its ability to afford relief of any kind to producers or consumers."

SEVEN NATIONALITIES HIT BY THE ONE FIRE

COSMOPOLITAN CHARACTER OF MONTREAL VIVIDLY DEMONSTRATED

Montreal, Jan. 14.—The cosmopolitan character of Montreal's population is shown by the witnesses called before the Fire Commissioner this afternoon at an inquiry into the blaze that swept the block at the corner of St. Catharine and Cadieux streets recently.

The evidence showed that the fire started in the store of a Jewish jeweler, spread to a Greek shoe shine parlor, a Chinese restaurant, the tailor shop of a Frenchman, the home of an Italian, the shoe store of an Englishman, and the "fish and chips" palace of a Belgian. The Commissioner had considerable difficulty in understanding some of the witnesses.

KEENE

(Special Correspondence)

Keene, Jan. 14.—Mrs. Atkinson, of Warkworth, spent a few days the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Honson.

Quite a number of our young people attended the dance at Zion last Thursday night.

Mr. John McIntyre, of Bonshanto, spent a few days the past week with Mr. William Fletcher.

Mrs. Gilbert Honson has returned from Freelton, where she spent the past month with her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Byers.

Miss Mary Ellin Brastis, of Peterborough, visited Mrs. William Wilson the past week.

Two rinks of Keene curlers are playing at Peterborough this week for the Neill Trophy, which they were successful in winning last year. The rinks are:

Alfred Fletcher, Harry Mathers, M. Kenneally, J. J. Moore (skip).
S. Comrie, R. Nelson, J. Drummond, G. Honson (skip).

Fletcher Bros. have added a milk depot to their general store, which will prove a great boon to the public as some thing of the kind has been a necessity to the village for some time.

Mr. Patrick Roche has been quite ill during the past week.

Messrs. Arthur McIntyre and David Kempt attended the dance at Zion last Thursday night and report a good time.

Mr. Harold Roche and the Misses Herr, of Peterborough, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Roche's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Roche.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bell and little daughter, Dorthey, have returned from North Bay, where they have been visiting friends.

We regret Mr. William Fletcher on the sick list.

Rev. Honey was in Woodville on Sunday to occupy the pulpit of Rev. A. Edmison, who preached the anniversary services at Zion Methodist Church.

The Keen curlers began their season's sport in the new rink on Saturday night. The ice was reported in splendid condition.

We are pleased to report Mr. W. Stewart recovering nicely from his recent illness.

Word was received last week by Mr. Thomas Honson of the death of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Pue, at her home in Calgary on January 1. Mrs. Pue formerly lived in Keene where she was well known, and many will regret to learn of her death.

A splendid time was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Ashburn on Rice Lake on Tuesday evening of last week when about 70 of their friends and neighbors gave them a surprise party. Cards and dancing were pleasant features of the evening's entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Neil, of Hastings, spent Sunday with friends at the Victoria House.

Mr. Alfred Kempt returned home from Toronto and Oshawa on Saturday where he spent the past week on business.

Mr. Harry Renwick has the management of the Keene skating rink for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Honson and children are visiting friends in Warkworth.

Mrs. W. G. Wood returned to her home at Toronto last Monday after a pleasant holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Campbell.

Rev. Dr. Neil, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit at the Presbyterian Church on Sabbath day and on Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Taylor spent the week-end with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. William Fletcher was in Kingston a few days this week on business.

The young men of Keene are giving a ball in the Town Hall on Friday evening.

Shown at Empire on Thursday

I want free life and I want fresh air;
And I sigh for the canter after the cattle,
The crack of the whips like the shots in a battle,
The melley of horns and hoofs and heads
That wars and wrangles and scatters and spreads;
The green beneath and the blue above,
And dash and danger and life and love.

Her eye was brown—a deep, deep brown;
Her hair was darker than her eye;
And something in her smile and frown,
Curled crimson lip and instep high,
Showed that there ran in each blue vein,
Mixed with the milder Aztec strain,
The vigorous vintage of Old Spain.
She was alive in every limb,
With feeling to the finger-tips;
And when the sun is like a fire,
And sky one shining, soft sapphire,
One does not drink in little sips.

The air was heavy, the night was hot,
I sat by her side and forgot—forgot;
Forgot the herd that were taking their rest,
Forgot the air was close opprest,
That the Texas norther comes sudden and soon,
In the dead of night or the blaze of noon;
That once let the herd at its breath take fright,
Nothing on earth can stop the flight;
And woe to the rider, and woe to the steed,
Who falls in front of their mad stampede!

Was that thunder? I grasped the cord
Of my swift mustang without a word.
I sprang to the saddle, and she clung behind.
Away! on a hot chase down the wind!
But never was fox-hunt half so hard,
And never was steed so little spared.
For we rode for our lives. You shall hear how we fared
In Texas, down by the Rio Grande!

The mustang flew, and we urged him on;
There was one chance left, and you have but one;
Halt, jump to ground, and shoot your horse;
Crouch under his carcase, and take your chance;
And if the steers in their frantic course
Don't batter you both to pieces at once,
You may thank your star; if not, good-bye
To the quickening kiss and the long-drawn sigh,
And the open air and the open sky,
In Texas, down by the Rio Grande!

The cattle gained on us, and, just as I felt
For my old six-shooter behind in my belt,
Down came the mustang, and down came we,
Clinging together, and—what was the rest?
A body that spread itself on my breast,
Two arms that shielded my dizzy head,
Two lips that hard on my lips were prest;
Then came thunder in my ears,
As over us surged the sea of steers,
Blows that beat blood into my eyes,
And when I could rise——
Lasca was dead!

* * * * *

I gouged out a grave a few feet deep,
And there in Earth's arms I laid her to sleep;
And there she is lying, and no one knows,
And the summer shines and the winter snows;
For many a day the flowers have spread
A pall of petals over her head;
And the little gray hawk hangs aloft in the air,
And the sly coyote trots here and there,
And the black snake glides and glitters and slides
Into a rift in a cotton-wood tree,
And the buzzard sails on,
And comes and is gone.
Stately and still like a ship at sea;
And I wonder why I do not care
For the things that are like the things that were.
Does half my heart lie buried there
In Texas, down by the Rio Grande?

DELIGHTED IN HIS FREEDOM

Youngster's Chief Enjoyment of Vacation Came From His Defiance of All Conventionalities.

The best sort of vacation and the only kind that really is a benefit to the one taking it, according to Lewis Weisenberger, is the one on which all conventional rules of conduct are broken. To enjoy a vacation one must do absolutely as he pleases, Mr. Weisenberger continues.

In proof of this contention Mr. Weisenberger tells the following story on a young lad with whom he hibernated in the wilds of Michigan for several weeks this summer.

The campers had taken a large supply of towels with them, as bathing was expected to feature the holiday events. On arrival at camp each member of the vacation party received his apportionment of the towels and the lad was duly included in the division. On the second day of the vacation week Mr. Weisenberger was surprised to find the young lad's supply of towels packed securely away in one corner of the cottage, thus far untouched. He immediately summoned the lad and inquired whose towels he had been using, since his own supply was undiminished. He was not a little taken back by the lad's reply: "Aw, I didn't wash my face yesterday."

Even with face unwashed and towels untouched, the young barbarian probably enjoyed the vacation trip more than did any other member of the party, Mr. Weisenberger says. And the reason for the lad's enjoyment, he believes, is the fact that he violated all rules of personal etiquette and lived one entire day with his face innocent of ablutions.—Indianapolis News.

REALLY NO TROUBLE AT ALL

Possibly American Colored Cook and French Baker Belonged to the Same Lodge.

The American Red Cross canteen at Dijon, France, boasts the possession of Tom, a colored cook from the state of Georgia. Saturday nights Tom makes "something special." The last Saturday in August the special was chocolate layer cake. Thomas had no suitable oven, and so without the aid of a single word of French he induced a nearby French baker to loan his idle ovens.

"How did you do it, Tom?" Miss Field, the directress, asked him.

"Oh, I jes' told him that these here boys of ours would certan'y appreciate it if he would bake a little cake for 'em. An' he didn't make no fuss 'bout it. 'Certainment,' he says, and so I puts the cakes in the oven, an' that's all there is to it."

"Tom," replied Miss Field, "you are a wonder."

That is what our boys said when they ate the cake.

Deserves a Better Job.

We climbed into a motor accompanied by Marcus. Marcus, by the way, is one of the characters of the unit, Major Theodore Waters writes in the Christian Herald. He is more than that; he is an institution, is Marcus—a product of the peculiar stress through which Jerusalem has passed. He says he is 14 years old. But he looks much younger and acts much older. He can read and writes English, Russian, French and Arabic, and he passed through all the regimes, Turkish, German and English and he has taken toll of each in the acquiring of languages and baksheesh. Yet, strangely enough, he is both industrious and honest, and is the sole support of his widowed mother. If you would know what he looks like, imagine a gnome about three and a half feet high, as broad as a brownie and as brown as a berry, with two big dark eyes that shine out of the middle of a perpetual smile.

New Motive Power for Barges.

In a novel English method of propulsion for canal barges, a small air pump driven by the engine creates a vacuum in the chamber containing the propeller, and this draws the water above the level of the canal. This arrangement is claimed to lessen the erosive effects making increased speeds practicable. A barge of 32 tons was prepared for trial by mounting on it an old motor car engine of 18 to 20 horse power, and from preliminary tests was expected to run about five miles an hour when loaded, and eight or nine miles when empty.

Not Wanted.

The home-going parson who is said to make a church-going people must be prepared for an occasional rebuff. A young and zealous curate was going his rounds recently and at one house his knock was answered by a little girl. "Mother is suited with a clergyman, thank you," she said, and shut the door.

On the Contrary.

"Did you see Hooker come in from fishing?"

"Yes, I was on the pier."

"Was there any fish lying about him?"

"No. He was lying about the fish."

Will Slesvig Go to Denmark?

ONE of the historic wrongs righted by the peace treaty is the rape of Danish Slesvig by Prussia — the crime, by the way, with which Bismarck's Prussia of blood and iron entered on her nefarious career of conquest and domination in 1864. According to the Versailles pact the portions of the Prussian province of Slesvig where the majority of the population express such desire by plebiscite will be returned to the mother country, Denmark. The mood in which the Danish people has received the settlement and is looking forward to the outcome of popular vote is analyzed by a special correspondent of the London Times, recently returned from Denmark, as follows:

"Admitting that the Dane is something of a materialist, discounting in advance any idea of finding in Denmark the same passionate desire for restitution which France never ceased to cherish toward her lost provinces, one must confess to a certain sentiment of surprise and disappointment to find Denmark, as a whole, so little occupied with thoughts of the coming restitution.

"Why is it that Denmark is so comparatively annoyed at the approaching realisation of one of time's revenges? The answer is, I think, to be found in her still acute fear of Germany, and in the familiar phrase, 'We are only a small nation.' The Dane is a far-sighted individual (is he not even now reclaiming desert land that can yield no profit until the days of his great-grandchildren?), and he is by no means sure that Germany will not rise again. He does not want to take any risks, and is fearful of compromising himself a generation or two hence with Germania Resurgens. Nor does he look with favor on the prospect of a Germania Irredenta within his gates. His is 'only a little nation'—a very comfortable and prosperous little nation at that—and it is no part of his ambition to go adventuring on the uncharted seas of territorial expansion.

"Slesvig is divided, it will be remembered, by the Paris treaty into three zones — Northern, Middle and Southern, or first, second and third. Originally it was the intention of the Paris conference that each zone should hold a plebiscite. At the request of Denmark it was ultimately decided that there should be no plebiscite in the third zone. This appears, on the whole, to be a sensible decision. Thanks to a policy of penetration and permeation—not always peaceful—this zone is far more German than Danish. That the first zone will vote for Denmark is assured. The Slesvig Danes have always retained their language and their sense of nationality and Germany has never been able to 'Zabernize' the first zone into Prussianism.

"There remains then the all-important second zone. This zone contains the considerable and growing port of Flensborg, where the Germans are admittedly in a considerable majority. In the countryside here are many Germans and many Danes. No one seems to care to predict the way the voting will go.

"Granted a fair plebiscite, how will the voting go? For two generations the second zone has been under German sovereignty and naturally the clear-cut dividing line of nationality has become blurred and indistinct. One can imagine the doubtful voter reasoning something in this manner: 'A vote for Denmark means an escape from the burden of German taxation.' He is naturally tempted to unhitch his wagon from a fallen star and he sees in Denmark a prosperous country with free institutions and a stable government.

"On the other hand, the depreciation of the mark gives the German advocates a very respectable court card. 'If you remain German, you will possess 10,000 marks; if you go Danish, you will have only 2,000 kronen. Why vote Danish and divide your fortune by five?' This will doubtless be the chief German election cry. It is specious, no doubt, but not without its appeal. I heard it stated that Denmark is considering ways and means whereby to make the exchange less unfavorable to those who change their nationality. It is high time that she decided on and published her policy in this regard.

"I will venture on no forecast of the voting in the second zone. Half a hundred things may happen before the poll is held which will vitally affect the plebiscite. I would, however, beg leave in conclusion to point out that the result of the plebiscite concerns not Denmark and Germany alone, but the whole world — and Great Britain not the least. If Germany retains Flensborg and the second zone a glance at the map will show that she is still strategical mistress of Denmark. If Germany retains Flensborg she will develop it as a port in rivalry to Copenhagen. Copenhagen is destined to play an ever-increasing part in the Baltic trade which—with the rising up of so many new Baltic nationalities—offers great opportunities to Great Britain. Flensborg in Danish hands means that the course is set fair for British fortunes in the Baltic. Flensborg in German hands—well, that may be another story."

A Great Sufferer.

Princess Charlotte, of Meningen, sister of the ex-kaiser, who died recently, had been a sufferer for years and had undergone many operations. She passed most of her time on the Riviera. Indeed, the princess was a woman you couldn't miss. She wore bobbed hair, when no other woman had ever drdeamed of such a thing, and talked democracy and smoked all the time. The ex-kaiser was rather alarmed at her vagaries and preferred his other sister, Queen Sophie, of Greece, who is more his sort.

The Dominion of Canada Rifle Association will send a team to Bisley this year, and will also resume the Rockliffe Range annual prize competition.

DUMAS' DOG.

The Famous French Author and His Pet.

The pets of distinguished men have in many instances shared the fame of their masters. Perhaps none are so well known to the reading public as the dogs of Sir Walter Scott, which hold an honorable place both in their owner's romances and in his biographies. It has been pointed out that the most renowned writer of French historic fiction, no less than the great British novelist, was an ardent lover of dogs.

Alexandre Dumas, the elder, was, in fact, almost helplessly responsive to the demands of even any casual animal upon his care and affection. Uninvited dogs were continually quartering themselves on his estate or pattering unrebuffed at his heels. At Monte Cristo, his country place, they became such a nuisance that Michel, his gardener, at last protested, and called attention to the fact that the number had increased to thirteen.

"An unlucky number," Dumas agreed. "See that it is changed."

"Will monsieur let me turn one away, and then there will be only twelve?"

"No, encourage Pritichard to invite another, which will bring them up to fourteen."

The hospitable Pritichard, whose efforts as a canine host were thus backed by his master, was a clever and handsome Scotch pointer, Dumas' favorite companion. Sharing his master's generous temperament, he developed a habit of sitting in the road just outside the gates on the lookout for strange dogs of passage, whom he would fraternally entice within. Sometimes those that accepted remained merely for a meal; sometimes for a week; sometimes for a month; sometimes permanently. They were never driven away.

Some time after the failure of Michel's protests, however, other members of the family took a hand in the matter, and Dumas was at last induced to appeal to his friends to help him out by adopting the strays that he was too soft-hearted to expel. They responded nobly and adopted thirteen of the dogs. Only Pritichard was retained, and he remained his master's close companion so long as he lived.

Once Dumas was nearly persuaded to part with him. He had gone to call upon Louis Napoleon, afterwards emperor of France, but at that time a prisoner in the fortress of Ham, and had taken Pritichard with him. The bored and weary prisoner took a great fancy to the dog, and begged to be allowed to keep him; Dumas had not the heart to refuse, and the matter progressed to the point where it was only necessary to procure the consent of the governor of the fortress. But Pritichard felt that something was wrong; he knew two men were talking about him and he did not like the rather officious attentions of the stranger or the look of regret and farewell in his master's eyes. He pressed close to Dumas; up went his nose in the air, and the prison walls responded to lamentable howl upon howl. Hastily Louis Napoleon withdrew his request, the governor his permit, and Dumas his consent. Pritichard had carried his point. Instead of remaining to console a future emperor, he left the prison when his master did, darting into the open with wild barks of joy.

The Japanese Labor Delegates.

A great commotion was created in Japan by the difficulty attended in choosing delegates to the Labor Conference at Washington. The difficulty was in selecting true representatives of manual laborers not yet organized. The delegates have been chosen, but the commotion is not at an end. The event has awakened many problems hitherto suppressed, and opened the eyes of the people to the gravity of labor questions. As a result, many of the factories of Osaka, led by the Kawasaki dockyard, and of Tokio, headed by the Morinaga Candy Factory, have adopted the eight-hour system. To those who are familiar with the labor conditions of Japan, where men have been accustomed to work for 10 and 12 hours a day, this is startling, a daring jump from the old to the new. The change will ultimately revolutionize the economic condition of Nippon.

Football Excitement.

With all his wild cheers and vigorous gestures of encouragement, the undergraduate with the girl in the grandstand survived the strain until near the end of the second quarter. The halfback then caught a forward pass, shuffled off two opposing tacklers and crossed the goal line for the winning touchdown.

In the subsequent uproar one soft sentence, ringing high above the infernal roar, was put to him by the girl at his side:

"What is all the excitement about?" she asked.

It took the waterboy's sponge to revive him.

Making Ice in the Tropics.

To make ice in Mexico the natives take the leaf of the cactus plant, which may be a foot and a half or two feet long and hollowed out in form, and fill it with water. This at night they suspend well up in the air. In the morning the water has become ice. Then they put several of the layers of the ice thus formed together to make a bulk of it.

In the dry atmosphere the rapid evaporation causes the water to freeze, on the same principle that water put in porous jars and allowed to stand in the sun becomes cool.

Outside Help.

"Personally, I don't believe grocers ever put sand in their sugar."

"They don't have to around here," answered old Mr. Putterby. "What with cars an' one thing an' another zipping through Chiggersville from sun-up to dark, all a groceryman's got to do is to leave the cover off his sugar barrel an' let it accumulate."

London has a new disease, the chief symptom of which is an overpowering desire to sleep. It was imported from Paris, where it is rampant.

IDEAS ABOUT AGE ARE WRONG

Writer Complains That World Thinks of All Men As If They Were Young.

It is the fashion nowadays to speak of a youth of eighteen as if he were a child, and of a man of thirty-five as if he were yet growing. The ancients had no such ideas, and it has taken the lack of seriousness of the past three or four generations to spread them as they are. I often remember with pleasure a reference of Guy Patin—the charming literary physician of the seventeenth century—to a M. Lenglet, a man of twenty-six, professor of rhetoric at the College d'Harcourt, rector of the Paris university. Guy Patin says a man of twenty-six, as he might have said a man of forty-six; there is not the least intention of contrasting this man's years with his high position. William Pitt was not supposed either, to be a crude youth, and the French revolutionists—most of them men between twenty-five and thirty-five—were never taxed with immaturity.

We think of all men who are not elderly as if they were young men, liable to the mistakes of young men, and this not infrequently leads them to act as if they really were very young men. But most lads of seventeen are clear about their ethical code, and who is there who has gathered some experience, and has not found that the possibility of foregoing the cleanliness of their souls is more unpleasant to them than to most of their seniors?—Ernest Dimmet, in Atlantic Monthly.

Heroic Frenchman.

Lieut. E. Coulier, French ace, twenty years old, and who has brought down 17 Boche planes in France, has given onlookers thrills by his nervy performances at all fields in the United States. He came over from France a few weeks ago as instructor. His favorite pastime is to execute all the great stunts, such as spinnig nose dives, loops and Immelman turns with 200 feet of the ground. The average flyer, even if expert, prefers to try this game several thousand feet higher, where he is safe.

Golfing Prospects.

An artillery officer, who had been a fairly well known golfer and a keen enthusiast, was looking out across a rolling plain in France that only recently had been heavily pounded by shell fire.

"I've seen some well trapped courses," he said, "but I must say this is the best bunkered course I've ever run across. There's a pit every 20 feet. Par here must be about 200."

"LASCA"
Out of the famous poem, "Lasca," written 30 years ago by Frank Desprez, has been produced a photoplay that is in a class by itself. "Lasca" is remembered by the incident of the cattle stampede which without doubt is one of the most effective and thrilling climaxes in motion pictures.
"Once let the herd at its breath take fright
Nothing on earth can stop its flight;
And woe to the rider and woe to the steed
Who falls in front of their mad stampede."

AINSMITH MISSES FLY BUT GETS RUNNER

REMARKABLE PLAYS WHERE PLAYER PUTS OUT ON HIS OWN ASSIST

(By Billy Evans.)
(American League Umpire.)

Freak plays are far from unusual. Something new comes up in almost every game. Eddie Ainsmith, peppery catcher of the Detroit Tigers, figures in a play last summer which seemed much out of the ordinary. Never have I seen a catcher pull one exactly similar.

Cleveland was playing at Detroit. The play involved Jack Graney, of Cleveland, Ainsmith, of Detroit, and a fly ball. The fact that Ainsmith somewhat misjudged the fly was on second, two men were out, and the batter hit a high fly, directly in front of the plate. It was impossible to tell whether the ball would go fair or foul. A high wind was blowing that made the judgment of such fly balls difficult. Ainsmith kept circling under the ball, while Gainey, playing proper base ball was tearing in from second, so that he would have a chance to score, if the ball fell safe, or was muffed by the Detroit catcher.

The high wind did such stunts with the ball that Ainsmith failed to get hands on it. It struck the ground about three feet in front of him, took a reverse english and bounded back toward Ainsmith. About this time Graney was about 15 feet from the plate. The ball hit the ground and then bounded into Ainsmith's hands. Taking in the situation at a glance, he hastily turned, and made a regular foot ball dive toward Graney, who had started a feet first slide. Ainsmith touched Graney just before he reached the plate, and won the verdict on a haid line decision. It was the first time I ever saw a catcher recover a fly ball that fell safe, and get a runner at the plate.

The only other play I know of that compares with the Detroit incident came up in a game at Philadelphia four or five years ago. Larry Lajoie was playing with Philadelphia and Cleveland was the opposing team. A recruit, Garrett, was pitching for Cleveland, and he won his game 5 to 3. Larry was on third base, and two men out when Garrett cut loose with a wild pitch that struck 10 feet in front thought the catcher would be lucky if he stopped the ball, at the moment he started his delivery he raced toward the plate. Then came the unusual feature. The ball struck the catcher's protector with great force, bounded into Garrett's hands about 10 feet from the plate, and at the same instant he made a dive for Lajoie, getting him by a few scant inches. It was one of the few times I have ever seen the player who made the throw get the putout, without anyone else actually handling the ball.

AMERICANS HOLD MOST WINTER RECORDS

ON THE ICE AND WITH SKI ARE SUPERIOR TO ALL FOREIGNERS

The sport world has donned its skates and is gliding merrily along anyway. Skating, skiing and hockey and tennis as the seasons roll round.

Bobby McLean, who is the ice skating champion of the world is on his way to Sweden to meet his rofeign rival, Oskar Mathieson, in a series of races for the title. Mathieson was the world's amateur champion two years ago, but turned professional and visited this country, only to meet defeat in five races out of six against McLean in Chicago. McLean and Mathieson meet this time in Stockholm for a big side bet.

Strange thing about winter sports is that practically all records for skating and skiing are held by Americans—and America is not an ice-bound country like Holland, Denmark and the Scandinavian countries, where skating is the most popular sport of the year.

Henry Hall holds the ski jump mark at 203 feet, made at Steamboat Springs, Co., March 2, 1917. Lars Haugen holds the standing jump record of 170 feet, made at Virginia, Minn. in 1916.

Here are a few of the records made on ice which wil stand and which will give you an idea of how fast skaters go:

150 yards (straightaway)J 28 12 s., John S. Johnson, 1897.

Half mile—1m., 15 3-5s., Ben O'-Sickey, 1916.

One mile—2m., 35 3-5s., John S. Johnson, 1899.

Five miles—14m., 24sc., Oscar Rudd, 1896.

Ten Miles— 31 m., 11 1-5s., John S. Johnson, 1894.

BRINTON CARPET TAKE THREE.

Last night in the Business Men's League in the second round at the Water street alleys the Brinton Carpet started off with three straights against the Pastimes. The Pastimes were minus Sullivan and King. The Brinton bunch rolled a nice single of 965 and three games of 2,658. Carroll was high man with 614, while Anderson rolled a good game with a score of 535. For the Pastimes Miller was high with 526.

Tonight De Laval meet Centrals, and a good game is expected, as both teams are going strong.

Dusky Paris Sweepers.

Paris streets have recently gained a picturesqueness by the employment of colored scavangers.

Ebony hued Senegalese and copper colored Arabs from Algiers and Morocco, whose terra cotta fezes contrast so deliciously with the pale blue soldiers' uniform, clean or effect to clean, metropolitan thoroughfares.

In one boulevard there is a giant negro, with the lordly gait of an African prince, who trails his besom behind him majestically as if it were a peacock's feather fan.—London Chronicle.

"Half the world doesn't know how the other half lives." "I don't know how anybody lives with these prices."

In Boston.

A Boston mother was leading her young hopeful through the zoo, when he stopped before the elephant and exclaimed: "Oh, look, mother; he's bigger than hell, ain't he?" The mother gasped, and said, "Willie, how many time must I tell you not to say 'ain't'?"

NEILL TROPHY WON BY A. W. ARCHIBALD

TWENTY CURLING RINKS COMPETE—CLEVER PLAY ON LOCAL ICE

Twenty rjnks competed here yesterday at the Curling Rink for the Neill Trophy, which was wan by A. W. Archibald of Peterborough. Two rinks were from Norwood, skipped by J. R. McKelvie and T. Findlay; two from Keene by G. Howson and J. Moore; three from Millbrook by W. O'Brien, J. W. Steele and J. E. Allen; three from Lakefield by C. S. Tanner, N. A. Moore and J. W. Redpath, and ten rinks from Peterborough, skipped by the following: W. J. Oke, W. G. Morrow, R. G. Sturgeon, H. F. Foote, A. C. Kay, R. L. Dobbin, G. Stevenson, R. M. Hamilton, R. Hicks, and A. W. Archibald.

The rinks were played out as follows:

1st Round

W. J. Oke, 5, v. J. W. Redpath, 23.
J. R. McKelvie, 3, v. W. G. Morrow, 15.
J. Moore, 7, v. R. G. Sturgeon, 12.
G. Howson, 3, v. H. F. Foote, 18.

2nd Round

J. W. Redpath, 8, v. W. G. Morrow, 15.
H. F. Foote, 8, v. R. G. Stugeon, 12.
A. C. Kay, 5, v. W. O'Brian, 13.
R. L. Dobbin, 8, v. G Stevenson, 19.
E. S. Tanner, 7, v. R. M. Hamilton, 12.
R. Hicks, 9, v. J. W. Steele, 10.
N. A. Moore, 9, v. T. Findlay, 10.
J. E. Allen, 5, v. A. W. Archibald, 20.

3rd Round

R. G. Sturgeon, 9, v. W. G. Morrow, 12.
W. O'Brian, 9, v. G. Stevenson, 10.
J. W. Steele, 9, v. R. M. Hamilton, 10.
T. Findlay, 4, v. A. W. Archibald, 19.

4th Round

W. G. Morrow, 8, v. G. Stevenson 11.

5th and Last Round

G. Stevenson 9, A. W. Archibald 10, thus leaving Mr. Archibald a winner of one of the most closely contested bonspiels this city has seen for a number of years.

The ends were all closely contested, and excitement ran high in more than one critical moment. In the elimination game Mr. Stevenson registered a straight fast dead-on shot, clearing the ice in a manner which brought forth considerable applause.

The visiting rinks all declared themselves quite satisfied with the results. The play started yesterday morning about 10 o'clock and continued throughout the day and until late in the evening.

What It Costs Us.

The evidence adduced and official statements submitted to the committee of the House of Commons considering soldiers' re-establishment showed that the total expenditure for pensions and various forms of re-establishment, work to March 31, 1920, will amount approximately to $214,569,726.62, made up as follows:

Pensions	$ 53,536,498,74
Gratuities	153,686,557.98
Dependents' transportation fares	1,916,578.00
Department S.C.R.	57,046,664.26
Soldier Settlement	48,228,103.12
Labor Department	155,324.52

To carry to completion the various classes of re-establishment work now carried on there must be provided after March 31, 1921, an estimated amount of $176,971,896.88, made up as follows:

Soldier Settlement	$126,771,896.88
Department S.C.R.	50,000,000.00
Labor Department	200,000.00
	$176,971,896.88

This latter figure does not include a sum of approximately $30,000,000 which must be expended annually on pensions.

From these figures it will be noted that the total amount heretofore expended for re-establishment work now carried on amounts to $421,540,623.50, together with $30,000,000 annually for pensions. Yes, war is an expensive business.

YOUNG HEROES AT OXFORD

Many Customs and Traditions of the University Are Likely to Seem Tame to Them.

The returning hero, fresh from battle fields, will no longer rush to the cricket fields and the river at Oxford with the zest of young barbarians at their play, observes a writer in the Nation (London). To one who may wear the ribbon of the Military Cross or the D. S. O., the position of his college boat in the eights can no longer seem the one matter of life and death, and even the halo of a goal shines with diminished glory.

So, too, in lesser pursuits. How shall he dwell upon the squabbles of compartments in ancient Greece, when he himself has motored from Saloniki to Athens in a day, and on to Sparta in the next? Or what will he feel when questioned on his fading memories of the irregular verbs? Probably most public school boys are haunted to old age by a dream—a terrible nightmare—of being "put on" by the old headmaster when they have not taken the trouble to prepare a line of the passage. It makes no difference that they are more than 50 and the headmaster has long been dead. The horror of the situation remains appalling, and the dream is far more frequent than any of Freud's imaginary perversions.

The feeling of the soldier returning to the class and lecture room will be much the same, with a sense of futility added. For, indeed, it is impossible to go back in life and second childhood is not like the first. Little victims play regardless of their doom, but not men who have known what doom can do.

PATRIOTS GET POOR REWARD

British Soldiers Who Won High Distinction Have a Right to Complain of Ingratitude.

Attention has been directed to the hard case of men who won distinction in the great war, and seem to have been forgotten, by two dramatic incidents. One is the public statement by Sir Douglas Haig that a demobilized officer who won the V. C., D. S. O., and M. C., is at present trudging the streets of London in search of work. The other is the announcement that Mr. Arthur Richings has rejoined the Cardiff police force as an ordinary constable, notwithstanding the fact that he has just relinquished the army rank of lieutenant colonel.

The latter's record is an astounding one. He was promoted second lieutenant on the field, and his subsequent promotions were astonishingly rapid. Mentioned in dispatches three times, he wears six wound stripes, the Mons Star, the Croix de Guerre (with palms), the Military Cross, and is also a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Perhaps one may be pardoned for questioning whether there is not something wrong with an army administration which allows a man with an active service record like that to disappear into the decent obscurity of a police constable's tunic.—Montreal Family Herald.

"Happiest Man in the World."

"I am the happiest man in the world. It seems to me that I have just begun to live."

Thus Mr. J. D. Rockefeller, who recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. "I am happy because I am still able to work. My mind is as acute as it was twenty years ago. I have my health, which is best of all, and by writing my biography I am keeping my mind occupied. That is the secret of happiness in old age."

THE PORT OF FOOCHOW.

An Inland Bremen Situated on the River Min.

Foochow, scene of a recent clash between Chinese and Japanese, is an inland Bremen of the Pacific, situated on the river Min, the Hudson of South China.

The Catskills of the Min, which include numerous hills about Foochow, are storied by scores of Washington Irvings, and the legends, centuries old, are completely credited by a people who seem, to the Occidental mind, at once the most matter-of-fact and the most imaginative in the world.

This busy "port," whose annual export of tea alone once reached nearly 100,000,000 pounds, is 35 miles from the sea, three miles from the river that furnishes its ocean outlet, and the river is not navigable for large vessels nearer than ten miles below the point where suburbs of the walled town touch its lazy course.

Moreover, Foochow's commerce thrives without the aid of railroads, or any good highways. To reach it the traveller must go by boat, from Shanghai to Honk Kong, steam up the Min for 225 miles, to the Pagoda anchorage, and then take a steam launch to a Foochow pier. Nowadays motor busses compass the remaining distance, from the water front to the walled city, but they still are novelties enough to attract curious crowds of unkempt children, not yet trained to the sophistication of the older Chinaman, who is seldom betrayed into acknowledging that airplanes, electric lights and wireless telegraphy are not his racial heritages.

One should not hurry into Foochow proper, even if one could, for to do so would be to miss the physical beauties and fabled history that accentuates each step of the journey from the ocean to this vicarious port. Along the Min one may see pearl divers. Should a diver be drowned his fellows stoically conclude that he has fallen a victim to the sea-turtle, Chinese equivalent for the legendary sea-serpent of the West.

Near Pagoda anchorage rises Sharp Peak, capped by a tower built by a wife to welcome home an oriental Enoch Arden who, when he saw it, thought he had mistaken the river, and sailed away again, never to return. A mandarin's footprint in a rock commemorates the summary punishment of quarrymen who kept right on chopping away its companion footprint, despite the flow of blood that spurted out at each stroke. When removed to a place in a bridge it registered a protest by kicking its bearers into the river, so the companion was not molested.

The river's obstruction at Pagoda anchorage is artificial; formed when stone-laden barges were sunk there to prevent a French fleet from reaching the city, during the Franco-Foochow troubles in 1884. It is characteristic of the Chinese love for the status quo that Foochow business men have waited so long to take steps to clear the channel and thus avoid the endless annoyance of constant reloading of cargoes. Measures now are being considered to connect Foochow with the sea by a channel fit for ocean-going vessels. Boards of trade and rivers and harbor congresses are recent civic concomitants of the nation that built the greatest inland waterway the world has known—the Grand Canal.

But the most conspicuous lack of Foochow, your nose would know, upon entering the congested streets of the walled city, is a board of health. It has been said that, for "offensiveness to the senses" no town can compare with Foochow. The oldest streets are so narrow, and so tortuous, for the most part, that wheeled vehicles cannot traverse them, and even were they wider their surface would be too uneven for passage. Broad streets, newly paved, now traverse many sections. Underground sewers have a habit of flowing forth into these cramped thoroughfares, and the sun's purifying rays are stopped by roofs from reaching many of them. Children, pigs and dogs commingle about many doorways; cholera occasionally reaps an indiscriminate harvest of man and beast, as it did only last summer when the local supply of coffins soon was used up and bodies were carried off in baskets.

The older city is enclosed by a wall some thirty feet high, twelve feet thick, and its circuit of five miles is pierced by seven fort gates, one of these being the North Tower, at which are furious spirit shrines. The population of "Greater Foochow," including its numerous suburbs, is estimated at nearly 700,000. It is the capital of the Province of Fukien, which produces the tea that makes Foochow important, where tigers are to be hunted, and where formerly grew the poppies which made it notorious in the days when there were said to be more opium dens than tea and rice shops in the city.

Conspicuous proof that Foochow is capable of civic reform, when once stirred, was its campaign against opium, conducted with posters and orators, after the manner of a local option drive in the wetter days of our own country. The campaign was successful first in having a license and permit system established and ultimately in banishing the dens in 1907.

Foreigners live on a picturesque island across from the city, reached by the "Bridge of the 10,000 Ages."

The high pooped junks with elaborate decoration on their sterns form an interesting feature of the river life.

Foochow supplies much lumber from interior Fukien and huge lumber rafts can usually be seen in the river. An industry of note is that of lacquer ware, made by a secret process handed down from generation to generation of one Foochow family.

Austrian Child-Slaves.

The report of a parliamentary committee appointed to investigate conditions surrounding child labor in Austria discovered a most deplorable condition, according to the Arbeiter Zeitung of Vienna. More than one-third of all schoolchildren are engaged in some kind of work. In some districts all the children of school age are working. Out of every 100 schoolchildren between six and eight years, 15 are at work; between nine and ten, 35; between eleven and twelve, 50, and between thirteen and fourteen, 52. WOULD UPSET ELECTION

Serious Trouble Threatened by Brantford I.L.P.

Brantford, Jan. 14. —The independent Labor party officially announced to-day that it not only fights the protest proceedings against Mayor MacBride, but would also make an effort to upset the entire municipal elections. Duff Slemin, local Attorney, was retained to look after the I.L.P. interests in the case.

HEAR DR. ROBERTSON AT CAN. CLUB LUNCHEON

Attention is drawn to the dinner under the auspices of the Canadian Club tomorrow at 12.15 sharp in the Empress Hotel. Business men should avail themselves of this opportunity to gather together around the festive board, and also to enjoy intellectual refreshment in the after-dinner address by Dr. Robertson, one of the most distinguished and capable speakers in Canada. At 3.30 Dr. Robertson will address the Women's Canadian Club.

Dr. Robertson's addresses are always of retaining interest and replete with information and suggestions of value for the uplift of the community. He will not detain the guests from their business beyond the time usually consumed for luncheon or mid-day dinner.

Dr. Robertson is an authority on all educational matters, including technical training, a live topic in Peterborough today, and his address here cannot fail in interest to all those who have made a study of such problems. The directors of the club hope for one of the most successful functions in the history of the organization. In the meantime citizens are urged to help on the good work by becoming members of the organization.

CANON DAVIDSON RECEIVES PROMOTION

NOW ARCHDEACON OF PETERBOROUGH AFTER LONG AND ACCEPTABLE SERVICE

Among the list of appointments made by the Bishop of Toronto is found the name of Canon J. C. Davidson, rector of St. John's Church, whose long and faithful services in this city have been rewarded by promotion to Archdeacon of Peterborough.

Archdeacon Davidson was ordained deacon in Holy Trinity Church, Toronto. He preached at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England, and spent two years in training as a curate there. He returned to Canada and was curate at Colorne for two years, coming to Peterborough as curate in charge during the illness of the late rector, Canon J. W. R. Beck.

Archdeacon Davidson was appointed rector of Peterborough on January 12, 1890. He was rural dean of Northumberland from 1904 to 1907, and was appointed Canon at St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto.

He became chaplain of the 57th Regiment in 1896, being now the third senior chaplain in Canada. Mr. Davidson went overseas in 1915 with the 93rd Battalion, was chaplain at Orpington Hospital, and of No. 3 Military Hospital, in France. He preached in Westminster Abey on October 28, 1916.

After this long, faithful and efficient service it is felt that Mr. Davidson has truly earned his promotion to Archdeacon of Peterborough.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ORANGE LODGE

HOLD SESSION AT NASSAU AND ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

The annual meeting of No. 1 district was held in the Orange Hall, Nassau, on Wednesday evening, January 13th. A very large representation of members of the different primary lodges of this district were present. After the general routine of business was transacted a very important function of the evening was the election of officers for the coming year, resulted as follows:

D.M.—Bro. Roland Beadfield, No. 457.
D.D.M.—Bro. Neil Parter, No. 2440.
D. Chap.—Bro. J. J. Cunningham, No. 457.
D. Rec. Sec.—Bro. W. G. Bartley, No. 321.
D. Fin. Sec.—Bro. J. C. Waldie, No. 321.
D. Fin. Sec.—Bro. C. Kitney.
D. D. of C.—Bro. W. J. Kirk, No. 457.
D. 1st S.—Bro. J. C. Young, No. 2440.
D. 2nd S.—Bro. W. Lockie, No. 2440.

The newly elected officers were then duly installed by Past County Master Bro. J. C. Waldie, who, as an experienced Bro., preformed his duties in a very satisfactory manner. The newly elected officers were then called upon for short addresses which were very instructive, interesting and well received by all members present. Special mention might be made of Bro. Bartley, who last evening was elected to his office for the twenty-first time. Bro. Bartley has held this office without an apponent and is still as young in heart as when elected and is a favorite among the Brethren. Bro. Kitney is also an old officer and preformes his duties with pleasure.

After the addresses were delivered the lodge was closed in due form. A short musical program was given, after which all present sat down to a well-prepared banquet and brought a well-spent and profitable evening to a close by singing the National Anthem.

FOR A GOOD DANCE PICK A HOMELY GIRL

BOSS OF A CHICAGO DANCING FLOOR SAYS PRETTY GIRLS ARE LAZY.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Hope for the homely girls and a tip for dancing young men was offered yesterday by Louis Guyon, proprietor of the largest dance palace in Chicago, when he declared that the homely girls dance much better than their pretty sisters. As boss of a dancing floor, on which thousands of both ugly and pretty girls do the hop, skip, jump, drag, crawl and squirm of the new dances, he has observed closely, he says, and declares that he knows whereof he speaks.

Says Guyon: "Ugly girls make the best dancers. They are more graceful than pretty girls because they are more serious and work harder to make up for their lack of facial beauty. Pretty girls are lazy and indifferent as a rule. They are apt to be conceited."

GEORGE ST. W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the George Street Methodist Church W. M. S. was held in the church parlor on January 13th, with an attendance of about thirty-five members. After the opening exercises a short program was given. Mrs. (Dd.) Morrison gave a short talk on "Christian Stewardship," also there was a reading y Mrs. Gardiner, one by Mrs. P. Rutherford, and a solo by Mrs. C. B. Hughes, all of which were very much enjoyed. Refreshments were served and a social time spent.

THE LAW RELENTLESS

There on the hill, while the morning glow
Of the sunbeams kiss the virgin snow,
Silently, sadly, cold and slow,
Youth and Bahri moves to die.

There on the hill, while the coming day
Glides over the snow, like a child at play,
Looms the scaffold, cold and gray,
Where Bahri pays the toll.

There on the hill, in the iron hold
Of the law, relentless, cruel and cold,
Youth and name, and life are sold
To a custom born in hell.

You're young my boy; t'is hard to go
So many voices, sweet and low,
Calling over the sea and the snow,
Calling, calling for you.

Mother and home, and native hills
And singing birds, and ripling rills
While youth and love your bosom fills
All calling, calling you.

And you must go by a rugged path,
But the Son of God trod the way of death;
And the debt of sin He paid for us both—
Bahri: Line up with Him.

I've stood for the "Old Flag" firm and true,
And cheered and sang "the Red, White and Blue."
And if She's failed to shelter you
Don't blame the flag—Farewell.

Gently bury the stranger, dead,
He's paid for the blood he never shed;
And I will write on a slab at their head:
"Please do not blame the flag."

LAKEFIELD FOR HYDRO-ELECTRIC

BYLAW CARRIED BY MAJORITY OF 203—9 AGAINST MEASURE

Lakeveld, Jan. 14.—The freeholders of Lakefield voiced their approval of the hydro electric ylaw in no uncertain manner at the recent municipal election, the bylaw being carried by a majority of 203. The vote was 212 for and nine against.

The total cost of installing hydro power in the village will be $33,500, which includes the reconstruction of the present distribution plant and its purchase from the local electric light company, and installation of metres in all the houses and stores at present served.

The estimated revenue recieved from the system will be sufficient to provide for the retirement of the debentures, interest charges, depreciation, maintenance, etc., and at the end of thirty years the village will own the plant. The cost per horsepower has been fixed at $36.

WHO I AM-

I am J. Speill. My frieinds, call me Jack. I am going to tell you, through the columns of this paper, from week to week, what I know about Gallagher's Herbal Remedies. SPECIAL SERVICES IN ST. PAUL'S

Special services will be continued in St. Paul's Church this evening at 8 o'clock. The minister makes a special plea to the members of the church to attend the service this evening. As the people of George street have been worshipping with the congregation of St. Paul's this week, Rev. Mr. Thomas extends a similar invitation to the members of his church to attend the service tonight. The services will be continued on Thursday and Friday nights. A special invitation is extended to the young of both congregations to attend the Friday evening meeting.

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms! Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.
